LIBRARY
OF THE
SAN FRANCISCO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY
SAN ANSELMO
CALIFORNIA

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2026

https://archive.org/details/book-review-digest_1948-1949

THE
BOOK REVIEW DIGEST

FORTY-FOURTH ANNUAL CUMULATION

MARCH 1948 TO FEBRUARY 1949 INCLUSIVE

EDITED BY MERTICE M. JAMES
AND DOROTHY BROWN

MANAGING EDITOR
GLADYS M. DUNN

Property of Graduate Theological Union
Return to
San Francisco Theological Seminary

NEW YORK
THE H. W. WILSON COMPANY
1949

Published 1949
Printed in the United States of America

PREFACE

The forty-fourth Annual Cumulation of the Book Review Digest brings together in one alphabet all the books which were included in the monthly issues from March, 1948, to February, 1949, inclusive. No books of 1949 imprint are included; but periodicals for January and February, 1949, have been indexed when available.

Each of the approximately 3700 books included is accompanied by a non-evaluative descriptive note, or summary of the contents of the book, followed by excerpts from reviews found in the periodicals on the regular list used by the Digest. In February, 1948, Theatre Arts was discontinued as a separate publication, and combined with Stage with the April 1948 number. This will be included in the Book Review Digest in the future.

During the past year the staff has remained the same as in the past two years, an achievement in these days of change. Grateful acknowledgement is made by the editors to Miss Gladys Dunn, the managing editor, and to the other staff members: Mrs Jessie Bourne; Mrs Theresa Boulay; and Miss Madeline Boekell, for their interest and cooperation.

Publications from which Digests of Reviews are made

Am Anthropol—American Anthropologist. $6. American Anthropological Association, 13 E. 71st St, New York 21

Am Chem Soc J—Journal of the American Chemical Society. $8.50. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.

Am Econ R—American Economic Review. Paul T. Homan, managing ed. $5; free to members. American Economic Assn, Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.

Am Hist R—American Historical Review. Guy Stanton Ford, managing ed. $5; free to members of the American Historical Assn. Macmillan Co, 60 Fifth Av, New York 11

Am J Psychol—American Journal of Psychology, $6.50. Morrill Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y.

Am J Pub Health—American Journal of Public Health and The Nation's Health. C.-E. A. Winslow, ed. $7. American Public Health Assn, 1790 Broadway, New York 19

Am J Soc—American Journal of Sociology. Herbert Blumer, ed. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Am Pol Sci R—American Political Science Review. Frederic A. Ogg, managing ed. $6.60; free to members. American Political Science Assn, 450-458 Ahnaip St, Menasha, Wis.

Am Soc R—American Sociological Review. $4 (to libraries $3) American Sociological Society, 450-458 Ahnaip St, Menasha, Wis.

Ann Am Acad—Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. Thorsten Sellin, ed. $5; free to members. 3817 Spruce St, Philadelphia 4

Atlantic—Atlantic Monthly. $6. Atlantic Monthly Co, 8 Arlington St, Boston 16

Booklist—Booklist. $5. American Library Assn, 50 E Huron St, Chicago 11

Canadian Forum—Canadian Forum. Northrop Frye, managing ed. $3. Canadian Forum, Ltd, 16 Huntley St, Toronto 5

Canadian Hist R—Canadian Historical Review. $2. University of Toronto Press, Toronto 5

Cath World—Catholic World. John B. Sheerin, ed. $4. Missionary Society of St Paul the Apostle, 401 W 59th St, New York 19

Chem & Eng N—Chemical and Engineering News. $4. American Chemical Society, 1155 16th St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.

Chem Eng—Chemical Engineering with Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering. $5. McGraw-Hill Pub. Co. Inc. 330 W. 42d St, New York 18

Chicago Sun—Chicago Sun Book Week, 400 W. Madison St, Chicago, Ill.

Christian Century—Christian Century. Paul Hutchinson, ed. $6. Christian Century Foundation, 407 S. Dearborn St, Chicago 5

Christian Science Monitor (Atlantic ed)—Christian Science Monitor. $14. Christian Science Publishing Society, 1 Norway St, Boston 15

Churchman—Churchman. Guy Emery Shipler, ed. $5. Churchman Co, 425 Fourth Av, New York 16

Class Philol—Classical Philology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Commonweal—Commonweal. Edward Skillin, jr. and Philip Burnham, eds. $7. Commonweal Pub. Co, Inc, 386 Fourth Av, New York 16

Crozer Q—Crozer Quarterly. $1.50. Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa.

Current Hist—Current History. D. G. Redmond, ed. $4. Events Pub. Co, Inc, 108-10 Walnut St, Philadelphia 6

El School J—Elementary School Journal. R. W. Tyler and others, eds. $4. Dept. of Education Publications, University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Eng N—Engineering News-Record. $6. McGraw-Hill Publishing Co, Inc, 330 W 42d St, New York 18

Eng Hist R—English Historical Review. 40s. Longmans, Green & Co, Ltd, 43 Albert Drive, London, SW 19 ($10. International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)

Ethics—Ethics. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Foreign Affairs—Foreign Affairs. Hamilton Fish Armstrong, ed. $5. Council on Foreign Relations, Inc, 58 E 68th St, New York 21

Geog R—Geographical Review. $5. American Geographical Society, Broadway & 156th St, New York 32

Hibbert J—Hibbert Journal. George Allen & Unwin, Ltd, 40 Museum St, London, WC 1 ($3. Leroy Phillips, 178 Tremont St, Boston)

Horn Bk—Horn Book. Bertha E. Mahony Miller, ed. $3. Horn Book, Inc, 248 Boylston St, Boston 16

J Geol—Journal of Geology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

J Home Econ—Journal of Home Economics. Lillian L. Steckman, ed. $5. American Home Economics Assn, 700 Victor Bldg, Washington 1, D.C.

J Philos—Journal of Philosophy. $5. 515 W 116th St, New York 27

J Phys Chem—The Journal of Physical and Colloid Chemistry. $10. Williams & Wilkins Co, Mt Royal & Guilford Avs, Baltimore 2

J Pol Econ—Journal of Political Economy. Earl J. Hamilton and others, eds. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

J Religion—Journal of Religion. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Kirkus—Bulletin from Virginia Kirkus' Bookshop Service. Service basis, 38 Bank St, New York

Library J—Library Journal, Karl Brown, ed. $6. R. R. Bowker Co, 62 W 45th St, New York 19

Library Q—Library Quarterly. $5. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Management R—Management Review. M. J. Dooher, ed. $5. American Management Assn, 330 W 42d St, New York 18

Manchester Guardian—Manchester Guardian. 78s. Manchester Guardian, 3 Cross St, Manchester; Guardian Newspapers, Inc, 220 W 42d St, New York

Mod Philol—Modern Philology. $6. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Music Lib. Assn. Notes—Music Library Association, Inc. $3. Music Library Association, Inc., Library of Congress, Washington 25, D.C.

Nation—Nation. Freda Kirchwey, ed. $6. Nation Associates, Inc, 20 Vesey St, New York 7

New Eng Q—New England Quarterly. $4. H. Brown, Hubbard Hall, Brunswick, Me.

New Repub—New Republic. Michael Straight, ed. $6. Editorial Publications, Inc, 40 E 49th St, New York 17

New Statesman & Nation—New Statesman and Nation. 32s 6d. 10 Great Turnstile, London, WC 1 ($7 International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R—New York Herald Tribune Weekly Book Review. $2. N Y Herald Tribune, Inc. Publisher, 230 W 41st St, New York

N Y New Tech Bks—New York Public Library New Technical Books. 25c. N Y Public Library, Fifth Av & 42d St, New York

N Y Times—New York Times Book Review. $2. N Y Times Co, Pub, Times Square, New York 18

New Yorker—New Yorker. $7. The New Yorker Magazine, Inc. 25 W 43d St, New York 18

Pacific Affairs—Pacific Affairs. $4. Institute of Pacific Relations, 1 East 54th St, New York 22

Poetry—Poetry. Marion Strobel [and others] eds. $5. 232 E Erie St, Chicago 11

Pol Sci Q—Political Science Quarterly. John A. Krout, managing ed. $5; free to members. Academy of Political Science, Columbia University, New York 27

San Francisco Chronicle—San Francisco Chronicle. P. C. Smith, ed. $21. Chronicle Pub Co, 901 Mission St, San Francisco 19

Sat R of Lit—Saturday Review of Literature. Norman Cousins, ed. $6. Saturday Review Associates, Inc, 25 W 45th St, New York 19

School & Society—School and Society. $7; free to members, Society for the Advancement of Education, Inc, 15 Amsterdam Av, New York 23

School Arts—School Arts. Pedro deLemos, ed. $4. School Arts, Printers Bldg, 44 Portland St, Worcester 8, Mass.

School R—School Review. R. W. Tyler and others, eds. $4. University of Chicago Press, 5750 Ellis Av, Chicago 37

Social Educ—Social Education. $3. National Council for the Social Studies, 1201 Sixteenth St, NW, Washington 6, D.C.

Social Forces—Social Forces. $5. Williams & Wilkins Co, Baltimore 2

Social Studies—Social Studies. Arthur C. Bining, ed. $2.50. McKinley Publishing Co, 809-811 N 19th St, Philadelphia

Special Libraries—Special Libraries. $7. Special Libraries Assn, 31 East Tenth St, New York 3

Spec—Spectator. The Spectator, Ltd. 30s. 99 Gower St, London, WC 1 ($7. International News Co, 131 Varick St, New York 13)

Springf'd Republican—Springfield Republican. $5. The Springfield Sunday Republican, Springfield, Mass.

Subscription Bks Bul—Subscription Books Bulletin. $2.50. American Library Assn, 50 E Huron St, Chicago 11

Survey—Survey, Paul Kellogg, ed. $5. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York 3

Survey G—Survey Graphic. Paul Kellogg, ed. $4. Survey Associates, Inc, 112 E 19th St, New York 3

Theatre Arts—Theatre Arts. Rosamond Gilder, ed. $5. Theatre Arts, Inc, 130 W 56th St, New York 19

Theatre Arts—Theatre Arts combined with Stage Magazine. $5. John D. MacArthur, 130 West 56th St, New York 19

Time—Time. Henry R. Luce, ed. $6.50. Time, Inc, 540 N. Michigan Av, Chicago 11

Times [London] Lit Sup—Times Literary Supplement. 17s 4d. Times Publishing Co. Ltd, Printing House Square, London, E.C. 4; $4.15. The Times (London), North American Office, 280 Broadway, New York

U S Quarterly Bkl—United States Quarterly Book List. Joseph P. Blickensderfer, ed. $3.50. The Rutgers Univ. Press, New Brunswick, N.J.

Weekly Book Review. See N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Yale R n s—Yale Review. Helen MacAfee, managing ed. $3.50. Yale Review, 143 Elm St, New Haven 7, Conn.

In addition to the above list the Book Review Digest sometimes quotes from Cleveland Open Shelf; Columbia Law Review; Harvard Law Review; Publishers' Weekly; Review of Scientific Instruments; Wisconsin Library Bulletin; Yale Law Journal; and other bulletins and papers.

Explanations

The descriptive note is separated from critical notices of a book by a dash.

The plus and minus signs preceding the name of the magazine indicate the degree of favor or disfavor of the entire review.

In the reference to a magazine, the first number refers to the volume, the next to the page, the letters to the date and the last figures to the number of words in the review.

Publishers' Directory will be found at the end of this number.

Book Review Digest

Devoted to the Valuation of Current Literature

Cumulation of monthly numbers March 1948—February 1949

AARONS, EDWARD SIDNEY (EDWARD RONNS, pseud). Gift of death. 242p $2 McKay 48-9915

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 26 '48 140w

"Over-elaborate, but set against a pleasant rural background."
+ — New Yorker 24:184 D 4 '48 100w

AARONS, EDWARD SIDNEY (EDWARD RONNS, pseud). Nightmare. 238p $2 McKay 48-1559

Mystery story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p25 Ap 4 '48 150w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 4 '48 100w

"Commendable."
Sat R of Lit 31:52 Ap 17 '48 50w

ABBOT, ANTHONY, pseud. See Oursler, F.

ABBOTT, JANE LUDLOW (DRAKE) (MRS FRANK ABBOTT). Outsiders. 246p $2.50 Lippincott 48-6981

The story of a New Hampshire valley town. The granddaughter of the town's late mill owner, who had grown up outside the community, takes over the mills. Her fight for recognition among the town's conservative inhabitants is aided by the town's other "outsiders."

Booklist 45:194 F 1 '49

"Compact, folksy and quite successful novel."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ag 8 '48 80w

Wis Lib Bul 44:149 S '48

ABEL, CHARLES. Commercial photographic lightings. 272p 306il $7.50 Greenberg 771.44 Photography—Lighting. Photography, Commercial 48-9437

"In these pages, the reader will find the best of the demonstrations published in The Commercial Photographer over a period of four years. Most have been rewritten and revised for the sake of uniform treatment and easy reference. To them have been added some forty others, not hitherto published, which I felt were necessary to complete even a reasonable coverage of the wide commercial field. The result is as much a textbook on methods as a manual of lighting." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 45:152 Ja 1 '49

"A textbook which even the most experienced professional photographer should enjoy having close at hand." P. A. R.
+ Springf'd Republican p10B N 21 '48 230w

ABRAHAM, GERALD ERNEST HEAL, ed. Music of Sibelius [Eng title: Sibelius]. 218p $3 Norton 780.92 Sibelius, Jean Julius Christian 47-11886

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"The chief fault of the book is in the exaggerated editorial assumption of the place of Sibelius. Abraham himself handles Cecil Gray's famous remark about Sibelius and Beethoven with great caution, but David Cherniavsky in the chapter 'Special Characteristics of Sibelius's Style' brings up Palestrina! . . . The approach and value of the individual contributions, of course, vary. . . Ralph Wood on the miscellaneous orchestral music and the theater music is discursive and descriptive rather than analytical. Scott Goddard's chapters on the choral and chamber music are fair appraisals of the worth of the works described. The chief value of Astra Desmond's chapter on the songs lies in the translations of many of the texts. The worst chapter is undoubtedly Cherniavsky's." Leonard Burkat
+ — Music Lib Ass'n Notes 5:232 Mr '48 420w

"Professor Abraham's symposium, despite the difficulty of adapting such a scheme to a composer whose best work is almost all orchestral, is extraordinarily well done. The editor has not attempted to impose any uniformity of approach or of verdict on his gifted team, who have little in common but thorough musicianship and the ability to express it in clear English. . . The editor himself provides a purely factual, but masterly, dissection of the structure of the seven symphonies; and even those who have been allotted the less interesting sections of this composer's extremely uneven output manage to avoid both dullness and excessive claims." Desmond Shawe-Taylor
+ New Statesman & Nation 35:238 Mr 20 '48 600w

"This book is a symposium surveying the music of Sibelius in all its aspects and forms. As such, and even though the contributors show that they have read each other's chapters, it is of varying worth. The opening chapter on 'Sibelius the Man' is by Ralph Hill and is soggy with hero worship of an especially soft sort. 'The Symphonies,' undoubtedly Sibelius chief contributions to his art, are expertly and revealingly treated by the book's editor, Gerald Abraham. . . As a book of estimates and judgments 'The Music of Sibelius' will seem to most American music lovers as peculiarly and parochially English." Herbert Weinstock
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 14 '48 500w

"David Cherniavsky supplies a good deal of the general background which the reader

Subject and title index at end of alphabet

ABRAHAM, G. E. H.—Continued
might have expected to find in Mr. Hill's and Professor Abraham's chapters, and by this means the book as a whole does achieve a complete portrait of Sibelius such as is provided by no other English publication." Martin Cooper

+ Spec 180:174 F 6 '48 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p76 F 7 '48 1000w

ABRAHAMS, PETER. Path of thunder. 279p $2.75 Harper

48-5421

"A novel, by a native of South Africa, about racial violence on the veldt. The major character is a young Negro who, after being educated in Capetown, returns to his village as a schoolteacher, brimming with ideas on social equality. When he begins to pass his city notions on to the other villagers, he falls into disfavor with the white aristocracy of the area, and when he incautiously demonstrates an interest in a white girl, his case is handled according to the rough mores of the region." New Yorker

Booklist 44:336 Je 1 '48

Reviewed by Willard Motley
Chicago Sun p45 Mr 4 '48 550w

"As a story, 'The Path of Thunder' is not quite convincing—though the fault may be partly the reader's lack of understanding—and the conversations fall short of spontaneity. It is the living, bewildered segment of life, caught in an age-old trap between two worlds, described by a man who was born into the precarious circumstances that he writes about, that may find attention among thinking men and women." W. K. R.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 27 '48 500w

"Simply told, with stark emotional undertones, and with a deep tenderness for the tragedy of race, black and 'colored' in a white world."

+ Kirkus 15:656 D 1 '47 210w

"Mr. Abrahams' style suffers from imitativeness. It is loaded with cliches, false metaphors and plain verbal inaccuracies. Nor are his characterizations especially good. His novel is nevertheless interesting, because he has something important to say and he says it dramatically." J. M. Morse

— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 8 '48 600w

"Peter Abrahams brings to his novel of racial tension in South Africa a subjective dimension that adds new pathos to a familiar theme. Apart from the note of protest inherent in his plot, there is an undercurrent of compassionate feeling in his writing that insinuates itself like poetry. When he is not too involved with thunder and lightning action, his gently ironic prose cuts through the surface of words to lay bare the hidden wounds of the psychologically alienated Negro or half-caste." Nona Balakian

+ — N Y Times p5 F 8 '48 700w

"Hardly first-rate fiction, but valuable as a tract."

New Yorker 23:85 F 7 '48 110w

"This moving story about South Africa's submerged segment is no pasteboard technicolor romance, but a perceptive book about one of the country's staggering social problems. It deserves the accolades it will doubtless win." John Barkham

+ Sat R of Lit 31:25 F 14 '48 800w

Reviewed by S. B. Shear
Springf'd Republican p12B Mr 21 '48 180w

Wis Lib Bul 44:149 S '48

ABRAHAMS, ROBERT DAVID. Mr. Benjamin's sword; il. by Herschel Levit. 183p $2 Jewish pub.

Benjamin, Judah Philip—Fiction 48-3441

Fictional account of the escape of Judah P. Benjamin, secretary of state for the Confederacy, to England in 1865. The narrator is a boy of fifteen whose zeal to fight for the Confederacy was so great that he attracted the attention of Mr. Benjamin. For junior high school age.

"The boy's devotion to his leader and his reactions to the hazards of the escape are realistic and compelling. The story makes a capital tale of adventure." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:374 S '48 100w

"Recommended to school and public libraries needing supplementary material on Civil War." Clara Adams

+ Library J 73:1099 Ag '48 130w

"Mr. Abrahams has accurately portrayed the men and events connected with this episode in American history. Judah P. Benjamin was a Jew, and a good deal of information about Jewish people and their religion has been skilfully and unobtrusively written into the story." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p17 Jl 25 '48 180w

ACKER, HELEN (MRS ARTHUR B. ANDERSON). Four sons of Norway; il. by Nils Hogner. 255p $3 Nelson

920 Bull, Ole Bornemann. Grieg, Edvard Hagerup. Ibsen, Henrik. Nansen, Fridtjof. Norway—Biography 48-8407

"Ole Bull was the first great man of modern Norway who made his country known by his wonderful mastery of the violin; Ibsen was the great writer who made people think; Grieg interpreted the beauty of his homeland through music; Nansen was the bold Arctic explorer, strong leader in Norway's national life. Miss Acker shows each one in his impressionable childhood, already influenced by a deep love of country." (Horn Bk) These short biographies are for readers of ten to fifteen. Bibliography.

Booklist 45:161 Ja 1 '49

"What they accomplished in maturity is clearly set forth with warm appreciation." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:465 N '48 70w

Kirkus 16:481 S 15 '48 90w

"The author has interestingly and vividly portrayed the life of each of these world-renowned men and given a distinct idea of what life is actually like in Norway. . . Recommended." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 73:1746 D 1 '48 60w

ACKERMAN, JOSEPH, and HARRIS, MARSHALL DEES. Family farm policy. 518p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

631.1 Farm tenancy. Land tenure
Agr48-170

"Proceedings of a conference on family farm policy, attended by participants from the British commonwealth, northern Europe, central Europe, Latin America, and the United States, held at the University of Chicago, February 15-20, 1946." (Subtitle) The papers are arranged under the following main headings: Farm land tenure in the United States; Farm land tenure in the British commonwealth; Farm land tenure in northern Europe; Farm land tenure in Latin America; Farm land tenure in Central Europe; Committee reports; Looking to the future. Index.

Reviewed by R. H. Holmes
Am Soc R 13:361 Je '48 750w

"Two out of every three persons in the world still earn their living on the land. The present volume's emphasis on foreign agriculture makes it an indispensable work of reference." H. W. Spiegel

+ Ann Am Acad 257:257 My '48 420w

"These proceedings of an international conference on family farm policy held at the University of Chicago two years ago add up to an impressive aggregate of detailed information. Of greater interest for most readers than the 'Interpretive Summary' which introduces the volume are the sections devoted to agricultural conditions in the lands of the respective delegates."

+ Commonweal 47:478 F 20 '48 200w

"The title of the conference and book might more appropriately have been 'Land Tenure Policy' rather than 'Family Farm Policy.'" A. D. Edwards

Social Forces 27:165 D '48 950w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:159 Je '48 380w

ACKLAND, RODNEY. Dostoievsky's Crime and punishment; dramatised. 111p il $2.50 Holt

822 48-6121

A dramatization of Dostoievsky's novel of the same name.

Booklist 44:349 Je 15 '48

"Highly recommended for all drama and literature collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 73:652 Ap 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by James MacBride

N Y Times p30 Je 6 '48 110w

ACLAND, ALICE. Caroline Norton. 236p il $3.75 Macmillan (for Constable)

B or 92 Norton, Mrs Caroline (Sheridan)

A biography of the much-maligned English authoress, wife of George Norton, with whom she quarreled for most of the years of their married life. The author has been able to draw on new material, supplementing that in the standard life published in 1909. A full length portrait is given, showing not only Caroline Norton's domestic troubles, but also her important part in the passing of the Infants' Custody Bill and the 1857 Bill for the reform of the marriage and divorce laws. Bibliography. Index.

"The author displays a fine sensibility in portraying the many facets of Caroline's character, and her impact on the times as well as her own struggle against the stream. Perhaps one of the most sympathetic chapters in the book is that which describes her work as a writer—for she was a novelist, poet and songwriter: thus finding a channel for what was so often denied her in her personal life." Leila Flower

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 12 '48 900w

"Not an essential book for all libraries but recommended." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 73:1083 Ag '48 170w

"Miss Acland gives a graphic picture of this beautiful and unhappy creature, with her inherited gift of expression. 'I have no rights—only wrongs!' is one of the utterances of history. The book is sometimes a little pedestrian, but the material is good." E. J.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Je 22 '48 270w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis

New Statesman & Nation 36:158 Ag 21 '48 900w

"Miss Acland has written a carefully documented account of Caroline Norton's life. In her desire for thoroughness, she does not escape being repetitive at times. She has a neat, direct way of dealing with her subject that results in a sound if not 'inspired' biography." J. V.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 19 '48 350w

"It is a pity that this extremely readable biography is so short. The 200-odd pages are not enough. One wants more—more of Mrs. Norton's charming letters and sometimes more explanation of cryptic sentences. . . Though a standard life of Caroline Norton was published forty years ago, Miss Acland has been able to introduce fresh material from unpublished family letters. Beginning tentatively, the book soon picks up momentum, and, omitting tiresome detail, gives a lively, sympathetic picture of Mrs. Norton in her setting. . . The book, with its casual staccato style, has no dull moments." Gwendolen Freeman

+ Spec 181:86 Jl 16 '48 650w

"Miss Acland has all the virtues of restraint, calm judgment and impartiality lacking in her heroine. These in themselves are admirable qualities, but Caroline, who wrote her pamphlets with a difference, calls for a more visionary handling than would suit a minor politician. Wayward, impulsive and less wise than honest, she demands a biographer who can now and then throw caution to the dogs and leap in the air with her."

Times [London] Lit Sup p427 Jl 31 '48 1600w

ACTON, JOHN EMERICH EDWARD DALBERG-ACTON, 1st baron. Essays on freedom and power; selected and with an introd. by Gertrude Himmelfarb; pref. by Herman Finer. 452p $5 Beacon press

323.44 Liberty 48-8530

A collection of the major essays of the English historian who was editor of the Cambridge Modern History. They constitute parts of the author's unwritten but planned History of Liberty. Contents: Inaugural lecture on the study of history; The history of freedom in antiquity; The history of freedom in Christianity; The Protestant theory of persecution; Sir Erskine May's "Democracy in Europe"; Nationality; Political causes of the American Revolution; The background of the French Revolution; Conflicts with Rome; The Vatican council; Acton-Creighton correspondence. Bibliography. Index.

"Lord Acton is already such a legendary figure, and the historical writing he left is scattered through so many generally inaccessible bound volumes of so many British reviews that it was a sound idea to publish a collection of his essays. Why certain ones were included is a little hard to say."

+ — Christian Century 65:1082 O 13 '48 500w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '48 1000w

Current Hist 15:293 N '48 70w

"It is always difficult for an anthologist to meet the requirements of a limited choice. The reader's taste will never be satisfied. There are some things in this volume which this reviewer would not have chosen, and on the other hand some of Acton's best is missing." Golo Mann

Nation 167:440 O 16 '48 1000w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

N Y Times p44 N 14 '48 1300w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 7 '48 300w

"The author's thoughts were never collected into a formulated treatise, but in this volume are some characteristic expressions freshly presented, and they explain his growing reputation as one of the great political theorists and philosophers of modern times." George Britt

+ Survey 85:53 Ja '49 500w

ADAMS, ABIGAIL (SMITH) (MRS JOHN ADAMS). New letters, 1788-1801; ed. with an introd. by Stewart Mitchell. 281p il $5 Houghton

B or 92 47-11763

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"The value of the collection is materially enhanced by Mr. Mitchell's careful and detailed annotations, by genealogical charts (which help the reader to identify members of the family referred to in the letters), and by an introduction which is the best brief essay on the 'Fall of John Adams' which it has been the privilege of this reviewer to read." J. B. Hedges

+ Am Hist R 53:554 Ap '48 240w

"Collections of Abigail Adams's letters have been published through the years and the author has been the subject of many biographies, but none of these volumes has brought her to life so vividly as the 141 new letters, ably edited by Stewart Mitchell. . . Because Mr. Mitchell has given us these letters just as they were written without deleting anything and without correcting Abigail's unique, phonetic spelling, we can now see the real Abigail Adams. His Introduction provides an interesting historical background. Unfortunately he has slipped into it a personal comment which not only seems out of place but out-of-tune with the ideals of American democracy." Alma Lutz

ADAMS, ABIGAIL—Continued

+ — New Eng Q 21:114 Mr '48 1100w

"The editing of these letters is characterized by thorough scholarship and accuracy. Neither editor nor publisher has spared any pains in providing every aid that a reader might desire. Both for the light these letters throw upon the mind and character of their writer, and for their insight into the political and economic forces of the period, these letters are a valuable addition to our historical literature." R. A. Brown

+ Pol Sci Q 63:310 Je '48 260w

"The letters are fresh, spontaneous, and informed by intelligence and good nature—even if orthography, grammar, and polish are all on a lower level than the family has chosen to admit. In their wealth of domestic and social information, and political comment, they are of the highest interest and give a vivid picture of life in early Federal America. Mr. Mitchell has been most thorough in his identifications of persons mentioned and of passages from Scripture and English literature quoted by Mrs. Adams."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:31 Mr '48 300w

ADAMS, ANSEL EASTON, il. See Muir, J. Yosemite and the Sierra Nevada

ADAMS, GEORGE PLIMPTON. Man and metaphysics. 162p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

110 Metaphysics 48-7412

"In the spirit of Woodbridge's philosophy Adams conceives of human experience as the 'accessibility' of nature to man; man is in the world which he observes. But this situation is the source of the metaphysical problem, not its solution. For it suggests that human life exhibits two radically different forms or dimensions of being: the being which is observed and the being of observation itself, the world experienced and the process of experience. Thus there are two metaphysical perspectives, which Adams terms the 'animistic perspective' of having experience and the 'observer's perspective' of reporting what he discovers by having experience. Skillfully Adams traces the interaction and confusion of these two perspectives in ancient and modern philosophy, and he ends his analysis by formulating two alternative philosophies of the relation between mind and nature, each of which fails to give a coherent account of the unity of being." (J Philos) Index.

"A reader who wants his questions answered or his neoörthodoxy supported would do well to avoid this book. But one who wants windows opened, even when it is stormy outside, will profit greatly by it. He will be aware that high thinking and good writing still exist in our country." E. S. Brightman

+ Crozer Q 26:68 Ja '49 1300w

"After all the technical details of the theory of experience are dismissed, the main theme of these lectures emerges impressively, namely, that 'man lives at the crossroads of two dimensions' (p. 152). Though this ancient theme of the theory of human nature is always fresh, and though Woodbridge, too, concerned himself with it, Adams has succeeded in stating this theme with exceptional urbanity and incisiveness. It is stated by him more clearly than by Woodbridge, less romantically than by the existentialists, and less sectarianly than by either the idealists or the theologians. This volume is enjoyable; it is also very useful, not only as a critical commentary on modern naturalism, but as a prolegomenon to any contemporary metaphysics." H. W. Schneider

+ J Philos 45:624 N 4 '48 1750w

School & Society 68:79 Jl 31 '48 10w

ADAMS, JAMES TRUSLOW, and others, eds. Album of American history; Atkinson Dymock, art director: v4, End of an era. 385p il maps $7.50 Scribner

973 U.S.—Social life and customs. U.S.—History—1865- (44-706)

"A visual history of the United States from 1893 to 1917—from Chicago's Columbian Exposition to World War I, or from Bryan (or a little before) to Wilson's second administration. The era that ended with this period was that of America's complacent concentration upon her own affairs. But the concentration was more complete than the complacency for this quarter-century began with a depression and serious labor troubles. Politics occupies only a small place in this survey; industry, a much larger one; major attention is given to those things that show how people lived, their tastes, interests and ideas—fashions, automobiles, sports, books, movies, plays, furniture and what have you." (Christian Century) For earlier volumes see Book Review Digest 1944, 1945, and 1946.

Booklist 45:118 D 1 '48

"A seasoned historian like James Truslow Adams does not cherish the illusion that people can get an adequate understanding of history by looking at a picture book, even as good a one as this, and he has done more than his share to induce them to read American history by writing books that are both readable and sound. But the pictures also are indispensable." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 65:1306 D 1 '48 280w

Kirkus 16:616 N 15 '48 90w

"With this fourth volume James Truslow Adams and his capable editors round out the pictorial history of our country to which they set their hands some years back. . . The value of this pictorial accumulation is that the pictures were made during the periods represented. They are as close to reality as one can get. The job has been done admirably." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 D 5 '48 750w

"It must be said that the reproductions are not always good, and the layout of the photographs and text gives them a hither and yon appearance. The absence of an index makes a favorite picture hard to locate. But these criticisms aside, the volume gives a cozy, comfortable view of our last fifty years. It is not a history, of course, for there is much that photographs cannot tell, but it is a good supplement to it. Thumbing through these pages will add flavor to our knowledge of those days, but like a flavoring it is not to be confused with the real dish." Thomas Lask

+ — N Y Times p4 D 5 '48 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 29 '48 850w

"A large share of the hundreds of photographs in this volume came from collections of state and local historical societies around the country, and thereby provide excellent samples of the sort of material that is being gathered and treasured by these groups. Obviously many of them are doing an admirable job. Members of local societies would do well to study this volume with a view to assembling similar collections in their own communities. The stuff is there; it needs only enthusiasm and persistence to dig it out." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 32:12 Ja 15 '49 450w

ADAMS, JOHN V. Plastic arts crafts. 147p il $2.75 Van Nostrand

668.4 Plastics. Handicraft 48-7859

A handbook for the beginner in plastic crafts. "Discusses many kinds of plastic materials, their properties and uses. Gives detailed instructions for making four articles in which all of the basic processes are introduced. One chapter on advanced techniques, and a list of sources of materials and supplies. Bibliography." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:6 S 1 '48
Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '48
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1278 S 15 '48 60w

"You may begin to read as a complete ignoramus on the subject of plastics and you may, if you are handy, end up as the skilled fashioner of jewelry, household utensils, and 'objets d'art.'" A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 74:198 F 1 '49 90w

ADAMS, KATHARINE (MRS PERCY ALEXANDER WALKER). Prince of Paris; and thirty-nine other stories around the world [il. by Dorothy A. Winslow]. 332p $2.50 Hinds
48-6351

Collection of short stories representing life in forty different countries, introducing information on customs, clothing, food, games, etc. For ages ten to fourteen.

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p4 Jl 29 '48 180w

"The stories themselves are primarily entertaining rather than educational. They will interest the 10-to-14-year-olds for their story value, even while they gently press the point that our world is one. Miss Adams has rigorously excluded the war and post-war conditions from her world scene. She loses something in realism by this exclusion, but she gains much." N. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p32 Mr 21 '48 180w

"The stories, written in her natural and inimitable style, are packed and vivid, abounding in adventure and holding a quality of joyous camaraderie. Yet serious problems are not ignored." Laura Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 31:34 Je 12 '48 320w
School & Society 66:447 D 6 '47 20w

ADAMS, MRS MARGUERITE (JANVRIN). Poems. 176p $3 Falmouth
811 48-7260

"Gathers the fruit of a decade of writing by Mrs. Adams, is mostly lyric in expression and essentially topical in subject. Her observations of the war years, are all reflected in a generous array of poems, the majority of which are in traditional rhyme, with considerable variety in rhythm and stress." Sat R of Lit

"Awareness of beauty, the 'sense of the holy'—these are provinces of that country of the heart which is Mrs. Adams' own. Her poems lead us there, to our comfort and delight—but, also, they rouse and reproach the spirit lapped in sloth. One cannot select for enticing quotation from such lovely wealth!" M. L. Eglinton
+ Churchman 162:16 S 1 '48 40w

Reviewed by Thomas Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 5 '48 20w

"Throughout the book there is evidence of a sympathetic, alert mind beholding nature, at times melancholy, but never pessimistic. The craftsmanship is uniformly competent, the metaphors arresting without being impudent or alarming, the meanings unmistakable without being obvious. . . A weakness of this volume is the inclusion of too many competent, journalistic poems which are just above the mediocre." A. M. Sullivan
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:38 Ag 14 '48 290w

ADAMS, MARTIN RAY. Studies in the literary backgrounds of English radicalism; with special reference to the French revolution. 330p $3.75 Franklin & Marshall 820.9 English literature—History and criticism. Radicals and radicalism 48-67

"This book is a collection of studies intended to supplement the labors of other scholars in the backgrounds of the English Romantic Movement considered particularly in its revolutionary aspects." (Pref) The writers included are: Joel Barlow, Mary Hays, Mrs. Mary Robinson, Robert Lovell and George Burnett, James Mackintosh, Joseph Fawcett, George Dyer, and Samuel Parr. Bibliography. Index.

"This is in many respects a curious work whose precise raison d'être is far from clear. . . To reveal the variety and extent of the English radical movement of the period is itself a worthy undertaking. It is also worth while to redress common misconceptions, as the author does in the case of Joel Barlow, whom he shows to be something more than a patriotic and dubiously inspired American poet. Nevertheless, while the book contains much interesting information both on the lives and on the ideas of those discussed, it does not do anything more than give us some reasonably well-organized information." T. I. Cook
— + Am Pol Sci R 42:150 F '48 600w

"This is an extraordinarily fine and peculiarly useful book. It is fine because it is unusually well written, temperate, and the result of detailed, exhaustive and scholarly research. It is peculiarly useful for two reasons: first, because it provides scare material for building a much needed bridge between the statesman, the economist and the political scientist on the one hand and the man of letters on the other; and, secondly, because of a certain novelty of approach adopted by the author, helpful to all students of history as well as to those of literature." W. P. Hall
+ Pol Sci Q 63:307 Je '48 1000w

ADAMS, SAMUEL HOPKINS. Plunder. 348p $3 Random house
48-6350

Washington, D. C., in 1950 is the scene. Martin Strabo, who did not care how he made money as long as he made it, and his friends, including several senators, practically ran the country, until they tried to fix an Army-Navy football game. Martin Strabo, crook, profiteer, grafter, with ambitions to become an ambassador, met his match when he tried to tamper with the American love for clean sports.

"Cheap and tawdry melodrama, and unforgivably dull."
— Kirkus 16:122 Mr 1 '48 190w

"Exaggerated, but close enough to the truth to be mighty disturbing." Donald Wasson
Library J 73:472 Mr 15 '48 110w

"Despite the luridness of plot, Mr. Adams makes certain telling points. He shows clearly that present-day trends can produce men like Strabo. . . He considers the growing suppression of free scientific endeavor. His fantastic Committee on Dangerous Tendencies hardly begins to touch the actual House Un-American Activities Committee. In many ways, that is the appalling part of Mr. Adams' book: that so much of what can't happen may happen, and, in fact is happening." J. D. Ross
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 11 '48 600w

"Though the novel is interesting enough to be read on a plane trip, or before going to bed, it is a bit difficult to ascertain just what Mr. Adams is trying to tell us. Is he saying that we are in danger of another Harding Administration? The circumstances don't seem quite right. . . Right at this minute the American people seem to be facing an international crisis with a certain amount of calm and fortitude. They are also worried. It is not in times like these that the sort of incidents described in 'Plunder' happen. Still, they could happen, since some things much like them have happened in the past. They could happen when the world has quieted down and we all feel safe again. Here, at least, is the warning." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p7 Ap 11 '48 700w
New Yorker 24:105 Ap 24 '48 120w

"What can you say about it except that for people who like this kind of book, this is the kind of book people like?" Jonathan Daniels
Sat R of Lit 31:11 My 8 '48 700w

ADDIS ABABA, PIETRO BADOGLIO, duca d'. Italy in the second World war; memories and documents; tr. from Italian by Muriel Currey. 236p $3.50 Oxford

940.5345 World war, 1939-1945—Italy. Italy—History [48-4978]

"To the ever-growing canvas of World War II, Pietro Badoglio, head of the Italian Government which surrendered to the Allies, has added in detail the fragment relating to his own role. . . The first section covers the last days of peace, Italy's attack on France, the smashing Fascist reversals, the coup d'état which overthrew the dictatorship, and the establishment of the Badoglio government. There are disappointing gaps. . . In the second section, Badoglio painstakingly charts his struggles as chief of state to salvage something from the Fascist ruins. . . The third section consists of statistically-bolstered documents on the functioning of the Italian military and civil administrations under Badoglio." Sat R of Lit

"The book is worth reading as the record of a struggle for constitution when the world was too busy organizing mayhem to revert to the peacetime embarrassment of being constitutional." G. J. Wood

Canadian Forum 28:142 S '48 350w

"The book has its merits as historic source material, though it omits quite a number of important details and fails to explain the psychological background satisfactorily. It is poorly organized, about as colorful as a World War II uniform and as vivid as an infantry training manual. There is no rule that a good soldier must be a good writer but one wonders whether there is not a connection between an author's lack of personal style and his inability to see issues clearly." Ernest Pisko

— + Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 9 '48 700w

"The impact of man upon history and of events upon the man who wields power is always fascinating. Here is a book that historians of World War II will have to study, since it represents a primary source of the materials that will go to make up the definitive account of the Italian campaign. Yet a future Gibbon will find his chief interest in pondering over the character of the man who wrote these memoirs. Perhaps he will feel able to pass judgment, but a contemporary who knew Badoglio and who watched him from the triumphant days of Abyssinia until his eclipse in June, 1944, must sigh in perplexity." H. L. Matthews

N Y Times p6 Ag 8 '48 1100w

"As an historical document it has value, and its precise account of events about which Badoglio had unique personal knowledge throws into focus many patterns obscured in the confusion surrounding the fall of Mussolini's Fascism. However, the marshal's 'memories' must be read with caution. . . Muriel Currey's highly satisfactory translation helps make the work one which well might be read by students of Italian history and World War II." S. S. Kline

Sat R of Lit 31:24 Ag 7 '48 650w

ADDISON, WILLIAM. English country parson. 246p il $3.75 Macmillan

283.42 Church of England—Clergy [48-30087]

An informal history of the English rural church, written in the form of brief sketches of some country clergymen, interspersed with chapters on special customs. Illustrated with photographs and reproductions of old prints. Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 65:294 Mr 17 '48 40w

"This is a delightful series of sketches of English country parsons and their parishes since the Reformation. . . Many excellent illustrations increase the book's value." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 162:17 My 1 '48 180w

Reviewed by John Cournos

Commonweal 48:112 My 14 '48 1200w

"This tolerant and urbane book deserved more and better illustrations; and apart from a digression on the Church and Art, Mr. Addison says too little of present-day problems in rural parishes, where the right type of new incumbent is increasingly hard to find." R. G. J.

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 30 '47 250w

"The book is most successful in the panorama of manners it presents, and in the gallery of wonderful, eccentric, and sometimes rowdy characters who have inhabited English vicarages and rectories."

+ New Yorker 24:99 Mr 6 '48 130w

"This delightful and witty small volume presents a series of short sketches of those country parsons who have been one of the chief glories, and a principal strength, of the Church of England throughout its long history." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 23 '48 300w

"Mr. Addison has chosen a rich theme, and has produced a most interesting and entertaining volume which any benevolent churchwarden might well present to his parish clergyman." J. C. Hardwick

+ Spec 180:26 Ja 2 '48 800w

ADER, PAUL FASSETT. Leaf against the sky. 311p $3 Crown

47-6679

"This is the story of John Perry, minister's son, his high school days in Macon and his college years in North Carolina during the period between wars. It is also the story of Milton Silverstein, a Jewish boy whose only faith is science, and Zona Cahill, whose red hair and green eyes, charm, and grand but tarnished family tradition attract the two boys alternately, keep John close company through these years. In trying to accept the faith of his father, John finds the diverse views of Milton and Zona cause much conflict within his own mind, providing the underlying theme of the story." Kirkus

"The vitality here is only occasional; much of it is dull."

— + Kirkus 15:407 Ag 1 '47 110w

"Mr. Ader's theme—of adolescents adapting, expanding and compromising into adults—is an interesting one, and it is unfortunate that in 'The Leaf Against the Sky' he has chosen such flat, static characters to illustrate it. Though John and Milton, as they get older, talk of Hemingway and love rather than football, essentially they don't seem to change."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 F 8 '48 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 2 '47 220w

ADLER, MORTIMER JEROME, and others. Works of the mind. See Heywood, R. B., ed.

ADSHEAD, GLADYS L., and DUFF, ANNIS, eds. Inheritance of poetry; with decorations by Nora S. Unwin. 415p $4 Houghton

821.08 English poetry—Collections. American poetry—Collections 48-4023

An anthology for young readers. It covers in time selections beginning with the Old Testament and ending with living English and American poets. Indexes.

Booklist 45:15 S 1 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun O 23 '48 200w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

Commonweal 49:212 D 3 '48 290w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 24:348 S '48 440w

"The contents range widely over time and space, bringing something to suit all ages and every mood. Freshness and invitation call from these pages to the whole family. There are good indexes for reference. It seems a pity, however, not to have given a book of such permanent value as this better bookmaking." A. M. Jordan

+ — Horn Bk 24:371 S '48 100w

Reviewed by Siri Andrews
Horn Bk 24:474 N '48 170w
Kirkus 16:283 Je 15 '48 180w

"An admirable book—one that will certainly instill in a child a love of poetry. For all ages, from earliest childhood through the teens and beyond." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 73:1199 S 1 '48 70w

"A canny reviewer learns to be sparing with superlatives. Some seem to be saving a few for the Day of Resurrection. But there comes a time when the great adjective 'best' must be taken down and dusted off. This book is the best collection of poetry to grow on that has been offered to children within my experience as a reviewer for them." M. L. B.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 14 '48 430w

"It is an unusually rich selection, compiled with that imagination and sensitive response to poetry which is a constructive force in shaping the taste of youth. It offers a wide range for individual temperaments." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p2 N 14 '48 90w

"A better-than-average anthology of poetry for children."
+ New Yorker 24:120 D 11 '48 320w

Reviewed by E. D. Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 14 '48 400w

"This is a thoroughly satisfying anthology in both format and content. . . In design and type and spacing it is an unusually attractive book. Nora Unwin's decorations give it distinction. One would like to see this in the hands of children everywhere. It is an ideal book to give a family and it would be invaluable for the story hour or the reading room in public and school libraries." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R Lit 31:37 S 18 '48 190w
Wis Lib Bul 44:214 D '48

AIKEN, CONRAD POTTER. The Kid. 32p $2 Duell
811 Blackstone, William—Poetry 47-31193
For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"'The Kid' is one of those manufactured, sponsored, 'American' epics: a surprisingly crude hodgepodge of store-bought homespun, of Madison Square Garden patriotism, of Johnny Appleseed and Moby Dick and Paul Revere and the Grand Canyon, all banged out in conscientiously rough rhymes, meter, and grammer—'just like a ballad.'" Randall Jarrell
— Nation 166:512 My 8 '48 120w

"Having 'promised something great' for a matter of forty years, Mr. Aiken has seen his moment come. His own intense pleasure, his sense of (at last) inspiration and power, are communicated. The Kid is the kind of poem Melville might have created if he had remained in sight of the magic mountain Greylock, where he wrote Moby Dick—if he had not been desiccated by Palestine and written Clarel; and it will live as one of the finest pieces of indigenous American poetry since Whitman." G. D. Painter
+ New Statesman & Nation 35:259 Mr 27 '48 420w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosenthal
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 21 '48 260w

Reviewed by John Theobald
Poetry 72:224 Jl '48 550w

"Mr. Aiken here exhibits his technical accomplishment at its best. The intellectual depth which marked his earlier work is allied to an admirable directness in exposition. The mature craftsman appears in the handling of sustained cantering rhythms, and in the way in which the changes of metre with mood are controlled. . . The effect is to make this long poem seem not long at all. Fresh virtues can be discovered at each re-reading."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p54 Ja 24 '48 470w

Reviewed by Eugene Davidson
Yale R n s 37:747 summer '48 180w

AIKMAN, DUNCAN. Turning stream. 440p $5 Doubleday
973 U.S.—Civilization 48-6930
An outline of the rise to success of the United States forms the background for a serious study of our present position. The author considers our patriotism and our ideals and how we got them, and then turns to the problems of to-day: the decline of security; shackled government; new views of tolerance; and our relations with Russia. Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 182:104 Jl '48 480w

"Not an easy, nor a pleasant book to read, but one that challenges our comfortable sense of the rightness of our ways, and makes us reassess our position in the world."
Kirkus 16:186 Ap 1 '48 180w

"Mr. Aikman, striking out hard in all directions in a manner reminiscent of Philip Wylie, has produced a provocative, timely book which deserves a wide audience." H. G. Kelley
+ Library J 73:810 My 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by Richard Watts Jr.
New Repub 118:25 Je 7 '48 380w

"As an historian, Mr. Aikman is chatty, informative and rather diffuse. As a pundit, his solutions seem hardly better than the next man's. By far the most interesting part, indeed the very heart of the volume, is the middle section which discusses certain of the institutions and habits of mind which either facilitate or inhibit our capacity for change. When he is examining our educational doctrines, or analyzing what he calls 'The Cult of Nostalgia,' Mr. Aikman talks with insight and wit. These are the observations, as he states in his preface, 'human, journalistic, and occasionally somewhat studious, of one man's lifetime.'" August Heckscher
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Je 6 '48 850w

"This is a serious book by a first-rate newspaperman who has shown in his other writing, notably 'All-American Front,' more breadth and depth than are common to the journalistic profession. . . The point of view is that of a Middle Westerner from Gene Debs' home town, who has since seen much of the world, who has read widely and thoughtfully, who admires and cherishes our 'pioneer virtues,' and who sees his native land as a Spoiled Giant with a miraculously long run of unbroken luck. In other words, Mr. Aikman is a liberal, and would probably not try to deny it." Herschel Brickell
+ N Y Times p6 My 23 '48 800w

"Long-winded, but in a rather nice way."
New Yorker 24:91 Je 19 '48 110w

Reviewed by Vince Mahoney
San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 26 '48 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 3 '48 750w

"There are some historical blunders; the chapter on what's the matter with government personnel seems to me mere scolding; and I get tired of the shabby rhetorical device, inherited from Mencken, of talking about 'Doctor Adam Smith' and 'Doctor Benjamin Franklin.' But these defects do not matter. This book has guts. It is the book which, in the hysteria of reaction now everywhere to be found, some of us have been looking for. . . I hope his book is widely bought and read." H. M. Jones
+ Sat R of Lit 31:11 My 29 '48 1200w

ALBERT, ARTHUR LEMUEL. Fundamental electronics and vacuum tubes. rev ed 510p il $6 Macmillan 537.53 Electrons. Vacuum tubes 48-299
"Although this text is interesting primarily for undergraduate electrical engineering students, it constitutes a survey of fundamental principles and practices which has proved useful as a 'build-up' book for persons who have had some previous education in electronics. The material is well selected, and the exposition is outstanding for clarity. The rather extensive lists of references are also useful to the serious reader. In this edition, there are newly added or considerably expanded sections, on such topics as power amplifiers, Klystron tubes, cavity resonators, resonant lines, tubes for ultrahigh frequencies, solenium rectifiers, and the use of reactance tubes in providing frequency-modulated waves." (N Y New Tech Bks) Chapter references. Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

ALBERT, A. L.—Continued

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:201 F 1 '48 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:30 Ja '48

ALDANOV, M. A., pseud. See Landau, M. A.

ALDEN, JOHN RICHARD. General Gage in America; being principally a history of his role in the American revolution. 313p il $4 La. state univ. press

B or 92 Gage, Thomas. U.S.—History—Revolution 48-10296

Biography of General Thomas Gage who was commander in chief of the British army in North America and governor of Massachusetts at the beginning of the American Revolution. Bibliographical note. Index.

"An objective and well-documented biography. . . As an example of unbiased reporting, Professor Alden has done a capital job. But what substantial contribution to historical knowledge, if any, has he made? We believe in the first place that Thomas Gage has been lifted out of the obscurity to which he has long been consigned. . . A second contribution, though not in every respect original, consists in placing the office of commander in chief in correct historical perspective." C. E. Carter
+ Am Hist R 54:370 Ja '49 550w

"This first full-length biography, made possible by the recent availability of much obscure material, does not effect any sensational reversal of previous estimates, but it does show him as a flesh-and-blood person rather than a mere stuffed uniform, and as a competent though scarcely inspired commander. To have this view of the military problems of the early part of the American Revolution as they appeared to this British general is to see that war in a new and enlightening perspective." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 65:831 Ag 18 '48 140w
Current Hist 15:39 Jl '48 40w
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 22 '48 120w

"Professor Alden, author of a distinguished study of 'John Stuart and the Southern Colonial Frontier,' is thoroughly familiar with the sources for this period. His book furnishes a scholarly appraisal of Gage as a military leader and politician, an accurate description of the social climate in which he moved, and a stimulating analysis of his decisions and proposals." R. A. Brown
+ N Y Times p18 Ag 29 '48 650w

"This is an exceptionally valuable and interesting volume in the field of British colonial history, for, as the title implies, the emphasis is historical rather than biographical. Professor John Richard Alden, of the University of Nebraska, has the intelligence to ask significant questions, the perseverance to find answers to most of them, and the integrity to let the reader know when he has not. The fine scholarship that distinguished his 'John Stuart and the Colonial Frontier' of four years ago is again displayed, and his literary style is more fluid." Bernard Knollenberg
+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 Je 5 '48 850w

"Professor Alden in his biographical study of Gage, uncovers the facts, but does not dare to remove the stigma which still attaches to his failure. It can hardly be expected of an American, even of an American scholar, that he will see virtue in devotion to George the Third."
Times [London] Lit Sup p328 Je 12 '48 900w

ALDERMAN, FRANCES L., and WILSON, AMBER MILDRED. About Los Angeles; il. by Edna Potter. 313p $2.20 Heath

917.9494 Los Angeles—Juvenile literature 48-6436

A textbook in social science for grades from three to six. The members of a Los Angeles family visit various points of interest in and around their city, as if they were tourists, and thus learn about the history, customs, and social life of Los Angeles.

Booklist 44:288 Ap 15 '48

"A delightful new book. [It] provides an example of the kind of instructional material that should be, but too often is not, made available about the particular community in which a child lives. Although the book is concerned specifically with the city of Los Angeles and its surrounding area, it can be used to interest children of other communities in learning more about their own cities." L. L. Peterson
+ El School J 49:180 N '48 430w

"This well-made, well-designed textbook may stand as an excellent illustrative example of the kind of instruction in local geography and government now provided for children in the grades." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:282 Jl '48 110w

ALDRICH, JULIAN CARTER, and MARKERT, MARLOW A. We, the citizens; senior problems in civic responsibilities; il. by Kay White. 254p $2.75 Inor

323.65 Citizenship 48-1342

Textbook which presents an activity program for developing civic participation and responsibility, for use with pupils of eleventh and twelfth grade level. Suggestions for the classroom library. List of visual aids.

School & Society 67:126 F 14 '48 20w
Reviewed by E. W. Burr
School R 56:368 Je '48 1250w
Reviewed by W. H. Fisher
Social Educ 12:333 N '48 320w

"The book is rich in suggestions, both in classroom activities and in reading and visual aids. To these, of course, should be added materials drawn from the community and the school library. . . Senior high school teachers, regardless of how their courses are organized will find use for copies of this book."
+ Social Studies 39:238 My '48 600w

ALEXANDER, EDWIN P. The Pennsylvania railroad. 248p il $6 Norton

385 Pennsylvania railroad 47-12537

A pictorial history of the Pennsylvania railroad, containing some 330 reproductions of rare prints and photographs of early locomotives, equipment, bridges, old posters, broadsides, tickets, rolling stock, and stations. Index.

Booklist 44:293 My 1 '48

"This is a better than average railroad history. A railroad has to be seen to be understood, and this work is splendidly illustrated. Mr. Alexander has utilized over 300 pictures to make his story roll as well as read. . . But, as in many books of this type, one important item is omitted. That is perspective. Lucius Beebe's magnificent anthology on shortline railroads, 'Mixed Train Daily,' had perspective because it encompassed the whole field. But books devoted to one individual road almost never venture beyond their own yard limits for fear of giving a competitor a kind word." H. S. Hayward
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 F 10 '48 700w

"Mr. Alexander tells a convincing story with 330 pictures, many of them rare, and with considerable text." F. H. Hubbard
+ N Y Times p18 F 22 '48 270w

ALEXANDER, JEROME. Life, its nature and origin. 291p il $5 Reinhold

576 Life 48-5396

"The purpose of this book is to show that catalytic action is the controlling force in all life processes. This view was first advanced by the author almost fifty years ago on evidence which was then comparatively slim. Now he assembles for review numerous advances in all fields of science which lend substance to his theory. Each topic is treated in a simple and elementary manner that will appeal to the general reader and enable him to grasp the trend of researches and the interrelation of the conclusions. Lists of references at the end of each chapter indicate additional aspects and details." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by G. F. Kinney

Chem Eng 55:314 My '48 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:478 Mr 15 '48 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:2 Ja '48

School & Society 67:175 F 28 '48 30w

ALFREY, TURNER. Mechanical behavior of high polymers. (High polymers; a series of monographs, v6) 581p il $9.50 Interscience

660.284 Polymers and polymerization. Elasticity. Plasticity 48-1493

"Here is a useful complement to the many books already in existence on the chemistry of the high polymers. Practically all of the high polymers that have found applications as synthetic rubbers and textiles or as plastic materials owe their usefulness to such mechanical characteristics as plasticity and elasticity. In this book plasticity, elasticity, creep, and other mechanical phenomena are considered from a scientific viewpoint and are related to molecular structure. The work is based on an extensive survey of the published literature, and statements in the text are keyed to the chapter bibliographies. It should be of considerable value to research workers in the field." N Y New Tech Bks

"Although the volume is quite complete, one noticeable omission is apparent. Notwithstanding the copyright date of 1948, no reference is made to Debye's treatment of intrinsic viscosity which first appeared in 1946. . . On the whole the book will prove quite useful to chemists and physicists interested in polymers. In particular it will help those with limited background for it contains much of the necessary basic material. The reviewer found some inevitable typographical errors but was generally pleased with the over-all readability and usefulness." F. T. Wall

+ Am Chem Soc J 70:4272 D '48 410w

"The book as a whole is well written and interesting. The comments of the author regarding unsolved problems and the nature of the difficulties opposing their solution are illuminating." E. J. Meehan

+ J Phys & Colloid Chem 52:1272 O '48 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:45 My '48

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:226 Je '48 200w

ALINGTON, CYRIL ARGENTINE. Europe; a personal and political survey. 388p maps $3.75 Scribner

940 Europe—History 48-8090

Presents the main events and trends of European history from the time of the Greeks to the close of the nineteenth century. The author is Dean of Durham, England. Index.

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

— Ann Am Acad 260:182 N '48 280w

"In its primitive forms, writing of history is a mere chronicling of events. In its most ambitious forms it is a search for the idea underlying the sequence of events. Dean Alington's book stands halfway between: it is scholarly enough to satisfy those who are interested in facts and it offers a definite philosophy of its own." E. S. P.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 S 3 '48 360w

"There is naturally nothing definitive here, but the presentation has a personal approach, and attempts a logical following of the ways in which Europe came into being, and offers a hurried student the chance to make a rapid survey of a large dose of history."

+ Kirkus 16:432 Ag 15 '48 90w

"Even in a condensation of more than two thousand years, many readers will naturally find some judgment or emphasis to disagree with. Yet, on the whole, this book (made more useful by eight simple, well selected maps and several tables) should be highly recommended to the general reader as a lively and provocative introduction to the wide field of Europe's twice-millenary past." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p22 N 28 '48 220w

"Dean Alington has written what clearly appears to be the best short history of Europe yet published, and for those who were not previously aware of the delights of history as a hobby, he has opened the door and pointed the way to a happy garden of great allure and to a treasure house that is always full." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 12 '48 420w

ALLAN, HERBERT SANFORD. John Hancock, patriot in purple. 422p il $6 Macmillan

B or 92 Hancock, John 48-7827

Biography of the Massachusetts patriot, who was a wealthy merchant, smuggler, statesman, a politician and revolutionary. He was governor of Massachusetts for several terms, and the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Bibliography. Index.

"The book needs revision. The print is too small. Much of the first three chapters should be deleted as irrelevant. But even in its present form it is the best biography of Hancock." O. M. Dickerson

+ — Am Hist R 54:371 Ja '49 650w

"The most comprehensive and fully documented biography of Hancock that has yet appeared." J. S. G. Carson

+ Am Pol Sci R 42:1041 O '48 150w

Booklist 45:12 S 1 '48

"Mr. Allan has done a good job. His book is detailed, documented, a fair and clear portrait of a great flamboyant exhibitionist. He has struck straight for the man and got him. In this book the man on horseback rides again with all his trappings; the super-salesman again sells independence and union to his fellow Americans." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 29 '48 800w

Current Hist 15:293 N '48 100w

Kirkus 16:189 Ap 1 '48 150w

"Mr. Allan, free lance writer and former newspaperman succeeds in this eminently objective biography, in showing the importance of Hancock in the young nation's struggle for independence. Recommended." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 73:810 My 15 '48 140w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman

Nation 167:239 Ag 28 '48 1050w

"Although Mr. Allan has assembled between the covers of his book the essential mass of personal data necessary for an estimate of Hancock as a man and statesman, he has fallen down badly in interpreting those data. Apparently he was never able to decide what sort of person Hancock was, so from chapter to chapter (and sometimes from page to page) his evaluation shifts from sneers to cheers. . . Nevertheless, Mr. Allan's comprehensiveness in setting forth the controversial events in Hancock's life offers certain hints as to how some of these difficulties may be solved." Douglass Adair

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ag 1 '48 1000w

"Many Americans know John Hancock only by his 'John Hancock,' that strong and bold signature to the Declaration of Independence. In a competent biography, Mr. Allan invests the signature with flesh—flesh proud and Madeira-soaked, but patriotic and serviceable to this country. . . On the whole this book is characterized by careful work and moderate interpretation. It repeatedly exhibits in its author an uncommon virtue: awareness that

ALLAN, H. S.—Continued
truth is a complicated thing." W. B. Hamilton

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 1 '48 750w

"This is a first-rate biography, which more than makes up for the long neglect from which its subject has suffered. Predictions are always dangerous and frequently unwise, but it seems safe to predict Mr. Allan's 'John Hancock' will, at least, receive long and careful consideration for the Pulitzer Prize." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 1 '48 600w

"Mr. Allan's revealing portrait is the product of thorough research and thoughtful analysis. He expresses himself judiciously and often vigorously. But like many another biographer, Mr. Allan has had trouble deciding how much background material his narrative requires. He tells us, for example, far too much about the life and times of Hancock's ancestors and nowhere near enough about the organization of the patriotic movement in the colonies. Again, whenever Mr. Allan reaches a matter that has been the subject of controversy . . . he tends to be overcautious." Raymond Walters

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:16 Jl 31 '48 800w

Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 29 '48 650w

Time 52:77 Ag 2 '48 750w

ALLEMAN, HERBERT CHRISTIAN, and FLACK, ELMER ELLSWORTH, eds. Old Testament commentary; a general introduction to and a commentary on the books of the Old Testament; complete in one volume. 893p $5 Muhlenberg press

221.7 Bible. O. T.—Commentaries 48-15028

"Thirty-five scholars, all Lutherans except W. F. Albright who contributed a chapter on archeology, were enlisted to produce this . . . one-volume commentary under the auspices of the Board of Publication of the United Lutheran Church. . . 'This commentary reflects the historic Lutheran approach to Scripture. . . The Bible not only contains the Word of God, it is the Word of God.' " Christian Century

+ Christian Century 65:418 My 5 '48 210w

"The commentary, while thoroughly up-to-date, pays less attention to critical details than some other well known one volume commentaries, concerning itself rather with 'the message of the books, the life out of which they came, and the life they tend to cultivate.' For this reason it is likely to appeal to the average reader." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 162:3 Je 1 '48 150w

ALLEN, EDITH LOUISE. Weaving you can do. 118p $2.50 Manual arts

745.52 Weaving 48-34

The book "starts with directions for hand weaving which can be done on simple board and frame looms and continues with directions and illustrations for using table and floor looms. . . [There] is material on looms, yarns, design and draft reading, weaving difficulties, and pattern problems." (J Home Econ) Index.

Booklist 44:198 F 1 '48

"The book, well illustrated with 73 photographs and drawings, and with a good table of contents and index, should be a useful handbook for the person learning to weave by herself and as a reference for classes in weaving." Ruth Segolson

+ J Home Econ 40:330 Je '48 120w

ALLEN, EDWARD DOUGLASS, and BROWNLEE, O. H. Economics of public finance. 535p $5.35; to schools $4 Prentice-Hall

336 Finance. U.S.—Economic policy 47-12184

"The first sections of the book examine the relationship of public finance and full employment, and indicate the importance of fiscal policy in respect to inflationary and deflationary movements in the economy. The fiscal techniques available to the government and their potency to minimize inflationary and deflationary movements are explored. . . Another section of the book (Part III) concerns itself with the effects of fiscal policies upon income distribution and resource allocation. . . The next major section is concerned with public revenues and public borrowing. The various types of taxes employed are analyzed, and there is a full discussion of their points of strength and weakness, viewed in the light of their contribution or lack of contribution to the economic goals set forth above. . . The last section deals with the problems of intergovernmental fiscal coordination. Selected readings at end of many of the chapters." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

"The contribution of this volume lies in its synthesis of much that has been written in recent years on the relationship between government fiscal policy and the successful functioning of our economy." N. L. Silverstein

+ Am Pol Sci R 42:386 Ap '48 400w

"This is a book partly on fiscal policy and partly on taxation and public finance in general. In fact, it is almost like two books on different aspects of the same subject put together under the same cover. The first part, on fiscal policy . . . is the more original but also the more difficult part of the book. . . This combination under one cover of two different fields of survey is bound to cause some difficulty to instructors wishing to use it as a textbook in their courses. While the first part furnishes some of the essential material for a course in fiscal policy for advanced students, it does not furnish quite enough to fill the course. Similarly, the second part furnishes some, but not all, of the information necessary for a standard course in taxation and public finance. The two parts together do not fit any existing type of course. . . Despite these faults, the book has great merit. As a college text in public finance, it is a pioneering work." Paul Studenski

— + Ann Am Acad 257:243 My '48 700w

"The book will give the students and the general reader a good introduction to the economics of public finance. For a well-balanced view of the whole of public finance, however, he will need some supplementation in the institutional, legal, political, and administrative aspects of the subject. Without supplementary material the reader may come to believe not merely that public finance should be—but also that it is now, or is likely to become in the near future—an effective and positive instrument of governmental economic policy." Roy Blough

+ — J Pol Econ 56:362 Ag '48 1100w

ALLEN, GINA. Rustics for keeps. 203p $2.50 Odyssey

630.1 Farm life Agr48-48

The Allens were sophisticated New Yorkers until the war came, and Mr Allen was appointed civilian instructor for the army in Stillwater, Oklahoma. The only house they could get was on a seven-acre farm. The book relates their experiences and mistakes in trying to be farmers. They finally learned so well that they are now "rustics for keeps," with a much larger farm in New Mexico.

Booklist 44:244 Mr 15 '48

"Gina Allen's is an amusing book and a seasonable one." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 5 '48 420w

ALLEN, HERVEY. Toward the morning. 458p $3 Rinehart

48-3507

The third in a projected series of six historical novels, of which the first two were The Forest and the Fort, and Bedford Village (Book Review Digest 1943, 1944). In the present volume Salathiel Albine continues on his way, learns more of the ways of civilization, along with his common-law wife, Melissa. As the novel closes they are about to set out for Philadelphia. The place is Pennsylvania, in or near Carlisle; the time about ten years before the beginning of the Revolution.

"The integrity, the thoroughness, and the humanity of Hervey Allen's writings are a great relief after the syrupy nonsense which has been served up to us as historical romance these past two years." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 182:104 N '48 330w

Booklist 45:13 S 1 '48

Cath World 168:254 D '48 250w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p6X Ag 29 '48 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '48

"Mr. Allen spins his tale with deftness and gusto, but his writing is freighted with much lush description." Elizabeth Johnson
+ — Commonweal 48:573 S 24 '48 800w

"Again one gets a sense of teeming life on the frontier—almost a Canterbury pilgrimage sense of jostling motion, color and drama. But of incident there is less—the pace seems slower—the story interest bogs down in multiplicity of detail, loses itself in contemplative passages, is blurred by occasional metaphysical and philosophical side journeys. . . Personally, I found Toward the Morning the least interesting of the three."
— + Kirkus 16:173 Ap 1 '48 330w

"While developing Albine's adjustment to civilized ways, the author's accustomed broad sweep and wealth of convincing detail bring the frontier to effective life. For all libraries." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 73:877 Je 1 '48 100w

"A costume piece in a great tradition, the drama a bit forced, the idiom occasionally a bit labored, the shifting of scenes sometimes calculated for histrionic reasons. But it is also a serious and mature work, with a kinship to such fine books as Elizabeth Madox Roberts', 'The Great Meadow' and Grace Zaring Stone's 'Cold Journey.' For all the romance of the six-foot-four blond hero, Salathiel Albine, and his bride, Melissa of the unearthly black hair, this is a story of a society. Here the frontier dominates the stage. This is a panorama of frontier society in ferment." H. S. Commager
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ag 29 '48 900w

"When this middle portion of 'The Disinherited' is fitted into its place in the structure of the whole novel, such defects as it has when published alone may well become virtues as parts of a talent-touched chronicle of the colonial scene, that still will move at a deliberate pace, but will be solid, rounded, the proud and valuable work of a poet with a taste for the past." Robert Van Gelder
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 29 '48 1100w

New Yorker 24:103 S 11 '48 120w

Reviewed by Marvin Sargent
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 29 '48 700w

"Allen's text contains a wealth of detail and incident. . . He works in a rich, sometimes over-rich style. Where the costume romance is pantingly and ridiculously lustful, Allen is robustly bawdy, earthy, and sound. If, for individual tastes, there is sometimes an excess; if the mark is missed now and again, nevertheless, better this overflow of a fine, full invention than the shoddy, bare bare stuff which has frequently been palmed off upon the unwary as historical fiction." Edmund Fuller
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:11 Ag 28 '48 1100w

Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 8 '48 160w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p8B O 10 '48 550w

Time 52:77 Ag 30 '48 400w

ALLEN, LEE. Cincinnati Reds. 302p il $3 Putnam

796.357 Baseball. Cincinnati. Baseball club (National league) 48-6685

Detailed history of the Cincinnati Reds from the time of their organization as amateurs in 1866, to the present. Illustrated with photographs. No index.

Booklist 44:333 Je 1 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '48

"Vigorous writing."
+ Kirkus 16:210 Ap 15 '48 40w

"Interest outside Cincinnati limited, but should be in baseball collections 'for the record.'" R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 73:477 Mr 15 '48 40w

N Y Times p25 Je 13 '48 270w

Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 18 '48 300w

ALLEN, OLIVER FIELD. The modern Diesel. 268p il $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

621.436 Diesel engines 47-5663

Deals with the history of the Diesel engine and its applications in generating plants, ships, locomotives, trucks, buses and airplanes. Contains information on problems which had to be solved by Diesel engine designers from earliest attempts to the modern high speed engines. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Fales
Library J 73:43 Ja 1 '48 50w

"Here is a book that may be read by anyone interested, whether or not he is familiar with engine terminology."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:73 O '47

ALLEN, RAYMOND CLAYTON. Roses for every garden. 218p il $3.50 Barrows

635.93337 Roses Agr48-397

A rose grower's manual which "is intended to strip rose culture of its complications and to emphasize only those practices essential to success." (Foreword) Some of the subjects covered are: The bush roses; Climbing and trailing roses; Soils, planting, and transplanting; Pruning, cutting, and disbudding; Protection from cold; Spraying and dusting; Diseases, the big four; Culture for special climates; Primer of propagation and hybridization; Pleasure and pitfalls of exhibiting. Glossary of rose jargon. Index.

Booklist 44:363 Jl 1 '48

"This is the best book for the amateur rose enthusiast, and probably will be thoroughly appreciated by the expert as well."
+ Kirkus 16:229 My 1 '48 110w

Wis Lib Bul 44:147 S '48

ALLIS, MARGUERITE. Law of the land. 276p $2.75 Putnam

48-6158

In the 1840's Connecticut law made women not much better than chattels. With the death of her father Arabella Barlow knew where she would stand with her brother Saul. But Arabella was a hardy soul and she withstood betrayal, stood up for what rights she had, bolstered up her delicate sister-in-law's morale, and even attended a woman suffrage meeting on the sly. Eventually her courage was rewarded.

Booklist 44:299 My 1 '48

Kirkus 16:28 Ja 15 '48 150w

"Welcome addition to small libraries." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 73:335 F 15 '48 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Jl 11 '48 60w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Times p16 Je 13 '48 500w

Springf'd Republican p10B Je 13 '48 90w

Wis Lib Bul 44:104 My '48

ALMAN, DAVID. The well of compassion. 278p $3 Simon & Schuster

48-7010

"Jo Yarby, white, egocentric, marries the Negro artist, Lock Sharon, not because she

ALMAN, DAVID—Continued
loves him, but because she feels her work will improve through their association. Lock, a fine artist who paints with feeling—but it is a feeling of hate—hopes that he can make a complete break with the Negro world through his marriage to Jo. After their marriage, Jo and Lock drift farther and farther apart, until finally Lock leaves Jo." Kirkus

"Skillful characterization in this novel of art and miscegenation. . . A new approach to the racial problem, but the situation may seem contrived."
+ — Kirkus 16:155 Mr 15 '48 150w

"The story should be an engrossing one, dealing as it does with a mixed marriage and the world of art and artists in New York City. But it is not. Because the people are not believable. Lock Sharon's marriage to Jo Yarby will not disturb the most violent Negrophobe. For Jo and Lock are disembodied figures who walked through anonymous streets, lived in uncharacterized rooms, somewhere, vaguely, in the years between 1937-1939." Ann Petry
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 11 '48 450w

"Without pretending to be able to speak for any but the non-Negro reader, it is a fine, compassionate and immensely moving book. . . Mr. Alman evades none of the controversial aspects of his theme. The one small fault to be found with his book is the too obvious use made of Lock's painting as a reflection of his development. And, though any one at all familiar with the art world of Manhattan may feel that a young Negro painter would surely meet a few more intelligent, unbigoted people than Lock does, the author will in the end concede that there are some good whites along with the bad." Marc Brandel
+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 11 '48 550w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith
Sat R of Lit 31:21 Ag 7 '48 750w

ALSOP, REESE FELL. George and his horse, Bill; il. by Paul Brown. 164p $2.50 Dodd
Horses—Legends and stories 48-10427

"The story of an unusually unattractive horse who was born on the plains and brought East to be sold at auction. A small boy buys him, trains him with great care and faith in him. Bill repays the boy by becoming a really fine horse." (Sat R of Lit) For grades three to six.

Booklist 45:144 D 15 '48

"Hero is too young for remedial reading use. Recommended only where need is heaviest." E. A. Groves
Library J 74:132 Ja 15 '49 70w
Sat R of Lit 31:42 N 13 '48 50w

ALVARO, CORRADO. Man is strong; tr. from the Italian by Frances Frenaye. 264p $3 Knopf 48-7937

A young engineer, after years of living in a democracy, returns to his native country. He finds that in his absence it has become completely totalitarian. The theme of the novel is the growth of fear which gradually replaces the young man's love of his country. The book was first published in Italy: the scene was then said to be Russia.

"It is a thoroughly unusual novel, and, to my mind, a remarkable one. The quality of its telling has been expertly rendered in Frances Frenaye's translation." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 182:106 O '48 1000w
Booklist 45:137 D 15 '48

"Mr. Alvaro's narrative seems wrapped in dream. Only the two leading characters are real; the others are distorted, even in their physical appearances—as bizarre and unpredictable as the personalities of 'Alice in Wonderland.'. . As description of how a man can disintegrate under the pressure of fear, the novel is powerful almost to the point of repulsion, without quite losing its air of make-believe. In fact, the more fantastic it becomes, the more sinister its effect, until the weird climax in which Mr. Alvaro certainly gives his most bitter glimpse of his society crimped under fear." Melvin Maddocks
— + Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 19 '48 750w
Kirkus 16:315 Jl 1 '48 180w

"Very subtly written, this is a story which could have happened in any one of several countries in the recent past." Donald Wasson
Library J 73:1088 Ag '48 80w

"Fear, corrosive and degrading to man's dignity, is the single dominant motif of this book, determining both its mood and style. The mood is muted, an atmosphere bathed in sepia tones and misty shadows. For here is no study of terror which sharpens the senses, but rather of constant, gnawing, ever-present fear which blunts them. Mr. Alvaro explores that curse of our age, mass fear, as it lurks in the subconscious and distorts all conscious experience. . . The result is none too successful. The book is prolix, as ordinary dreams are, at times needlessly wordy, elsewhere too abrupt. It lacks the climaxes of nightmares." J. D. Ross
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ag 29 '48 1200w

Reviewed by Patricia Blake
N Y Times p44 N 21 '48 550w
New Yorker 24:80 S 4 '48 160w

"There are some thoroughly gripping encounters with police and others along the way, but a mystifying lack of balance in the space allotted to each impedes the reader's enjoyment somewhat. There are some stimulating ideas and observations concerning human reactions in a world of fear. And the people, though the author seems somewhat cool towards them, are interesting insofar as their reactions delineate the symptoms of those who suffer from dread of the state." V. B.
— + San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 17 '48 450w

"If this book does not quite achieve the promise implicit in much of its writing, it still does no small service in introducing to America another serious creative artist, whose work in a free Italy may be expected to clarify his philosophy." Harry Bull
Sat R of Lit 31:11 S 4 '48 900w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 38:189 autumn '48 230w

AMBRIERE, FRANCIS. Long holiday; tr. by Elaine P. Halperin. 249p $3 Ziff-Davis
940.547243 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, French 48-5038

An account of the French author's fifty-six months spent in seven German forced-labor and concentration camps, 118 days of that time in solitary confinement. The book won the first Goncourt prize to be awarded in France in six years, and sold over 200,000 copies in one year.

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p71 F 4 '48 230w

"'The Long Holiday' is neither shocking nor dramatic; there is no attempt to color up characters or situations. Ambriere, who was before the war (and is now) a journalist, kept notes on daily happenings at the camps, and wrote his book from them. He quietly chronicled the daily routines, the attempts to escape (including one of his own), the sabotage work of some prisoners, the traitorous acts of others. . . Ambriere is critical of his own people as well as of the Germans; he writes bitterly of the neglect shown by the Vichy government toward the prisoners, and he writes frankly of the many French captives who willingly went to work for the Germans." Herbert Kupferberg
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 1 '48 500w

"No literary achievement, it is a thoughtful and simple account of man's courage and man's weakness under demoralizing brutality."
Time 51:86 F 2 '48 600w

AMERICAN AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION. Sportsmanlike driving. [new ed] 425p il $2.50 The association, Mills bldg, Washington 6, D.C.

629.28 Automobiles—Driving. Traffic regulations 47-30801

"Although the title page calls this a first edition, the material was first published as pamphlets, which were collected in book form in 1939. The contents are now revised, brought up to date, and arranged in a logical sequence. Intended for high schools; discussion topics, projects, and reading references. Many effective illustrations." Booklist

Booklist 44:284 Ap 15 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '48

School & Society 68:287 O 23 '48 40w

"Although the new edition of Sportsmanlike Driving was written primarily for the beginner driver it will also be of value to the hundreds of thousands who realize that they need to improve their driving and walking practices."

+ Special Libraries 39:57 F '48 50w

AMERICAN COLLECTOR (periodical). Treasury of old silver. See Semon, K. W., ed.

AMERICAN college dictionary; ed. by Clarence L. Barnhart; with the assistance of 355 authorities and specialists. 1432p il maps $5 Random house; text ed with thumb index Harper $6

423 English language—Dictionaries 48-10;48-1762

"A completely new dictionary edited by authorities and based on the opinions of more than 300 subject specialists. In addition to being the latest record of current usage, it bases its entries on the Lorge-Thorndike semantic count, includes new words and meanings in the one alphabet, offers a simplified pronunciation system used to train radio announcers, and spot maps to locate geographic areas, such as the Oregon trail. There are fewer illustrations than in the Webster's collegiate dictionary." Booklist

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 183:89 Ja '49 20w

Booklist 44:167 Ja 1 '48

"The completion of the American College Dictionary is a publishing event of such magnitude as to dwarf any other volume that may stand on the shelf alongside it. It represents an imposing combination of publishing acumen and scholarly devotion, the culminating triumph of a semantic approach to language based upon our American-born pragmatic philosophy." Emmett Dedmon

+ Chicago Sun p5X D 14 '47 450w

Christian Science Monitor p10 F 28 '48 300w

Kirkus 15:668 D 1 '47 250w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 118:27 F 2 '48 650w

"In practically every respect a truly new dictionary, it contains more about the state of a disordered and headlong developing language than any one person could ever be called upon to grasp, unless he happened to be a dictionary maker." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p11 D 28 '47 2000w

"A useful, sound, and low-priced dictionary."

+ New Yorker 23:98 D 20 '47 80w

"Since the best way to test a dictionary is to use it, we have been giving 'The American College Dictionary' a strenuous workout since the review copy arrived more than a month ago. First of all, it is logical, sensible and readable. . . Careful distinction is made between different meanings of the same word, and that difference is clearly illustrated by phrases or short sentences. And best of all, the editors scrapped all the supplementary lists and groupings usually buried in the back of the dictionary and put all the entries (132,000 altogether) in the main body of the book in a single alphabetical listing." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 4 '48 280w

Reviewed by C. F. Wells

Sat R of Lit 31:19 Ja 24 '48 500w

School & Society 67:271 Ap 3 '48 20w

"The American College Dictionary is highly recommended as an inexpensive but very useful dictionary for basic current vocabulary use for high school, college and public libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 19:17 Ap '48 850w

AMERICAN COUNCIL ON EDUCATION. Cooperative study in general education. See Cooperative study in general education

AMERICAN foundations and their fields, sixth survey (1947-48) ed. by William B. Cherin. 4 pts pt 1 75p pa set $6 Raymond Rich & William Cherin associates, 30 E. 22d st, N.Y. 10

361 Foundations, Charitable and educational

"This is the first part of a volume to be published in four sections forming a sixth survey of American foundations and their fields. Earlier studies, originally undertaken by the Twentieth Century Fund, were published in 1928 (revised in 1931), 1932, 1935, 1939, and 1942. . . Part I presents information on ninety cooperating organizations of this type whose fiscal year ended from February 28 to July 31, 1947. . . The foundations are listed alphabetically by official name. The information given for each includes address, basis of organization and year of establishment, names of donors, officers, and trustees, published reports, purpose and objective of the foundation, special conditions applied in making grants, kinds of grants, financial data such as capital assets, expenditures and amounts disbursed in the form of grants during the past fiscal year." Subscription Bks Bul

"The book deals fully with the administrative practices and enforcement methods of the U. S. Food and Drug Administration. It is a volume that will be especially valuable to health officials who come in contact with the federal food control activities." Sol Pincus

+ Am J Pub Health 38:729 My '48 250w

"In this first issue of the Sixth Survey, a total of 90 foundations is listed. Of these, 46 were not in the previous edition. The information for most entries is also more extensive than it was in the earlier edition. The coverage seems to be more nationwide—a corrected fault of the earlier edition which stressed New York foundations. A later section of the survey will contain an analysis of trends in foundation development and financing."

Subscription Bks Bul 19:19 Ap '48 440w

AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. Committee on post-war planning. National plan for public library service; prepared for the Committee by Carleton B. Joeckel and Amy Winslow; with a chapter by Lowell Martin. (Planning for libs, no 3) 168p $3 A.L.A.

027.473 Libraries—U.S. Library science 48-5792

"Strong local units are the core of this plan for adequate, purposeful library service for every American, but the goal of nation-wide services, as outlined here, can be reached only by coordination of local, state, and federal governments. This concise appraisal of libraries today and the measures for organization, administration, personnel, materials, citizen cooperation, and research may well be a stimulus and a guide for every worker in a public library." Booklist

Booklist 44:227 Mr 1 '48

"The 'National Plan' is so flexible that it almost precludes criticism. It will disappoint the seeker of a specific blueprint for the library of the future, but will excite and stimulate to action individuals and groups earnestly interested in the development of the American public library. It should be read and talked about by every librarian . . . for its challenge is to the individual and only by first 'talking, lis-

AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION—Cont.
tening, and talking again' will the principles of the plan be put into effect.'' H. D. Hutchinson
+ Library J 73:1264 S 15 '48 1050w

''The authors have distilled the dreams of the most forward-looking librarians and have compounded a practical plan which will serve for a generation as a guide to those interested in the extension and improvement of library service.'' H. M. Harris
+ Library Q 18:287 O '48 550w
Wis Lib Bul 44:60 Mr '48

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF COMPOSERS, AUTHORS AND PUBLISHERS. ASCAP biographical dictionary of composers, authors, and publishers; ed. by Daniel I. McNamara. 483p $5 Crowell
927.8 Musicians 48-5406

''ASCAP has a current membership of 1890 writers (composers and authors of lyrics) and 309 publishers. The dictionary contains entries for most of them. Among composers and lyric writers, an estimated 600 work in the 'serious' field, the rest in the popular. The majority are living, but a fair percentage of deceased musicians whose works are still under copyright are included. Each biography gives birth date, date of joining ASCAP, education, positions, awards and prizes, a list of representative works, and present address... Following the biographical section, there are lists of members by birthplace, by birthday, by residence, and finally, there is a list of the members who are publishers. The last is an especially useful section, giving firm name, address, and catalogs owned.'' Music Lib Assn Notes

---

''The position of the popular song in American life being what it is, the book is recommended to all but the smallest public libraries.'' Leonard Burkat
Library J 73:338 F 15 '48 110w

''This is one of the most valuable reference tools to be issued for a theatre or music librarian. Because of national interest in radio and television it will undoubtedly become an essential desk reference book for even the smallest library as it will answer so many difficult biographical questions readily. Highly recommended.'' George Freedley
+ Library J 73:475 Mr 15 '48 60w

''It is unfortunate that so little has been done toward establishing and supplying correct full names... The preface does not so state, but presumably most of the biographical information was gathered by questionnaire. The method is capable of yielding much excellent material, not otherwise available, but since artists who are much before the public tend to play free and loose with the date of their birth, it is too bad that a more objective check could not be imposed in this regard... Except that the volume is more up-to-date, the articles on the more eminent composers tend to have little information which was not already available in Baker and Thompson. Nonetheless, the book makes a very significant contribution by supplying for the first time the basic facts on a long list of popular and minor composers and lyricists who are not easily found elsewhere. Previously, the Billboard Encyclopedia was the only convenient reference tool in the field. This still left an aching vacuum which despite its shortcomings the ASCAP dictionary does much to fill, and there will surely be many librarians and others who will have occasion to be very grateful to its editor.'' Minnie Elmer
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 5:239 Mr '48 600w

''A number of weaknesses will limit the book's usefulness in libraries. Personal names are usually given in the form commonly used on sheet music or heard over the air: as Davis, Benny; Dorsey, Jimmy; Herman, Pinky. The fuller form is sometimes given in curves... There are no references from real names to pseudonyms . . . or from pseudonyms to real names... Dates of birth are also suspect... In presenting lists of works, italics are used for the titles of books, musicals, chorals and most other serious works, quotes being reserved, as a rule, for the titles of songs. Usually the relationship of the individual to the works cited is clear but when (as in the cases of Jimmie Dodd, Walter Donaldson, and Andrew Donnelly, for example) he is described as 'composer, author' it is not indicated whether he wrote the words, the music, or both. Of such errors and inconsistencies the user must beware, yet in total, the ASCAP Biographical Dictionary of Composers, Authors and Publishers represents a useful contribution to our knowledge of contemporary American creators of music. With the limitations noted above, this work is recommended for music reference collections as a supplement to other standard works, and for small general reference collections as a reasonably priced, up-to-date survey of the makers of modern American music.''
+ — Subscription Bks Bul 19:20 Ap '48 1150w

AMERICAN VISCOSE CORPORATION. Textile research department. Rayon technology; handbook for textile mills. 273p il $3.75 McGraw 677.46 Rayon. Textile industry 48-7345

''Here are discussed in detail the methods of processing rayon staple into yarn on machinery originally designed for handling cotton, silk, or wool; the preparation of rayon yarn for weaving and knitting operations; and the calculations in producing the finished fabric. All phases of rayon manufacture including spinning, throwing, weaving, knitting, dyeing and finishing are covered. The book is intended for mill men and others who already have a knowledge of the ordinary textile processes.'' (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 45:7 S 1 '48
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:479 Mr 15 '48 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:59 Jl '48

AMERICANO, JORGE. New foundation of international law. 137p $2.50 Macmillan 341 International law 47-12455

''A plea for a new concept of international law, based on the needs of man instead of the needs of nations. Dr. Americano (Professor of Law, University of Sao Paulo), has definite suggestions, arising from an optimistic belief in peoples and in justice.'' (Current Hist) No index.

''The volume is an exposition of neither past nor present international organization and law, nor of any significant portion thereof. Nor is it a contribution to the study of international politics or of the causes of wars. It is, rather, a plea for the ideas which it endorses. As such, it has all the merits and defects of a legal brief. It is, for instance, eloquent in its ardor for the rights of man and for democracy. It is equally emphatic in its rejection of the villainy of dictators and dictatorships, particularly of those existing after the fighting stopped in the recent war. But it has also a pronounced tendency to treat lightly or not at all those troublesome facts which have hitherto obstructed the march to triumph both of the supernational law which this book actually espouses and of the superstate for which it campaigns. Above all, it places far too much emphasis on the efficacy of education as a panacea for securing the peace.'' George Manner
— + Am Pol Sci R 42:363 Ap '48 550w
Columbia Law R 48:667 My '48 80w
Current Hist 14:174 Mr '48 50w
Harvard Law R 61:1095 Je '48 380w

''Recommended.'' W. A. Hausdorfer
+ Library J 72:1535 N 1 '47 130w

AMERY, LEOPOLD CHARLES MAURICE STENNETT. Thoughts on the constitution. 166p $2.50 Oxford
342.42 Great Britain—Constitutional law [47-5796]

''Consists of four sections entitled: 'The Essential Nature of the Constitution;' 'How to Preserve Parliamentary Government'; 'The Machinery of Government'; and 'The Evolution of the British Commonwealth.' The first section is an illuminating historical analysis devoted to the relation of government to legislation, of the crown and the cabinet to Parliament. . . The chapter on Parliament deals with its evolution over the past fifty years. . . The chapter on the machinery of government throws new light on the actual working of the cabinet system and analyzes the means whereby a government can plan ahead as well as conduct affairs from day to day. . . Mr. Amery was better qualified to write [the chapter on the evolution of the British commonwealth] than any other British statesman; for since 1911 he has been closest officially and in spirit to the main phases." Am Pol Sci R

"This book is now in its second edition in England. It is already on its way to recognition as one of the few classics on the British constitution. . . In some ways, the long chapter on the evolution of the British Commonwealth is the most important part of the book. The more closely the United States is called upon to work with Britain and the British Commonwealth, the more important it is that leaders of American thought and action should read and understand this chapter." H. D. Hall
+ Am Pol Sci R 42:786 Ag '48 1500w

"Stimulating and suggestive book. . . The lectures are practical in the best sense, and they are written in a graceful and charming style." W. P. M. Kennedy
+ Ann Am Acad 256:221 Mr '48 400w

Reviewed by R. L. Schuyler
Pol Sci Q 63:311 Je '48 380w

"Mr. Amery's 'thoughts' are in fact four lectures delivered at Oxford last year, and it would be difficult to exaggerate their value. Their author has literally unique qualifications for the exposition of the principles of Cabinet and Parliamentary government, for no other writer on this subject, I feel certain, has approached it on the basis of thirty-odd years' membership of Parliamentary and eight years' membership of different Cabinets. The result is a book of 160 pages which perhaps contains more information and wisdom to the square inch than any volume great or small ever published on the English Constitution." Wilson Harris
+ Spec 179:84 Jl 18 '47 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p398 Ag 9 '47 1300w

AMES, MERLIN MCMAIN. The fork in the trail; il. by Henry Pitz. 348p $2.50 McKay 48-6349

The Wisconsin frontier fifty years ago or more is the scene of this story for boys of ten to fourteen. A young school teacher with high ideals is one of the leading characters. There is a mystery to be solved by the boy heroes, too.

"The author has handled new terrain, new problems of expanding America, and written a lot of story with novel characterizations. Good pictures by Henry Pitz, and excellent format."
+ Kirkus 16:170 Ap 1 '48 150w

Reviewed by E. E. Frank
Library J 73:824 My 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by M. P. Allen
+ N Y Times p19 Jl 11 '48 90w

AMES, VAN METER. André Gide. (Makers of modern literature) 302p $2 New directions

B or 92 Gide, André Paul Guillaume
47-11811

"Substantial addition to the New Directions series of studies on contemporary authors. . . Gide himself has said his work must be judged and understood, not book by book, but in its entirety. This is substantial help to such judgment and understanding, giving attention to such matters as his marriage, his shift from puritanism to paganism, his religious questing, and his attitudes toward art and science." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:186 Ja 15 '48

"There is in the book great evidence of indigestion, and the style does nothing to dissipate, but rather adds, to the general lack of clarity." J. C. Garrett
+ Canadian Forum 27:260 F '48 140w

Reviewed by A. N. Wilder
Christian Century 65:143 F 4 '48 550w

"Particularly timely because of the recent Knopf publication of Gide's Journals; and especially useful because of the limited amount of criticism-in-depth of Gide in English." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 72:1535 N 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Nation 166:280 Mr 6 '48 1450w

"A most excellent introduction to Gide's personality and work. Its frame of reference is large. It is penetrating insight. Its interpretation of a singularly complex mind is lucid, sympathetic, and on the whole persuasive. Recognizing how deeply Gide's life work has been molded by his personal experience, Mr. Ames supplies an extended, and very valuable, study of his early environment, his stormy youth, and the major developments in his maturity that affected his art." Lloyd Morris
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ja 11 '48 700w

"Unfortunately the new study by Van Meter Ames is a disappointment. Overlong for what it has to say, it is so colorless as to make even the colorful André Gide seem drab. . . Mr. Ames has read all of André Gide and thought about him along broad—too broad—lines, with the result that he has often read much into Gide in order, most curiously, to limit his significance." J. O'B.
— N Y Times p14 Ja 4 '48 700w

"A sympathetic and intelligent guide to André Gide for American readers has long been needed. While perhaps more valuable as an interpretation of the man than of the author, this is still a book which will help to fill that need."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:9 Mr '48 220w

AMOS, ALAN, pseud. See Knight, K. M.

ANDERSON, BASIL WILLIAM. Gem testing. Am ed 256p il $5 Emerson

549 Precious stones 48-6388

"This first American edition is the fourth English edition, which has some new material and illustrations. Can be used by anyone interested in identification of gems, and the difference between real and imitation stones. Glossary, bibliography, tables, and a summary of gem species." Booklist

---

Booklist 44:346 Je 15 '48

"The book would seem to fulfil its objective in praiseworthy fashion; it is recommended for the serious nonspecialist." D. J. F.
+ J Geol 56:594 N '48 150w

ANDERSON, CLARENCE WILLIAM. Sketchbook; text and lithographs. [78p] $3.50 Macmillan

743.69725 Horses—Pictures, illustrations, etc. Drawing. Anatomy, Artistic 48-9477

A series of lithographs presenting horses of different types and in various poses. Each lithograph has explanatory text and drawings.

Booklist 45:153 Ja 1 '49

"Young people who like to draw animals will find this series of studies on the well-proportioned horse both fascinating and informative. . . The fine lithographs for which Mr. Anderson is noted will make this Sketchbook a pleasure to horse lovers." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:44 Ja '49 80w

"This is a book that will have a special meaning both for lovers of horses and for would-be artists. . . While younger boys and girls will enjoy the horses for their own sake, the older ones, and their adult relations, will learn from them the art of drawing horses in action and will acquire, incidentally, invaluable information about them." M. G. Davis

ANDERSON, C. W.—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 32:35 Ja 8 '49 100w

ANDERSON, ETHEL TODD. The scarlet bird; il. by Margaret Ayer. 255p $2.50 Nelson 48-7264

Mystery and adventure story for teen aged readers. The scene is the Hawaiian Islands. The heroine is a Hawaiian girl who came to Honolulu to enter the university. While there she and some of her young friends search for a valuable feather cape.

Booklist 45:15 S 1 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun p21 O 2 '48 110w

"An engaging story. . . Strong characterization plus dramatic happenings result in a most gripping book." H. F. Griswold
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 O 14 '48 190w

"Exciting chase story among caves and mountain passes, with good handling of international racial problems, love, finances, and college fun."
+ Kirkus 16:282 Je 15 '48 110w

"This is a mature college story that young people will enjoy." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ag 1 '48 270w

"There is slight reference to college activities, and the few college friends identified might fit into any school story, except for their mixed Japanese, Chinese, Hawaiian and American origins; some of the dialogue is reminiscent of the stylized slang used by young Charlie Chan in the movies. Mention is made of successful intermingling of different racial backgrounds in the making of young Americans; and the scenic, botanical and historic setting suggest little used and interesting material for more substantial treatment." C. E. Zagat
N Y Times p19 Jl 11 '48 180w

ANDERSON, MRS FLORENCE MARY (BENNETT). Black sail. 318p $3 Crown
Theseus—Fiction 48-5407

A retelling of the story of Theseus and the Minotaur. Beginning with the hero's mysterious appearance at the court of his father, it ends some time after his freeing of the city of Athens. List of characters. Glossary.

"Those seeking detailed information about the Minoan age will find it rewarding; those seeking entertainment may find it rather heavy going."
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 30 '48 40w

"[The author] having produced a first chapter which shifts between the confused and the irritating, sits down to write herself a story. And how it comes off! From the moment when the palace of Minos is reached, the characters take on life, roundness, energy, are no longer figures in a wall-painting, but people behaving like people. The story runs along like a whirlwind through a series of beautifully done climaxes. Moreover, these people are not moderns wrapped up in masquerade dress." Fletcher Pratt
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:27 My 1 '48 410w

ANDERSON, MAXWELL. Anne of the thousand days. 123p $2.75 Sloane
812 Anne Boleyn, consort of Henry VIII, king of England—Drama. Henry VIII, king of England—Drama 48-9809

A play in which the story of Anne Boleyn and Henry the VIII is told from the time when Henry first came to claim her, to the time when she is awaiting her execution. The play was produced on Broadway in December, 1948.

Booklist 45:155 Ja 1 '49

"Effective as this will be in production, with its dramatic intensity, its poetic prose makes it also a play to read."
+ Kirkus 16:548 O 1 '48 90w

"It will undoubtedly prove a little theatre favorite when the rights are available. Highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:1820 D 15 '48 60w

"Both Anne and Henry are richly drawn characters, the latter much more complex than in most plays about him, and the historical situation is handled without confusion. It seems to be one of Mr. Anderson's more solid achievements." W. P. Eaton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ja 2 '49 400w

"If one must classify, it belongs, I suppose, with the historical romances rather than with 'Winterset' or 'Key Largo'—not only because it deals with a historical subject but more importantly because the center of emphasis is the personality of two individuals rather than a theme of universal application. But it is certainly the best of the romances, both because of its positive virtues and because of various weaknesses which have been avoided. All the others were to some extent marred by a certain lushness and floridity. Relatively at least, 'Anne of the Thousand Days' is spare and strong." J. W. Krutch
+ N Y Times p4 D 12 '48 2100w
Wis Lib Bul 45:11 Ja '49

ANDERSON, ROBERT GORDON. The city and the cathedral; a reflection of the glory of the Gothic and the middle ages at their high tide in the city by the Seine. 337p $3.50 Longmans
944.36 Paris—History. Paris. Notre Dame
48-9097

Study of Notre Dame and the city and inhabitants of Paris in the thirteenth century. Using the cathedral as a base the author travels thru the city, visiting high and low society, and picturing the civilization of the time and the people who made it. Index.

Booklist 45:155 Ja 1 '49

"The feel and color, as well as the spirit and the activities, of a remote age are here sharply caught." J. S. Kennedy
+ Cath World 168:214 D '48 110w

"Darker and bloodier sides of this human panorama there were bound to be; but if the author chooses always to stress the bright, few in our not-too-joyous age will quarrel with him. He has given us a work of immense erudition and immense sympathy, too; something that might almost be called a liberal education in French medievalism.'" Katherine Brégy
+ Cath World 168:411 F '49 340w

Reviewed by Jex Martin
Chicago Sun D 20 '48 500w

"An author's fixed determination to glorify the Middle Ages and the Roman Catholic Church assures his book of a certain consistency in point of view which may be artistically satisfying, but it irks the historian who likes to see a fairly clear line drawn between substantiated facts and edifying imaginings." W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 65:1402 D 22 '48 420w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p14 D 2 '48 240w

"The book is not only informative and fascinating, but human and appealing. Its reading public is circumscribed but generous, a must for the intelligentsia."
+ Kirkus 16:546 O 1 '48 220w

"Here is an excellent book, so vivid and animated in its reconstruction of a stimulating era. . . Given his love for Paris, all are understandable and some forgivable. It is forgivable that he makes everything he admires in the age French and Parisian and that he should describe Dante's visit to Paris with eyewitness detail, even though some are still not sure he ever went there. But it is not forgivable that he should even seem to condone the massacre of the Cathars." T. C. Chubb
+ — N Y Times p40 D 5 '48 320w

"Mr. Anderson's uncomplicated enthusiasm for his subject is surmountable, but his sentences, most of which have something of the carelessly launched flying buttress about them, are not likely to be scaled by the average reader of this feeble century."
New Yorker 24:134 N 6 '48 140w

ANDERSON, ROMOLA, and ANDERSON, ROGER CHARLES. Sailing-ship; six thousand years of history. 212p il $3.50 Dodd
623.821 Sailing vessels 48-1052

A summary of the history of the sailing vessel from the ancient craft of the Egyptians, Cretans and Phoenicians, to the clipper ships of the nineteenth century. Copiously illustrated. Index.

"As the authors state, their work is merely a summary but, nevertheless, it is remarkably accurate and so skilfully epitomized that all the salient features are presented which are applicable to the selected compass, namely, the ships of European peoples in which category all craft in the basin of the Mediterranean are included." F. L. O.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 26 '47 450w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:201 F 1 '48 40w

"As a summary it is excellent. For both the student of history and the sailing enthusiast it should prove a valuable reference book. It points the way, if one wills, to further studies and will aid in settling such winter arguments as where the Lateen sail made its appearance and when reef points were first noted." T. S. Sweedy
+ N Y Times p14 Ja 11 '48 400w

ANDERSON, WILLIAM KETCHAM, ed. Methodism. 317p $2 Meth. pub. house
287 Methodism 48-285

History of the Methodist church in the United States presented in twenty-five papers by outstanding men of that church. The first part of the book deals with early development; part two takes up some aspects of the church creed; part three studies twentieth-century Methodism. Biographical notes on contributors. No index.

Booklist 44:275 Ap 15 '48

"Written by 25 able men, many of whom are scholars widely recognized outside of Methodism."
+ Christian Century 65:294 Mr 17 '48 30w

ANDREWS, BERT. Washington witch hunt. 218p $2.50 Random house
323.4 Liberty. Civil rights. Communism—U.S. 48-7490

The winner of the Pulitzer prize for journalism (1947) who is chief Washington correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, discusses American civil liberty. He deals mainly with the ten men dismissed from the State department for 'security' reasons; the ten Hollywood writers being tried for contempt of Congress; with the case of Dr. Edward Condon; and with William Z. Foster, titular head of the Communist party in the United States.

Atlantic 182:110 O '48 210w
Booklist 45:4 S 1 '48

Reviewed by L. P. Carroll
Chicago Sun Jl 15 '48 490w

"Mr. Andrews knows the art of communication. His words are chosen carefully, his documentation is precise; he can be read swiftly and easily understood. He has written not only a valuable book, but a valuable book that will reach a wide audience—and, as a conscientious reporter, he has written it to awaken Americans, 'for your sake and for my sake.'" Roland Sawyer
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 28 '48 650w

"Fine description of the current hysteria which threatens our civil liberties. . . A must for all librarians and libraries." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 73:1028 Jl '48 140w

Reviewed by J. A. Wechsler
Nation 167:188 Ag 14 '48 1550w

Reviewed by A. S. Basel
New Repub 119:22 S 6 '48 800w

"Mr. Andrews is no blatherskite and his denunciation is implicit in his matter, not expressed in words except for rare and brief outbursts of indignation. For the most part he simply tells exactly what happened, leaving the reader to draw his own conclusions; but to any rational mind those conclusions can be nothing other than appalling. . . Paradoxically, this appalling revelation of our present condition is in itself the best possible reassurance. After all, an American reporter collected this information, an American newspaper published it and an American publisher brought it out in book form; nor is there any material danger that any of them will face a firing squad for doing so." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Jl 4 '48 1200w

"The author of this meaty and timely little volume is a conservative, opposed like most of the rest of us to Communist infiltration of government and other key agencies of American life. But he is also opposed to fighting this infiltration by attacking the wrong people and by impairing our civil liberties. He writes with authority. He is chief of the Washington Bureau of the New York Herald Tribune. The material on which this book is based won him last year a Pulitzer Prize and other deserved honors. He can document what he says. . . Mr. Andrews, a good reporter and a helpful citizen, has probably hurt communism more with this book than the Committee on Un-American Activities has done in all the years of its existence." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p3 Jl 11 '48 900w

Reviewed by A. J. Liebling
New Yorker 34:71 Ag 21 '48 600w

"'Washington Witch Hunt' is the sort of thing every American, particularly in an election year, should make it his business to read. . . If the book suffers from anything, Washington Witch Hunt, as timely as it is, is somewhat drowned out by the fresh thunderclaps that boom out in the daily headlines, but chances are even the Trumpet of Doom will sound a little reedy when it sounds out against their roar. It also requires the reader to do a little thinking, a dreadful handicap for any book in our times." J. P. Cahn
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 4 '48 950w

"This is everybody's book for awareness of political hysteria in Washington. And since political hysteria cannot happen in the American Government's centers of control, without danger to every American's security and liberty as a citizen, 'Washington Witch Hunt' even more significantly is everybody's warning. . . This is hard, terse, pleasingly unspectacular newspaper prose. . . In a quiet, toughly factual way, he plainly is excited about his theme. . . Bert Andrews's little book, simply by letting sense and daylight into the mess, is a newspaperman's public service outstanding in the history of American journalism." Duncan Aikman
+ Sat R of Lit 31:14 Jl 10 '48 850w
Wis Lib Bul 44:161 O '48

ANDREWS, HENRY NATHANIEL. Ancient plants, and the world they lived in; with drawings by Anna Schutte. 279p $4.50 Comstock pub. co.
561 Paleobotany 47-5386

A record of plant life thruout geologic time as told in their fossil remains. Partial contents: Fossil plants; The ferns and their ancestors; Lingering remnants of the coal age; Coal, fuel from yesterday's forests; Ferns that bore seeds; Ginkgo; Sequoia, a living link with the past; The algae, fungi, and mosses; Genealogies in the plant kingdom. It is the author's aim to describe "in as simple language as possible the great pattern back of the plant kingdom, insofar as it is known." References. Index.

ANDREWS, H. N.—Continued

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '48

"The author is a professional paleobotanist, but the book is written for geologists, amateur mineralogists and laymen who are curious about fossil plants."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:19 Ja '48

"Although the style is nontechnical, the treatment of the subject is thoroughly sound, and enough of the basic elements of botany is presented so that those not well-grounded in that science may comprehend the true nature of plants known only from their fossils. The excellent drawings and photographs are well-integrated with the smoothly flowing text, and contribute greatly to an understanding of the subject. . . The book will prove useful as supplementary reading in college and graduate courses in historical geology, as a reference work to those scientifically concerned with the development of coal or petroleum resources, and to general readers interested in geology or botany."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:392 D '47 300w

ANDREWS, HILDA. Westminster retrospect; a memoir of Sir Richard Terry. 186p il $3.50 Oxford

B or 92 Terry, Sir Richard Runciman [A48-7279]

"To the late Sir Richard R. Terry more than to any other man we owe it that the glories of pre-Reformation English Catholic music have been revealed to the modern musical world. Terry was never satisfied with his research into and editing of the ancient manuscripts until he could put the music to the test of actual performance, and Miss Hilda Andrews in her Westminster Retrospect writes with authority and insight about his fine achievement in training the choir of Westminster Cathedral to interpret splendid Tudor masses and anthems. . . Miss Andrews has also much to tell about many other activities of this energetic musician." Manchester Guardian

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 16 '48 150w

"Hilda Andrews' account of his life and work is heavily colored by a persecution complex revolving around faith and dogma, and so should be balanced against the inspired description of Terry's work in Sydney Grew's Favourite Musical Performers." Leonard Ellinwood
Music Lib Assn Notes 5:569 S '48 360w

"Miss Andrews tells the story of Terry's musical career very well, and traces the history of his musical enthusiasm from its earliest beginnings. Her excessive tact and reticence about the stormier side of his life, both public and private, make the book incomplete as a picture of the man himself, but as a tribute to his work at Westminster it is admirably conceived and carried out."
+ — Spec 180:716 Je 11 '48 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p244 My 1 '48 1750w

ANDRUS, JAMES RUSSELL. Burmese economic life; foreword by J. S. Furnivall. 362p maps $4 Stanford univ. press

330.9591 Burma—Economic conditions 48-5422

A study of the Burmese economy of 1939-47, by the former professor of economics of the University of Rangoon. Index.

"Mr. Andrus writes clearly and with a minimum of technical economic jargon. There are, unfortunately, some indications of hasty composition and inadequate revision. There is a lack of integration in certain portions of the text and the treatment of some topics is less detailed than might be wished. (There is, for example, no table showing paddy production in pre-war years). These are, however, minor defects which do not seriously impair the fundamental value and utility of the work." O. N. Hillman
+ — Ann Am Acad 258:135 Jl '48 300w

"The greatest weakness of the book is its utter divorcement from economic theory. Although a catalogue of facts is useful, one needs the theory to interpret the facts. The book deals in detail with such a wide range of subjects that nothing stands out as the most significant variable. Consequently, one may wonder what is crucial and relevant in Burmese economic life. The book might have been more fruitful and stimulating had it been written in terms of problems. However, Andrus has enormously enriched our scant knowledge of southeastern Asia." K. K. Kurihara
+ — J Pol Econ 56:356 Ag '48 1500w

Reviewed by L. D. Stamp
Pacific Affairs 21:432 D '48 700w

ANDRUS, ONLEY. Civil war letters; ed. by Fred Albert Shannon. 147p $2.50; pa $1.50 Univ. of Ill

973.781 U.S.—History—Civil war—Personal narratives A47-3684

"A collection of sixty-one letters of Sergeant Onley Andrus, written between September 3, 1862, and May 22, 1865, mostly to his wife, Mary Andrus. The letters are listed by the editor chronologically under topics in seven sections. Each of the sections has several introductory pages by the editor based on the letters but expanded into an informative historical statement. Careful editing of these Civil War letters has been done by the editor and identification has been made as far as possible of all the persons and events mentioned by Andrus." Am Hist R

"The letters of this intelligent young man, who was twenty-seven years of age when he entered the Army, bare exactly his thoughts as he wrote, thus making his letters valuable as a study of soldiers' thinking in the face of conditions in the war years. This is their chief contribution, for little of history is added by the letters. The index is of unusual thoroughness in its detail." W. H. Ellison
+ Am Hist R 53:630 Ap '48 240w
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:31 Mr '48 260w

ANGELL, SIR NORMAN. The steep places. 247p $3 Harper

940.55 World politics 48-646

"A plea for 'an increasing sense of responsibility for avoiding sweeping judgments rooted in emotional partisanship' which now cement disunity. Fundamental human nature may not change; ways of thought and feeling vary. To this end we must recognize the lessons of the past and interpret them aright. This book charts a way—faces issues clearly, claiming that people want economic welfare and security more than they want peace—that the public is color blind and fact blind. . . He discusses the place of power in a free society—stressing the importance of recognizing the military as an instrument of political power; warning of the danger in the power of words, urging the maintenance of the right of political opposition. The issue today is not Socialism vs. Capitalism, but whether the state or political and intellectual freedom will bring about social change, change that is inevitable. The section entitled 'Ignored History' presents cogent arguments for the contribution made by the British Commonwealth and outlines the process of deimperialization by peaceful evolution, and finally weighs the factors contributing to the tragedy of the Anglo-American failure." Kirkus

Booklist 44:231 Mr 1 '48
Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 3 '48 600w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '48

Reviewed by Otto Bird
Commonweal 48:82 My 7 '48 500w

"A very worth while book for anyone."
+ Current Hist 14:174 Mr '48 150w
Foreign Affairs 26:567 Ap '48 80w

"Cogent reasoning, challenging the thoughtful citizen. And from the author of The Great Illusion, a revealing study of the forces operating toward war and peace today. Not for a wide general sale—but an essential book for every shop and library."

+ Kirkus 15:635 N 15 '47 340w

"A most 'readable' book, it could and should be read by everybody. Highly recommended for all general and education libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 73:120 Ja 15 '48 110w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 F 15 '48 550w

"In a book so wide ranging as this many different themes are treated in a cursory way. But Sir Norman has something suggestive to say about all of them—from the application of scientific method to social problems to the limits of national independence in an organized international society. It is heartening to note that there is no capitulation to the vogue of irrationalism in his outlook. He does not weep over the human race, although the odds are against its survival in a free society. He remembers that the odds were even greater against Britain in 1940. . . The reader of this book will find it a rich and rare feast of reason. If its lessons are learned by a sufficient number of citizens or even by the key statesmen of the Western world, we may yet stem the stampede toward the precipice." Sidney Hook

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 25 '48 1700w

Reviewed by Allan Temko

San Francisco Chronicle p15 My 16 '48 1050w

"'The Steep Places' was obviously written primarily for English readers; and in some portions it falls too easily into the British idiom. Some readers will find an unnecessary defense of the policies of British imperial administrators; others may challenge the author's interpretation of Britain's role in world affairs. But no one will find naïveté or impractical suggestions in these pages. Grave though the crisis be, it is inspiriting to follow an analytical appraisal of the difficulties and opportunities we now face." J. A. Krout

+ Sat R of Lit 31:11 Ja 24 '48 1000w

"There is much good argument in the book and the author delivers several shrewd thrusts at the illusions from which men generally suffer. But when you are tilting at illusions, you are apt to become a logical acrobat; and there are a good many logical acrobats in the book, which eventually becomes tedious. The real question is how illusions are to be cured; and to that question Sir Norman can hardly be said to return any certain answer. . . But the book, if it is hardly a book, is nevertheless good journalism and the work of a publicist of the first order." Ernest Barker

+ — Spec 179:466 O 10 '47 550w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 100w

"No mind is better qualified than his to seek and to appraise the underlying distinctions between the Communist and the Western Democratic outlook, nor are many writers endowed with keener insight, clearer thought or a more equable temper than he brings to his task. His reasoning and his conclusions need to be read, pondered over and, as he himself might wish, to be transposed from an intellectual into an emotional key. . . It is not a homily. It is one of the coolest, most logical and least passionate inquiries into the state of the world to be found in contemporary writing."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p531 O 18 '47 2200w

ANNABEL, RUSSELL. Hunting and fishing in Alaska. 341p il $5.50 Knopf

799 Hunting—Alaska. Fishing—Alaska Agr48-41

"Personal experiences of the author and his friends while hunting moose, brown bear, sheep, black bear, goat, and game birds, and fishing for salmon and trout. Advice to those wishing to hunt or fish in Alaska." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:295 My 1 '48

"Exceptionally good reading. Lots of humor. Well illustrated." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:710 My 1 '48 70w

"'Hunting and fishing in Alaska' displays a remarkable knowledge of sports and skill in writing." Baynard Kendrick

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 1 '48 190w

"Mr. Annabel has written a book which has long been needed. About all the popular information on Alaska game has been either by word of mouth or in the pages of the nation's hunting and fishing magazines. . . Mr. Annabel, an Alaskan by birth has explored its potentialities from childhood. 'Hunting and Fishing in Alaska' is a record of these explorations which will excite the envy of any sportsman." Stanleigh Arnold

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 9 '48 600w

ANSHEN, MRS RUTH NANDA (MRS RALPH HOWARD BRODSKY), ed. Our emergent civilization. (Science of culture ser) 339p $4.50 Harper

901 Civilization. Twentieth century 47-6365

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

Reviewed by M. F. Nimkoff

Ann Am Acad 255:199 Ja '48 650w

Booklist 44:199 F 1 '48

"The essays are quite uniformly skillful—and persistently philosophical, if by that he meant earnest clarification and evaluation of the meaning of existence. The philosophical position is, in general, that of idealism. . . Indictments are sharp, but no contributor is primarily concerned to curse the darkness."

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:26 Mr '48 360w

"In a final chapter, 'The emergence of the New Ideals,' the editor cogently formulates some of the basic conditions to be fulfilled if the crisis is to lead to a healthy state of culture. The overcoming of the dichotomy between the individual and the social, between thought and action, rationalism and empiricism, the ethos and the ethnos, is one aspect of the ideal reconciliation of the opposites which have been splitting our world into fratricidal camps. Since our emergent civilization will be what we make it, one may hope that this book, which has a positive bearing on so many formative ideas, will be widely read while we are in the process of making it." Paul Schrecker

+ Yale R n s 37:549 spring '48 1050w

APEL, WILLI. Masters of the keyboard; a brief survey of pianoforte music. 323p il $5 Harvard univ. press

786.4 Piano music 47-12245

"This book is a reworking of eight lectures delivered by Dr. Apel in 1944 at the Lowell Institute of Boston. In a general way, it surveys most of the landmarks from the earliest keyboard music to that of recent times. Summary accounts of the organ, harpsichord, clavichord, and pianoforte are presented, and organ music is included in the discussion up to the point where idiomatic music for the stringed keyboard instruments can be clearly distinguished. There being no space for Kleinmeister, emphasis is placed on the significance of each era and the contributions of the masters." Music Lib Assn Notes

"Dr. Apel's skill and judgment are sufficient to relate the results of study without condescension; he also succeeds in tying music to other historical and artistic events without strain or affectation." George Hanson

+ Library J 72:1611 N 15 '47 90w

"On the credit side, Masters of the Keyboard incorporates recent research and present-day attitudes. Furthermore, it includes an unprecedented wealth of complete and near-complete examples, as well as numerous fragments and illustrations. Although many of them do appear in other collections, they justify the cost of this book by themselves. On the debit side, the book lacks the detail of the best earlier studies. For a general survey, it places too much emphasis on early music, especially that by Germans. . . Notwithstanding such details and the sins of omission, largely acknowledged in Dr. Apel's preface, librarians can hardly afford to pass by this generally authoritative, clearly presented, and profusely illustrated contribution to an inadequate literature on keyboard music." W. S. Newman

APEL, W.—Continued

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 5:104 D '47 650w

"The book contains a great deal of music which it is a pleasure to take to the piano and play, while as a guide through the long tale of evolution of keyboard instruments and the music written for them in the various stages of their development it is lucidity itself. In it the musical scholar unbends to a popular audience, without impairing critical and scholarly standards, as felicitously as Sir James Jeans used to unbend to a non-scientific circle of readers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p724 D 25 '48 800w

"Nothing particularly new in either fact or interpretation is offered to the music scholar, but the audience addressed is well served. For the pianist and for 'musical amateurs' with historical curiosity, the writing is clear and to the point, all unusual technical terms are explained, and the sources of the examples carefully stated."

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:7 Mr '48 220w

APOSTOLIC fathers; tr. by Francis X. Glimm [and others]. (Fathers of the church, v1). 401p $4 Cima pub. co, inc, 7 E. 44th st, N.Y. 17

281.1 Christian literature, Early 47-31345

"The first of a projected series of 72 volumes to be made up of translations into English of important writings of 'The Fathers of the Church' during the first seven centuries of the Christian era, with Ludwig Schopp as editorial director. This first volume in the series is made up of translations by American Catholic scholars of the writings of St. Clement of Rome, St. Ignatius of Antioch, St. Polycarp and others." Springf'd Republican

---

Booklist 44:227 Mr 1 '48

Reviewed by J. B. Sheerin

+ Cath World 166:471 F '48 90w

"Here in unadorned English may be found the full text of the Didache, the Shepherd of Hermes, the Letter of Clement of Rome to the Corinthians, and several other precious relics of the early Church. The conventional apparatus of scholarship is almost entirely lacking, though most of those interested in such works would prefer adequate notes. The book is attractively produced and will be ornamental as well as useful in any library." F. D. Cohalan

+ Commoweal 47:233 D 12 '47 330w

"The close examination of some fifty representative passages and the perusal of most of the translations satisfies the present reviewer that the translations are competent and conscientious." Paul Schubert

+ J Religion 28:223 Jl '48 650w

"It will be read with interest and profit by Protestants as well as by Catholics, in fact by all who desire to have an acquaintance with the lives and writings of the authors." O. J. Aldrich

+ Springf'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 120w

APTHEKER, HERBERT. To be free; studies in American Negro history. 256p $3 Int. pubs.

325.26 Negroes—History 48-5693

Essays on various phases of the history of the Negro people in the United States. Contents: Slave guerrilla warfare; Buying freedom; Militant abolitionism; Negro casualties in the Civil War; Negroes in the Union navy; Organizational activities of southern Negroes, 1865; Mississippi reconstruction and the Negro leader, Charles Caldwell. Index.

"Because of the growing emphasis on the study of American history in all its numerous aspects, it becomes more and more difficult to neglect the history of the Negro in America. While these seven essays have great value in themselves in providing information on some hitherto neglected aspects of the history of the American Negro, they have additional significance for at least two other reasons. In the first place, they suggest, by implication, the need to re-examine certain aspects of the relationships between Negroes and the larger community at various times in the nation's history. . . In the second place, the essays make use of certain important source materials that have not received the attention that they deserve from persons who command the respect of serious students." J. H. Franklin

+ Am Hist R 53:897 Jl '48 340w

Reviewed by Bucklin Moon

Nation 167:135 Jl 31 '48 300w

ARBEAU, THOINOT, pseud. See Tabourot, J.

ARBUTHNOT, MAY HILL. Children and books. 626p il $5; text ed $3.60 Scott

028.5 Children's literature—History and criticism 47-7056

"This textbook on children's literature may be used either as basic text or supplementary reading by students in teachers' colleges, or in children's literature classes in library schools. . . Much research has gone into the making of Children and Books. The chapter on history and trends, the Mother Goose chapter, the article on storytellers, all show careful study and clear presentation. Of interest to every teacher and librarian—to those parents, too, whose attention is called to it—will be the chapter on comics and radio. At the end of each section are some 'illustrative selections.' Reproductions of well-chosen illustrations appear throughout the book. And in the back are bibliographies and study suggestions." Library J

Booklist 44:194 F 1 '48

"An excellent guide to children's reading." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Ja 3 '48 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '48

"Children and Books is a work of real worth which should not be overlooked by anyone interested in juvenile literature." Evangeline Colburn

+ El School J 48:585 Je '48 550w

"This exhaustive textbook for children's literature courses . . . embodies the results of long and intimate association with children and the books they read. . . Guides to study and full bibliographies add to the value and importance of this fine book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:127 Mr '48 120w

"The incompleteness of indexing and the particularized headings of the bibliography are bewildering to student and layman alike. In a book of this size (617 pages) and scope, containing so much material relating to a school program, a complete index is essential. The many excellent features of Children and Books I shall leave to others to point out. I am concerned primarily with the lack of sustained historical and critical consideration of children's books, their authors, editors, and illustrators, in their total contribution to the subject." A. C. Moore

— + Horn Bk 24:174 My '48 1000w

"Well outlined and well indexed, the material is easy to get into. As a reference book, this large volume is outstanding. All medium and large libraries should have it on their children's room shelves—and all college libraries where education is taught, at least primary and elementary education." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 73:53 Ja 1 '48 240w

"You'll be pleased, I think, to find the author a moderate on the subjects of the comics, radio and movies. . . What it comes down to, however, is guidance. This does not mean orders from above; it means guidance, in the best sense of the term, and guidance shrewdly applied. It's to enable parents and teachers to provide this kind of guidance that the author has written her book. It's a solid piece of work; you won't find a simple prescription for what you need, all nicely put up in capsule form so a parent can swallow it and be instructed in 15 minutes." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 5 '48 650w

School & Society 67:253 Mr 27 '48 20w

Wis Lib Bul 44:108 My '48

ARCHER, WILLIAM GEORGE. Vertical man; a study in primitive Indian sculpture. (Phaidon press bk) 122p il $4.50 Macmillan (for Allen and Unwin)

732.4 Sculpture, Indic [A48-8430]

Study of primitive Hindu sculpture as found in the province of Bihar. The author analyses its formal characteristics and shows how it is influenced by the myth and ritual of the cult in which the images were made. Includes many photographs. Bibliographical notes. Glossary. Index.

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 6 '48 140w

Reviewed by Louis MacNeice
New Statesman & Nation 35:218 Mr 13 '48 150w

"Mr. Archer's careful investigation and detailed study of the rituals and myths connected with Bir Kuar is a fascinating bit of detective work. At the same time he has painted an interesting miniature of peasant life in India, illustrated by many good pictures of the sculpture and some charming translations of folk-songs. . . Mr. Archer's treatment of the folk-lore is probably sound—it is certainly interesting and entertaining—but his art-criticism is less convincing." Douglas Barrett

+ — Spec 180:146 Ja 30 '48 450w

"Extremely interesting study, partly anthropological and partly aesthetic. The anthropological material makes fascinating reading by itself; there are many variants, belonging to many villages. . . Mr. Archer disentangles these variants from one another and, by comparing them, is enabled to interpret the myth. He also translates, very charmingly, a number of the ballads or poems in which the myths are narrated or the god praised."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p118 F 28 '48 700w

ARGUIMBAU, LAWRENCE BAKER. Vacuum-tube circuits. 668p il $6 Wiley

621.384132 Vacuum tubes. Radio circuits 48-6159

"There is much in this work on present-day electronic circuits, but it is incidental to the book's main purpose: the training of students in sound, analytical thinking, based on a knowledge of fundamentals. The author makes a point of the rapid evolution of electronic devices and the consequent rapid obsolescence of descriptive information. As the work is intended primarily for advanced students in engineering colleges, it is assumed that the reader will have some knowledge of the physical principles of vacuum tubes, alternating-current circuits, calculus and Fourier series. The work is well organized and written in a concise, stimulating style; it should be useful also to those employed in the electronic industry. The author is a member of the faculty of Massachusetts Institute of Technology." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1273 S 15 '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:9 Ja '48

ARLOTT, JOHN, ed. First time in America. 199p $3 Duell

821.08 English poetry—Collections 48-4594

"Miscellany of English verse hitherto unpublished in America. . . It consists of oddments from the pens of a score or more of poets from Edmund Blunden and Walter de la Mare to such strictly contemporaneous voices as MacNeice, Sitwell, John Betjeman, as well as a number of others less well known." Kirkus

"Both stimulating and vexing. . . Many of these poems are truly lovely, and a person passing a book stall and desiring to pick up something for a few hours of pleasant reading could have his wish fulfilled in this volume. But the contents add up to nothing more than the name—'first time in America'; and no strong prevailing idea holds this little string of pearls and ordinary beads together." M. S. Churchill

+ — Kirkus 16:276 Je 1 '48 180w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 167:731 D 25 '48 230w

"This collection does not give the reader a balanced view of modern English poetry. Its chief use will be as a storehouse of, for the most part, out-of-the-way minor poems by some interesting English writers." David Daiches

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p31 N 28 '48 600w

"The British and Irish poets of the postwar generation, and the satirical poets both young and old, give the volume some interest, but the dead hand of the Georgians lies upon most of the selections, perhaps because the editor, who has been responsible for the B.B.C. poetry programs since 1945, tends to avoid 'obscurity.' "

New Yorker 24:107 O 2 '48 120w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 7 '48 100w

"Though we need not be smug enough to assume that all the best has been brought us from England, I am afraid that on the basis of this book we aren't missing a great deal. At the same time we must realize that with each writer averaging about two poems it is difficult to judge whether he has any stature or has merely written two interesting poems. . . The principal interest is certainly in the unknowns, and among them there is some bright promise in careful poems." Hubert Creekmore

Sat R of Lit 31:34 N 20 '48 320w

ARMITAGE, MERLE. Operations Santa Fé; Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé railway system; ed. by Edwin Corle; drawings by P. G. Napolitano. 263p $5 Duell

385 Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé railway company 48-5801

Study of the history and workings of the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fé railroad. It explains in technical terms the "business statesmanship, administrative ability, engineering skill and uncommon cooperation required in operating and maintaining one of America's most admirable and important industries." Bibliography. Index.

"The volume should be of real use to any layman, including a historian, who wishes a bird's-eye view of that complicated mechanism, a modern railroad system." W. S. Greever

+ Am Hist R 54:216 O '48 320w

Booklist 44:276 Ap 15 '48

"Authored and designed by Merle Armitage, this sets a high standard in the field of modern bookmaking. . . For a very special, if ardent audience."

+ Kirkus 16:105 F 15 '48 100w

"Understandably, within 263 well designed pages everything could not be included. No mention is made, for instance, of the Santa Fe's handsome tugs which ply San Francisco Bay. But there is enough to give the ordinary reader a good idea of the railroad's operations and equipment, and a great deal of data just this side of technical. Edwin Corle, well known writer on the Southwest, is given on the title page as editor. P. G. Napolitano has contributed drawings and designs which give the volume a thoroughly suitable Southwestern look." R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 6 '48 370w

Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 8 '48 240w

ARMSTRONG, CHARLOTTE. Chocolate cobweb. 220p $2.50 Coward-McCann 48-7268

Mystery story.

"Everything about the book is a little larger and brighter than life. It has the false, if exciting, brilliance of technicolor. The narrative skill of the author is considerable and the tale as a whole a tense if tenuous performance." James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Jl 2 '48 140w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Je 27 '48 270w

"The mystery element is completely lacking in this story. It is, in the best sense of the term, a novel of suspense. The intricacies of the plot are so skillfully handled that there is no confusion." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p16 Je 27 '48 110w

"Based on the same successful formula as 'The Unsuspected,' [Book Review Digest 1946] this author's previous suspense tale, but rather scrambled at the end."
New Yorker 24:76 Je 26 '48 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 25 '48 100w

"Good entertainment."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:25 Jl 3 '48 40w

Springf'd Republican p14A Je 11 '48 90w

ARMSTRONG, HAMILTON FISH. Calculated risk. 68p $1.50 Macmillan 940.531444 Reconstruction (1939-)—Europe. U.S.—Foreign policy. United nations (organization)
47-12346

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

Reviewed by D. F. Fleming
Ann Am Acad 256:216 Mr '48 380w

Booklist 44:199 F 1 '48

Reviewed by De Witt John
Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 27 '48 360w

Reviewed by G. G. Higgins
Commonweal 47:403 Ja 30 '48 1300w

Foreign Affairs 26:400 Ja '48 50w

"So timely and important was this little book on world affairs considered by the publishers that they rushed it through the presses in eight days. To a daily reader of newspapers, the reason for the rush will be a little hard to understand; Mr Armstrong says nothing that has not been said before, and some of what he says has been said much more forcibly." Marvin Sargent
San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 15 '48 400w

"The book does not pretend to be an exhaustive, scholarly research into the complex problem of U.S. participation in European recovery. But Mr. Armstrong has rendered all who are concerned with the great decisions of 1948 a unique and timely service in writing it, in putting clearly before the reader the facts and risks, and in offering a constructive plan whereby, with faith and determination, there is a possibility for peace." Julie d'Estournelles
+ Survey G 37:83 F '48 550w

Reviewed by T. J. Hamilton
Yale R n s 37:525 spring '48 420w

ARNALL, ELLIS GIBBS. What the people want. 286p $3.50 Lippincott
973.91 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Description and travel
48-6927

A report on the present state of the nation by the ex-governor of Georgia. After his political duties were terminated the author went on an extensive lecture tour which took him into every state of the union except Vermont. The book is based upon his observations. No index.

Reviewed by G. C. Osborn
Ann Am Acad 260:216 N '48 390w

Booklist 44:334 Je 1 '48

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Chicago Sun p8X Je 27 '48 360w

"Even in a nonpolitical year, Ellis Gibbs Arnall's new book would command wide interest. In the political year 1948, appearing as it does just before the two national political conventions, it will undoubtedly be closely read everywhere by those associated with or interested in American politics, regardless of party. . . Readers will be interested in Mr. Arnall's account of his visit to each state, and his appraisal of the government of each state and the prospects for each section from a professional politician's point of view." E. R. Lindsey
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 12 '48 650w

Columbia Law R 48:981 S '48 140w

"The people probably want precisely the things that Mr. Arnall thinks they do. They should read his book." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 73:876 Je 1 '48 140w

"When Ellis Arnall was on one of his own nationwide lecture tours, he overheard a stranger say of him: 'He's not a profound man, just straightforward and sincere.' The ex-Governor of Georgia, who took the remark as a compliment, reveals just those qualities in his new book. . . Ellis Gibbs Arnall's book on his travels through a postwar nation finds its chief distinction in the self-portrait of a growing Southern progressive. As such it is an attractive work, portraying a personality and intellect of engaging temper and true liberalism." Richard Watts Jr.
+ New Repub 118:24 Je 21 '48 1150w

"It is a bit on the obvious side now and then. Ellis Arnall was not the first man to discover America. But it is topical, warming and invigorating to hear." Tarleton Collier
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 13 '48 1300w

"This is the book of a Southerner who believes not merely in the South but in all of America. His is a belief that is expressed with sincerity, with quiet conviction and with an understanding in which there is a great deal of warmth and love. The impatient reader may be irritated with Mr. Arnall. He will find him rambling, discursive. . . In spite of its discursiveness, in spite of its occasional repetitiousness and sloppiness, this is a vital book. Such an affirmation and such a rediscovery are more important now than at any time in the past century." M. W. Childs
+ — N Y Times p3 Je 13 '48 1200w

Reviewed by W. K. Coblentz
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 11 '48 750w

"The effect of Mr. Arnall's new book is to make those who have their habitats in the North or the East lay down his volume with the feeling that their egos have been under severe attack, and that a healthy deflation was Mr. Arnall's goal. To Mr. Arnall, the South and the West are the real hopes of America of the future, the 'colonies' that can and must be developed if America is to progress naturally. . . He thinks New York has a liberal tradition and he thinks also that it is the home of a more intelligent conservative group than any other place in the nation. Those in both camps, in New York and elsewhere, will welcome Mr. Arnall's book as honest and stimulating, even where they disagree." Warren Moscow
+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 Je 12 '48 900w

School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 10w

Springf'd Republican p10A Jl 4 '48 180w

ARNE, SIGRID. United nations primer. rev ed 266p $2.50; to colleges $1.85 Rinehart 940.531 World war, 1939-1945—Congresses, conferences, etc. United nations, 1942-1945
48-548

"A 1945 book [Book Review Digest 1945] has been revised, new material added. Official texts issued after each meeting are appended." Booklist

"With the addition of only four new chapters, it is difficult to see why the author included one on the Council of Foreign Ministers, which is not, in the proper sense, a part of the United Nations. The book is written in a free and easy style, which may make some appeal to the general reader." N. L. Hill

+ — Am Pol Sci R 42:604 Je '48 300w

Booklist 44:218 F 15 '48

Columbia Law R 48:667 My '48 130w

ARNOLD, CHESTER ARTHUR. Introduction to paleobotany. 433p il $5.50 McGraw

561 Paleobotany 47-6377

"This introduction to the study of fossil plants is intended primarily for students of biology and botany, and the approach is therefore botanical rather than geological. The discussion includes the following classes and divisions of fossil plants: Nonvascular and vascular plants; lycopods; ferns; pteridosperms; cycadophytes and ginkgos; cordaitales; and conifers. Other chapters deal with the formation of fossil plants, the sequence of plants in geologic time and the naming of fossil plants. Throughout the book, reference is made to North American plants whenever possible. A bibliography is given at the end of each chapter." N Y New Tech Bks

"This new paleobotany text presents a systematic study of fossil plants at a level suitable to elementary and intermediate college classes in botany, paleobotany, and general paleontology. It fills a real need, inasmuch as it is the only text to be published in a number of years covering both the nonvascular and the vascular plants. The organization is excellent, and the space devoted to the various groups of plants is well distributed. The principal criticism of the book concerns the style, which is labored, in places trite, and burdened with cumbersome phraseology. This must reduce the effectiveness of the book as a text." E. C. O.

+ — J Geol 56:243 My '48 650w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:43 Ja 1 '48 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:79 O '47

ARNOLD, ELLIOTT. Everybody slept here. 346p $3 Duell

48-6290

A frankly-written novel about life and love in wartime Washington, D.C. In contrast to the self-interestedness of the congressmen and the militarists, is told the story of Kitty, a beautiful, promiscuous young woman whose husband is overseas. For the first time in her life Kitty falls in love with a young corporal, back from overseas. Her effort to tell Corporal Harris the truth about herself ends in tragedy.

Reviewed by Carleton Kent

Chicago Sun p8X Je 27 '48 320w

"A story with lots of bald, shock technique which will offend conservatives, but with something basic at the end that offsets its unpalatable stages."

Kirkus 16:93 F 15 '48 240w

"Engrossingly told, much to commend it, but philosophy highly questionable." R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:472 Mr 15 '48 100w

"Mr. Arnold used to be a newspaper man and he's a good reporter. His bitterness is not only deeply felt and well expressed, but it is effective to the extent that it makes one loathe the thought of another war if these Pentagon people are going to run it again. Fortunately Mr. Arnold has a couple of decent Joes and one sane Jane to make a proper balance." Richard Mealand

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 My 9 '48 360w

" 'Everybody Slept Here' must be condemned by the conscientious reviewer as superfluous. Some parts only; by far the greater part of this lively tale of wartime Washington has a very genuine interest, ranging from the real human insight which is the novelist's stock in trade down to the clever reporter's tricks which the rank and file of novelists use to piece out their insight." Russell Maloney

+ — N Y Times p4 My 30 '48 500w

"Mr. Arnold is a novelist. And even when he's purposely writing with sales figures in his eye, he can't help making his book a good deal better than (a) it sounds here, or (b) the bosomy jacket will suggest to you. For Mr. Arnold saw something of wartime Washington himself. He had a chance to see what went on behind some of the protective coloration that was called 'brass.' He learned how things get done in certain kinds of groups, what roles the adroit politician might play when it was wartime and normal rules had to go out of the window. . . And these things he impales sharply in his story. More, he saw also what the decent, reasonably forthright regular Army career officer was like, and came to understand what it was that really made the Army tick. . . The rest of it, the gamey sex-trimming he has festooned about the book simply because (this is my own estimate of it) a writer does have to live, and anybody knows this sort of trimming helps a novel sell." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 16 '48 500w

"Anybody expecting to get a picture of life in the nation's capital during the war years will be, putting it mildly, disappointed in 'Everybody Slept Here.' Mr. Arnold's book probably will have a large rental library appeal, especially among those who can't necessarily read but do recognize an alluring jacket when they see one. If they can stumble through a few one-syllable words, they'll probably be happy enough." Merle Miller

Sat R of Lit 31:35 Ap 24 '48 600w

"While Mr. Arnold isn't exactly reticent about sex he has come the closest yet of all the writers who have tried to explain what the nation's capital was like during World War II. . . It is a rough, lively and often very funny book, with an undercurrent of seriousness that shows Mr. Arnold to be a most competent critic of his fellow men." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 25 '48 270w

ARNOLD, OREN. Sun in your eyes; new light on the Southwest; il. by Lloyd Lozes Goff. 253p $2.50 Univ. of N. Mex. press

917.9 Southwest 48-5090

Chapters on the history and the many aspects of life in the Southwest, written in informal fashion. Partial contents: The pioneer padres; Cliff people; Timeless town; Ranching for romance; How to enjoy the rodeo; "Sets on the floor!;" Ghost gold; Sun land souvenirs; The hungering herd; Sun stroke; 'I'd like to build out here;' A bumptious bibliography.

Booklist 44:215 F 15 '48

"This is not an ambitious book about the Southwest, and the information it contains can be absorbed through your mental pores without exerting your mind. The author doesn't lift his voice in a chamber-of-commerce chant or regional rhapsody, but sort of hints that he is living in a paradise on earth—having wonderful time and wish your were here."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 8 '48 140w

"Author Arnold rather overplays the physical benefits of the Southwestern sun, and he rather fails to give a well-rounded story of the impact of the long seasons of dependable sunshine on Arizona's agricultural output, amazing in variety and volume. . . Obviously not written as a promotion piece, it will sure make a lot of its readers mighty dissatisfied with where they're living now." Garth Cate

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:26 Ja 3 '48 550w

ASCH, JOHN. Story of plants; il. by Tabea Hofmann. 407p $5 Putnam

580 Botany 48-7453

A comprehensive outline of botany—the origins of plant life, development, functions, and significance in the life of man. Index.

ASCH, JOHN—Continued

"Fairly technical and advanced for the average layman, but a worthwhile overall for the botanist in its story of plant history and the strange and wonderful vegetable kingdom."

+ Kirkus 16:205 Ap 15 '48 120w

"The author's effort to mention everything results in inadequate brevity. . . However, such a comprehensive popular summary is doubtless intended for that elusive abstraction, the general reader, and should be a useful introduction to botany in its broadest sense. Since a book of this character represents a great deal of work on the part of the author, it is unfortunate that a more adequate and competent artist was not found to supply the illustrations." J. W. H.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 25 '48 240w

"The reviewer has enjoyed 'The Story of Plants' more than any other botanical work he has read." L. D. Otis

+ Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 8 '48 280w

ASCH, SHALOM. Tales of my people; tr. by Meyer Levin. 272p $3 Putnam

48-9320

Collection of short stories and one short novel, The Little Town, commemorating the Jewish people, especially the Polish Jews. All treat of Jewish life and customs before, during, and after the rise of the Nazis.

Booklist 45:137 D 15 '48

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Chicago Sun D 7 '48 370w

"One feels that here is indelible tribute to Polish Jewry."

+ Kirkus 16:535 O 1 '48 210w

"Author's unadorned style adds up to an ingenious, unaffected volume of great power. Recommended." C. W. Roth

+ Library J 73:1594 N 1 '48 140w

Reviewed by Bennell Braunstein

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 28 '48 600w

"The style, which is capable of communicating poetic simplicity of feeling, here at times falls into sentimentality which cannot be entirely a failure of translation. But 'The Little Town' will be read less for the purpose of questioning or enjoying its literary values than for the purpose of remembering with the heart. . . Sholem Asch's people, in their greatness and in their imperfection, deserve such a tribute as he has given them in 'Tales of My People.' It is valuable, and it has moving qualities for all of us." Lawrence Lee

+ N Y Times p11 N 14 '48 550w

"There is an occasional tinge of de Maupassant in the author's short-story technique, but he usually succeeds in conveying a sense of the spiritual depth and continuity of his people."

New Yorker 24:163 N 20 '48 120w

"In these tales seems to lie the explanation for Sholem Asch's quest for new worlds to conquer. The old world, now gone forever, was a long time in dying. The new is yet to be born. In this interim, the tremendous talents of Sholem Asch discharge like lightning into the likeliest paths of least resistance.'" Eleazar Lipsky

+ Sat R Lit 31:33 D 4 '48 650w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '48 210w

ASHLEY-MONTAGU, MONTAGUE FRANCIS, ed. Studies and essays in the history of science and learning offered in homage to George Sarton on the occasion of his sixtieth birthday, 31 August, 1944. 594p il $12 Schuman

504 Science Med47-1299

"The manuscript of this book was presented to Dr. Sarton in 1944 on his sixtieth birthday, its actual publication being delayed by the war for the better part of three years. The twenty-seven contributions celebrate in a fitting fashion the great stimulus Dr. Sarton has supplied, by precept, and example, to the study of intellectual history. A brief biographical note provides the essential data on his scholarly career and achievements. . . Most of the essays deal with special figures or with detailed technical developments in the history of the physical, biological, and cultural sciences; but a number of them address themselves to general themes connected with the influence of science upon phases of civilization. None of the articles attempts a sociological or economic interpretation of intellectual history." J Philos

"There are in all twenty-eight contributions, reflecting the wide-ranging scholarship and expansive intellectual curiosity of the man they were designed to honor. Modest, almost retiring, but with boundless energy and unfailing industry, George Sarton has labored for more than a quarter of a century to establish the history of science as an independent discipline. This volume demonstrates that his labors have not been in vain and that many disciples have kindled their own scholarly lamps at his ever-burning flame." M. C. Leikind

+ Am Hist R 53:368 Ja '48 320w

J Philos 44:666 N 20 '47 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p441 Ag 30 '47 420w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:309 S '47 360w

ASHTON, HELEN (MRS ARTHUR JORDAN). The lost captain [Eng title: Captain comes home]. 262p $3 Dodd

48-6151

Captain Johnny Crowe has been reported "missing believed killed," during the evacuation of Greece in 1941. Back in England his pretty but brainless young wife waited for three years and then remarried. Then the lost captain was found hiding, wounded and nearly starved, on a Greek island, and after hospitalization was returned to his grandfather's rectory in a sad state of nerves. Major Mavis, who had helped to get Johnny from his island, the major's wife and his young daughter each helped in Johnny's reluctant rehabilitation.

Booklist 44:313 My 15 '48

"Recommended." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 73:122 Ja 15 '48 70w

"The merit of the novel is in its village setting, its minor characters, and in its easy, accomplished style." H. I'A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 1 '47 120w

"Miss Ashton's minor characters are just as real as the more fully characterized figures of an entertaining and thoughtful work of fiction." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Mr 28 '48 360w

"It's a pleasant novel and a well-written one." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 2 '48 70w

"I once read a novel by Miss Ashton called Mackerel Sky which struck me at the time as excellent in its way, and, comparing my memories of that book with The Captain Comes Home, I am inclined to attribute the inferiority of the latter to its comparative remoteness from the author's personal sympathies. . . The Captain Comes Home is not a bad or offensive novel; it is merely uninterestingly conventional and genteel in a way the earlier one was not. The world it depicts is real, but it is seen across a barrier, from a distance; seen only and not felt." D. S. Savage

Spec 179:122 Jl 25 '47 180w

"The author does not pretend to probe beneath the surface of Johnny's experience. She is content to tell his story, and she does this very well, building up a picture from a mass of carefully drawn detail, like one of those vast canvases by Frith. The book contains a multitude of characters, all soundly depicted on broad lines, and there is a good secondary plot."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Ag 16 '47 420w

Wis Lib Bul 44:82 Ap '48

ASKINS, CHARLES. Wing and trap shooting. 205p il $2.49 Macmillan

799.21 Shooting Agr48-235

"Discusses gun types and kinds, gauges, weights, chokes, and barrel lengths; explains the fine points of wing-shooting, and the author's preferred methods in game hunting. Chapters on safety-first measures, care of the shotgun, sportsmanship, and skeet shooting." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:46 O 1 '48

Kirkus 16:100 F 15 '48 170w

"Should not be confused with book by author's father, same name, same title, 1911. Recomended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:710 My 1 '48 30w

ASSOCIATION FOR CHILDHOOD EDUCATION. Literature committee. Told under the Christmas tree [stories] sel. by the Committee; il. by Maud and Miska Petersham. (Umbrella bk) 304p $3 Macmillan

Christmas stories 48-9525

Sixth in a series known as Umbrella Books. This volume contains stories about the Christmas season for both Christian and Jewish children. The book is arranged in three sections: section one contains miscellaneous poems and stories; section two has stories and poems about Christmas in various lands; and section three is made up of stories about Hanukkah, the Jewish festival of lights.

Booklist 45:123 D 1 '48

"The stories of Hanukkah, the Jewish Festival of Lights, and the stories of Christmas, standing side by side, seem to create a new light and beauty in a confused world." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun D 18 '48 150w

Kirkus 16:525 O 1 '48 60w

"This anthology of stories and poems has variety and breadth. . . The title of the book, however, does seem strange, if not misleading, for one fifth of the book is devoted to the Festival of Lights. Told Under the Lighted Candles might have been a better title. The collection will be enjoyed by children everywhere and it will be especially useful in libraries, schools and settlement houses where children of all faiths hear stories together." H. A. Masten

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 19 '48 400w

"The book can be enjoyed by Christian and Jew alike, and perhaps draw the two more closely together through an understanding of each other's beliefs." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times p24 D 12 '48 190w

ASWELL, JAMES. Midsummer fires; a long fiction. 311p $3 Morrow

48-3592

At forty-one Gael Ring, creator of the famous illustrations known as the Ring girls, finds himself bankrupt mentally and financially. He becomes a psychological case, and sinks to his lowest depths in New Orleans where he goes to paint the portrait of an old woman. Eventually he is restored by his newly discovered ability to paint old people.

"If at times confused, the writing is alternately precious and beautiful, and psychological-novel readers will be interested."

+ Kirkus 16:378 Ag 1 '48 180w

"Light and not very worthwhile." Donald Wasson

— Library J 73:1384 O 1 '48 80w

"A bright, brittle and pitiless probing of the emptiness of a life devoted merely to the acquiring and enjoying of glittering, diverting things. You may, if you like, regard it as a commentary on the blind alley destination of modern man with his naive hope that happiness may be found in more and glossier gadgets." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 O 31 '48 600w

"Although he clearly set out with better intentions, Mr. Aswell has offered us only a comic-strip tease." Harry Bull

Sat R of Lit 31:15 N 20 '48 700w

ATKINS, LEE, pseud. of MARGARET LEE and VIOLET ATKINS. If this be my harvest. 281p $3 Crown

48-8987

Serena Primavera was born in Italy and came to the San Joaquin Valley in 1921. She refused to marry the cross bachelor who had paid her passage money, and married a younger man. The years of their success and growing wealth are described, ending with the death of their oldest son in World war II, and the arrival of his Italian wife and little son in the Valley.

Booklist 45:158 Ja 1 '49

Kirkus 16:560 O 15 '48 190w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38 N 14 '48 150w

"To its credit, the Lee-Atkins novel does occasionally light up with warm understanding for the ways of the Italian grape-growers of California. But most of the time you can't help feeling that it was written with one eye on East Lynne and the other on Leo Carillo." R. M.

— + N Y Times p46 D 5 '48 180w

AUDEN, WYSTAN HUGH, ed. Portable Greek reader; with an introduction. (Viking portable lib) 726p $2 Viking

880.8 Greek literature—Translations into English 48-8459

"Selections from representative Greek writers, from Homer to Galen, aimed at providing the reader with an introduction to all facets of Greek culture, rather than to its literature alone. Mr. Auden's preface deals chiefly with the various Greek concepts of the hero, in comparison with our own, and points up the immense differences between the two civilizations." New Yorker

Booklist 45:69 O 15 '48

Chicago Sun p8X O 10 '48 70w

"Though the translations are excellent, they might as well, as far as a reader to whom Greek culture is virgin territory is concerned, be written in Greek. Yet old lovers of the classics will find little to reward them." Nicholas Moseley

— + Commonweal 49:22 O 15 '48 190w

"Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 73:1820 D 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 168:23 Ja 1 '49 270w

"There is more of Aristotle than of Plato, and more from Plato's Laws than from his literary masterpieces. . . The scientists are fairly well displayed. As for the tragic dramatists, no one can complain of the treatment of Aeschylus . . . but Sophocles and Euripides are represented only by snippets. This is, no doubt, according to plan; but I cannot see why Herodotus, that fascinated student of mankind, and Xenophon, who more than any other author reveals to us the average Greek as he really was, did not qualify for inclusion in the section devoted to 'Man.' . . Provided, that the reader does not expect an anthology in the strict sense of the term, nor a history of literary forms, he will be well-served by this original selection. . . I will not deny that I found Auden's comments on the Greeks both original and intriguing. Nevertheless, my advice to those who pick up his book is not to take too seriously what he says about the gulf between us and these people, nor even all they say about themselves." E. V. Rieu

+ — New Repub 119:24 O 11 '48 1150w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 O 10 '48 90w

New Yorker 24:105 O 2 '48 120w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 31:40 O 16 '48 230w

School & Society 69:15 Ja 1 '49 20w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley

Springf'd Republican p8B O 24 '48 300w

AUERBACH-LEVY, WILLIAM, and VON WIEN, FLORENCE. Is that me? a book about caricature. 155p il $7.50 Watson-Guptill

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 48-109

"Nearly two hundred reproductions of Mr. Auerbach-Levy's caricatures of celebrated modern figures, selected by the artist from the many examples of his work that have appeared in our newspapers and magazines in recent years. In an accompanying text, the artist points out that man's interest in caricature is almost as basic as his predilection for sin, though it has not received the same attention." (New Yorker) Index.

"Recommended for theatre and art collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:198 F 1 '48 30w

"William Auerbach-Levy on caricature has the same indisputable authority as Freud on sex, Tilden on tennis, or Fanny Farmer on cookery. There are only two or three other living caricaturists who are to be mentioned in the same breath. A book by Auerbach-Levy on the theory and practice of caricature, illustrated with two or three hundred examples, is an important book, and no question about it. 'Is That Me?' is hereby recommended, with two important reservations. First, it should be noted that caricature is pure inspiration. In that respect it is like good poetry or good acting. There are no rules or helpful hints. . . It is not Auerbach-Levy's fault, merely his misfortune, that caricature has, in our time degenerated from a significant form of social criticism to a journalistic parlor trick." Russell Maloney
+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 4 '48 550w

"The book is an excellent and generous lesson in the technique of this graphic art and a thoughtful interpretation of one of modern journalism's characteristic art methods."
+ New Yorker 23:60 D 27 '47 110w

School Arts 48:14a Ja '49 100w

AULAIRE, MRS INGRI (MORTENSON) D', and AULAIRE, EDGAR PARIN D'. Nils [il. by the authors]. [38p] $2.50 Doubleday 48-8093

The schoolboys made fun of the long stockings Nils received from his grandmother in Norway. However, one ice-cold winter's day Nils wore the warm stockings once more; and this time nobody laughed. A picture book for ages 6-9.

Booklist 45:36 S 15 '48

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 168:221 D '48 50w

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun N 6 '48 120w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 14 '48 190w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '48

"The text seems to me more spontaneous and closer to their own home life than any of the fine contributions they have yet made to American history. Nils is a real boy with real parents who enter into his personal adventures and his problems as an American schoolboy." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 24:435 N '48 160w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:451 N '48 100w

"This is one of the nicest books the d'Aulaires have done, for it's a lovely looking book, as always, and a good lesson in basic Americanism."
+ Kirkus 16:396 Ag 15 '48 120w

"Beautiful lithographs in colors and in black-and-white decorate every page. Recommended." R. O. Bostwick
+ Library J 73:1283 S 15 '48 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 14 '48 230w

Reviewed by Marjorie Burger
N Y Times p2 N 14 '48 140w

"A useful lesson for small Americans."
+ New Yorker 24:126 D 11 '48 80w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 O 16 '48 140w

Wis Lib Bul 44:166 O '48

AULEN, GUSTAF, bp. Church, law and society; introd. by Nels F. S. Ferré. 114p $2 Scribner

261 Church and social problems 48-5846

"An examination of the Church in its relation to Law and to Society. . . The author shows why the Church cannot stand apart from the life of Society. He demonstrates that the Law of God is an important link between the Church and Society, and he [states] that the Law is not a static code but an active force of human life, working outside as well as within the Church. Bishop Aulén maintains that Luther's position on the relation of Church and State has been generally misunderstood and he gives what he considers the correct interpretation of Luther's thought." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Chicago Sun Mr 21 '48 140w

Reviewed by A. C. McGiffert
Christian Century 65:1081 O 13 '48 500w

Reviewed by E. L. Pennington
Churchman 162:17 S 1 '48 150w

"In general, this little book is well suited to perform a mediating task. Coming as it does from the leader of an established Lutheran church, it makes a significant contribution to Protestant coöperation on political and social questions. Patently the author has striven to be moderate and fair instead of polemical, and his attempt to show that the principle of justification by faith can be combined with a positive social ethic (without resorting to Roman Catholic expedients) is directly toward filling a tragic gap in conservative Protestant thought. In this reviewer's opinion, however, the book is unsatisfactory at the point where Bishop Aulén fails to examine adequately the relationship between his own conception of the law of God (as based on revelation) and secular conceptions of justice." D. E. Roberts
+ — Crozer Q 25:341 O '48 1500w

"It is scarcely a book which would appeal to the average reader of religious literature."
Kirkus 16:84 F 1 '48 120w

AUSLANDER, JOSEPH, and WURDEMANN, AUDREY. My Uncle Jan. 236p $2.75 Longmans

48-5867

Wisconsin in the 1890's is the scene of this story of hearty, rollicking Czech Uncle Jan, who made so much money in America that he sent for all his friends and relatives from Bohemia. The story, narrated by Uncle Jan's young nephew, describes life in the Czech community, its food, customs, and attempts at Americanization.

Booklist 44:268 Ap 1 '48

Cath World 167:189 My '48 220w

Reviewed by E. B. Thompson
Chicago Sun p9X My 9 '48 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '48

"A hearty, really very funny family account. . . There's a definite quality to the presentation of the incidents and characters, and the whole is a warm, colorful family portrait."
+ Kirkus 16:155 Mr 15 '48 100w

"Earthy and wholesome, this is a pleasant change from the usual problem novel. Recommended." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 73:472 Mr 15 '48 70w

" 'My Uncle Jan' is not a book to read after a heavy meal or when hungry and far from victuals. The steam and scent of wonderful cooking rises from its pages until somewhere Dickens's nose must twitch. . . 'My Uncle Jan' has in it a little Bohemian madness, much American common sense and a number of songs, bright and dark." Jessamyn West
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Mr 28 '48 850w

"That 'Uncle Jan' is too nostalgic, too thickly sugar-coated and much too open-eyed is unfortunate but not damning. It has quiet good humor, a pleasantly short length and a directness of meaning that can nowhere be mistaken. For what it's worth, it's an entirely non-psychological work—which is a change." B. V. W.

N Y Times p22 Ap 25 '48 500w

"A charming, well-written description of folkways that have been almost obliterated by the monolithic American social pattern."

+ New Yorker 24:89 Mr 27 '48 100w

"This makes very amusing reading, and the Auslanders do it very well, indeed, right on down to the christening of the new Horak baby, which started an argument at the very baptismal font. It's the purposely gay sort of a tale that leaves the reader with a pleasant taste in the mouth." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 26 '48 500w

Wis Lib Bul 44:82 Ap '48

AUSTIN, HUGH, pseud. See Evans, H. A.

AUSTIN, MRS MARGOT. Gabriel Churchkitten and the moths; il. by [the author]. [41p] $1.25 Dutton

48-8252

Picture book describing the efforts of Peter Churchmouse and Trumpet Churchdog in freeing their friend Gabriel from the Parson's charge of having moths. All ends well when they discover his old hat, not his old cat, was moth-eaten.

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 168:221 D '48 60w

"A string of fresh, naughty adventures which will make any small listener feel virtuous and superior. Margot Austin's pictures are as appealing as ever but the text seems a bit long winded."

+ — Kirkus 16:362 Ag 1 '48 100w

"A great deal of fun for second-and third-graders to read for themselves; also good book for the picture-book age. Recommended." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 73:1519 O 15 '48 70w

"Small children and adults will be equally captivated by Margot Austin's delightfully whimsical story and her irresistible, humorous drawings." Rosejeanne Slifer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 22 '48 190w

"Mrs. Austin's pictures have the same engaging qualities to be found in her previous books about Peter, Gabriel and Trumpet, but the text of 'Gabriel Churchkitten and the Moths' lacks their spontaneity and sparkle. Although not up to par, it's still good fun for the fours to sixes." A. N. Fedder

N Y Times p19 Ag 29 '48 140w

Wis Lib Bul 44:166 O '48

AUSUBEL, NATHAN, ed. A treasury of Jewish folklore. 741p $4 Crown

296 Folklore, Jewish. Jewish literature—Collections 48-7593

A compilation of the stories, traditions, legends, wit, wisdom and folk songs of the Jewish people in English. It spans some 2000 years, going back to the days of Hillel, and continuing to modern times. Glossary. Index.

"It is a rich and well ordered treasury, witness to the editor's tireless hoarding instinct and happy gift of selection." Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Jl 11 '48 1300w

"Being the fourth volume in a series that opened with 'A Treasury of American Folklore,' the present encyclopedia of Judaic lore is an ambassador of good-will and mutual understanding and as such a 'must' for everyone, Christian and Jew alike." Alfred Werner

+ N Y Times p19 Je 27 '48 950w

AVERILL, ESTHER. Jenny's first party. 32p il $1.50 Harper

48-5694

The third in this series of books for ages five to eight, describing the adventures of a little black city cat called Jenny Linsky. This time Jenny steps out at night and with two friends crashes a cat dance. The belle of the ball snubs Jenny, but Jenny refuses to stay snubbed and soon is the center of attention.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 182:119 N '48 70w

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun My 8 '48 140w

"Pictures and story have a taking flavor of nursery nonsense which will be enjoyed by the younger children who have liked the earlier books about Jenny and even by some older persons who appreciate her social traits." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:195 My '48 100w

"A distinctive and lovely little book."

+ Kirkus 16:108 Mr 1 '48 120w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 73:483 Mr 15 '48 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 14 '48 230w

"A good story to read before the 5-to-8-year-olds set out for their first party, this is also charming and satisfying at any time. It has also the added virtues of the author's amusing illustrations." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 21 '48 140w

"The grace and charm of these little books are not only for children. In wording, illustration, and design they offer to people of all ages a short interval of pure delight." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 31:38 Mr 13 '48 170w

Wis Lib Bul 44:84 Ap '48

AVERILL, GERALD. Ridge runner; the story of a Maine woodsman. 217p $2.75 Lippincott

917.41 Maine—Description and travel

48-5365

Reminiscences of a former Maine woodsman. The author begins with his boyhood in the Penobscot region, and describes his later years as a ridge-running lumberman in northern Maine, and as a game warden

Booklist 44:247 Mr 15 '48

"Original, unusually interesting. Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:710 My 1 '48 30w

"The charm of this little book is not to be told in a review, nor in a blurb or advertisement. It will have to make its way by word of mouth. This reviewer regrets to learn that the author died shortly after completing the manuscript. This is sad, for Mr. Averill had a genuine talent. His book is solid Maine. The humor is never forced, and there is not an ounce of phony quaintness in it. But you need have no interest in Maine, or even in the forest to enjoy this book. I think most of it is pretty close to literature." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 F 22 '48 700w

"Averill is a first-rate reporter, but nobody will ever write down anything the way it is spoken in Maine. It will help if you can add a little background music from your own experiences to make 'Ridge Rurner' a real Maine-woods evening. Apart from the woodcraft, the book shows how folks who live in those woods feel about it—and is a fine demonstration of the way of thought such living brings." John Gould

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 7 '48 470w

" 'Minor classic' has always seemed an insufferable tag to me, but for lack of a better I must use it for 'Ridge Runner.' In it, with a skill which is entirely his own, the author has given us the forests, and the men who worked them; more than that, he has reflected forever a totally characteristic American, wise in his own province, full of humor, a native son of whom to be immensely proud." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 Je 26 '48 800w

AVERILL, GERALD—Continued
" 'Ridge Runner' has been hailed by Louise Dickinson Rich, author of 'We Took to the Woods,' as 'the very best and most authentic book about the Maine woods and country that have ever read.' "
+ Springf'd Republican p8B F 29 '48 180w

"Pleasant small book... There is strong stuff in it—tales of lumbermen on post-logging sprees and of the legendary cruelty to be met in the woods—but the meat of the book lies in the warm and sympathetic anecdotes of home life... The characters, all actual figures known to the author, are drawn vividly and the 'grandfather' is an excellent portrait of an outspoken, direct down-Easter. Mr. Averill's style is eminently readable and his choice of language unusually good."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:149 Je '48 120w
Wis Lib Bul 44:62 Mr '48

AVERY, GEORGE SHERMAN and others. Hormones and horticulture; the use of special chemicals in the control of plant growth. 326p il $4.50 McGraw
581.194 Hormones. Growth-promoting substances Agr48-4

"A survey of the history and current knowledge of plant hormones and other chemicals that affect the growth of plants. The material is arranged according to use; for example, individual chapters are devoted to the use of hormones in the rooting of cuttings, in the control of fruit production, and in the eradication of weeds. The discussions are based on a comprehensive survey of the literature and important statements are key-numbered to the extensive bibliographies. There are many illustrations that show mainly techniques and the results of controlled experiments... The senior author is Director of the Brooklyn Botanic Garden." (N Y New Tech Bks) Chapter bibliographies. Indexes.

Booklist 44:228 Mr 1 '48
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:201 F 1 '48 70w

"Although there is much in the book to interest the amateur experimenter and horticulturist, it is written on a professional level and should be useful as a practical manual and guide to the literature."
N Y New Tech Bks 32:76 O '47

"The book is authoritative, concisely written, and should be of interest to agricultural students and horticulturists."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:201 Je '48 240w

AYMAR, GORDON CHRISTIAN, comp. Treasury of sea stories; il. by Rockwell Kent. 464p $5 Barnes, A.S.
Short stories—Collections 48-9355

"Beginning with tales of today and reaching back into antiquity—from James A. Michener and Thomas Heggen to Columbus and Virgil—these stories have been chosen because they show man's activities upon that unpredictable element—the sea. There is a combination of fiction and genuine adventure but the compiler has applied the test of authenticity to each selection." Booklist

Booklist 45:137 D 15 '48

"A seaworthy blend, ably illustrated in black and white by Rockwell Kent, this should fill a space in all marine library shelves and prove a top Christmas sale in its field."
+ Kirkus 16:614 N 15 '48 150w

"A goodly selection." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:63 Ja 1 '49 20w

"A first-rate collection of maritime fact and fiction, containing many out-of-the-way items, such as Lieutenant Bligh's morose and understandably one-sided account of his misfortunes aboard the Bounty... Rockwell Kent, who wrote one of the pieces, also illustrated the book. His drawings of boats are fine, but it is a curious fact that he cannot draw water that looks wet."
+ New Yorker 24:146 N 27 '48 70w
Springf'd Republican p12C D 12 '48 340w

AYME, MARCEL. The transient hour; tr. by Eric Sutton. 190p $2.50 Wyn
48-1960

A novel based on life in Paris during the third year of the German occupation. It is a world of terror and disintegrating civilization, a world in which the black market and its manipulators ride high, but in which very few other people flourish, except possibly faithless wives of absent soldiers and prisoners.

Kirkus 16:61 F 1 '48 120w
Reviewed by Virgilia Peterson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 30 '48 600w

"Mr. Ayme is at all times suave, witty, stimulating. It is a paradox that a book of so many ingeniously contrived horrors could at the same time be so entertaining." Charles Lee
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 28 '48 550w

"M. Aymé is remarkable among contemporary writers dealing with the European scene for his apparent lack of powerful political passion and for his ability to view all his characters, French and German, patriots and collaborators, with a detached and ironical compassion. His characters are outlined in deft and economical strokes, sometimes in a single phrase or action." J. M. Lalley
+ New Yorker 24:91 Ap 3 '48 1050w

"There is no moralizing on the part of M. Aymé; his is a sophisticated point of view and what he offers us is matters as they appear to him. He is on his own, looking with ironic detachment at the changing and changeless elements of the stream of contemporary life in his Paris. There is no allying him to the schools of Sartre or Camus, for all philosophies, he seems to say, whether of idealism or materialism or despair, seem to lead just nowhere. And it is perhaps because of this seeming purposelessness that he does not give the impression of being a major writer of our time, in spite of his nature and remarkable ability. However, there is no gainsaying the fact that 'The Transient Hour' is a highly readable, even a fascinating work of fiction." Hollis Alpert
Sat R of Lit 31:27 Ap 17 '48 850w

"The Transient Hour is an entertaining waspish story of ordinary human relations during the occupation of Paris by the Germans. No one need fear another story about Resistance heroes. There are no heroes in M. Aymé's world... Of course, the trouble about shrugging one's shoulders at life too much in a novel is that nothing seems of any importance at all after a bit, not even some of the long conversations in The Transient Hour. But it is a lively book, and M. Aymé's footnotes are to be particularly recommended." Robert Kee
+ Spec 182:28 Ja 7 '49 170w
Times [London] Lit Sup p709 D 18 '48 330w

B

B. B., pseud. See Watkins-Pitchford, D. J.

BABCOCK, HAVILAH. My health is better in November. 284p il $3 Univ. of S.C. press
799 Hunting—U.S. Fishing Agr47-324
"Thirty-five stories of hunting and fishing in the South." Subtitle

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47
"Highly original, packed with delicious humor, in a delightful style. Drawings by Augusta Rembert Wittkowsky. Heartily recommended for young people, although designed for adults." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 72:1476 O 15 '47 110w

BABST, EARL D., and VANDER VELDE, LEWIS GEORGE, eds. Michigan and the Cleveland era. 372p il $2.50 Univ. of Mich.

920 Michigan. University. U.S.—History—1865- 48-7604

"Sketches of University of Michigan staff members and alumni who served the Cleveland administrations, 1885-89, 1893-97." (Subtitle) No index.

Reviewed by J. M. Thomas
Am Hist R 54:440 Ja '49 280w

"Here is a painstaking series of biographies for the scholar interested in the Cleveland era."
+ Current Hist 15:226 O '48 50w

School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 20w

BACH, MARCUS LOUIS. Report to Protestants; a personal investigation of the weakness, need, vision, and great potential of Protestants today. 277p $3 Bobbs

280 Protestantism. U.S.—Religion 48-5216

The author of They Have Found a Faith (Book Review Digest 1946) recounts his personal experiences in investigating the present-day state of Protestantism in the United States. His wanderings led him even to a Trappist monastery, to a Pentecostal tabernacle, to the Penitentes of New Mexico. He found both weakness and strength in Protestantism, but not much likelihood of a united church. No index.

Booklist 45:27 S 15 '48

Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Chicago Sun S 1 '48 290w

"A fascinating picture of American church life as it actually is at the grass-roots level today, with insistence that most Protestant congregations are not interested in uniting with anybody, no matter what Dr. Gallup and Stanley Jones think. . . If any of the Amsterdam delegates come back a bit too starry-eyed or walking too far above the ground, this might be a good book to hand them as they come down the gangplank." P. H.
Christian Century 65:913 S 8 '48 350w

"Dr. Bach is fair and friendly in his many references to Christian Science, for which he has a manifest respect. . . Those sincerely interested in the future of world Protestantism, including many who will not agree with all of Dr. Bach's observations and conclusions, will find his book objective and challenging." E. D. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 20 '48 450w

+ Churchman 162:15 D 1 '48 100w

"Bach makes constructive criticisms and valuable recommendations for the improvement of existing conditions. Recommended for all libraries." O. G. Lawson
+ Library J 73:1083 Ag '48 130w

BACHMAN, CHARLES HERBERT. Techniques in experimental electronics. 252p il $3.50 Wiley

621.38 Electronics 48-5695

Contents: Vacuum systems generalized; Pumps; Traps and baffles; Vacuum gauges; Valves and controlled leaks; Demountable joints; Controls and gadgets; Glass-blowing fundamentals; Vacuum system techniques; Leak detection; Metal versus glass vacuum systems; Sources of charged particles; Control of charged particles; The utilization of charged particles; Assembly and processing of electronic devices; Miscellaneous hints and techniques. References at end of many of the chapters. Index.

Booklist 44:332 Je 1 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:479 Mr 15 '48 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:10 Ja '48

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:227 Je '48 210w

BACHMAN, GEORGE WARREN, and MERIAM, LEWIS. Issue of compulsory health insurance. 280p $4; pa $2 Brookings

331.25442 Insurance, Health. Insurance, State and compulsory 48-7355

"A survey of health conditions in the U.S. on which the investigators base their conclusion that a compulsory health insurance system by the national government would be undesirable and even harmful to medical progress. They recommend that individuals be allowed freedom to make their own provision for medical care as at present, and that federal grants-in-aid be made to the states to assure adequate medical care for those unable to pay. 'The study is confined to the economic, social and administrative issues involved . . . and does not go into discussion of strictly medical practices.'—Preface" Booklist

"The most charitable statement that can be made about this report is that it was evidently prepared in some haste. It abounds in irrelevant material, questions raised but left unanswered, contradictions, and repetitions. The authors apparently do not understand the insurance principle, for they imply throughout that it is unjust for healthy persons to participate in a pool with the 'bad risks' who are ill. Haste, however, cannot excuse violation of the fundamental rules of scholarship by the almost complete lack of relevance of the factual material to the main issue and the opinions expressed about it." K. G. Clark and D. A. Clark
— Am J Pub Health 38:1592 N '48 500w

"There is no doubt that this Brookings report is a thoughtful and expert consideration of the subject, and that many of the conclusions are inescapable. It is equally true that other able experts have given markedly different interpretations to the same evidence." M. N. McGeary
Am Pol Sci R 42:1221 D '48 450w

Booklist 45:27 S 15 '48

"This book is significant in that it puts the prestige of Brookings Institution behind the familiar arguments against compulsory health insurance and further because it possibly gives a preview of the program which those who have never liked social security hope to get adopted by the incoming Congress." E. E. Witte
Survey 85:51 Ja '49 700w

BACON, MARTHA SHERMAN (MRS PHILIP OLIVER-SMITH). Star called wormwood. 250p $2.75 Random house

48-9253

A Californian, Charles Anders, takes the position as tutor to the sixteen-year-old son of an American author living in Italy. There is a slightly older sister, twins of twelve, and a baby. Charles and the children get lost, meet an anti-Fascist refugee, and have some nightmare experiences before some of them reach safety, for tragedy overtakes two of the little band. The time is 1935.

Booklist 45:120 D 1 '48

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 24 '48 180w

"A rather brilliant, if not always focussed, novel whose sight, sound and feel has its own power."
+ Kirkus 16:489 S 15 '48 130w

"In spite of the popping up, now and again, of Fascists, the book reads like something from another world. The people, their thoughts and reactions, though puzzling at times, have a 'Hansel and Gretel' charm. Not a deep or important book, but one of whimsical mysticism sprinkled with pertinent observations." C. W. Roth
Library J 73:1510 O 15 '48 90w

"A charming and talented first novel, a very attractive decoration on a theme—social responsibility—usually treated much too portentously." Diana Trilling
+ Nation 167:611 N 27 '48 410w

"The real and rather astonishing merits of 'A Star in Wormwood' lie in the writing and in the characterizations of the Meredith children. These occupy the novel phosphorescently, behaving with that random unexpectedness which has the extra dimension of life itself; they are irresponsible, impractical, unpredictable and utterly plausible. . . 'A Star Called Wormwood' clearly adds a new name to the short list of first-rate novelists who still care for style and form in their craft." James Hilton

BACON, M. S.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 N 14 '48 800w

"'A Star Called Wormwood' begins rather poorly. . . Thereafter, however, the book springs to brilliant life—the life of a particularly vivid and exciting nightmare. . . Mrs. Bacon has made a grand debut as a novelist. One looks forward with keen interest to seeing what she will do next." P. H. Myring

+ N Y Times p40 N 21 '48 350w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p8 D 26 '48 500w

Reviewed by Edmund Gilligan
Sat R of Lit 31:31 N 27 '48 550w
Time 52:116 D 13 '48 350w

BADOGLIO, PIETRO, duca d' ADDIS ABABA. See Addis Ababa, P. B. d'

BAER, YITZHAK FRITZ. Galut [tr. by Robert Warshow]. 122p $1.50 Schocken

296 Jews—History. Jews—Political and social conditions 48-124

Historical essay which examines the galut (Hebrew for exile) as the central concept of Jewish history from Hellenistic-Roman days to the recent European exodus.

Booklist 44:186 Ja 15 '48

"There is no doubt this book makes painful reading, especially in its violent accusations against the mendicant monks of the Middle Ages and the policy of several pontiffs." H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 47:177 N 28 '47 320w

Reviewed by Marie Syrkin
Nation 166:330 Mr 20 '48 90w

Reviewed by H. E. Wedick
N Y Times p19 Ja 18 '48 130w

BAERWALD, FRIEDRICH. Fundamentals of labor economics. 464p $4 McMullen

331 Labor and laboring classes. Economics 47-12082

"About half the book deals with economic considerations; the remainder treats chiefly federal statutes relating to social welfare and labor legislation. Brought clearly into focus are such timely matters as money and real wages, wage theories, proposals for maintaining full employment, the Federal Employment Act of 1946, the Wagner-Murray bill, the Beveridge Plan, and the Labor Management Act of 1947. The prevailing tone is objective, but the author commits himself on many of the most controversial questions of the hour. He favors federal, as opposed to state, operation of employment services, a positive government policy of encouraging population growth, of expanding foreign investments, of maintaining full employment, and of expanding social insurance." (Am Pol Sci R) Selected bibliography. Index.

"Professor Baerwald's text is neither a compendium of statistics nor an exclusively theoretical treatment of the subject. In attempting to combine the two approaches, it is perhaps least successful on the theoretical side. Nevertheless, as a highly readable account of recent developments in the field of labor, it deserves the attention of the labor specialist and the general economist." G. F. Bloom

+ — Am Econ R 38:453 Je '48 1350w

"A comparatively short, simplified, readable text. . . This book will be stimulating and informative to the serious general reader, and especially in introductory college courses where an integration of labor economics and legislation is possible and desirable." J. H. Ferguson

+ Am Pol Sci R 42:387 Ap '48 300w

"The method used in the preparation of this book is unique, although some may question its value as the basis for a well-rounded treatment of such a significant and controversial subject. . . The author's chapters on wage and employment theories, social security, and workmen's compensation are adequate in length, carefully documented, and expositionally well done, although even in the chapter on wage theories, the attempt to compress too many theories into too few pages (p.14) is ill advised" J. A. McGuire

+ — Ann Am Acad 257:252 My '48 430w

BAEYERTZ, MARY. Nonmetallic inclusions in steel. 135p il $3 Am. soc. for metals

669.1 Steel—Analysis 48-5460

"A concise review of the sources of nonmetallic inclusions, the technique of estimating the amount and types in a given sample of steel, and methods for the identification of the various types. It is designed for the metallurgist who has graduated from engineering college—or has otherwise acquired a familiarity with metallurgical terms and techniques—but is just beginning to do practical work in the field. The text is supplemented by more than sixty illustrations and a bibliography that contains fifty-three references." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:479 Mr 15 '48 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:84 O '47

"This introduction to the subject should be useful to the research or production worker who is beginning the study of inclusions, and to more experienced workers in need of a refresher."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:105 Mr '48 240w

BAGAR, ROBERT CONTI, and BIANCOLLI, LOUIS LEOPOLD. The concert companion; a comprehensive guide to symphonic music; with an introd. by Deems Taylor. (Whittlesey House publication) 868p $4.95 McGraw

785 Orchestral music 47-12494

"In 1941, Robert Bagar and Louis Biancolli became program annotators for the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society. . . The present volume is a compilation of their program notes written over the past five or six years. The scope of the book, which is an indirect tribute to catholicity of the Philharmonic's programs, may best be indicated with a few statistics. It includes something over 475 compositions by 163 composers, 68 of whom are now living. Only 23 are represented with more than six compositions, but 77 are represented by only one work each. The leaders are Mozart with 26 works, Beethoven with 22, and Tchaikovsky with 19. Among living composers, Sibelius and Stravinsky are tied with 11 each. Copland leads among the Americans with six." (Music Lib Assn Notes) Bibliography. Index.

Atlantic 181:120 Je '48 90w

"Good handbook for the constant attendant at symphonic concerts (or the constant listener to radio symphonic music)."

+ Kirkus 15:615 N 1 '47 80w

"Will stand on library shelves along with Hale and Tovey although lacking the literary style of either. Well-written, full of quotations, generally reliable and useful. Probably the only book in the field to boast the luxury of having 'contents' body and 'index' all arranged alphabetically by composer. No title index. Good feature is the inclusion of texts of vocal works, e.g. Mahler's Das Lied von der Erde." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 73:124 Ja 15 '48 110w

"The nature of the notes, which are both informative and concise, is to the credit of the book. The approach is primarily historical without flights of poetical obfuscation. Long-winded analyses with musical examples are avoided, and there is no attempt to 'sell' the reader on the merits of any composition. The notes for compositions by contemporary composers make the book almost unique in its class. This sort of information is always hard to locate, especially in a hurry. On the debit side, however, a factor enters which could not be controlled by the authors—the make-up of the actual programs. Although statistically the orchestra has an excellent record in both the standard repertory and in the contemporary field, many works by contemporary composers were presented as novelties, and this means that they will not be encountered frequently. And for every American composer included, one can mention another of similar caliber who is missing. Nonetheless, if the price does not prove to be too serious an obstacle, it is these notes on the music of recent and living composers which give the book its strongest selling point." Lee Fairley

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 5:103 D '47 400w

"Each work appears in its historical or biographical framework and with a minimum of technical analysis. The authors are happily unpretentious in their use of scholarly detail; their style is informal, clear and often entertaining. They have been perhaps over-modest in their copious quotations of other authorities, where the reader might prefer to hear more of the authors' own opinion of a work. However, the parade of judgments of eminent musicians does give the reader an interesting picture of the esteem in which a work has been held from its first performance to the present day." Edward Downes

+ — N Y Times p12 F 8 '48 500w

Wis Lib Bul 44:183 N '48

BAGBY, GEORGE A., pseud. See Stein, A. M.

BAGEHOT, WALTER. Physics and politics. 230p $2.75 Knopf

320.1 Political science. Nationalism and nationality. Evolution 48-8741

Reissue of a book published in 1869, with an introduction by Jacques Barzun, professor of history at Columbia University. The book is a discussion of the impact of scientific invention on politics and economics. Index.

"One may well disagree, with some of Bagehot's main conclusions, but one is bound to grant that he calls attention to the main elements of what has become a vitally important problem—and in a manner that is as stimulating and thought-provoking today as when he wrote 75 years ago." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 29 '48 500w

"Bagehot reads well, and challengingly today."

+ Kirkus 16:463 S 1 '48 100w

"Reissue will be welcome in era of atomic bomb and should have considerable appeal, thanks to Bagehot's literary graces. Jacques Barzun has written enlightening introductory essay for present edition. Recommended for libraries not owning earlier editions." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 73:1381 O 1 '48 140w

Nation 167:673 D 11 '48 60w

"Discriminating readers will be grateful to Jacques Barzun and once more to Alfred Knopf for rescuing from undeserved obscurity this small treasure-house of social insight, political sagacity and learning. Walter Bagehot's Physics and Politics is among the nineteenth-century writings that provided both the methods of analytic approach and the systems of ideas to form the underpinning of contemporary social sciences." J. R. Newman

+ New Repub 119:23 D 13 '48 2850w

"Bagehot's mind, if not great, was certainly first-rate and remarkably free of 'the cake of custom,' a mind that can hardly fail to stimulate any other that rubs against it." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 31:35 N 20 '48 200w

BAILEY, ALBERT EDWARD. Christ and his gospel in recent art. 2pts in 1 [151p] il spir pa $2 Scribner

704.9485 Jesus Christ—Art 48-6202

"Half of the 32 pictures were selected to illustrate episodes in the life of Jesus, the other half to represent aspects of the good life and the good society in which the gospel becomes concrete." (Christian Century) Among the artists included are Burne-Jones, Rodin, Watts, Rivera, and John Singer Sargent. Pt 1 was previously published under title: Christ in Recent Art.

"For each picture, Dr. Bailey gives a helpful and penetrating interpretation. Preachers, teachers and laymen will find the book a stimulus to thought and imagination." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 65:384 Ap 28 '48 100w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 73:709 My 1 '48 70w

BAILEY, ALTON EDWARD, ed. Cottonseed and cottonseed products; their chemistry and chemical technology. (Fats and oils monographs, v2) 960p il $17.50 Interscience

665.3 Cotton seed oil 48-6621

"Second of a series of fats and oils monographs, this book gives an immense amount of detail on the chemistry and technology of the cottonseed industry. Contributors to the volume include many outstanding and able authors, both in government and in industry. Representatives of the colleges are also included among the 25 contributors." (Chem Eng) Index.

"The editor and his associates are to be congratulated for the production of such an authoritative and complete treatise. Those interested in cotton-seed and its products from my point of view should find it useful." G. S. Jameson

+ Chem & Eng N 26:2312 Ag 2 '48 270w

"Of greatest interest to the chemical engineer are the chapters on processing and utilization of cottonseed and its products. Technology is brought up to date authoritatively. . . The appearance of the book suffers somewhat from a mixture of two or more kinds of paper bound into the single volume. However, a 14-p. author index and a 16-p. subject index seem quite likely to make this volume a frequently consulted reference work." G. W. McBride

+ Chem Eng 55:285 Je '48 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:949 Je 15 '48 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:38 My '48

BAILEY, DOUGLAS FIELDS. See Bailey, W. F.

BAILEY, FLORA L. Summer at Yellow Singer's; il. by Ralph Ray. 199p $2.50 Macmillan 48-7187

Jon and Judy, children of a couple of ethnologists, go with their parents on a field trip to the Southwest and spend the summer in the home of a Navaho Indian, Yellow Singer.

Booklist 45:15 S 1 '48

Chicago Sun Jl 17 '48 100w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 16 '48 170w

"Miss Bailey writes from firsthand knowledge and out of deep sympathy." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:371 S '48 110w

Kirkus 16:255 Je 1 '48 90w

"Unfortunately, there is not sufficient plot or characterization in the book to balance the wealth of information about life on the reservation, customs and ceremonials. A young reader is apt to become discouraged and confused by the unaccustomed mysticism of the healing songs and ceremonies, particularly with no real story to hold his interest." V. H. Mathews

— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ag 8 '48 150w

BAILEY, F. L.—Continued

"This story hasn't the emotional strength of Florence Crannell Means' stories of Indian life, nor the humor of Florence Hayes' 'Hoshki, the Navajo,' but it is full of color and detail that will appeal to 8 to 12 years olds." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p20 Je 27 '48 140w

"This is a well-told story. The background is informing, from an historical point of view, and the action and characters satisfying when it is read purely as an adventure story."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:37 Ag 14 '48 70w

BAILEY, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Save a rope [Eng title: Saving a rope]. 186p $2 Doubleday

48-7744

Detective story.

Review by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun p10 Ag 6 '48 230w

Kirkus 16:245 My 15 '48 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 8 '48 150w

"A curious feature of this book is that many of the characters in it have acquired the cryptic conversational style to which Reggie has long been addicted. Surely, one Reggie Fortune at a time should be enough for anybody." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p16 Ag 15 '48 140w

"Slim stuff, even for rabid Fortune admirers."

New Yorker 24:64 Jl 31 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 22 '48 100w

"High class Bailey."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:24 Ag 14 '48 40w

BAILEY, RALPH EDGAR. Sea hawks of empire; eastward to the Indies for trade and treasure, 1500-1700; il. by James MacDonald. 256p $2.50 Dutton

48-4524

"A sequel to 'Argosies of Empire,' [Book Review Digest 1947] this tells the adventures of John Davis searching for the northwest passage to India, helping in the destruction of the Spanish Armada, sailing for Sumatra with the dissolute Dutch navigator Cornelius de Houtman and sharing the excitement of the East India Company." (Sat R of Lit) For junior and senior high schools. Index.

"Fresh historical material for supplementary use; of less interest for general reading because of loosely knit, rather artificial, story."

+ — Booklist 45:90 N 1 '48

"Lots of interesting and little-known historical material dressed up with some fictional characters, imagined but plausible incidents. From the fictional point of view the story limps a bit and the dialogue is unreal. But the freshness of the material and the light it throws on the period makes it worthwhile, as supplementary reading."

+ — Kirkus 16:482 S 15 '48 150w

"The pace is slow and involved at times, but the subject will hold the reader's interest. For boys and girls who love the sea and adventure. Good supplementary reading." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 73:1602 N 1 '48 80w

"Good historical background." R. H. V.

+ Sat R of Lit 31:52 N 13 '48 50w

Springf'd Republican p7B N 7 '48 100w

BAILEY, ROBESON, ed. See Field and stream (periodical). Game bag

BAILEY, THOMAS ANDREW. The man in the street; the impact of American public opinion on foreign policy. 334p $5 Macmillan

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. Public opinion —U.S. 48-6857

Examines the power of public opinion in the United States, with examples from the time of the American Revolution to the present. The emphasis is on the twentieth century. The study was based partially on an examination of "published public opinion polls having to do with American foreign affairs from 1935 to June, 1947." Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Bailey has done us all a service in setting forth the faults and foibles of 'the man in the street' as he faces foreign policy. No one can quarrel with him when he writes about 'The Perils of Apathy,' 'The Incubus of Ignorance,' 'The Curse of Caprice,' or 'The Fruits of Isolation.' It is regrettable, however, that this fascinating and useful study should be marred as it is by a kind of academic self-righteousness and the use of wisecracks and bad puns." P. H. Odegard

+ — Am Hist R 54:390 Ja '49 1350w

Reviewed by G. L. Kirk

Am Pol Sci R 42:1018 O '48 700w

"Clever and for the most part sound, though the author's opinions are occasionally of questionable validity." L. M. Sears

+ — Ann Am Acad 259:154 S '48 360w

Booklist 44:306 My 15 '48

"The pages on religion seem to reflect the attitude of a person who thinks he is above the churches. Such an attitude prevents one from writing adequately about religion. The chapters on ignorance and the lack of adequate school education are decidedly illuminating, but overrate the value of formal education. . . We need such facts as are sprinkled in profusion and with sparkle throughout this book. We could also profit from a little deeper, finer understanding." R. H. M.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 My 11 '48 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '48

"Informative, highly readable analysis of the American public, might be termed a psychological 'inside U.S.A.' in scholarly terms. Should have popular significance in election year."

+ Kirkus 16:100 F 15 '48 170w

"Epigrammatic, thoughtful, recommended." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 73:554 Ap 1 '48 110w

"A wise, witty, and timely book." R. W. Leopold

+ Nation 167:78 Jl 17 '48 1200w

"Mr. Bailey's book is a brisk, breezy and highly entertaining analysis of the American voter as an operating force in foreign affairs. For he is a force, and that force exerts constant pressure." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 My 30 '48 750w

"'The Man in the Street' contains a good deal of seasoned wisdom about the conduct of foreign policy in a democracy. . . Professor Bailey has made a valuable contribution toward meeting the need he describes so vividly: to give the American people the information indispensable to an intelligent foreign policy." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

+ N Y Times p1 My 9 '48 1400w

Reviewed by Audrey Doughty

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 19 '48 650w

"A work such as Bailey's is long overdue. There has been no dearth of histories that have presented the past from the standpoint of biography, conquest, war, politics, economics, and culture, but little investigation has been made of the impact of public opinion on history. Mr. Bailey carefully examines indices of public opinion available to him and presents his facts and interpretations in 318 pages, most of them interesting, well-documented, and studded with a wealth of quotations." E. L. Bernays

+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 My 29 '48 1050w

School & Society 67:326 Ap 24 '48 10w

Reviewed by N. D. Palmer

Social Studies 40:39 Ja '49 900w

Springf'd Republican p15A Ag 1 '48 500w

BAILEY, WILLIAM FIELDS (DOUGLAS FIELDS BAILEY). Devil make a third. 383p $3.50 Dutton

48-8168

Story of a man and a town in the early part of the twentieth century. Ex-farmer Buck Bannon, thru buying and lending all day and collecting nights, came to own half an Alabama town. His motives were often bad; but the results were good for him, his people and the town.

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '48 150w

"This is a first novel and its interest can be said to end there, alas, for it is not a book the reading of which could lend any kind of profit. The style, in the literary sense, is non-existent and the approach is purely topographical, which means that the reader who likes to consider the heart of man will find no sustenance in this book. Nevertheless . . . the author does have a nice faculty for harkening to the imagination of sight, smell and touch. The dialogue, though dull, is no doubt authentic." Virginia Bennett
— + Commonweal 49:43 O 22 '48 320w

Kirkus 16:318 Jl 1 '48 150w

"Although book has its share of sex, shooting, homespun affection, etc., reader never becomes part of the action, but is always conscious of a story being told. After a wobbly start author's style begins to jell and becomes a readable medium. Could be used as a 'come on' for the reluctant reader." C. W. Roth
Library J 73:1088 Ag '48 90w

Reviewed by Peggy Thomson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 19 '48 320w

"It's a refreshing experience, these days, to pick up a period novel—which also happens to be a first novel——and find in it both careful devotion to character and honest comment on American culture. It is even more refreshing when that comment is made so completely through character that one seems quite inseparable from the other. 'Devil Make a Third' is all of these things, and—with allowances for the fact that it is a first go—perhaps more." E. S. Mills
+ Sat R of Lit 31:14 O 2 '48 750w

BAILLIE, DONALD MACPHERSON. God was in Christ. 213p $2.75 Scribner

232 Atonement. Incarnation. Jesus Christ—Person and offices 48-8189

"This essay on the incarnation and the atonement is a timely reorientation of the problem of Christology to a generation of Protestants who have lived through a long period of research and emphasis upon 'the Jesus of history' and now is faced with a seeming rejection of that point of view by the neo-orthodox or realistic theologians of Europe and America. Since there is a current increase of interest in theology and because there is widespread divergence of opinion between the various schools of thought, it is of the utmost importance to have this study of the religious approach to the mystery of Christ's person made available to the average reader." (Kirkus) Index.

"The author's brother, John Baillie, is well known in the United States, but Professor Donald Baillie through this book deserves a wide following in his own right, for he has proven that a book on a theological subject can be made not only understandable but interesting to the laity."
+ Kirkus 16:514 O 1 '48 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 3 '48 650w

"It is not the least of the merits of the work that it is readily intelligible to anyone, whether a professional theologian or not, who is prepared to devote serious thought to great issues."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p333 Je 12 '48 800w

BAIN, EDWARD USTICK. S-O-S helicopter; foreword by Igor Sikorsky; il. by Edward B. Kemble. 95p $2 Whitman, A.

48-5697

"The first chapter outlines the training days of three young army pilots who learn how to fly helicopters. Then Rod flies his to Australia, lands in Brisbane and rescues a stranded aviator. Dan is sent to Alaska, delivers Christmas presents to men on an island in a pea-soup fog, and saves an Eskimo boy. Tom goes to Brazil and is assigned to the relief of an expedition." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) The three friends are reunited for a demonstration, given by their training school, and decide to form their own helicopter freight company.

Booklist 44:320 My 15 '48

Kirkus 16:110 Mr 1 '48 90w

"Story is artificial and obviously manufactured, but it is used as a framework for accurate and interesting facts about helicopters, their uses and limitations. Recommended for youngsters interested in aviation." M. M. Smith
Library J 73:485 Mr 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 2 '48 110w

Springf'd Republican p10B My 9 '48 110w

BAIN, JOE STATEN. Pricing, distribution, and employment; economics of an enterprise system. 496p $3.75 Holt

338.5 Economics. Prices 48-2638

A textbook on economic theory at the intermediate level. "Bain has sought to present economics as a body of substantive knowledge rather than as a set of techniques of analysis. This shift in emphasis is desirable in economics generally, and it is especially desirable in a textbook for students who usually will not take additional work. Accordingly, [he] omits certain topics (utility theory, much of the laws of return) commonly found in textbooks, and has unusually detailed chapters on monopoly and oligopoly. He has achieved considerable success in making this shift in the treatment of price theory (Chaps. 2-9), except for the presence of a chapter on monopolistic competition, which he properly concludes is a minor variant from competition." (Am Econ R) Supplementary readings at end of each chapter. Index.

"A good textbook. . . It deals simply and correctly with the customary topics of price theory and also, at unusual length, with investment and aggregate output. It is motivated by a search for realistic, not merely elegant, theorems. . . There is one respect in which the entire book is seriously deficient—in the writing. The style itself is placidly dull." G. J. Stigler
+ — Am Econ R 38:915 D '48 850w

"It seems that Bain might well have written two books, one an intermediate theory text largely concerned with the theory of commodity pricing and with the pricing of productive services under static conditions, and the other a monograph dealing with the integration of the theory of pricing and the theory of output as a whole. The first book would serve admirably as a statement of the theory of pricing in different market situations and as such would qualify as an excellent theory text. The second book would serve as a provocative and useful springboard for a series of journal articles. The combination of these two types of contributions in one volume should not blind us to the merits of each." E. T. Weiler
J Pol Econ 56:545 D '48 1050w

BAKELESS, JOHN EDWIN. Fighting frontiersman; the life of Daniel Boone; il. by Edward Shenton. 260p $2.75 Morrow

B or 92 Boone, Daniel—Juvenile literature 48-7701

Biography of Daniel Boone for junior and senior high schools. It is based on the author's adult biography Daniel Boone, Master of the Wilderness (Book Review Digest 1939).

BAKELESS, J. E.—Continued

Booklist 45:36 S 15 '48

"An able, experienced biographer presents here for young people a compelling portrait. . . John Bakeless' excellent account of the famous explorer, scout and Indian fighter is supported by good pictures and given a strong and pleasing format." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:374 S '48 80w

"A comprehensive, painstaking and detailed, if not inspired, account of the life of Daniel Boone."
+ Kirkus 16:338 Jl 15 '48 100w

"Recommended for ages 12-16." S. J. Robinson
+ Library J 73:1675 N 15 '48 70w

"A full, authoritative adult biography." M. C. S.
+ N Y Times p58 N 14 '48 150w

"An excellent biography, which is based on Mr. Bakeless's previous life of Boone, written for adult readers."
+ New Yorker 24:146 D 11 '48 90w

"This book should be accepted as the best biography for young people of America's greatest frontier hero." M. P. Allen
+ Sat R of Lit 31:37 O 16 '48 320w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 22 '48 240w

Wis Lib Bul 44:186 N '48

BAKER, ARTHUR, pseud. See Giddings, A. F.

BAKER, CARLOS HEARD. Shelley's major poetry; the fabric of a vision. 307p $5 Princeton univ. press
821 Shelley, Percy Bysshe 48-7103

"A critical survey of Shelley's major poetry, the thirty or more considerable works written during the single decade of his maturity, in relation to his concurrent intellectual development. The critic takes full advantage of an approach which ought not to be so unusual as it has become, in that he places primary emphasis on the poems as documents to be interpreted and turns to the poet's biography only as to one of several instrumentalities to understanding. What he has done is, in his own words, 'to live the inner life of these poems from one end to the other and to set down the record of his experience.'" N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"Professor Baker's reading will prove enlightening to many readers who have never given Shelley's philosophy serious thought. Whether he has probed very deeply into Shelley's intellectual processes, or has indeed turned up much that is new, will be a matter of opinion. . . A deeper comprehension of Shelley's indebtedness to Platonism (including Neo-Platonism) and a greater awareness of the subtlety of Shelley's thought and the complexity of the various strands composing it would enhance the value of Professor Baker's interpretation." Carl Grabo
Christian Century 65:781 Ag 4 '48 490w

"Mr. Baker, though generous in tributes to the authors of more specialized studies of one or another phase of Shelley's work (such critics as Professors Grabo, Cameron, and Jones), holds steadily to his central theme. He makes the large pattern of the fabric of Shelley's vision apparent, and probably most readers will be convinced by his argument." S. C. C.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 1 '48 500w

"Two persistent calumnies that have dogged the poet's memory should be extinguished by Mr. Baker's sensitive dissection of the whole extent of his thought. One is the supposition that Shelley was literally in search of a personal Egeria and that his idealizations of various candidates for the position of soulmate are reflected in his poems. . . A second exploded charge is the imputation of atheism, which cannot stand for a moment in the face of any impartial scrutiny of the poet's unorthodox but genuinely religious beliefs." G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 27 '48 850w

Reviewed by Emery Neff
N Y Times p5 Je 27 '48 800w

BAKER, CHARLOTTE. House on the river; story and pictures by [the author]. 128p $2.50 Coward-McCann
48-4958

"A house for children to dream of, built on logs floating on the river. The river is the Willamette flowing into the Columbia River and the Pacific. Davy who is 8, and other children, live in the houses on the river. There are pets: a duck, a seal; exploration of an island where the children meet the mysterious MacDermitt, the hermit." Commonweal

Commonweal 49:150 N 19 '48 60w

"The children are as real and amusing as those in Charlotte Baker's books about Necessary Nellie." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:458 N '48 90w

"Nine and ten year olds will like this simple 'daily living' story with the unusual background of a house on the Willamette River in the Northwest. . . Nice feel and unusual setting."
+ Kirkus 16:527 O 1 '48 90w

"Probably will not be as popular as the author's stories about Nellie but will appeal to boys and girls of 8-10 who want an adventure story." E. T. Dobbins
Library J 73:1388 O 1 '48 70w

"Everybody in this story, for children 6 to 10, is real and funny, taking life, bouncy or otherwise, as it comes along. Mrs. Baker's pictures are as good as her story." M. F.
+ N Y Times p57 N 14 '48 130w

BAKER, DOROTHY (DODDS) (MRS HOWARD BAKER). Our gifted son. 234p $2.75 Houghton 48-8039

Character study of a musically inclined young Mexican of wealthy parentage, who goes home from Harvard for the summer holidays, taking a young engineer friend. Because of the recent death of his mother he is received coldly by his cruel, overbearing father. José attempts to fathom the mystery of his mother's death, and the novel ends with a tragedy, which nevertheless, frees José to live his own life.

Atlantic 182:110 O '48 180w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun Ag 16 '48 230w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 19 '48 850w

"The action of this novel is largely psychological. Through her description of the minutest details of José's thoughts the author has succeeded in conveying the impression of confusion and unhappiness. Yet José as a person becomes blurred in this profusion of detail and emerges more as a mental study than as a real human being. . . Despite slow tempo, structural defects, and unreal characterizations, Mrs. Baker has succeeded in creating a definite atmosphere. The subtropical town, the mysterious family circle, and the wretched young man have a single eerie quality. This is by far the most memorable feature of 'Our Gifted Son.'" C. A. Cline
— + Commonweal 48:576 S 24 '48 260w

Kirkus 16:289 Je 15 '48 150w

"Attractive American woman ex-tutor, insensitive Harvard student and other isolated types cleverly characterized, but could have been more fully developed. Interest accelerates to powerful, tragic climax. Well written." R. W. Henderson
+ — Library J 73:1025 Jl '48 80w

"For all the atmosphere and plot structure, there is a lack of intensity throughout the book, a slackness where there should be tension, a soft bump when there should be sharp impact. There is not sufficient immersion in the psyche of José, not enough compulsion in his circling pursuit of the witch. Yet 'Our Gifted Son' is a tale well-told of what happens when those who have studied to love wisely meet the witch who knows how to love well." Thomas Sugrue

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 15 '48 800w

"Mrs. Baker has created some promising characters, full of interest, and then not let them do anything on account of the plot. . . [Her] style has a deliberately offhand, tomboy quality, which under its surface swagger, is soft, blurred, and rather sloppy. Her indistinct, often careless, sometimes ungrammatical sentences show a disregard for accuracy and clarity in the interest of manner and mannerism. She seems to give a kind of imitation of simplicity. Instead of being disarmed, the reader is likely to arm at once. It strikes one as too bad the author didn't let the characters in this novel take it over more." Eudora Welty

— + N Y Times p5 Ag 15 '48 850w

New Yorker 34:70 Ag 28 '48 120w

"Fine and thoughtful novel." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 13 '48 700w

"'Our Gifted Son,' may seem at first to be an inspired translation from a Latin tongue. It is written with such a sensitivity for moods, for the sound of the correct word, and for the revealing gesture, that it shows the artist and the stylist beneath the dramatist. . . This reader would have taken pleasure in 'Our Gifted Son' if there had been no mystery, no death, and no melodrama. The luxuriant scenes in which the story is played, the sharply revealed characters, the quality of the prose, would have been enough to satisfy me." Harrison Smith.

+ Sat R of Lit 31:17 Ag 14 '48 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 45:13 Ja '49

BAKER, FRANK. My friend the enemy. 246p $2.75 Coward-McCann

48-5836

"Dramatist Morgan Vale meets, after twenty-five years, Vincent Collins who had bullied and persecuted him when they were schoolmates together. He discovers that he is still afraid of his old enemy. When Collins confesses to having committed a terrible crime, Vale is perversely torn between reporting him to the police or allowing him to evade cruel justice. The moral problem is eventually solved in this very British psychological novel." Library J

Kirkus 16:5 Ja 1 '48 120w

Reviewed by H. G. Kelley

Library J 73:197 F 1 '48 80w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 36:35 Jl 10 '48 180w

Reviewed by Richard Match

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 14 '48 600w

"Told in a flawless style, with here and there a Dostoevskian overtone, the story has an extraordinary fascination—not a little of it due to its mounting suspense which, considering the thinness of action, is a real achievement. Yet when it is all over, one has the vague suspicion that one has been taken in—that it is all a clever little figment of Mr. Baker's well-versed imagination." Hilda Lake

+ — N Y Times p23 Jl 18 '48 450w

"A generally animated novel, marred only by infrequent flecks of implausibility and intellectual pretension."

New Yorker 24:115 Mr 20 '48 170w

"An admirable, engrossing story." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 18 '48 80w

"Mr. Baker is no Dostoievsky, and it is probably true that some of his psychological and spiritual explorations are murky rather than profound, unclear rather than subtle. His story, also, would have benefited from shortening. . . Finally, the situation he depicts is so special that a great many readers may find it unconvincing. Others, however, may discover in it a curious attraction, and a troubling insight into the nature of that thin partition which separates love from hatred. One should add that Mr. Baker writes well indeed." Edwin Fadiman

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:24 My 8 '48 700w

Reviewed by Robert Kee

Spec 181:26 Jl 2 '48 180w

BAKER, GEORGE EDWARD. Paris of Troy [Eng title: Fidus Achates]. 220p $2.75 Ziff-Davis

47-11315

"The siege of Troy is the framework for this story of Hector, Paris, Helen, Menelaus, Agamemnon, Achilles, and Aeneas, told through the experiences of Achates, the faithful soldier-friend of Aeneas. This is a fresh interpretation which minimizes the gods, explains matter-of-factly all the mysterious events and gives plausibility to characters who are only names to most young people." Horn Bk

"Though the interpretation is in the modern spirit, there is no attempt to ridicule or twist the basic story." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 24:142 Mr '48 90w

"George Baker has had fun with the fall of Troy, and his ingenious interpolations in the famous story are agreeably exciting. It is a good yarn, an entertaining adventure story." Lorine Pruette

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 N 9 '47 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 7 '48 300w

BAKER, GORDON PRATT. Witness of the prophets. 213p $2.25 Abingdon-Cokesbury

224 Bible. Old Testament—Prophecies. Jesus Christ—Person and offices 48-1413

Studies seven of the Old Testament prophets: Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Habakkuk, Jeremiah, Haggai, Zechariah; and treats of Jesus as the heir, prince, and hope of the prophets. The author is pastor of the Methodist church at Washington Grove, Maryland. Indexes.

Reviewed by Jack Finegan

Christian Century 65:544 Je 2 '48 150w

"Dr Baker has an eloquent and poetic style, and portrays the prophets with a richness of imagination. Almost half of the book, entitled The Witness of the Way, is devoted to a study of Jesus as the Heir, the Prince, and the Hope of the Prophets. With deep spiritual insight he reveals the fulfilment in Jesus of the prophetic aspirations and his transcendence of them." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 162:17 S 1 '48 100w

"The book contains very good writing. It has vigor, decisiveness, clarity, freshness. The preacher marshals his material with clear thinking and clear aiming at a decision upon the part of the reader. The exposition reads well and shows forcefulness in preaching. There is a good deal of theologizing at the homiletical level to help the reader of today. Someone should write a book on 'the Danger of Modernizing the Prophets.' This book shows this danger. . . [It] makes the prophets the spring board for many observations about religion but is not on exposition of the unique and ever-recreating work of God in the prophets. Such a glaring misinterpretation of Ezekiel as that found on p. 201 is without excuse. This book cannot serve the purpose it declares. Such treatment will not help modern men in true knowledge of the prophets." J. P. Berkeley

+ — Crozer Q 25:354 O '48 1100w

BAKER, MRS HELEN CODY, and ROUTZAHN, MRS MARY BRAYTON (SWAIN). How to interpret social welfare; a study course in public relations. 141p il $2.50 Russell Sage

361.8 Social work. Publicity 47-11488

"A basic study course in public relations, written for professional and volunteer social

BAKER, H. C.—Continued
workers who speak to audiences and write letters and bulletins about health and welfare services." (Social Studies) Reading references. Index. "Its predecessor [was] published in 1937 under the title How to Interpret Social Work [Book Review Digest 1937]. Almost all of its content is new." (Introd)

"In the beginning of the book the authors have included a chart relating the agency to its various publics. It aptly illustrates the book's whole approach—calling attention first to the simple ways in which an agency or staff member can avoid many a blunder, and then giving helpful ideas in executing the everyday job of public relations." M. F. Champlin
+ Am J Pub Health 38:435 Mr '48 200w

Reviewed by D. M. Cox
Am J Soc 54:90 Jl '48 750w

Am Soc R 13:120 F '48 160w

Booklist 44:195 F 1 '48

Reviewed by C. C. Cerveny
J Home Econ 40:329 Je '48 170w

Social Studies 39:48 Ja '48 30w

"While this is a book about practical problems, it is even more a down-to-earth course in the use of modern public relations tools in the health and welfare services. Written for professional workers, administrators, and volunteers 'who, day by day, must answer questions, speak to audiences, or write letters or bulletins,' the book should also serve students as an illuminating introduction to the field of public relations." W. A. Platt
+ Survey 84:223 Je '48 470w

BAKER, HERSCHEL CLAY. Dignity of man; studies in the persistence of an idea. 365p $5 Harvard univ. press

128 Man 47-30865

"Investigates the humanity or dignity of man as shown in specific philosophies and theologies from the classical through the renaissance periods since basically, throughout this long time, man was judged to be a rational creature capable of rational knowledge of the highest truth which clearly made him superior to all lower orders of life. Does not attempt to be exhaustive. Bibliography." Booklist

---

Booklist 44:82 N 1 '47

Manchester Guardian p3 S 28 '48 300w

BAKER, MRS NINA (BROWN). Robert Bruce: king of Scots. 247p $2.75 Vanguard

B or 92 Robert I, king of Scotland—Juvenile literature 48-8529

A biography of Robert Bruce, king of Scotland, for teen-age readers. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:90 N 1 '48

Kirkus 16:402 Ag 15 '48 70w

"Well written; twenty-five authorities were consulted. Recommended for ages 12 and up." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 73:1199 S 1 '48 80w

"This is good reading for any teen ager." M. C. Scoggin
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 17 '48 250w

"Out of the legends, the apocryphal stories, the conflicting viewpoints of chroniclers whose estimates differed according to their sympathies, Mrs. Baker, one of our most accomplished biographers for young people, has welded a vivid, integrated, convincing life of the Scots liberator." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p29 S 19 '48 190w

"There couldn't be a better story for boys of all ages than that of Robert Bruce. The imagination of chroniclers, ballad writers, and literary historians of the Scottish folk, and the Scottish folklorists have worked it up into a fine heroic myth of the kind that calls to the blood like a trumpet and can still 'hold children from play and old men from the chimney corners.' The outlines of it are set forth here in a clear, skilful, matter-of-fact narrative which does not quite destroy the glamor of the old tale by the cheerful, conscientious modernity of its treatment." Garrett Mattingly
+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 D 11 '48 230w

BAKER, RICHARD TERRILL. Darkness of the sun; the story of Christianity in the Japanese empire. 254p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

275.2 Church and state in Japan. Missions—Japan 47-6831

"The author is a young man who has spent the last few years in the several countries of the Far East, devoting himself to religious journalism and giving close and sympathetic attention to the struggles of the Christian forces in Japan, Korea, China, and the Philippine Islands against the currents that threatened their destruction. The larger part of the volume is devoted to Japan as the storm centre in the Far East, but attention is given also to areas that were occupied by Japanese forces. First of all it is made clear that in Japan Christianity became a secondary faith to Shinto which drove the Japanese war machine, sanctifying aggression and atrocities. His purpose is to indicate what happened to Christianity in Japan and its occupied areas in the years when warfare cut off the Japanese Christians from their fellow Christians in other lands." (Crozer Q) Index.

"Here is a book which the American church has been looking for and in which there is no disappointment. Richard Baker is a good journalist; at the same time he is a Christian. . . Every American, and particularly every Christian, should read the account which this book gives of the B-29 bombings throughout Japan and of their effect upon the Japanese people. Here is significant material supplementing John Hersey's story of Hiroshima." T. T. Brumbaugh
+ Christian Century 64:1488 D 3 '47 1050w

"Here is a book of tremendous value, to historians in particular, but to all who are interested in religious movements, if the reports given the author are authentic, as surely they are." J. H. Franklin
+ Crozer Q 25:160 Ap '48 1600w

"This book is to be recommended not only to those interested in missions, or in the problem of church and state, but also to the general reader." W. T. Thomas
+ J Religion 28:228 Jl '48 500w

BAKKE, EDWARD WIGHT, and KERR, CLARK, eds. Unions, management, and the public. 946p $5 Harcourt

331.88 Trade unions—U.S. Industrial relations 48-7364

"The authors have brought together a collection of writings old and new on the subject of labor relations and policies. There are 171 listings in the index of authors and nearly 300 separate quotations. The authors range from Karl Marx to the National Association of Manufacturers; from Joseph Hopkinson, describing the Philadelphia Cordwainers in 1860 as a criminal combination, to Golden and Ruttenberg on the union shop as democratic and necessary. . . The titles of the five main sections [are]: 'Development of Unions'; 'Response of Management'; 'Collective Bargaining'; 'Terms of the Agreement'; and 'The Interest of the Community.'" Ann Am Acad

---

"In using this volume the teacher of collective bargaining will do well to supplement it with more descriptive material on union agreement provisions, case studies and arbitration awards. But this comment is meant not so much as a criticism of an excellent volume as a reminder that no single text will relieve the professor of some initiative and discretion and much hard work—a reminder that should be reassuring in these days of increasing technological threats to academic security." J. T. McKelvey
+ Am Econ R 38:972 D '48 1000w

"The volume should prove to be a highly successful achievement of the aim of the editors to provide the stimulus and information essential for the intelligent discussion of labor problems." Witt Bowden
+ Ann Am Acad 260:229 N '48 360w

BALCH, GLENN. Wild horse; il. by Pers Crowell. 338p $2.50 Crowell

Horses—Legends and stories 48-6620

Story of southwestern Idaho for grades six to nine. Ben and his sister Dixie capture a beautiful wild black stallion and save him from the horserunners who want to use him in rodeos.

Booklist 44:339 Je 1 '48

"Dependable Western, for the young teens."
+ Kirkus 16:51 F 1 '48 100w

"Recommended for limited purchase to meet your demands." M. D. Read
Library J 73:486 Mr 15 '48 70w

"This story of wild horses in the Idaho ranch country is one of the best Westerns that this reviewer has ever read." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 31:28 Jl 10 '48 290w

BALDERSTON, JOHN LLOYD, and BOLITHO, SYBIL. A goddess to a god. 213p $3 Macmillan

Cleopatra, queen of Egypt—Fiction. Caesar, Caius Julius—Fiction 48-9180

Part fiction, part history, this group of letters purports to have been exchanged by Julius Caesar and Cleopatra, during the time between Caesar's occupation of Egypt and his death.

"The language is strained and archaic; the value will be chiefly academic."
Kirkus 16:412 Ag 15 '48 120w

"Not likely to have a wide popular appeal, the work may have lasting value as a skillful piece of historical reconstruction." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 73:1510 O 15 '48 130w

"This book is no tedious archeological joke; it does not belittle; it does not vulgarize; its civilized tone is never sentimental or emphatic. It humanizes Cleopatra and Caesar but leaves them in their stature. Witty, passionate, and poetic, the letters are delightful to read but the authors are constantly alert to the dominant quality in this love affair which made it so great and which can be indicated by saying simply that it was not Tristan Cleopatra met, but Caesar." Gouverneur Paulding
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 14 '48 700w

"The imaginary historic letter is a daring form, requiring the authors to create a language, a tempo, an attitude, a complex and consistency of personality that will convince the reader if not of historical accuracy, then of literary authenticity. It is also a commodious form, admitting the introduction of events and of trivia, of opinion, reminiscence, conjecture, fact and fancy. Both in meeting the demands of the form and in making the most of it, Mr. Balderston and Miss Bolitho are eminently and excitingly successful." A. S. Morris
+ N Y Times p11 N 14 '48 1000w

"This picture of the Temptress of the Nile may be overly romantic, but the authors supplement it with some concise historical data, giving an informative, if brief, view of the period."
+ — New Yorker 24:127 N 6 '48 110w

"Intelligently conceived, beautifully written and plausibly worked out. Exacting scholarship has gone into its preparation." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 2 '48 850w

"The story is somewhat static, most of its motion is in emotion. Yet the emotion itself is real enough, changeable enough, carries with it enough of analysis of the personalities involved to make the book considerably rewarding. If it throws no new light on history, it at least throws a certain amount of light on people." Fletcher Pratt
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:32 N 6 '48 380w

BALDWIN, ERNEST JOY. Dynamic aspects of biochemistry. 456p $4 Macmillan

574.19 Biological chemistry 47-12348

"This compact introduction to biochemistry was written for use in a course at Cambridge University that is offered to students who are not planning to enter medicine. Accordingly, the subject is treated from the chemical rather than the physiological viewpoint. Typical chapters deal with the behavior and properties of enzymes, the nature of the catalytic process, methods employed in the investigation of intermediary metabolism, metabolism of proteins, and amino-acids, metabolism of carbohydrates, and metabolism of fats. Some knowledge of organic chemistry is necessary to understand the text." N Y New Tech Bks

"Here is a book which should be greeted with enthusiasm by student and teacher alike. Dr. Baldwin has written a logical and clear account of the intricate processes that are known today to be involved in the metabolism of proteins, carbohydrates, and fats... The book is well bound and printed and is exceptionally free of errors of commission or omission. The chief complaint to be leveled is that there are no specific references given to permit one to trace the data supporting some of the statements given." E. G. Ball
+ Chem & Eng N 26:712 Mr 8 '48 450w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:69 O '47

BALDWIN, HANSON WEIGHTMAN. Price of power. 361p $3.75 Harper

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—Defenses. World politics 48-6182

The book is the outgrowth of eighteen discussion meetings held by a group from the Council on Foreign Relations. The author, who is military editor of the New York Times, was chairman of the group. They studied the power position of the United States in the postwar era, with an eye to future wars or peace, but the opinions and conclusions of this book are largely those of Mr. Baldwin. He concludes "The nation, if it is to remain strong, must be integrated in a common purpose and devoted to a common ideal. Leaders of high heart and firm aim—servants of the people, not their masters—are essential to our future security in the dangerous tomorrow... There is no alternative to the middle way." (p.328) Bibliography. Index.

"The Price of Power is no book to be looked at in the few paragraphs of a review. No review has done or can do justice to the grim lesson which is its purpose, to the insights which it conveys, or, still less, to the skill with which the author has handled the complex elements of our horribly difficult task. Mr. Baldwin and the Council on Foreign Relations have performed a public service in preparing this book; to read it is a public duty." J. T. Watkins
+ Am Pol Sci R 42:1229 D '48 700w
Booklist 44:306 My 15 '48

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun Ap 4 '48 950w

" 'The Price of Power' is so informative that no brief review can do it justice. It is a book that should be read widely and carefully. The chapter on biological warfare alone gives an idea of the forces of destruction that could be let loose in the world." Roland Sawyer
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 31 '48 950w
Foreign Affairs 26:741 Jl '48 110w

"The book has much that will arouse those who demand isolation. It is not easy reading but it should be read."
Kirkus 16:74 F 1 '48 220w

"This is an encyclopedic volume. As a result it is not always well proportioned. It sometimes gives one a better view of the trees than of the forest. It is repetitious and occasionally hackneyed. It is more subject to debate on matters of morale, economics, science, politics and finance than it is on the military factors with which Mr. Baldwin is so well conversant and in which he is so competent. But, above all, this book well exemplifies Mr. Baldwin's outstanding virtues of courage, intellectual toughness and honesty. Mr. Baldwin is sometimes our most severe critic; as such, he is a public servant." E. M. Earle

BALDWIN, H. W.—Continued
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 30 '48 1700w

"Had the author of this book been clairvoyant, his volume could not have been more timely. And that is good luck for the country, which has needed a thorough military estimate such as the one provided in this study. . . It is to be doubted whether a uniformed expert accustomed to seeing the world's military circumstances whole would agree, point by point, with what Mr. Baldwin says. But both civilian and military citizens can profit from his breadth of view and his unwillingness—now a most vital quality—to take anything for granted." J. I. Greene
+ N Y Times p1 Ap 4 '48 2000w

"Mr. Baldwin's is a book of the hour which is of interest to students of political science because of its scope, the seriousness of the study that lies behind it, and the quality of the mind that has produced it." K. R. Greenfield
+ Pol Sci Q 63:595 D '48 1150w

"Against the frequently absurd and even dangerous hypotheses of self-appointed military experts, Mr. Baldwin's sober and thoughtful analysis of global warfare comes as a much needed antidote. . . If ever there was need for clear thinking about war and peace, it is now. . . There is room for argument in some of Mr. Baldwin's assumptions and conclusions. There is little possible debate on the accuracy and authenticity of his facts." Donald Armstrong
+ Sat R of Lit 31:17 Ap 3 '48 1150w

BALET, JAN B. Amos and the moon; story and pictures. [26p] $2.50 Oxford 48-9819

Amos was a small boy who saw the moon in his mirror one night and hoped it was his. The next morning when he got up the moon was gone. In this picture-story book for the very young, Amos' search for the moon is described in prose and picture.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun D 11 '48 110w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
+ Christian Scieince Monitor p12 D 14 '48 150w

"This delightful idea is set forth in wonderful pictures of each man and his shop, with priceless details to hold the eyes of young and old alike, and a style all Mr. Balet's own, refreshing in exactness, humor and beautiful variety of color. Extraordinarily well printed, too." L. S. B.
+ Commonweal 49:148 N 19 '48 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:33 Ja '49 50w

"There's a quaint Victorian quality that children like in this book with its pictures in full color, and the endless details that children enjoy in long periods of observation."
+ Kirkus 16:598 N 15 '48 130w

Reviewed by J. E. Lynch
Library J 74:203 F 1 '49 80w

"The child or adult who turns the pages of Mr. Balet's first picture book will find himself walking down the most fascinating street of shops that was ever created in this story of a small boy's quest for the moon." H. A. Martin
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 28 '48 340w

"Mr. Balet has told a fantasy for children 4 to 7 who like their make-believe blended with realism. . . The paintings done in soft tones have an old-world atmosphere that adds charm to the story." Lois Palmer
+ N Y Times p28 Ja 30 '49 140w

"Amos looks like a boy who might live somewhere in Europe and the shops might well be in Paris or Brussels or Prague or Vienna. They are fascinating, inside and out. The book is full of color—rich, enticing color. It is original—and different. It is an unusual and rewarding picture book."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:37 D 11 '48 200w

BALLANTYNE, DAVID WATT. The Cunninghams. 295p $3 Vanguard
48-9412

Novel of New Zealand. It pictures the life and death of Gilbert Cunningham, a veteran of World war I, who dies of tuberculosis. A little over a year is covered in this story of the Cunninghams, their children, and their everyday life.

"Almost in an unknown tongue . . . a regional argot that may prove a block for U.S. readers, but for followers of the serious novel the world round this has substantial values."
Kirkus 16:488 S 15 '48 160w

"One needs a whole new vocabulary to understand the New Zealand slang, but the book is interesting in spite of this handicap. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 73:1510 O 15 '48 100w

"The New Zealand background of the novel gives the story a faintly exotic quality. But in reality it is a story that appears almost daily in our morning newspapers. Mr. Ballantyne writes in a flat, detached style, but his sympathy can be felt between the lines."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 D 5 '48 250w

"This is the best novel out of New Zealand I have seen since John Mulgan's 'Man Alone' was published in 1939. Better still, it is a first-rate performance in its own right and well able to do battle for public attention on its individual merits. To be sure it is a quiet book, and its excellences are not those of modern fiction. But if anything I say here persuades you to read it, I do not think you will reproach me for having wasted your time." C. H. Grattan
+ N Y Times p6 N 21 '48 800w

"Mr. Ballantyne writes smoothly and at times sensitively, but he too often favors the sort of side-of-the-mouth prose that James T. Farrell explored to its limits some while ago."
New Yorker 24:141 N 27 '48 150w

" 'The Cunninghams' is a first-rate novel by a promising author." P. A. S.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 9 '49 350w

BALLARD, WILLIS TODHUNTER. Dealing out death. 190p $2 McKay 48-602

Detective story.

"A little corpse-heavy at the end. But its great advantage over most of the tough crop is that Ballard appears to have gone to the trouble of plotting it instead of extemporizing from gunshot to gunshot. The plot may be an odd coil but it's tidy." James Sandoe
+ — Chicago Sun Ja 23 '48 230w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 1 '48 50w

"The ending of the story is satisfactory enough in so far as catching the murderer is concerned. How the rest of the mess is straightened out is anybody's guess."
N Y Times p30 Ja 25 '48 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 29 '48 40w
Sat R of Lit 31:30 Ja 31 '48 50w

BALLINGER, WILLIAM S. Body in the bed. 242p $2.50 Harper 48-7798

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun Ag 20 '48 230w

"Strenuous but satisfactory."
+ Kirkus 16:293 Je 15 '48 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ag 29 '48 100w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 Ag 15 '48 180w

"The brethren who like their crimes to be rough, tough and nasty will look upon this item as the summer season's tastiest dish." E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 15 '48 70w

"Barr carries on pretty much like many other swift-shooting shamuses and solution has rather familiar ring."
Sat R of Lit 31:28 Jl 31 '48 40w

Wis Lib Bul 44:166 O '48

BALLOWE, HEWITT LEONARD. Creole folk tales; stories of the Louisiana marsh country [il. by Joseph V. Rigsby]. 258p $3 La. state univ. press

Folklore—Louisiana 48-8088

A volume of folk tales from the Delta country in Louisiana, collected by a physician who has practiced there for thirty-five years.

Booklist 45:88 N 1 '48

Reviewed by H. T. Kane
Chicago Sun p8X S 26 '48 230w

"A book for folklore research as well as for readers of folklore literature."
+ Kirkus 16:419 Ag 15 '48 110w

"Although voodoo, zombies, etc., are touched on, the touch is never grisly or macabre. All in all an honest, charming book, valuable for the addition of new material to U. S. folklore." E. L. Lewis
+ Library J 73:1268 S 15 '48 80w

"The value of his work as a contribution to the preservation of American folklore can safely be left to the professional scholars for final determination. As entertaining reading, if taken a little at a time, his sorciers more than once succeed in throwing their spell."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 N 28 '48 200w

"While the stories themselves are often somewhat tedious, the traditions and character of the Creoles are presented in an understanding, authentic fashion. These are Dr. Ballowe's own people. He has spent most of his life in their midst and through the years has learned to know them as they are." N. K. B.
+ — N Y Times p28 O 24 '48 350w

+ Springf'd Republican p7B O 3 '48 260w

BALLOWE, HEWITT LEONARD. Lawd sayin' the same; Negro folk tales of the Creole country; introd. by Donald Joseph [il. by Joseph V. Rigsby]. 254p $2.75 La. state univ. press

Folklore, Negro 47-11368

"These twenty-four anecdotal tales by Dr. Hewitt Ballowe, Louisiana physician, planter, naturalist, author, form something of a folk history of the Negro sugar-plantation worker. They touch on the customs and beliefs of that group from Africa and ante-bellum days to the present. Suggested, too, is something of the history of the great sugar industry and the society based on it, which these Negroes helped to build." N Y Times

"Told in the dialect, full of philosophy and humor."
+ Current Hist 14:38 Ja '48 50w

"The stories are full of authentic details of daily life and speech, the colloquialisms extending even to the descriptive, non-spoken passages. The dialogue itself, which is considerable, is convincing, and so phonetically rendered that non-Southern readers may find themselves floundering. But speech is a part of the life Dr. Ballowe is presenting, and he has put it down as it is. The result is a sort of 'Uncle Remus' for grown-ups." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p18 D 7 '47 350w

BALOGH, T. A. Studies in financial organization. (Nat. inst. of economic and social research. Economic and social studies) 319p $4.50 Macmillan (for Cambridge univ. press)

332.1 Banks and banking—Great Britain. Money—Great Britain [48-1150]

"This book is the first product of a projected study of European monetary and banking systems and capital markets undertaken by the National Institute of Economic and Social Research before the Second World War. . . The book is divided into three parts, the first devoted to the British clearing banks, the second to the London money and discount market and the third to other banking and financial firms. The two earlier sections provide a careful description of the operations of the British financial system with detailed analysis of relevant statistical information. . . The last of the three sections combines an interesting but abbreviated account of a considerable number of financial institutions with a discussion of financial problems and developments, both national and international, between the wars." (Am Econ R) Index.

"One of the most noteworthy features of the book is the author's readiness to express forthright judgments on controversial questions, even when these judgments are of a highly critical nature. Methods of recruiting and training banking personnel are pointedly challenged. . . This attitude of caustic appraisal appears all the more remarkable when it is recalled that the National Institute of Economic and Social Research is the English counterpart of the National Bureau of Economic Research. To whatever hazards it may expose the author and the Institute, it must be said that from the standpoint of the reader it adds materially to the interest of the book." C. R. Whittlesey
+ Am Econ R 38:683 S '48 1050w

"Not the least valuable part of this illuminating, if depressing, work consists of an appendix on the Floating Debt by F. W. Paish and another on the London gold and silver market by Paul Bareau." T. S. A.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 12 '48 210w

"Though much has been written about the City, there is a dearth of recent critical studies of the City's financial institutions from the point of view of their success or failure in discharging their ultimate economic functions. . . Mr. Balogh has done something to make good this deficiency. His book is primarily a factual study of the nature and recent development of this country's principal financial institutions and markets such as the clearing banks, the discount houses and acceptance houses, the money market, and the bullion market. From this point of view it will prove a valuable work for general reference and study."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p694 D 11 '48 330w

BANAY, RALPH STEVEN. Youth in despair. 239p $3 Coward-McCann

364.36 Juvenile delinquency 48-5423

Study of the problem of juvenile delinquency by a psychiatrist, who is now director of research on "social deviations" at Columbia university. He discusses the facts of juvenile "deviations," their causes, and their treatment. Contains case histories. Bibliography. Index.

"This is a book that deserves thoughtful study since it traverses the entire field without being verbose or arbitrary." N. K. Teeters
+ Am J Soc 54:257 N '48 410w

"Dr. Ralph S. Banay gives a popular study of juvenile delinquency, from causation to prevention. . . In this modest but important venture he succeeds very well, and presents a thoroughly adequate summary of the relevant information in this field." F. E. Merrill
+ Am Soc R 13:786 D '48 100w

BANAY, R. S.—Continued
Booklist 44:262 Ap 1 '48
Christian Century 65:575 Je 9 '48 150w
Reviewed by Arnold Gesell
N Y Times p22 Je 13 '48 450w
Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 68:307 O 30 '48 450w

"The book is easily readable, being written in a journalistic style, as the title itself would suggest. . . In spite of the promise of a solution to one of society's most vital problems, one has no right to expect it and does not get it, except for the suggestion to pass a state law to provide for an institute to study crime which would include psychiatric orientation." Laurette Bender
+ — Survey 84:253 Ag '48 450w

BAND, CLAIRE (MRS WILLIAM BAND), and BAND, WILLIAM. Two years with the Chinese communists [Eng title: Dragon fangs]. 347p il maps $4.50 Yale univ. press

951.042 China—History. Communism—China. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English 48-5830

The authors were caught in China, where Mr Band taught physics at Yenching university, when war between the United States and Japan broke out. The Bands escaped just ahead of the Japanese and found refuge among the Chinese communists. This is the story of their experiences. Index.

Reviewed by C. A. Buss
Ann Am Acad 258:138 Jl '48 550w
Booklist 44:280 Ap 15 '48

"This day by day account is unorganized, carelessly written, dull and trivial. Granting that historical accuracy is admirable, it need not make a book completely colorless. This long trek from Peiping to Chungking is the one thousands of students made in an intense thrilling struggle for survival. Yet the authors have failed to make us see the urgency and the significance of their journey." D. G. Bennett
— Cath World 167:283 Je '48 450w
Reviewed by Keith Wheeler
Chicago Sun Mr 30 '48 490w

"He found them neither irresponsible bandits nor simple peasants seeking freedom from Chinese overlords, but genuine Moscow reds. He could have respect for them and make friends with them without accepting their ideology. They treated him well because he could teach them things they needed to know. One gets a clear picture of a communist movement that cannot be brushed off."
Christian Century 65:298 Mr 24 '48 90w
Reviewed by C. L. Willard
Churchman 162:15 D 15 '48 240w
Reviewed by J. O. Frederick
Commonweal 48:290 Jl 2 '48 300w
Current Hist 14:295 My '48 60w
Reviewed by J. K. Fairbank
Nation 166:581 My 22 '48 750w

"Although the title refers only to two years with the Chinese Communists, the closing chapters of this quiet, absorbing book record equally important impressions based on a year in Kuomintang, China. For American readers, the value of the book is increased by the fact that the authors are English. Their emotional and personal responses being somewhat different from those of Americans, the effect is to increase the impression of reasonableness and dispassionateness in their account of things which, in America, can hardly be discussed without a supercharge of emotion." Owen Lattimore
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 11 '48 1150w

"Their account of life among the Communists is intimate, factual, and unemotional."
+ New Yorker 24:126 Mr 13 '48 160w
Reviewed by Tseng Chao-Lun
Pacific Affairs 21:302 S '48 330w

"They walked 1000 miles across Communist China, and compared words and accomplishments in Yenan and in Chungking. Their conclusions are fuzzy in spots, open to argument and interesting. Their book is unevenly written but it is an important document." Eleanor Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 11 '48 650w
Reviewed by P. M. A. Linebarger
Yale R n s 38:172 autumn '48 490w

BANGS, JANET NORRIS. Cornstalk fiddle. 142p $2.50 Decker press

811

"Those persons who like poetry that is close to life have noted the poems of this author which have been appearing in The Christian Century for nearly twenty years. . . More than a hundred of Mrs. Bangs' poems are included, on many themes and in a variety of measures." Christian Century

"A reflective, quiet book for a year of stress."
+ Chicago Sun p8X Ap 25 '48 70w

"[The poems] say something and they say it well."
+ Christian Century 64:1555 D 17 '47 60w

BANNON, JOHN FRANCIS, and DUNNE, PETER MASTEN. Latin America; an historical survey. 944p maps $6.50 Bruce pub.

980 Latin America—History 48-12057

"A study of Latin America from the days of the early discoverers, with special interpretations of events and policies from the angle of the Catholic Church, which played an important part." Current Hist

"The authors are to be commended for having included a fuller account of the church than is generally encountered in a textbook. . . The least satisfying chapters are those dealing with international affairs. The discussion of the Monroe Doctrine could be improved by distinguishing more sharply between the Holy Alliance of Tsar Alexander I and the system adopted after the defeat of Napoleon to preserve order and stability in Europe. . . Although the work is marred by a few typographical errors and differences in interpretation will arise, the careful reader will find that Father Bannon and Father Dunne have included in this substantial volume most of the essential materials for a survey course in Latin-American history. The logical organization and clear prose style, the abundant maps, chronological tables, and reading lists will be helpful to teacher and pupil alike." W. D. Beatty
+ — Am Hist R 53:913 Jl '48 320w

"Since the book is intended for college classrooms, it does not pass as a work of creative scholarship. An attempt has been made, however, to 'bring the best research into student focus.' . . There are signs of superficiality. Several books are suggested for reading that can hardly have been studied by the authors. In any new and more reasonably priced edition of the text mistakes in spelling should be corrected. . . The real defect of the book, however, is its attitude toward contemporaneous religion, the department wherein readers and students have a right to find the most thorough and most balanced evaluations." J. F. Thorning
Cath World 166:472 F '48 650w

"The size of the book (944 pages including bibliographies and index) may be something of deterrent to the average reader; but this volume definitely should be on the desk of everyone seriously interested in a fair and comprehensive story of Latin America and the specific problems of its various republics." J. A. Magner
+ Commonweal 47:604 Mr 26 '48 200w
Current Hist 14:104 F '48 40w

BANNON, LAURA MAY. Watchdog; pictures by [the author]. [48p] $2.50 Whitman, A. 48-6826

Story describing how Alberto obtains a watchdog for his family during the Mexican day of freedom celebration. For grades 2-4.

Booklist 44:339 Je 1 '48

"A nice family, a charming village, a small but intense story all blend as perfectly as the colors in Laura Bannon's fine pictures." Martha King
+ Chicago Sun My 22 '48 130w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 27 '48 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '48

"This is another enjoyable story of how much a pet dog means to a little boy. The interest and the illustrations are designed for the picture book age." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:273 Jl '48 80w

Kirkus 16:235 My 15 '48 90w

"Recommended." E. S. Anttonen
+ Library J 73:1197 S 1 '48 80w

"A very attractive book for 7 to 9 year olds." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p31 Je 6 '48 140w

Springf'd Republican p10A Jl 18 '48 60w

Wis Lib Bul 44:134 Je '48

BARBASH, JACK. Labor unions in action; a study of the mainsprings of unionism. 270p $3.50 Harper

331.88 Trade unions 48-5424

"Why labor unions work as they do, and how they function in day-by-day operation is the substance of this book. Here is an analysis of the driving forces that have motivated unionism during the critical period of the past fifteen years, through the passage of the Taft-Hartley Act." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The volume is written frankly and avowedly from the point of view of the union spokesman." Joel Seidman
+ Ann Am Acad 257:254 My '48 400w

Booklist 44:243 Mr 15 '48

Kirkus 15:663 D 1 '47 110w

"Adequately fills an existing gap in the literature of labor unionism. Careful, detailed, objective study. . . Essential in most collections, for now and considerably later." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:37 Ja 1 '48 80w

"While it is impossible within the brief scope of this work . . . to do more than cover the highlights of the past, present, and future of collective bargaining relationships in our democracy, it is this reviewer's opinion that the book is 'must' reading for all who are interested in the topics discussed." A. A. Desser
+ Management R 37:378 Jl '48 320w

Reviewed by A. T. Jacobs
N Y Times p25 Je 6 '48 470w

Reviewed by Louis Burgess
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 14 '48 170w

"This volume may be described as a high-level-primer. . . The use of the word 'primer' in describing this book does not mean that it is written on a juvenile level. The secondary school student will find it difficult, but it should prove invaluable for the teacher of social studies, for advanced college students, and for the intelligent general reader." Harold Faulkner
+ Social Educ 12:283 O '48 450w

"'Labor Unions in Action' is an attempt to give a dynamic explanation of trade unionism in America. It succeeds better than the average textbook, but is itself not usable as such. It should, however, provide many teachers with a book which will be valuable and popular with students as supplementary reading." H. R. Northrup
+ — Survey G 37:376 Ag '48 290w

Wis Lib Bul 44:182 N '48

BARBOUR, HARRIOT BUXTON. Sandwich, the town that glass built; il. with drawings by Robert Hallock and with photographs. 318p $5 Houghton

974.49 Sandwich, Massachusetts. Glass manufacture and trade 48-7492

The history of a town: Sandwich, on Cape Cod, and of an industry: glass making, which made the town famous. It begins in 1824 and ends about 1895. Illustrated with photographs of some typical pieces of Sandwich glass. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:10 S 1 '48

"Miss Barbour has written, with a pleasant tartness, a book about an industry and a community."
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 1 '48 210w

Kirkus 16:226 My 1 '48 150w

"Recommended for all libraries." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 73:876 Je 1 '48 130w

"For those magpie people who collect glass and scratch around the factory-middens of the sleepy Cape Cod town which glass made famous, Miss Barbour has written the authentic history. . . It is different in that Miss Barbour has written livable history. Most town records are fairly dreary, factual affairs. Only once in a blue moon comes a history in which research is so skillfully translated into flesh and blood, human impulses and strivings, that the reader lives in the town, lives with its people." Richardson Wright
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Jl 11 '48 800w

"The story has the verity of history and the flow of easy narrative. It takes a place in the library of good books about our formative century." W. G. D.
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 18 '48 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Jl 18 '48 250w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter
Springf'd Republican p15A Jl 25 '48 750w

Wis Lib Bul 44:147 S '48

"Miss Barbour's detailed record of Sandwich celebrates more recent events and has the advantage of more conclusive evidence, but emphasizes also the richness of this historical background. Through the tale of one industry and one family and one town, it illumines a lively corner of the republic a century ago." S. T. Williams
+ Yale R n s 38:367 winter '49 1000w

BARBOUR, HARRIOT BUXTON, and FREEMAN, WARREN SAMUEL. Children's record book [an authoritative guide to the best recorded music for children from 6 months to 16 years]. 186p $3.50 Oliver Durrell, inc, 527 Lexington av, N.Y. 17

789.9 Phonograph records 48-5138

"Roughly classified according to age and interest and arranged in order of preference when there is a possible choice. Gives juvenile biographies of some of the great composers and simple descriptions of most of the music forms, and indicates, by symbols, symphonies for first purchase and titles, listed under other headings, which may be used with rhythm bands. Each section offers suggestions for helping the child to enjoy and appreciate the records." (Booklist) Suggested reading. Index.

Booklist 44:213 F 15 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '48

"On the whole the record lists are compiled with intelligence and good taste, and the suggestions on program building, music by the family, and other uses of records will lead many into new paths of enjoyment." Virginia Cunningham
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 5:248 Mr '48 600w

"If a child is not a record collector, this book is likely to make him one: if he is one already, it is practically certain to improve his collection." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 F 1 '48 250w

BARCK, OSCAR THEODORE, and BLAKE, NELSON MANFRED. Since 1900; a history of the United States in our times. 863p il maps $6.50; college ed $4.75 Macmillan

973.91 U.S.—History—20th century 48-206

History of the United States in the twentieth century, which devotes about fifty pages to the Truman administration. Bibliography. Index.

"This interestingly written and voluminous book contains a vast amount of valuable information. But it fails to contain much grasp or exposition of the basic realities of peace or war to serve as a guide for constructive thinking in the future." H. E. Barnes
+ — Ann Am Acad 258:151 Jl '48 850w

"It is not easy reading. This is not a defect but is the result of a merit—the preponderance of facts over opinions. . . At present, this is probably the best general reference book on the last half-century of United States history." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 65:275 Mr 3 '48 280w

"There is adequate attention to social and intellectual changes, to customs and manners, to problems of local or of brief interest. Yet the person who comes to this volume in an attempt to trace the major forces that have dominated the American scene during these decades will find unusual satisfaction. The authors have succeeded admirably in establishing, and making understandable, those two lines of development that they consider major —'the steady expansion of the functions of government to deal with the complex problems of a new age and the increasing involvement of the United States in global politics.' " R. A. Brown
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Je 19 '48 800w

Current Hist 14:294 My '48 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 22 '48 320w

Sat R of Lit 31:13 S 4 '48 180w

School & Society 67:62 Ja 24 '48 10w

BARJANSKY, CATHERINE (MRS ALEXANDRE BARJANSKY), and DENNISTON, ELINORE. Portraits with backgrounds. 223p $3.75 Macmillan

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-12307

The author grew up in Czarist Russia, the daughter of a family of great wealth. She married a Russian cellist and lived in Europe between the two wars. In this book of reminiscences she records her experiences as a sculptress, and her friendships or casual associations with such people as the Queen of Naples, Frederick Delius, Ernest Bloch, Colette, Einstein, and many others.

Booklist 44:150 D 15 '47

"In preciously personal and lacy lines, she tells of that portion of her life from the early 20's until today, the company of the illustrious which included Freud, Einstein, Sinclair Lewis, Dorothy Thompson, the Queen of Naples, Duse. Her insight is her own, cultivated in her own fragrant hothouse world. Her company in wax become delicate miniatures, life seen through gold and ornamental opera glasses."
Kirkus 15:455 Ag 15 '47 90w

"No distinction: possibly a book for collective biography shelves."
Library J 72:1541 N 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Edgar Brooke
N Y Times p18 Ap 11 '48 500w

BARKE, JAMES. Song in the green thorn tree; a novel of the life and loves of Robert Burns. 456p $3.50 Macmillan

Burns, Robert—Fiction 48-2552

The second in a series of four novels based on the life of Robert Burns. In this the story is of the two years on the Mossgiel farm. The struggle to make a living is told, and Burns' frequent troubles with the church. The book ends with the death of Highland Mary. For the first volume in the series, The Wind That Shakes the Barley, see Book Review Digest 1947.

Booklist 44:352 Je 15 '48

"Good popular reading as well as a gold mine for honest romantics, for lovers of Burns."
+ Kirkus 16:152 Mr 15 '48 220w

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 8 '48 380w

"Mr. Barke makes his reader absolutely believe in and absolutely succumb to the magic that Burns exerted on his contemporaries as both poet and man. . . Mr. Barke paints in his background with tireless deliberation and unobtrusive scholarship. . . This solid achievement recognized, it is no strain at all to forgive the novelist his chronic wordiness, his passages of fantastically lush writing . . . his intermittent resort to a form of patter as foreign to the age of Burns as Chinese . . . and even his persistent application of a hero-worshiper's whitewash to Burns' conduct where it most flouted all moral responsibility." Wilson Follett
+ — N Y Times p5 Jl 4 '48 750w

"The Burns story is completely absorbing in itself and along with it Mr. Barke has set down a number of poems, making them a working part of the narrative." Edith James
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 23 '48 800w

"Put this one down merely as honest writing and mildly entertaining reading." R. E. Spiller
Sat R of Lit 31:27 Jl 24 '48 450w

Wis Lib Bul 44:149 S '48

BARKER, A. L. Innocents; variations on a theme. 204p $2.50 Scribner

48-5360

Eight short stories, each dealing with a crisis in a human life. In most of the stories the central characters are children, and in her exploration of their reactions the author shows that children are not always the sweet innocents they seem.

"It's a long time since a new writer has bowed in with a collection of short stories of such superb quality as these. Miss Barker, an English girl who has won the British Atlantic Award and the first Somerset Maugham Award, has the gifts of a considerable artist: highly individual sensitivity, precision and control, a refreshing sense of structure, and a wonderful ability to fuse character and incident."
+ Atlantic 181:121 My '48 120w

Booklist 44:248 Mr 15 '48

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 10 '48 170w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Commonweal 48:215 Je 11 '48 120w

Kirkus 16:58 F 1 '48 210w

"Writing in a terse, unemotional style the author is a master of understatement, and the significance of what she has to tell will shock readers. Subtle, imaginative work deserving high praise. A must for all libraries." E. H. Kennedy
+ Library J 73:472 Mr 15 '48 110w

"Miss Barker is a discovery, and it is surprising to learn that though she has written a good deal this is a first published book. She has above all an uncanny insight into the minds of children." Charles Marriott
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 7 '47 180w

Reviewed by Walter Allen
New Statesman & Nation 34:114 Ag 9 '47 300w

"Miss Barker deserves every attention as one of the most distinguished English talents to be published here in many years." Pearl Kazin
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 14 '48 500w

"Nowhere in this volume does Miss Barker seem to deal with experience that has hit her hard emotionally and imaginatively since she was, say, 15. When she enlarges her rather narrow thematism to include such experience, she will possess the gifts of language, sensibility and fineness of mind to deal with it exquisitely." R. G. Davis

N Y Times p7 Mr 28 '48 600w

New Yorker 24:115 Mr 20 '48 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 23 '48 700w

"It is to be supposed that this young writer would get far more attention if a novel had marked her emergence, rather than a group of short stories. It is evidence of her scrupulousness that she has scrapped the novel she wrote. But one cannot help looking forward to a work by her in a larger form, simply because she has such obvious, controlled gifts for fine achievement. This first book should warrant casting an alert eye in her direction from now on." Hollis Alpert

Sat R of Lit 31:15 Mr 13 '48 650w

Reviewed by Olivia Manning

Spec 179:186 Ag 8 '47 180w

Time 51:105 Mr 22 '48 440w

"Miss Barker is a new short-story writer with a real and specific gift for a much abused form. Here are no anecdotes, no slices of life, no vague sketches, no cosmic parables, but a series of tales in which character and incident are fused into a complete experience."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p377 Jl 26 '47 500w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 37:768 summer '48 90w

BARKER, SIR ERNEST, ed. Character of England. 595p il $10 Oxford

914.2 Great Britain—Civilization 48-5329

A group of essays which taken together attempt to define the essential English spirit in relation to the community, government and law, finance and industry, science and education, literature, the home, etc. Partial contents: Land and people, by Jacquetta and Christopher Hawkes; Religion, by A. T. P. Williams; Government, by G. M. Young; Law, by Lord Simonds; The human side of industry, by G. T. Reid; Universities and scholarship, by Maurice Powicke; Science, by W. C. Dampier; Humour, by H. W. Garrod; The press, by R. C. K. Ensor; The making of books, by Francis Meynell; Outdoor life, by V. Sackville-West; Homes and habits, by James Laver; The Englishman abroad, by Rebecca West. Index.

Booklist 44:280 Ap 15 '48

"Admirable collection of essays." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 4 '48 800w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 34:413 N 22 '47 1900w

"Many of the writers speak with authority of specialists, and the rest, if not precisely specialists, are intimately acquainted with the subject which has been assigned them. . . The illustrations, no fewer than eighty-eight, are admirably chosen and do not merely supplement the chapters to which they are attached but form, taken as a whole, a historic sequence or panorama of great value in themselves." S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 F 29 '48 1600w

" 'Feasts to which many contribute may excel those provided by one man.' With this quotation from Aristotle, Sir Ernest Barker, in his preface, seeks to disarm those like myself who believe that too many cooks are apt to spoil the literary broth. And, having thoroughly enjoyed most of the courses in the long banquet over which he presides, I must concede that here is one exception to the rule. Before describing the feast in more detail, it is necessary to say a word about the splendid manner in which it has been served by the publishers. The typography is all we have learned to expect from the Clarendon Press; the proofreading is impeccable. As for the eighty-eight illustrations, particularly the numerous facsimile reproductions of old handbills, political posters, newspaper advertisements and so forth, they alone are worth the cover charge. . . Nearly every contributor writes well and has worth-while things to say. Yet good as the team is, I wish Sir Ernest Barker had cast his net a little wider and secured a more representative group." Keith Hutchison

+ — N Y Times p5 F 22 '48 1050w

"A distinguished work, marked by thoughtful and seldom humorless writing and a nice lack of nationalistic complacence. Many illustrations."

+ New Yorker 23:99 F 21 '48 50w

Reviewed by Larry Laughlin

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 7 '48 750w

"All the contributors have that sort of liberal mind which recognizes that nothing is too unimportant to be mentioned so long as it has significance in the main stream of character. But, of course, some subjects simply lend themselves to a discussion of character and others do not. In some character can only be implied. Physical science, for instance, is international, and so to a less and varying extent are the arts. An excellent example of drawing character by implication is the noble chapter on law by Lord Simonds. Dull must he be of soul who has no thrill communicated to him by this lucid narrative." J. B. Atkins

+ Spec 179:686 N 28 '47 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p437 Ag 7 '48 4200w

"Sir Ernest Barker's superbly produced and beautifully illustrated book consists of twenty-seven essays, by different hands, on various aspects of English life. . . Most of the authors are eminent scholars who write with a singular uniformity of grace and accent. Several of the essays are brilliant feats: only two are really bad." C. H. Driver

+ — Yale R n s 38:155 autumn '48 1150w

BARKER, SIR ERNEST. Traditions of civility; eight essays. 370p $4.50 Macmillan (for the Cambridge univ. press)

824 [48-7991]

All but one of these essays (that on Oliver Cromwell) are here published for the first time. Contents: Greek influences in English life and thought; Cycles of change in the Island of Rhodes; Dante and the Last Voyage of Ulysses; The connection of the Renaissance and the Reformation; The education of the English gentleman in the sixteenth century; Oliver Cromwell and the English people; Paley and his political philosophy; Natural law and the American Revolution. Index.

"[This] collection of essays [is] a welcome amalgam of wide erudition and ripe reflection which deserves high praise in this age of science and austerity." M. F. A.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 23 '48 250w

Reviewed by Philip Toynbee

New Statesman & Nation 35:442 My 29 '48 1050w

School & Society 68:47 Jl 17 '48 10w

Reviewed by F. M. Powicke

Spec 180:410 Ap 2 '48 1300w

BARKER, MELVERN J. Southeast of Noman's; a trip dragging aboard the Southern Cross; lithographs by [the author]. 39p $3 Day

639.22 Fishing. Lithographs

Lithographs and brief text presenting the life of the fishermen off the coast of Martha's Vineyard.

"The great net, the waves, the buoys and the men are excellently portrayed. Interest not limited to New England, nor to the arts." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 73:1028 Jl '48 70w

BARKER, M. J.—Continued

"This is a book to savor, not only for its dramatic content but for its artistry. The lithographs are excellent and the story they tell is an exciting one. Melvern Barker's book has in it the flavor of salt, and it may be but the forerunner of further accurate and enthralling picture accounts of the life of the Vineyard people." D. F. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p12B My 16 '48 180w

BARKINS, MRS EVELYN (WERNER). I love my doctor; il. by Alfred S. Piane. 238p $3 Crowell

817 48-6360

Story of the author's happy marriage to a doctor. By the author of The Doctor Has a Baby, Book Review Digest 1947.

Booklist 44:335 Je 1 '48

Kirkus 16:139 Mr 1 '48 120w

"Evelyn and John had happen to them just about the same things that happen to every John and Jane in America in the same situation. . . Such readers will read Evelyn Barkins' straightforward, often tender and always funny narrative with genuine pleasure. As for those who have yet to sail on the sea (which I'm sorry to say the author calls 'unchartered' though she means 'uncharted') that is matrimony—well, there could be worse books of advice than this one. Under the kidding is a vein of decent sentiment and levelheadedness that might communicate itself very profitably to the about-to-be-wed." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 14 '48 700w

BARLEY, ANN L. Patrick calls me mother; drawings by Peter Burchard. 227p $2.75 Harper

362.7 Adoption 48-7098

The story of the adoption of a war orphan. The author travelled thru Holland, Belgium, and France in the dark days of 1945, and finally found her Patrick in Paris. The book ends with her triumphant return home with the child after much red tape and publicity.

Booklist 44:350 Je 15 '48

Cath World 167:574 S '48 200w

Reviewed by Melanie Pflaum

Chicago Sun D 21 '48 440w

"How to adopt a European baby in this day and age and keep your sanity could well be the name of this delightful book. It is reporting at its best, and experience acquired the hard way." R. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 5 '48 480w

"Behind the determined merry and gay approach is a story of real determination in face of so many obstacles that often the quest seemed hopeless, and there is an appeal for a wide audience—not only among the many people interested in adoption, but in other families."

+ Kirkus 16:190 Ap 1 '48 180w

"Recommended." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 73:704 My 1 '48 170w

"Although the author writes of herself and her rather hectic experience with brightness and wit, her book is not merely a gay account of the rescue of one child. It is also a tragic story of the misery of Europe's children."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 4 '48 290w

"Happy reading. Miss Barley's style is a rare mixture culled from her past jobs, as she combines the straightaway news writing and good reporting which she must have used in her news magazine jobs, and the dramatic quality of her soap operas. The whole thing twinkles as merrily as Patrick's smile." V. R. Terrett

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 11 '48 370w

"For the story it tells and for the manner of the telling, 'Patrick Calls Me Mother' rates a big 'E' for effort and a big 'A' for accomplishment, too." E. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 13 '48 170w

" 'Patrick Calls Me Mother' is more than an entertaining account of adopting a baby, more even than an account of adopting a baby under touching and unusual circumstances. Because she never belabors it, and because her discoveries are always incidental to a personal search, Miss Barley's account of the terrible difficulties with which those agencies struggling to save the war orphans of the Continent must contend is that much more moving and poignant. Some stories of tremendous dramatic impact are uncovered. By her almost casual but never casual reporting, Miss Barley makes a few points which are hard to put out of the mind." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 31:17 Jl 31 '48 650w

Reviewed by G. E. Lyon

Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '48 420w

Wis Lib Bul 44:147 S '48

BARLOW, HAROLD, and MORGENSTERN, SAM. Dictionary of musical themes; introd. by John Erskine. 656p $5 Crown

781.97 Music—Encyclopedias and dictionaries 48-6784

A collection of over 10,000 musical themes from instrumental compositions: symphonies, concertos, sonatas, and other concert music. It ranges in time from the works of William Byrd and his era, to Benjamin Britten. Arrangement is alphabetical by composer, with a notation index, consisting of six to ten of the opening notes from the work in question (transposed to C major) in letter notation, and a cue to show where the work stands in the body of the book. Index of titles.

Booklist 44:347 Je 15 '48

Reviewed by Felix Borowski

Chicago Sun My 24 '48 90w

"This tune-finder and list (the musical equivalent of Bartlett's Quotations) will be needed by any library that attempts to handle questions on music. . . Simple to use, but lacks the directional aid given in Payne's Melodic Index to the Works of J. S. Bach." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 73:814 My 15 '48 130w

Reviewed by Charles Seeger and R. S. Hill

Music Lib Assn Notes 5:375 Je '48 1250w

Reviewed by B. H. Haggin

Nation 166:25 Je 26 '48 40w

Reviewed by M. C. Hastings

N Y Times p33 S 12 '48 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 18 '48 150w

Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 15 '48 110w

BARNARD, CHESTER IRVING. Organization and management; selected papers. 244p $4 Harvard univ. press

658 Organization. Management 48-6645

The author of these papers and lectures is president of the New Jersey Bell telephone company and author of Functions of the Executive (Book Review Digest 1939). Contents: Some principles and basic considerations in personnel relations; Dilemmas of leadership in the Democratic process; Riot of the unemployed at Trenton, N.J., 1935; The nature of leadership; Concepts of organization; On planning for world government; A review of Barbara Wootton's Freedom under Planning; Education for executives; Functions and pathology of status systems in formal organizations.

"In this collection of essays Barnard has made a highly significant contribution to the literature on formal organizations. There are few men who combine the practical experience with the analytical powers that he possesses. The author has made the fullest use of this rare combination." Robert Dubin

+ Am J Soc 54:376 Ja '49 1250w

Reviewed by W. N. Mitchell
Ann Am Acad 260:234 N '48 400w

"The inquirer into world organization, the business leader, and no less the student of employee-managerial relations will find this a stimulating series of lectures." G. R. E.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 29 '48 480w

"Author of the important (and unfortunately 'o.p.') Functions of the Executive, here gathers some previously privately published [papers]... These are characterized by solid grounding, organization, and clear thinking and presentation. While the papers are technical in the good sense, they are likewise fundamental in personnel, politics and human relations in general and should be in all collections covering those subjects to any depth." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:647 Ap 15 '48 100w

BARNES, DUANE CLAYTON. Wordlore. 135p $2.25 Dutton
422 English language—Words 48-9098

Study of the history and derivation of English words, designed for the general reader. Contains a brief history of the language in general. Indexed.

Booklist 45:151 Ja 1 '49
Kirkus 16:431 Ag 15 '48 180w

"Author's researches among Latin, Greek, Anglo-Saxon and Old French roots have the charm of the unexpected, and the reader will often be astonished (literally, struck by a thunder-bolt). Should instruct and amuse almost any reader. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 73:1505 O 15 '48 100w

"When interest in words, as such, sets in—usually as one of the signs of really growing up—a good book to have in the house is this one... The index takes up forty-four columns of single words, each worth investigating."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 D 19 '48 190w

"Admirers of Mr. Ivor Brown's books on words will miss in Mr. Barnes the dynamic spectacle of the word in action afforded by Mr. Brown's many felicitous quotations. They will also miss Mr. Brown's wit and grace, Mr. Barnes being more expositor than essayist, whose discourse at times degenerates into mere lists. But those users of the dictionary who have hitherto brushed over the bracketed hieroglyphics to the definitions which follow them will find Mr. Barnes' book a good introduction to these mysteries. Those hieroglyphics tell thousands of stories from which Mr. Barnes has made an interesting selection." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p9 D 26 '48 650w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER. Historical sociology; its origins and development; theories of social evolution from cave life to atomic bombing. 186p $3 Philosophical lib.
301 Sociology—History 48-9011

"This little book seeks to trace the rise of interest in the history of human society in classical times and its development since those days—and endeavors to provide an introduction to the more important literature in the field and a guide to more fruitful writing therein during the years to come." (School & Society) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:150 Ja 1 '49
School & Society 69:31 Ja 8 '49 60w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER, ed. Introduction to the history of sociology. 960p $10 Univ. of Chicago press
309 Sociology—History 47-12522

Discussions of social origins, ways of group life, and other aspects of sociology, by twenty-five authorities from Comte to Sorokin. All the important countries of the world are studied, and the time covered is from the ancient Near East to the present. Each chapter has its own bibliography and notes. Indexes.

Reviewed by Jules Kolodny
+ — Am Econ R 38:640 S '48 1650w

"Adequate, seemingly, are the indexes and the notes provided for some of the chapters but not for all. On the whole, this is now definitely the one best book on the history of sociology for advanced students in this country." F. N. House
+ Am J Soc 53:508 My '48 850w

"Collaborative works are usually uneven in character; the present volume is no exception. The chapters range in length from less than seven to almost forty pages. Cairns's chapter on Briffault lacks footnotes and bibliography. On the other hand, the chapters on Tönnies and Simmel, both by Heberle, have rather full bibliographies and abundant notes. Benoit-Smullyan's treatment of Durkheim is also excellently documented." P. H. Furfey
+ — Ann Am Acad 257:236 My '48 400w

"It is a massive and meaty summary of the topic."
+ Current Hist 14:175 Mr '48 70w

"An examination of this extraordinary array of authors and source material would seem to justify Professor Barnes's challenge that if one does not like this way of doing the job 'he can produce a better book.' This would be a difficult task and I suspect no one will undertake it for the present. Nevertheless, it is important to call attention to certain limitations of the book. In the first place, the author has a difficult task of defining sociology, and particularly in his brief introductory notes to the general character of sociology in each of the divisions Professor Barnes lists, rather indiscriminately and in a hurried doctrinaire fashion, an extraordinary mixed group of names. . . There are some detailed errors, almost inevitable in the listing of so many sources by so many different authors with the assistance of so many people. . . Nevertheless, I wish that every advanced student of social science, if he could find the time, be required to study this book in its entirety in order to give a broader base of information and prepare the way for a genuinely realistic, scientific study of society that would be neither afraid of new methods nor imitative of the natural sciences, on the one hand, and that would initiate an era of creative social science based upon both 'factual' theory and 'normative' theory." H. W. Odum
+ — Pol Sci Q 63:444 S '48 1200w
School & Society 67:286 Ap 10 '48 20w

Reviewed by H. P. Fairchild
Social Educ 12:329 N '48 500w

Reviewed by N. J. Demerath
Social Forces 27:89 O '48 1150w

Reviewed by T. E. Sullenger
Social Studies 40:47 Ja '49 240w

"It is inevitable in a work of this scope that some difference of opinion should arise as to the selection of authors to be covered. This reviewer and American readers in general are likely to be especially sensitive about the selection of American sociologists. . . Despite [its] limitations this volume will take its place among the most comprehensive and valuable summaries of sociological thought." Mirra Komarovsky
+ — Survey 84:346 N '48 550w

BARNES, HARRY ELMER. Survey of western civilization. 959p il maps $7.50; text ed $5.50 Crowell
901 Civilization—History 47-12183

"A college textbook, first issued as The History of Western Civilization [Book Review Digest 1935], has been revised and partly rewritten to place more emphasis on the evolution of political and social institutions." (Booklist) Index.

"The revision is disappointing. Basic books have appeared since 1935, yet few are included in the footnotes of this book except in portions dealing with contemporary history. In other sections new viewpoints are slighted and there is little basic rewriting. The latest book cited on early man is 1933. The latest book cited on Greek history (except one textbook published in 1937) appeared in 1932. . . More serious, however, in a textbook designed for college freshmen is the author's tendency to make generalizations on highly controversial matters with a finality which seems more partisan than scholarly." O. G. Darlington

BARNES, H. E.—Continued

— Ann Am Acad 257:237 My '48 500w

Booklist 44:218 F 15 '48

School & Society 67:29 Ja 10 '48 20w

"This volume will perhaps have its greatest value for social studies teachers. . . Many teachers will dislike Barnes' devastating criticism of social institutions. Many more will be afraid to accept his conclusions even though convinced of their validity. In the reviewer's opinion, however, social studies teachers should subject themselves to these disturbing challenges." L. E. Giles

+ — Social Educ 12:231 My '48 650w

Social Studies 39:144 Mr '48 20w

BARNES, HOWARD. Your boat, its selection and care; il. by the author. 111p $3 Scribner

623.8 Boats and boating 48-1745

A book on boat repair based on the author's experiences as boat owner and boat-yard worker. There is also information on boat buying and boat types. The glossary and index are combined.

Booklist 44:307 My 15 '48

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:710 My 1 '48 30w

BARNES, MARGARET CAMPBELL. Within the hollow crown. 359p $3 Macrae Smith co.

Richard II, king of England—Fiction 47-11910

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"Mature readers will enjoy this historical novel of Richard II, whose reign was one of pageantry, intrigue and tragedy. . . The characters are always convincing; the historical background is clear but never obtrusive." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 24:143 Mr '48 120w

"In this book Mrs. Barnes has been pleased to take what she considers a searching look at England's second Richard. Her vision is rose-colored to excess. Her insistence on purity of motive not only pictures Richard a simpleton but throws history out of balance." C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 31:12 F 7 '48 450w

Wis Lib Bul 44:21 Ja '48

BARNHART, CLARENCE LEWIS, ed. See American college dictionary

BARNOUW, ADRIAAN JACOB, ed. Coming after; an anthology of poetry from the Low Countries. 348p $5 Rutgers univ. press

839.311 Dutch poetry—Collections. Flemish poetry—Collections 48-5491

"Dr. Barnouw (Columbia) has translated a sampling of Dutch poems from the thirteenth century to contemporary poets, with brief biographical sketches of each author. The selections vary from those on love to religious and economic topics, designed to show not only the type of verse of the Netherlands, but the characteristics of the people." Current Hist

Booklist 44:279 Ap 15 '48

Current Hist 15:40 Jl '48 50w

BARNOUW, ADRIAAN JACOB. Fantasy of Pieter Brueghel. See Brueghel, P.

BARRACLOUGH, GEOFFREY. Origins of modern Germany. 2d rev ed 481p maps $6 Macmillan (for Blackwell)

943 Germany—History [47-551]

"Revised edition of this study of German history, from 800 A.D. to the present. It is concerned with movements, trends, and economic changes resulting from Germany's political history, pointing out the background for present day problems." (Current Hist) Index.

Current Hist 14:295 My '48 40w

"This work is useful for its insight into recent German scholarship, but it is vitiated by its adherence to the Prussian school of historiography that has exalted the centralizing, militaristic elements in Germany's political evolution."

— + Foreign Affairs 26:744 Jl '48 30w

"The English historian is not primarily concerned with the question of German guilt. His history of Germany, beginning with the year 800, will have value for the English-speaking world far beyond the immediately relevant light it throws upon the question of German guilt. Yet the concluding chapters reveal Professor Barraclough's interest in the character of the German tragedy." Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 167:50 Jl 10 '48 900w

BARRELL, JOSEPH. Shelley and the thought of his time; a study in the history of ideas. 210p $3 Yale univ. press

821 Shelley, Percy Bysshe 47-11436

"Shelley's relation to the thought of the latter part of the eighteenth century is the particular theme of Dr. Barrell's investigation. Shelley is found to have been 'of his time' with special reference to romantic radicalism and romantic Hellenism. Beginning under the domination of Godwin, and French materialists and rationalists like Voltaire and Holbach, the poet later felt the overwhelming impact of the Greek revivalists, and wrote all of his best poetry under the aegis—though not the exclusive aegis—of the Greek tragedians and Plato. Dr. Barrell conducts a survey of this spiritual metamorphosis from materialism to idealism." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The most interesting feature of Dr. Barrell's analysis is his noting of the shift in outlook at a certain point, alike in Prometheus Unbound, Epipsychidion and Adonais, where the Platonic intellectual concept is left behind in favour of a solution or peroration on a more romantic plane, and coming 'from a deeper stratum of the poet's nature than that of his enthusiasm for Plato.' Observations of this type save Dr. Barrell's thesis from becoming the dryasdust academic exercise it might have been."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p263 My 8 '48 850w

"It is perhaps unfortunate that the study of Shelley's later poems concentrates so heavily on the Platonic influence as to exclude consideration of the many other literary and philosophical currents which shaped the poet's maturing thought. But the consideration of the Platonic influence is more careful in its differentiations than any others so far available, and the chapter—Shelley and the Thought of the Greeks—while somewhat deceptively titled, is a valuable accession to scholarly literature on the most genuinely 'Greek' of the English romantic poets."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 4:10 Mr '48 240w

BARRETT, CHARLES LESLIE (DONALD BARR, pseud). Australian bird life; with 47 il, incl. 7 in full colour. 239p $3.25 Oxford

598.2994 Birds—Australia

Study of Australian birds containing scientific and informative data about all families of birds represented in that country. The book is written by an Australian and was first published in Australia in 1945. There are notes on nests and nesting habits, songs, displays, the "playhalls" of the bower birds, and the "song and dance" performances of the lyre-birds. Index.

Booklist 44:264 Ap 1 '48

"A readable book and interesting because of the paucity of material on Australian bird life available to the American public. . . Recommended." J. F. Kennedy
+ Library J 73:660 Ap 15 '48 50w

BARRON, HARRY. Modern rubber chemistry. [2d ed] 502p il $7.50 Van Nostrand
678 Rubber. Latex 48-2528

"This work is primarily a survey of modern rubber technology. Approximately half of it is devoted to non-chemical matters and the chemical information that is included is such as would be of interest in practical manufacturing. Much ground is covered, and the practical information is detailed even to the inclusion of formulas. In comparison to the first edition [Book Review Digest 1938] this edition is almost a new work." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

"In general, the subject matter is covered well, especially insofar as British industrial practice is concerned, up to the period of about 1944-1945. Very recent developments in some segments of the industry naturally could not be included in this edition." J. R. C.
+ Chem Eng 55:294 D '48 120w

"Second edition is much improved and enlarged." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 73:818 My 15 '48 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:47 My '48

BARTLETT, JOHN, comp. Familiar quotations; a collection of passages, phrases, and proverbs, traced to their sources in ancient and modern literature; Christopher Morley, ed, Louella D. Everett, associate editor. 12th ed rev & enl 1831p $8 Little
808.8 Quotations 48-10657

"This revised and enlarged edition has 1252 pages of quotations, arranged chronologically, and an index with nearly 124,000 entries. . . Many of the new items were written or uttered by prominent people of the past decade, by way of keeping the work up to date, but at that rate some of the older sayings may have to be dropped, sooner or later, lest it get out of hand. Franklin Roosevelt was quoted 12 times in 1937, whereas there are now 34 entries under his name, and those of other people have been increased. Winston Churchill, who wasn't listed at all in the 11th edition, now has 60 entries, and others who appear for the first time include Alfred E. Smith, Albert Einstein and Gen. Eisenhower." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 45:139 D 15 '48
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 D 19 '48 90w
Springf'd Republican p10B N 21 '48 310w

"What Bartlett needs now is to have its splendid, grab-bag riches winnowed and put in order by a touch of scholarship."
Time 52:113 D 13 '48 750w

BARTLETT, ROBERT MERRILL. Boys' prayers: the ascending trail. 85p $1.25 Assn. press
264.1 Prayers 47-12349

A collection of prayers for youths approaching maturity, who realize that they should pray, but may not know how to express themselves in prayer.

"These are intelligent and beautifully written prayers. The author does not make the common mistake of making religion cheap and shallow in trying to adapt its expression to the minds of the young. On the other hand, the prayers may be too mature. More simplicity is possible without odiously 'writing down' to a childish level. Many sentences are unduly long and phrases heavy." W. E. G.
+ — Christian Century 64:1615 D 31 '47 200w
Kirkus 15:670 D 1 '47 90w
Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p13B Ja 18 '48 150w

BARTLETT, ROBERT MERRILL. Sky pioneer; the story of Igor I. Sikorsky. 153p il $2.50 Scribner
B or 92 Sikorsky, Igor Ivan—Juvenile literature 47-30950

"From a writer who knew Sikorsky comes this sympathetic biography of a great engineer who from his early years had a longing to fly like a bird. Robert Bartlett pictures the boy in the big Russian house reading everything he could find on flying machine models; the man who built bombers for the Russian Army; the ardent prophet of the possibilities of the helicopter; the reverent optimist who believed that 'in the final plan of God the power of life and truth is greater than the sum of evil.'" Horn Bk

Booklist 44:116 N 15 '47

"Sikorsky's story as it is here told is full of interest and inspiration." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:48 Ja '48 100w

"Airminded High School students will eat up the aviation side of his story, though the interlarding of Sikorsky's views on religion and Soviet Russia may seem too half-developed to capture their interest."
+ — Kirkus 15:507 S 15 '47 90w

"Not needed if library has Story of the Winged-S, unless simpler biography with aviation interest is desired for younger readers or remedial reading. Junior high school age." F. L. Morrison
Library J 72:1474 O 15 '47 80w

"Writing this biography with the approval and assistance of Igor Sikorsky, Mr. Bartlett has done an excellent job. Here is an interesting story of the rapid development of aviation. Here is the record of Mr. Sikorsky's thoughts of his adopted country. It is a book that will have a strong appeal to an air-minded generation." R. A. Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 31:33 F 14 '48 180w

BARTLETT, RUHL JACOB, ed. The record of American diplomacy. 731p $6 Knopf
327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S—History—Sources 47-5391

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"Professor Bartlett has done his work with care and discrimination. He recognizes in his preface that he has had to make choices that will not meet with universal approval. He labors under 'no illusion concerning the prospect that probably every teacher of American diplomacy will look in vain for some particular item that he thinks is indispensable.' The author of this review admits to being no exception, but nevertheless he is prepared to testify to the exceptional achievement of Professor Bartlett in including so much that all will agree is useful, and omitting so little that might be regarded as indispensable." L. M. Goodrich
+ Am Hist R 53:578 Ap '48 650w

"In the main, Mr. Bartlett has chosen well. The last chapter is of necessity incomplete and may convey the wrong impression about recent diplomacy; including the Truman Doctrine under the heading of 'The United Nations' evokes at least a faint irony. Parenthetically, it might be suggested that, pedantry aside, a significant line could be drawn between foreign policy and diplomacy. Other criticisms would only be very minor. Someone else might have chosen different selections at various points. Yet the fact remains that Mr. Bartlett has placed us in his debt." R. C. Snyder
+ — Am Pol Sci R 42:376 Ap '48 300w
Reviewed by W. D. Overman
Ann Am Acad 255:186 Ja '48 450w

BARTLETT, R. J.—Continued
"With so much good fare ranging from the Treaty of Whitehall of 1686 to the Truman Doctrine of 1947, a reviewer feels like Oliver Twist in asking for more. But with the Rush Bagot Agreement there might have been a reference to its revision in 1946. There is no document on the Alaska Boundary dispute, and the section in which the Ogdensburg and Hyde Park Agreements are analysed could have been rounded off by including the Joint Declaration on Defense Cooperation issued on February 12, 1947. The author has kept his notes and comments to the minimum consistent with clarity. The volume is well printed, has a select bibliography, and a good index." F. H. Soward
+ — Canadian Hist R 29:75 Mr '48 400w

"The editing is unobtrusive and scholarly. Each chapter has a short introduction, and there are brief footnote comments on each selection. The volume is remarkably complete. Students of diplomatic history may regret an omission here or an inclusion there, but such is inevitable in the case of any selection. . . This reviewer knows of no comparable work, and believes that this is a volume that should be available to every teacher of American history above the junior-high school level." R. A. Brown
+ Soc Educ 12:186 Ap '48 600w
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:50 Mr '48 280w

BARTON, BETSEY ALICE. Long walk. 282p $3 Duell
48-6225

Novel based on one day in the lives of the patients in an army hospital for the paralyzed. Much depends on the mental attitudes of the patients themselves, and Janet, paralyzed for nine years, has been brought to the hospital to inspire the men. The hospital experience helps Janet, too. The superb courage of Woody, who fights a losing battle for life, is the crux of the story.

Booklist 44:268 Ap 1 '48
Kirkus 16:123 Mr 1 '48 170w

"Action takes place within a period of twenty-four hours, and much of it is genuinely moving. Unfortunately, the problems of the staff appear as important as those of the patients struggling for health and hope. Together with considerable discussion about life and sin, this confuses what could have been a beautiful, as well as an important story. Recommended." Donald Wasson
+ — Library J 73:557 Ap 1 '48 80w

"Miss Barton writes compassionately of a kind of life in which a curbstone assumes the proportions of a mountain; in which the people don't wonder what to do with their lives, but simply whether to live at all. Although her novel is somewhat immature and her characters incomplete, her description of that life is understanding and heartbreaking."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ap 25 '48 250w

Reviewed by Hilda Lake
N Y Times p14 Je 13 '48 500w

"Miss Barton leaves no doubt in your mind that she feels every word she writes. She believes implicitly that it is given to human beings to sustain life in each other. Just as she wrote her first book, Miss Barton wrote this one with the object in mind of helping those who are undergoing the same disability that she overcame. But the book has a tonic value for the reader in good health." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 My 30 '48 300w

"Here is a novel about a hospital that does not depend on the sensational or the psychopathic for its emotional impact. It is a welcome relief from the pseudo-psychiatric and morbidly clinical pot-boilers which almost succeed in shocking the sensitive reader into a hearty case of dementia praecox." Ray Pierre
+ Sat R of Lit 31:23 My 15 '48 550w
Wis Lib Bul 44:104 My '48

BARTON, MRS REBECCA CHALMERS. Witnesses for freedom; Negro Americans in autobiography; foreword by Alain Locke. 294p $3.50 Harper
920 Negroes—Biography 48-7322

Studies of the autobiographical writings of twenty-three American Negroes including: Booker T. Washington; William Pickens; W. C. Handy; Juanita Harrison; William Stanley Braithwaite; Zora Neale Hurston; Era Bell Thompson; Frederick Douglass; W. E. Burghardt Du Bois; James Weldon Johnson; Richard Wright. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:375 Jl 15 '48

"This volume plumbs the rich lives and literature developed in spite of the deep hostility of whites, literature which if read widely cannot help but lessen the aggression in white hearts." H. A. Jack
+ Christian Century 65:1177 N 3 '48 240w

Reviewed by Henrietta Buckmaster
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 1 '48 370w

"Scholarly, challenging, primarily an interesting analysis of the racial problem, and secondarily a study of a phase of American writing. Of value for both students of sociology and literature."
+ Kirkus 16:205 Ap 15 '48 170w

"The analyses are extremely well done; the conclusions are perspicacious. Of value as an introduction to the books discussed and as a contribution to the sociological study of the Negro's intellectual development since emancipation. Recommended." G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 73:946 Je 15 '48 140w

Reviewed by Daniel James
Nation 167:270 S 4 '48 550w
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 4 '48 150w
Wis Lib Bul 44:146 S '48

BASCOM, PEARLE BOYD. From crocus to snowman; pictures by Lloyd Dotterer. [24p] 50c Abingdon-Cokesbury
48-8296

Rhymes about the weather from crocus time to snow time, with pictures on every page. For third graders.

"Children are sensitive to the outdoor world and these easily flowing rhymes will help them to notice the changing seasons and find a joy in the turning year." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 11 '49 150w
Kirkus 16:476 S 15 '48 30w
Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '48 50w

BASLER, ROY PRENTICE. Sex, symbolism, and psychology in literature. 226p $3.50 Rutgers univ. press
801 Sex in literature. Symbolism in literature 48-8837

"Five essays in the form of psychological interpretations of literature form this volume devoted to the idea that Freudian theories are involved in each of the works discussed. 'Christabel,' by Coleridge, 'Maud,' by Tennyson, Poe's 'Ligeia' and some of his shorter pieces, T. S. Eliot's 'The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock' are dissected from the angle of sex." Current Hist

Current Hist 15:351 D '48 50w

"Except for his subjective reading of 'Ligeia,' which parallel's Edmund Wilson's treatment of 'The Turn of the Screw,' Mr. Basler leaves scant room for argument. . . Mr. Basler's book, which is nothing if not sensible, will help to spread our knowledge if not increase it. But it will prove misleading if, in belaboring various straw men, it spreads the idea its author is a pioneer. To clamor for critical recognition of psychoanalysis—if Mr. Basler will overlook the symbolism—is to knock at an open door." Harry Levin
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:14 Ja 1 '49 650w
School & Society 68:255 O 9 '48 10w

BASSETT, SARA WARE. Within the harbor. 252p $2.50 Doubleday

48-7022

A quiet tale of a group of more or less likable people who are gathered in a Cape Cod boardinghouse. Much of the story is told from the point of view of Floyd Robertson, retired college professor, who fills in for pretty Libbie Lane, the town librarian, when she breaks her leg and has to go to the hospital.

Booklist 44:368 Jl 1 '48

Kirkus 16:153 Mr 15 '48 80w

Wis Lib Bul 44:133 Je '48

BASSO, ETOLIA SIMMONS (MRS HAMILTON BASSO), ed. The world from Jackson square; a New Orleans reader; with an introd. by Hamilton Basso. (City and country ser) 405p $4.50 Farrar, Straus

976.335 New Orleans 48-9029

The second volume in the City and country readers series attempts to do for the city of New Orleans what Linscott's State of Mind, a Boston Reader (Book Review Digest, September 1948) did for Boston. This volume is arranged in approximately chronological order, spanning the years from a memoir written in 1697, to 1936. Excellence in depicting New Orleans, the place and the people, was the first criterion in choosing contributions. Much of the material is drawn from primary sources, such as the accounts of travelers and explorers. Index.

Booklist 45:101 N 15 '48

Reviewed by Melvin Maddocks
Christian Science Monitor p18 D 6 '48 310w

"This is New Orleans . . . and it bears witness to the fact that New Orleans, like Paris, supplies inspiration to all kinds of writers. . . I miss Roark Bradford and today's outstanding recorder, Harnett Kane. But otherwise the roster seems generously representative of all phases."

+ Kirkus 16:331 Jl 1 '48 170w

"Both taste and imagination went into the making of this volume. . . Buy it, by all means." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 73:1505 O 15 '48 130w

"The transitions [are] remarkably smooth; and though most of the authors are professionals, the amateurs, such as the teaching nun Madeleine Hachard de Saint-Stanislaus, more than hold their own. The standard may vary but the quality is fairly even throughout. . . A combination of history, travelogue, essay and fiction, its tone ranging from Ashe's serious sociological observations to Lyle Saxon's account of the lady who kept a pet centaur, 'The World from Jackson Square' maintains the editorial standard set for its series and makes us look forward to the books to come." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 31 '48 600w

"There seems to have been some effort, as well as some hope, on the part of the editor to temper romance with reality, and to suppress the flow of adjectives that usually oversweeten writing about New Orleans. Yet the city's traditional gayety, its exotic aspects and its curious ability to seem a living legend are far from absent. . . The collection is fairly well balanced and it is representative. A few of the pieces seem to have no reason for their inclusion except the fame of their authors." Robert Tallant

+ — N Y Times p21 O 31 '48 450w

"A thoroughly good anthology, a volume into which you can dip and browse at will and come up in the end with a vivid and authentic portrait of a city." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 18 '48 750w

Sat R of Lit 31:38 O 30 '48 220w

BASTER, ALBERT STEPHEN JAMES. The little less; an essay in the political economy of restrictionism. 161p $2 Macmillan (for Methuen)

330.942 Great Britain—Economic policy [47-24252]

"Consists mainly of a satiric survey of the 'lunatic years' between 1919 and 1939, when the economic man became an addict of restrictionism, through private arrangements or under government auspices." (Am Econ R) No index.

"This little, disarmingly simple book invites comparison with several others, in a similar vein, which have appeared recently—among them, Hayek's The Road to Serfdom, Frank Graham's Social Goals and Economic Institutions, and the recent collection of essays by the late Henry Simons, Economic Policy for a Free Society. . . This very witty essay strikes the reviewer, at first glance, as an altogether delightful, devastatingly effective, ironic history, as Mr. Baster applies the reductio ad absurdum technique to demonstrate the nonsense of seeking prosperity by producing less, working less, transporting less, growing less, and trading less (these are the titles of individual chapters). . . [It] is not a vulgar polemic for a 'return to normalcy.' The only trouble is that too much of it—indeed the most effective part of it—sounds like one." A. E. Kahn

Am Econ R 38:413 Je '48 900w

Foreign Affairs 26:749 Jl '48 20w

"Mr. Baster's pen is light; it trips along, but its point is charged with acid. Trade unionists, politicians and leaders of private enterprise will take his banter as Lear took that of his fool: 'a bitter fool! . . . a pestilent gall to me!' "

Times [London] Lit Sup p235 My 17 '48 850w

BATCHELDER, MARTHA R. Art of hooked-rug making. 160p il $3.75 Manual arts

746.74 Rugs 47-5561

Instructions for making hooked rugs, to be used either by the beginner or advanced worker. Contains more than 150 patterns, and discusses materials, patterns, colors, size, etc. Copiously illustrated. Index to illustrations.

Booklist 44:85 N 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

"The designs by the author are exquisite and charming, but what about those of us who prefer the frankness of line in the modern? Today, designers are stressing co-ordination in design for home furnishings, the same motif repeated on rugs, walls and fabrics. For ideas and enthusiasm consult Miss Batchelder; but for method or modern manners, look elsewhere." I. R. Duncan

+ — J Home Econ 40:330 Je '48 160w

School Arts 47:10a Mr '48 50w

BATCHELOR, JEAN MURIEL. Poems; selected and ed. by Florence S. Edsall and Abbie Huston Evans. 98p $2.50 Rockport press

811 48-12828

"The poetry of the late Jean Batchelor, here collected and published in book form for the first time, is a curious pot-pourri of light verse in the witty-but-warm, urbane-yet-tender manner, and serious poetry which ranges from delicate, precise observation of animals and physical nature to startling naked statements of a yearning for death." N Y Times

"Miss Batchelor's literary executors are aware that this posthumous volume lacks unity of tone and matter, but they explain that they have preferred to offer one volume rather than two, and that they hope to suggest, by the juxtaposition of vastly dissimilar poems, something of the poet's diversity of manner, taste and mood. . . Miss Batchelor, like every good writer of light verse, was an ironist and epigrammatist. She naturally—almost instinc-

BATCHELOR, J. M.—Continued

tively—seized the moment, the word, the action that stands as ironic and unconscious symbol of the man. . . Out of such materials she made her best poems, the witty, intelligent, unpretentious comments of a civilized mind on its world." Milton Crane

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 18 '48 360w

"A posthumous book by a minor poet is not often as beguiling as this one. We find here a 'compassionate, rich, quickly darting, gay, and grieving mind,' as Mrs. Edsall says in her foreword. There is deft light verse, such magic as in 'Willow' and 'Creatures of Air,' and such brooding beauty as in 'Autumn Evening.' "

+ Sat R of Lit 31:44 Mr 20 '48 70w

BATES, SYLVIA CHATFIELD. Weather breeder. 250p $2.75 Duell

48-6687

Story of one summer on Martha's Vineyard. Noepe, a half-breed Indian girl, fell in love with a white sheep rancher whom her employer's daughter also wanted. Disturbed by the tenseness resulting from this condition, Noepe went to work for the Whitestones, a Jewish couple. There she came to realize the racial prejudices that they too had to combat. All of their problems came to a tragic climax when a storm at sea left Mr Whitestone the sole survivor of a fishing party.

Booklist 44:299 My 1 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '48

Kirkus 16:128 Mr 1 '48 180w

"Author tries to achieve a simplicity of style that is most uneven—at times dull, at times moving. Story falls short leaving the many sub-plots suspended in mid-air." C. W. Roth

— Library J 73:707 My 1 '48 110w

"In 'The Weather Breeder' Sylvia Chatfield Bates has written a beautiful and moving novel. If you elect to read it without interruption—reading it as you might a poem, and it has the magic and is not too long for that—you will be caught up in an experience not often encountered in contemporary fiction." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 18 '48 500w

N Y Times p12 Je 20 '48 100w

"Much is implied by suggestion in 'The Weather Breeder,' which is a master-piece of underwriting. In fact, so delicately are the threads woven that Noepe and her lovers are sometimes difficult to place in their respective relationships. The description is not only skilful but has a special beauty coming as it does from an author who knows her island life and has felt it as an inner experience. . . The reader will discover in 'The Weather Breeder' not only an alluring piece of summer reading but a book to make him take thought." Laura Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 31:11 Je 26 '48 500w

Springf'd Republican p10B Je 27 '48 180w

BAUDELAIRE, CHARLES PIERRE. Paris spleen, 1869; tr. from the French by Louise Varèse. 108p $3 New directions

848 48-5012

"An English translation, of a book of arrière-pensées, random thoughts, and prose odds and ends, originally published in French under the title 'La Pléiade.' The subjects, each of which is treated in a few paragraphs, range from the superiority of yellow dogs over thoroughbred breeds to the spiritual benefit that Baudelaire bestowed on a feeble old beggar by savagely beating him up." New Yorker

"Louise Varese has already been acclaimed as the translator of Rimbaud. . . Now she has turned to Baudelaire, and her work on the prose 'segments' of his 'whole serpent,' as he called it himself, is excellent. . . New Directions has done Baudelaire and Miss Varese so proud as to production, with type and binding so magnificent, that the book is almost a bibelot."

+ Commonweal 47:430 F 6 '48 140w

"In this oddly unidiomatic translation, Baudelaire's quizzical humor seems off key. On the whole, hardly the writer at his best."

New Yorker 23:83 Ja 10 '48 100w

BAUER, FLORENCE ANNE (MARVYNE) (MRS WILLIAM WALDO BAUER). Abram, son of Terah. 406p $3 Bobbs

Abraham, the patriarch—Fiction 48-6197

Novel based on the life of Abram, son of Terah, of the city of Ur of the Chaldees. The course of his life is followed up to the time of his marriage with Sarah.

"Mrs. Bauer has written a provocative story. It adds considerable luster to her reputation as a writer whose materials are ancient history and archaeological lore." Benjamin Weintroub

+ Chicago Sun Ap 8 '48 400w

"Judged strictly on its merits as fiction, this is a good novel. It is one of the relatively few novels on biblical themes that can stand this test and that deserve to live." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 65:513 My 26 '48 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '48

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Jl 11 '48 70w

"Here is no dusty, archaic tale but a lively, detailed picture of Abram's way of life in the capital city of Ur. . . Miss Bauer makes this fabulous picturesque locale of her story, the modes and manners of the people, completely real. As in her successful novel about Jesus, 'Behold Your King,' she displays an ability to interlace fact and fiction, yet remains a storyteller first and foremost." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 18 '48 260w

BAUER, HAROLD. Harold Bauer, his book. 306p il $3.75 Norton

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-8020

Informal reminiscences of the author's life on the concert stage in the United States and abroad. Altho he was born and educated in England, he spent most of his life in other countries. His book is enlivened with anecdotes of many of the great musicians of his time, notably Paderewski, Anton Rubinstein, Delius, Debussy, Gabrilowitsch, and others. Index.

Booklist 45:12 S 1 '48

Reviewed by Felix Borowski

Chicago Sun D 15 '48 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '48

"Modest, revealing, this should answer a real market, for, if not glamorous in recital, it is worthwhile musical reading."

+ Kirkus 16:384 Ag 1 '48 150w

"More is implied than stated and reflections are often not developed, but this well-written book will please lovers of reminiscence and anecdote as well as music students." George Hanson

+ Library J 73:1276 S 15 '48 130w

"A book that is interesting, amusing, challenging and exasperating by turns, but never grows dull. It may be completely lunatic in spots, but it must be acquitted of stupidity." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 24 '48 1000w

"A readable book, written with ease and charm, often with wit and again with that savor that we call English." Moses Smith

+ N Y Times p32 O 10 '48 550w

"His account of the ups and downs of his career is interspersed with good-natured gossip about his celebrated confreres and with forthright comment on such varied subjects as American clubwomen (for whom he has a surprising fondness), professional critics (no fondness at all), and the proper methods of teaching music in universities. Fairly haphazard, but diverting."

+ New Yorker 24:111 S 18 '48 120w

"A book that music lovers, amateur or professional, will enjoy. Not profound and not superficial, it strikes a happy mean." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 19 '48 350w

"Mr. Bauer's tone, for all its mellowness, is that of a tired citizen of the world, well along in years and somewhat irascible, who would rather have been left alone. It is good to have his book anyway, although the author reveals precious little of his personal life." James Lyons
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:16 S 25 '48 750w

"Mr. Bauer's is the frankest and most honest musical autobiography since Sir Thomas Beecham's 'A Mingled Chime'. If there is any fault it is that of overmodesty and understatement." Victor Prahl
+ Springf'd Republican p7B S 12 '48 1200w

BAUER, LOUIS HOPEWELL. Private enterprise or government in medicine. 201p $5 Thomas, C. C.

614.2 Medicine, State. Insurance, Health Med48-1133

"Current problems affecting the American doctor and the public are presented here by a physician who is also a seasoned worker in the intricate affairs of medical administration. Against some historical background, early chapters present the accomplishments of American medicine under its present process of evolution with the impetus of private enterprise free of political restriction. Contrasted with these accomplishments are the results in many foreign countries of a system of medical care directed and controlled by the governments. . . In summary, the author attempts to show that the medical profession is making an intensified effort to solve medical problems and is making notable progress, and that destruction of private enterprise in this important field of social economy may lead to government control in other fields." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The approach to the subject and the narrative of events in and out of Washington are rather too categorical and absolute to satisfy an academic mind. . . There is evidence of hurried preparation, careless proof reading, and rather poor printing performance. The reviewer finds himself in close agreement with the main argument of the volume although disliking some of the expressions or explanations used in its support. The author has put all of the physicians of the United States in his debt for presenting so many original documents in quotation and telling his story with so little waste of words." Haven Emerson
+ Am J Pub Health 38:1025 Jl '48 360w

"Nowhere does Dr. Bauer define what is unhappily called 'socialized medicine,' a term that organized medicine loves to roll under the tongue because it suggests socialism. If socialized medicine means anything it means the abolition of the private practice of medicine. No one who believes in democratic institutions in or out of Congress has suggested anything like this. . . Apart from these considerations, Dr. Bauer has written an unnecessary book. Not a new argument appears anywhere within its covers. . . Like all who write on this subject of medical care, Dr. Bauer simply assumes that all's well with the freely chosen private practitioner. His lack of critical judgment appears nowhere more glaringly than in the approval with which he quotes that now exploded statement of the A. M. A. that most Americans 'are no more than thirty miles from a general hospital.'" Waldemar Kaempffert
— N Y Times p18 Jl 18 '48 1000w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:204 Je '48 260w

BAUGH, ALBERT CROLL, ed. Literary history of England. lib ed 1673p $10 Appleton

820.9 English literature—History and criticism 48-6012

A survey of the whole course of English literature. It is divided into parts, each written by an American college professor who is a specialist in that field. Contents: The Middle Ages; The Renaissance; The Restoration and eighteenth century; The Nineteenth century and after. Index.

Booklist 45:62 O 15 '48

"A valuable book for students."
+ Kirkus 16:70 F 1 '48 180w

"One might carp and cavil endlessly about details of interpretation and emphasis—the present reviewer, for instance, would like more recognition of American influences upon British literature of the past century—but to do so would be to obscure the authors' positive achievement. They have not produced just another classroom textbook; they have furnished a comprehensive guide to their subject. . . If the student or the layman wants a particular piece of information, he may not always find it in this book. But if it isn't there, he can be fairly sure that the authors will tell him precisely where to go next in his search." Delancey Ferguson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 My 2 '48 900w

Reviewed by Charles Duffy
+ N Y Times p25 My 23 '48 470w

"Since practically every writer of any importance is discussed, the references to each are necessarily brief, and sometimes, especially in the latter chapters, the judgments seem a little perfunctory. But all four sections are so crisply written that the book can be read for pleasure as well as for instruction."
+ New Yorker 24:89 Mr 27 '48 130w

BAUM, MRS HELENA WATTS. The satiric and the didactic in Ben Jonson's comedy. 192p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

822 Jonson, Ben. Literature and morals. Comedy 47-11629

"The following study was begun as an attempt to discover the relation between the comedies of Ben Jonson and his many statements about what a comedy should be and should do. The first chapter is by way of a general summary of the critical theories and dramatic practices among Jonson's contemporaries, and the material is presented briefly. . . In Chapter II, I have attempted to interpret his various and scattered expressions of his theory of didactic comedy. . . In Chapter III, I have illustrated Jonson's treatment of some of the comic and satiric materials which were available to him in Elizabethan and Jacobean England, and discussed them both in relation to the historical background and in comparison with the treatment which they received by some of his fellow dramatists. Finally, in Chapter IV, I have traced the development of Jonson's comic technique." (Pref) Index.

"This is a scholarly thesis which should be of interest to all Elizabethan and larger theatre collections. Any student of the seventeenth century English drama will find this volume of considerable reference interest. Recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:199 F 1 '48 30w

"Intelligent and comprehensive study." Winifred Kahn
+ Theatre Arts 32:65 Ja '48 280w

"More clearly than has been done heretofore, Johnson's purpose in comedy and the methods by which he tried to attain his purpose are set forth in this study."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:11 Mr '48 240w

BAUM, PAULL FRANKLIN. Tennyson sixty years after. 331p $4.25 Univ. of N.C. press

821 Tennyson, Alfred Tennyson 48-4493

A modern (twentieth century) analytical and critical appraisal of Tennyson which evaluates the poet in the light of modern critical methods. The author is professor of English at Duke University. Bibliographical note. Index.

"None of this is new. W. M. Dixon said most of it in 1896, Grierson in 1907, and Harold Nicolson in 1922. That is not to say the conclusions are not Professor Baum's own. Clearly they are. It is merely that it is difficult to say anything new about Tennyson, especially if one uses the old methods. . . Professor Baum is frequently content to speak such generalities as one might address to a sophomore survey course. That is an unkind over-statement to make about an otherwise thoroughly competent book. It probably accuses Professor Baum of failing to achieve what he never intended. In any event, and as Professor Baum knows better than I, he has left room for another criticism of Lord Tennyson." Denham Sutcliffe

BAUM, P. F.—Continued

+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 S 2 '48 850w

Reviewed by N. H. Pearson
Sat R of Lit 31:26 O 30 '48 480w

BAUM, VICKI. Headless angel. 312p $3 Doubleday
48-5904

Historical novel beginning and ending in Weimar in the days when Goethe was its shining light. The heroine is a young German countess, unhappily married to an invalid many years her senior. A handsome Spanish rogue became Clarinda's lover and they fled to Mexico where they lived for several years, until caught in the 1810 revolution. In 1813 a terribly changed Clarinda crept back to Weimar and a reconciliation with her husband.

Kirkus 16:58 F 1 '48 200w

"All the properties are here for a thrilling historical novel: an irresistible lover, a Mexican revolution, the acquisition of wealth and loss of it. The heroine, however, is not the stuff of which adventuresses are made but rather a hausfrau longing for home and children—therefore the thrill does not quite come off. But many women readers undoubtedly will enjoy these recreations of faraway places and times." B. B. Libaire
Library J 73:395 Mr 1 '48 130w

Reviewed by Simon Harcourt-Smith
New Statesman & Nation 36:402 N 6 '48 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 30 '48 70w

"Vicki Baum has apparently laid aside the sober mannerisms with which her stories once crept up on the imagination. The Wagnerian exuberance which used to threaten even her most restrained work has now swelled into a positive outburst. 'Headless Angel' is a blast of fine florid romance, with every gaudy backdrop the author can lay her talent on." Isabelle Mallet
N Y Times p22 My 2 '48 330w

"The author delivers her story with conspicuous gusto, but her enthusiasm can hardly be counted on to sweep more than one reader out of twelve before it."
New Yorker 24:117 Mr 20 '48 150w

" 'Headless Angel' is one of Vicki Baum's most diverting novels." Jane Voiles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 28 '48 270w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong
Spec 180:474 O 8 '48 210w

"Like all Miss Baum's novels, Headless Angel has plenty of vivacity and zest. Some intensive reading has gone into the reconstructions of Weimar salons and the half-world of Vera Cruz. Her Goethe is a very creditable piece of characterization."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p581 O 16 '48 300w

BAUMAN, ALVIN. Elementary musicianship. 246p $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall 780.72 Music—Instruction and study
47-11614

"This text for beginning music courses is meant to be used as a manual. For the teacher it provides many examples, student drills, explanatory notes, and opportunity to expand both the material and its application. The book is designed not only to be read but to be written in, sung from, marked, annotated—to be used as each student's first reference work in treading the long path to expert musical craftsmanship and artistry." Pref

"An excellent classroom text, but depends necessarily on a teacher who demonstrates, corrects and drills. Libraries will have no use for it." George Hanson
Library J 73:338 F 15 '48 30w

"An evil muse seems bound to lead writers of elementary music texts to write down to their readers, and Mr. Bauman is no exception. This fact does not necessarily lessen the usefulness of the book, but it may require rather deft handling on the part of a teacher faced with a class of students who, while they may indeed be beginners in music, may also be considerably advanced in other fields of study and may quite naturally rebel at such an approach. Elementary Musicianship is nonetheless one of the better manuals of its kind, and can be recommended to all interested teachers, who will be grateful for the practical suggestions of a fellow-worker in this difficult field of music pedagogy, possibly the most difficult of all." Luther Noss
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 5:243 Mr '48 320w

BAUMANN, JOHN. Old Man Crow's boy; adventures in early Idaho. 278p $3.50 Morrow 917.96 Frontier and pioneer life—Idaho
48-3857

Pictures life in central Idaho, during the years from 1880 to 1909, as seen thru the eyes of Old Man Crow's youngest son. The author has lived all his life in this country; so his tales of wild life, the open range, and hunting and fishing are based on his own observations.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 13 '48 550w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 25:65 Ja '49 40w

Kirkus 16:329 Jl 1 '48 130w

"The book is direct and honest with the precise details an intelligent and articulate man can give of a life he has known. It is also a sensitive and dramatic tale of how Sprout, a pioneer boy, grew to manhood in the backwoods settlement. . . Mr. Baumann's narrative belongs on any shelf of good modern books about the true West." R. G. Lillard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 12 '48 480w

"Owen Wister caught some of the charm of the cowmen of the Far West in 'The Virginian.' John Baumann, or whoever wrote this book with him, has preserved some more of it here for the nostalgic reader." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p21 O 10 '48 550w

BAUS, HERBERT MICHAEL. Public relations at work; pub. under the sponsorship of American council on public relations. 242p $3.50 Harper
301.154 Publicity
48-5825

"This book undertakes to describe every element, tool, practice and technique of public relations by way of four main divisions: the 'publics' of public relations; fundamentals; telling the story; and its agencies. Author of the previously published Publicity, How to Plan, Produce and Place It, Baus here writes comprehensively, practically and with continuing interest for any person, business, profession or group engaged in 'the will to do right by people, and the doing of it, and the telling about the will and the doing' involving 'a formidable number of human techniques' called public relations." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:262 Ap 1 '48

"Reliable, inclusive handbook."
+ Kirkus 15:688 D 15 '47 90w

"Highly recommended for general purchase." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 73:120 Ja 15 '48 100w

Management R 37:382 Jl '48 80w

Wis Lib Bul 44:78 Ap '48

BAVIER, ROBERT NEWTON. Sailing to win; with 24 photos and numerous line drawings [by H. de Fontaine]. 167p $4 Dodd

797.14 Yacht racing 47-11817

The associate editor of Yachting considers yacht racing for the newcomer. He covers selecting a yacht (a thirty-five foot maximum is his suggestion) care of the boat, training a crew, interpretation of the North American yacht racing union rules, and tactics of racing. No index.

Booklist 44:180 Ja 15 '48

"Comprehensive, indispensable book on yacht racing, ingenious diagrams, good photographs." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:43 Ja 1 '48 20w

BAX, ROGER, pseud. See Winterton, P.

BEAL, EDWARD. New developments in railway modelling; recent tendencies, new designs and useful guidance; profusely il. by the author, and with photographs. 277p $3.75 Macmillan

625 Railroads—Models [A48-29]

"Edward Beal, one of England's foremost authorities on scale-model railroading, brings the war-starved model railroad enthusiasts up to date on new developments. . . While Mr. Beal discusses the hobby from the international viewpoint, he points out the progress made in this country in these years and stresses particularly the splendid work of the National Model Railroad Association in establishing the standards to which all American scale-model railroad equipment is manufactured. Mr. Beal covers the development in track and layout, locomotive and rolling stock, station, signaling and scenic equipment. There are some 300 diagrams, illustrations and photographs." (N Y Times) No index.

Booklist 44:168 Ja 1 '48

N Y New Tech Bks 33:57 Jl '48

Reviewed by R. S. Robbins

N Y Times p15 D 28 '47 150w

BEALS, CARLETON. Lands of the dawning morrow; the awakening from Rio Grande to Cape Horn. 336p $4 Bobbs

918 Latin America 48-6575

A study of the politics and economics of South America based partly on a recent nine months' journey about the continent, partly on the author's own knowledge gained thru years of observation and residence in the various countries. Index.

Booklist 44:335 Je 1 '48

Reviewed C. D. Brodhead

Christian Century 65:880 S 1 '48 650w

"Undoubtedly Mr. Beals' book catches well the new Latin American spirit. . . The author does not present the picture of banned opposition, interventors in schools and universities, of efforts to control neighboring countries of Bolivia, Paraguay and Uruguay. Nevertheless, Mr. Beals has told a side of the Peron story which is necessary for the United States to understand, but which has been carefully hid by most reporters." S. G. Inman

+ Churchman 162:16 N 1 '48 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '48

"Mr. Beals likes Mr. Peron and applauds him. It may well be that Mr. Peron's critics have not been altogether fair, and that Mr. Beals's analysis may serve as useful corrective. But to this observer, Mr. Beals seems a bit over-exuberant. . . In fact, after reading Mr. Beals on Mr. Peron, this reviewer is tempted to recall other chapters in Mr. Beals's long and honorable record in tracking down betrayers of justice. . . And now Peron? But this reviewer, filled with gratitude for Mr. Beals's past services, does not know the answer." Hubert Herring

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 16 '48 1750w

"Equipped by years of background travel, residence and broad understanding of the people, Carleton Beals writes again of Latin America with assurance and with zest. Whittling down some of his glittering generalities and superlatives would make for a more accurate, albeit a more modest presentation of the subject. . . Beals is subjective. In the new volume there is a minimum of documentation, statistics, or evidence. He does not hesitate to put forward in breezy journalese his own opinions, value-judgments and prejudices. Probably the breeziness is overdone, inasmuch as the exaggerations of expression and the enthusiasm for superlatives often strain the credulity of the reader who might otherwise be convinced." W. F. Barber

+ — N Y Times p21 My 9 '48 950w

"It is a brilliant summarization that Mr. Beals provides, and the reader must admire his capacity to soak up and squeeze out again so much information so well. Two points about the book should be made, nevertheless. One is that when Mr. Beals considers Latin American agriculture he looks at its politically and socially, from the viewpoint of one who banks on blueprints and planning. . . The other point concerns Argentina. It is pretty obvious that Mr. Beals entertains considerable admiration for Peron." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 10 '48 700w

BEAN, GEORGE H. Yankee auctioneer; wherein are to be found the reminiscences and philosophy of a country auctioneer, well seasoned with yarns about profits and people. 247p $2.75 Little

B or 92 Auctions 48-9012

Reminiscences of a New England auctioneer whose home is in the Connecticut valley. He gives behind-the-scenes stories of his twenty-five years as auctioneer, with sidelights on crowds, lucky finds, the influence of the weather on auctions, etc.

Booklist 45:83 N 1 '48

Christian Science Monitor p20 O 21 '48 290w

"Certainly a new field in occupational memoirs, this should have a really appreciative and fairly wide audience."

+ Kirkus 16:428 Ag 15 '48 130w

"A shrewd, astute, anecdotal piece of Americana which should be a popular in public libraries." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 73:1268 S 15 '48 90w

"With a healthy willingness to try anything once, Mr. Bean has now added authorship to his other accomplishments. I doubt if his book contains everything he knows about the auction business, but it provides enough fascinating reminiscences to afford an evening's solid entertainment. And the chances are that before you have finished it you will be reaching for the local paper (if you live north of Darien) and searching the inside pages for auction advertisements." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 31 '48 650w

"A George Bean auction must be fascinating entertainment. . . Not everybody may be able to get to one—for those who can't, there is 'Yankee Auctioneer.' " J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 32:41 Ja 8 '49 320w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter

Springf'd Republican p8B O 24 '48 500w

Wis Lib Bul 44:211 D '48

BEAN, LOUIS HYMAN. How to predict elections. 196p $2.50 Knopf

324.73 Elections—U.S. 48-3171

"Mr. Bean, a distinguished economist and statistician, who has himself had remarkable success in forecasting election trends, [attempts] to give us a system whereby any relatively alert citizen can prophesy the outcome of almost any election. He uses a variety of historical and statistical relationships and projects them into the future to say what the outcome will be." N Y Times

BEAN, L. H.—Continued
Reviewed by D. E. McHenry
+ Am Pol Sci R 42:1022 O '48 550w

Kirkus 16:248 My 15 '48 170w

"The real story that Bean has to tell is lost by dazzling it with the crystal-ball approach. As an astute observer of US politics, Bean is a pioneer in the emerging science of political behavior, and stripped of his prediction motif, the book is a topnotch contribution to the understanding of how and why people behave as they do when they draw the curtains of a polling booth." Harold Wolff
New Repub 119:22 Jl 19 '48 1150w

"Even the common or garden variety of politician, who relies heavily on his hunches, will do well to consult this expert. Besides the statistical methods analyzed, the book contains the kind of political lore that both the student and the practitioner of the great game of politics will want to know." M. W. Childs
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 18 '48 900w

Reviewed by Duncan Aikman
Sat R of Lit 31:11 Jl 17 '48 410w

Reviewed by J. S. McAfee
Social Studies 39:327 N '48 430w

Springf'd Republican p15A Ag 1 '48 240w

BEARD, CHARLES AUSTIN. President Roosevelt and the coming of the war 1941; a study in appearances and realities. 614p $5 Yale univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—Foreign policy. World war, 1939-1945—U.S. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 48-6253

This volume follows the author's American Foreign Policy in the Making (Book Review Digest 1946). The present book is a study of the placing of responsibility for the entry of the United States into World war II, and is based in part on the report of the joint committee of Congress investigating the attack on Pearl Harbor. In viewing his subject the author is more the prosecuting attorney than the historian. It is his theme that President Roosevelt was in favor of our entry into the war, and he traces the steps which brought us into it. Index.

"Everyone who knew the opinions of the late distinguished historian on foreign policy expected to be hostile to the Roosevelt administration, but many would have welcomed a treatment in a vein as relatively sober as that of Beard's earlier volume, American Foreign Policy in the Making, 1932-1940, which avoided sweeping conclusions unwarranted by the record. It is regrettable, therefore, that his last work should have been so largely an example of the difficulty of writing without partisanship on a subject so deeply a part of the emotional experience of the author as the events which preceded the recent world war." C. C. Griffin
Am Hist R 54:382 Ja '49 2300w

Reviewed by E. S. Brown
Am Pol Sci R 42:801 Ag '48 850w

Reviewed by J. P. Pritchett
Ann Am Acad 258:153 S '48 650w

Booklist 44:293 My 1 '48

"This is a book that merits close reading by an American capable of thinking seriously and honestly about the future of the Republic. . . To the discerning, the best testimony that this book is a powerful and damaging revelation is found in the rabid or cavalier attitudes of its more hostile critics." F. C. Brophy
+ Cath World 167:380 Jl '48 900w

"Dr. Beard neither accuses nor defends. As a historian of the present he aims to let the records tell exactly what President Roosevelt's role was in relation to the coming of the war. The historians of the future will have to apportion the praise or blame. Meanwhile, Roosevelt's friends will not like Beard's tone of voice; but it is not easy to brush off his facts. His theme song is, in effect, Al Smith's favorite phrase: 'Now let's look at the record.'" W. E. G.
Christian Century 65:513 My 26 '48 380w

"The chief value of this book lies in its documentation, particularly in that drawn from the ten-million-word record of the Joint Congressional Committee; its conclusions cannot be accepted in view of Dr. Beard's bias and the admittedly partial nature of the evidence upon which he bases them." Mason Wade
— + Commonweal 48:143 My 21 '48 800w

Current Hist 14:294 My '48 140w

Kirkus 16:76 F 1 '48 200w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel
Library J 73:393 Mr 1 '48 130w

Reviewed by Perry Miller
Nation 166:665 Je 12 '48 700w

"As a description of what precipitated American belligerency in World War II, this book is merely an assemblage of curiosa. But as an alarm bell to jar us into serious contemplation of the rights of the public and the duties of officials in the exposition of truth where foreign affairs are concerned, it has great value. The State Department eternally whines that neither Congress nor the public is alert to the foreign-policy requirements of the USA. Neither Congress nor the public ever will become alert as long as the President and the State Department persist in describing those requirements in terms of sweet baloney." Blair Bolles
New Repub 119:25 Jl 5 '48 1050w

"'The Devil Theory' of war, one of the most eminent of American historians once observed, 'will not hold water.' He warned against the 'false notion' that 'wicked men make war—political or economic men or both. Under this conception the masses of the people are viewed as loving peace. . .' One could wish that Charles A. Beard, before plunging into this long, involved and jaundiced book, had pondered these very sound sentiments, more particularly since he was himself their author. If ever an ostensibly serious contribution to history was written on 'the devil theory of war' this would seem to be it. . . If Dr. Beard had remembered his own warning . . . he could, I think, have made a valuable contribution to our understanding of our times." Walter Millis
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 11 '48 1850w

"Mr. Beard's philippic against Franklin D. Roosevelt cannot fail to provoke criticism on grounds of historical method as well as of historical understanding. . . Mr. Beard does a useful job in bringing to light the inconsistencies and contradictions which accompanied the formation of policy in these trying years. As a prosecuting attorney, he does better with his case than economist John T. Flynn, George Morgenstern ('Pearl Harbor') and his predecessors in the field. But if he were writing as a historian, he might have investigated the political actualities which complicated the formation of policy; and, as a devotee of reality against appearance, he should have inquired into the reality of alternatives." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
N Y Times p4 Ap 11 '48 1350w

New Yorker 24:122 Ap 10 '48 220w

Reviewed by H. F. Pringle
Sat R of Lit 31:15 Ap 24 '48 800w

"Sounding more like a prosecuting attorney than the historian he is, Dr. Beard makes President Roosevelt and the Coming of the War a study in dissimulation. . . Historians will probably find it no great job to riddle the argument of Dr. Beard's book. It will not be so easy to ignore his emphatic conclusion."
— + Time 51:111 Ap 12 '48 500w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig
Yale R n s 37:762 summer '48 1000w

BEATH, PAUL ROBERT, comp. Febold Feboldson; tall tales from the great plains; il. by Lynn Trank. 124p $2.75 Univ. of Neb.

398.21 Feboldson, Febold. Folklore—West 48-1485

Selection of short tales about this folklore hero of the Great Plains region.

"Stories are anecdotal in length and lack sustained interest. Children may enjoy reading them, however. . . Vigorous, amusing drawings. . . Recommended for unlimited budgets, but it is hoped that a collection of these tales more useful to children's librarians and more interesting to children will be forthcoming." Clara Adams

+ — Library J 73:206 F 1 '48 110w

"Like all super-heroes, especially those whose feats often border on slapstick, Febold is frequently rather tiresome and is to be taken in small doses only. He is, however, an authentic American Legend despite his comparative youth, and like all things indigenously American he is very much alive, his humor is rough and ready, and his ideas and actions are big. Perhaps Febold is actually too young to be fully appreciated, but this book of his great deeds is a striking example of how a legend is made, as well as affording insight to the basic character of the American people." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p15A F 22 '48 360w

BEATON, CECIL. Portrait of New York; il. with the author's phot. and drawings. new ed 136p $5 Batsford

917.471 New York (city)—Description. New York (city)—Social life and customs

49-906

A revised and rewritten edition of the author's Cecil Beaton's New York, published by Lippincott ten years ago (Book Review Digest 1938). The author, who is an English artist, photographer, designer, and writer, gives his impressions of New York, and illustrates the volume with photographs.

"Mr. Beaton is an individualist, but he aligns himself with standard British practice in jibing at New York's eating and drinking habits, traffic hazards, color discrimination and Metropolitan Opera bad manners and artistic shortcomings. He writes informatively for Londoners about the grocer's messenger boy, kerbs, call boxes, liftmen and—most delectable of all—the man in the straw boater who abandons his Coke to make a telephone call." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S 12 '48 250w

"Cecil Beaton has done everything. . . Perhaps it is his versatility of interest and intellect which has given his portrait of New York the rich color and vitality it undoubtedly possesses. . . I would question the authenticity of the slang he found here, however. . . Perhaps he had better leave New York vernacular to the recent 'New York Confidential,' the smart-talking, out-of-the-side-of-the-mouth book by Lait and Mortimer, around whom Beaton has written tight, decorative circles."

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:28 Ag 21 '48 170w

BEAUVOIR, SIMONE DE. The blood of others; tr. from the French by Roger Senhouse and Yvonne Moyse. 292p $3 Knopf

48-7497

"Novel of tragic romance in France just before and during World War II, written from Sartre's existentialist viewpoint—that 'each of us is responsible for everything, and to every human being.' Political and labor conflicts blacken the already darkened lives of Helene Bertrand, who has developed into a Resistance worker and finally is killed, and her lover Jean Blomart, leader of her group." Library J

Canadian Forum 28:238 Ja '49 280w

Reviewed by Gustav Herzog

Chicago Sun Jl 21 '48 400w

"For all the final certainty of Mme de Beauvoir's Existential protagonist, he has a somewhat negative cast. By acting against something he knows is wrong—fascism—he seems to let an immediate problem excuse him from moral judgments, finding a release in violent action. We fear that he may always have a 'crisis' sufficiently immediate for the end to justify the means. We wonder if he has jumped from one rationalization into another." Melvin Maddocks

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 22 '48 700w

Kirkus 16:241 My 15 '48 160w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Library J 73:1025 Jl '48 120w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 20 '48 300w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones

— + Nation 167:212 Ag 21 '48 110w

"Without existentialism, this would undoubtedly have been a better novel. It may be that Sartre, having a clearer idea of his system, can preach its tenets less obtrusively; Miss de Beauvoir, on the other hand, will not spare us her message. The limits of fiction are wide, but it cannot after all be emancipated from itself entirely and made a handmaiden of philosophy." J. R. Newman

— + New Repub 119:24 Ag 2 '48 1100w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 36:244 S 18 '48 480w

"Despite its sincere humanity, this novel by the existentialist, Simone de Beauvoir, emerges as rather a minor piece of fiction, considerably less striking than the same author's bitter 'L'Invitée.' In fact, this present volume turns out mainly to be another among many contemporary tales of young confusion and of gallant participation in the Resistance." Iris Barry

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 18 '48 350w

"'The Blood of Others,' while unsatisfactory as a novel, (or even as a clarification of existentialist doctrines) is one of the few books I have read in translation which attempts to depict the atmosphere of Paris during its occupation. Though Mlle. de Beauvoir's picture may disappoint many who love the great city so miraculously spared, there is in it a scene describing the separation by the Nazis of Jewish children from their mothers, which alone makes her novel worth reading. Would that more of it had been written thus, from the heart rather than the head!" James Stern

— + N Y Times p14 Jl 25 '48 750w

"Mme. de Beauvoir is a shrewd and sensitive interpreter of the generation that grew up in prewar France, and her novel is able to stand on its own very considerable merits; it needn't necessarily be read as an exposition of one particular set of ideas."

+ New Yorker 24:71 Je 17 '48 160w

Reviewed by Vance Bourjaily

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 8 '48 650w

"Simone de Beauvoir's characters are practising existentialists, literally mouthpieces for the basic tenets of the philosophy. It would seem that she has succeeded where Sartre has failed. She violates some of our conceptions of good narrative writing, true; but she has written the real thesis novel in an economical, sometimes flat style which conceals a remarkably sustained note of suspense and mounting excitement due to the sheer vitality and force of her ideas." Richard McLaughlin

+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 Jl 17 '48 1150w

"The Blood of Others is painfully lacking in narrative tension, and stops and starts with the jarring irregularity of a goods train. An adult book, but in the worst sense of the word; that is to say, stiff and dry and slow for all its intelligence." Robert Kee

— Spec 181:314 S 3 '48 270w

Reviewed by Mary Hunter

Theatre Arts 32:9 Ag '48 850w

"In spite of all Mme. de Beauvoir's efforts, the characters fail to come alive; a case-history does not make good material for the novelist, nor does the chronicling of immediately past political history disguised as fiction."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p453 Ag 14 '48 330w

BECHDOLT, JOHN ERNEST. Going up; the story of vertical transportation; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. 128p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

621.877 Elevators—Juvenile literature

48-8301

"The story of vertical transportation; how it began, inventions and inventors that made it possible, and the different kinds of vertical transportation from elevators to ferris wheels and how they operate. . . Grades 4-8." (Booklist) Index.

BECHDOLT, J. E.—Continued

Booklist 45:36 S 15 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King
+ Chicago Sun O 30 '48 140w

Kirkus 16:480 S 15 '48 80w

"An amusing, readable and accurate book about the development of vertical transportation. . . Jeanne Bendick's illustrations add much to the clarity of the book and a good index adds to its usefulness. Recommended for grades 5-6." N. L. Rathbun
+ Library J 73:1519 O 15 '48 40w

"The only serious omission is the fork lift, the little portable elevator which now does half the world's work. However, this may be quibbling. Mr. Bechdolt explains everything with an easy, engaging informality which should delight his readers." Creighton Peet
+ N Y Times p28 Ja 22 '49 150w

Reviewed by Florence Kaplan
San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 28 '48 120w

Sat R of Lit 31:46 N 13 '48 50w

Wis Lib Bul 44:186 N '48

BECHDOLT, JOHN ERNEST, and MERWIN, DECIE. Dulcie and the gypsies [and other stories]. 63p il $1.50 Dutton 48-8134

Four more stories in rhyme about the little girl, Dulcie. This time her adventures involve gipsies, a monkey, her lost dog Bolivar, and a snowman. Grades two and three.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun S 11 '48 80w

Kirkus 16:397 Ag 15 '48 70w

"Told in simple style, enlivened by frequent conversations and unexpected rhymes and illustrated with drawings full of action and humor. Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges
+ Library J 73:1519 O 15 '48 110w

Wis Lib Bul 44:166 O '48

BECK, MARY I. Tai-Lee's precious seed; with drawings by Jim Lee. 137p $1.75; pa 90c Friendship press
48-18778

Story of a group of Chinese boys and girls who return from the mountains to the mission school where they had studied before the war, each bringing something which had been saved during the war years. Tai-Lee's package contained seed of a hardy kind of rice. Around this bag of seeds is told a story of present-day China.

"The story holds warm human interest while it gives much information about the young people of China as they face the world of today. Both the writer and the illustrator were born in China, and their vivid recollections of childhood there bring authority to the book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:373 S '48 90w

"Many elements of old China and new are brought into play but the focus is on Tai-Lee's growing decision to become himself a missionary to his people. Various career problems are discussed, and the approach will interest serious young readers."
+ Kirkus 16:309 Jl 1 '48 100w

"Will be a church school must but has general appeal for 8-10 year olds." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 73:1097 Ag '48 100w

BECK, WARREN. First fish, and other stories. 212p $2.50 Antioch press 47-12351

"Thirteen deceptively simple short stories with contemporary middle-western backgrounds. In The first fish, possible implications arising from the taking of life concern a father whose five-year-old son has caught his first fish. A young girl undertakes to administer a shock treatment to her fiancé, disturbed by his war experiences, in Beyond the brow of the hill. And in Today the road, the reader sees, through the eyes of a friend, the bigger-than-death affection existing between a man and his wife. All of the stories have previously been published in magazines." Booklist.

Booklist 44:172 Ja 1 '48

"Warren Beck's short fiction is marked by broad human sympathy and brisk, economical artistry. In a time when most writers of the 'literary' short story slant their efforts to the New Yorker magazine, and are consequently gobbled up alive by its genre and formulae, a maverick as persistent as Beck is a joyous phenomenon."
+ Chicago Sun p16A D 3 '47 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Jl 11 '48 90w

"There is a clear and wise perceptiveness which pervades most of these stories. Each one attempts to say something, to make a statement in dramatic terms and if on occasion there is an artistic lack, it is because the author has his moments when he forsakes character and the building of situation in order for the statement itself to emerge in the round. But even when Mr. Beck fails—and it is unfair to expect perfection all of the time—his attempts are in themselves rewarding." Hollis Alpert
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:36 Ap 24 '48 400w

"The stories are not equally successful, but only two fail. In Boundary Line and in Six in a Booth, the attempt is made to push the characters beyond their individual significance into a universal political or social one, and the characters therefore, hover bleakly somewhere between individuality and allegory."
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:20 Mr '48 210w

BECKER, MRS MAY (LAMBERTON), ed. Home book of laughter. 299p $3.50 Dodd 817.08 48-7992

An anthology of selections from British and American humorous writings. Partial contents: The night the bed fell, by James Thurber; Gertrude the governess: or Simple seventeen, by Stephen Leacock; Certainly, I play the piano! by Will Cuppy; Father wakes up the Village, by Clarence Day, Jr.; The casting away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine, by F. R. Stockton; Mr. Dooley on the game of football, by F. P. Dunne; The treasurer's report, by R. C. Benchley; David Harum sells a horse, by E. N. Westcott; The war of the chintz roses, by E. F. Benson; Peck's bad boy, by G. W. Peck; The third ingredient, by O. Henry.

Booklist 45:10 S 1 '48

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p14 D 9 '48 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '48

Commonweal 49:153 N 19 '48 70w

"They are not only full of fun but are also well written. The collection will be warmly welcomed in families where the happy practice of reading aloud is followed and where clean humor which will offend no one is appreciated." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:468 N '48 70w

"Well-made book and a well-chosen collection; individual libraries will have to decide how great is their need for this type of material. All ages." Clara Adams
+ Library J 73:1284 S 15 '48 100w

"Inevitably in any anthology of humor some selections aren't as funny as some others, and one can't help feeling that in a case or two better choices might have been made. S. J. Perelman, for instance, is represented by a spiritless essay that I don't think does justice to that great man. And there are a few pieces by latter-day authors that (here let us bare our arm) provoke an occasional wry smile and little else. 'The Home Book of Laughter' is, by and large, a handsome collection of humor, even if some of its contents are sobering things indeed." Rex Lardner

+ — N Y Times p20 Ag 22 '48 410w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 5 '48 60w

Wis Lib Bul 44:183 N '48

BEDIER, JULIE, pseud. See Bedier, M. J.

BEDIER, SISTER MARY JULIANA (JULIE BEDIER, pseud). My book about God; designed and il. by Louise Trevisan. [48p] $2 Macmillan

231 God—Juvenile literature 48-5397

A picture storybook for children four to six who are being brought up in the Catholic faith. The author and illustrator, two Maryknoll sisters, depict the brotherhood of man, by presenting the idea that God is our father, and that children everywhere belong to His family.

Kirkus 16:114 Mr 1 '48 60w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins
Library J 73:399 Mr 1 '48 40w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ap 25 '48 180w

BEEBE, ELSWYTH THANE (RICKER) (MRS WILLIAM BEEBE) (ELSWYTH THANE, pseud). Kissing kin. 374p $3 Duell 48-9235

The fifth novel in the author's series about the Williamsburg, Virginia, family, the Spragues. This book covers the first World war, and ends in Salzburg in 1934. The hero and heroine are the twins Calvert and Camilla Scott, who went to England in 1917. After her beloved brother's death, Camilla became a popular chanteuse, with a home in France.

Booklist 45:104 N 15 '48

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p15 D 16 '48 130w

"Romances flourish but not all of them end happily. The story frays a bit at the end but the tempo of the times has been skillfully recreated." M. C. Scoggin

+ — Horn Bk 25:64 Ja '49 80w

Kirkus 16:491 S 15 '48 270w

"Pleasant reading." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 73:1595 N 1 '48 70w

"Miss Thane has written a pleasant novel, as always, but it is not particularly profound, and adds little to an historical perspective of America."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 28 '48 200w

"There is some good reading in the book, but its interest is far too widely diffused to make it a forceful and compact novel." Barbara Bond

N Y Times p35 N 28 '48 240w

New Yorker 24:142 N 27 '48 140w

"Miss Thane's ability to project an elaborate family life and to keep her reader au courant with the interrelationships and fortunes of a large cast of characters, all connected either by blood or the circumstances of their lives, outstrips her success in bringing her individuals to life. And despite a carefully correct background of political events and meticulously informed description of Air Force action in World War I she also lacks ingenuity in recreating her period as Ellen Berlin, for instance, does so cleverly in 'Lace Curtain' by means of a tag of slang, the words of a popular song, or some half-forgotten fad." Pamela Taylor

Sat R of Lit 31:13 D 11 '48 550w

BEEBE, LUCIUS MORRIS, ed. Dreadful California. See Helper, H. R.

BEILENSON, PETER, ed. Updike: American printer. See Updike: American printer

BEIM, JERROLD. Country fireman; il. by Leonard Shortall. [48p] $2 Morrow 48-4143

Picture book showing how Ricky earned a ride on the fire engine in his town's Fourth of July parade.

Booklist 45:36 S 15 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun N 6 '48 40w

Commonweal 49:146 N 19 '48 50w

Kirkus 16:335 Jl 15 '48 100w

"Leonard Shortall's many black-and-white and colored illustrations and Jerrold Beim's straightforward text combine to produce an ideal book for seven to nine-year-old boys. Cloth covers but weak stitching. Expensive." Claire Nolte

Library J 73:1197 S 1 '48 80w

"The whole story, from beginning to outcome, and the lively pictures in orange, blue and black capture the very essence of small boyhood." V. H. M.

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 14 '48 180w

"A satisfying tale for 4 to 7 year old fire buffs with plenty of action in both text and pictures." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p35 S 12 '48 90w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter
Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '48 120w

Wis Lib Bul 44:166 O '48

BEIM, MRS LORRAINE (LEVEY). Alice's family; il. by Violet LaMont. 120p $2 Harcourt 48-8366

Story telling how three children, ages 5, 8 and 10, kept house while their mother was in bed with an injured foot.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb
Atlantic 182:119 N '48 110w

"Normal, wholesome, friendly and fun." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun O 9 '48 80w

"An exciting story of a very human family that is exasperating and lovable." E. R. J.

+ Churchman 162:17 N 15 '48 10w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:457 N '48 40w

Kirkus 16:436 S 1 '48 70w

"Recommended for grades 3-4." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 73:1519 O 15 '48 60w

"This could, I suppose, be called a moral tale, because the children learn that a family can work together and have glorious fun, in spite of competitiveness, squabbles and arguments. . . But no child will mind the moral since it is well wrapped in a warm and interesting story." M. C. Ernst

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 21 '48 200w

BELCHER, WYATT WINTON. Economic rivalry between St. Louis and Chicago, 1850-1880. 223p $3 Columbia univ. press

330.977 St Louis—Economic conditions. Chicago—Economic conditions 47-11912

"The purpose of this study has been to analyze the basic factors in the growth of St. Louis and Chicago in order to explain the rivalry between them and to determine why Chicago won over St. Louis as the great city of the Middle West. . . The study is primarily concerned with the economic geography of the two cities, the early importance of inland water transportation, the influence of the railroads, the shifting of the trade routes, the significance of the Civil War, the decline of the waterways, and kindred topics." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This is a detailed but nevertheless readable account of the rivalry between two distinguished American cities during their early and formative years. . . It is good for us to have the factors in Chicago's success so fully set forth, even to the extent of repetition, for such factors have made the world of business go round. In a doctoral dissertation, such as this, printed for public use, it would have been helpful to the reader if the analogy of other rivalries, both at home and abroad, had been set forth." N. S. B. Gras

BELCHER, W. W.—Continued

+ Am Hist R 53:908 Jl '48 450w

"Mr. Belcher presents clearly and well the geographic and economic facts, but he also sees that neither city was so handicapped by nature that it could not have won the competition. The difference must, then, have involved the human factor in important fashion, and hence a comparison is made of the populations, particularly of the outstanding civic leaders. The difficulties of any such comparison are obvious, but Mr. Belcher deserves great credit for having made the attempt." R. E. Riegel

+ Social Educ 12:183 Ap '48 270w

BELFRAGE, CEDRIC. Abide with me. 351p $3.50 Sloane

48-6949

Novel describing "the rise of the Hope family to a dominating position in the funeral business, and the methods used to attain this position." (Library J)

Christian Century 65:805 Ag 11 '48 170w

"Evelyn Waugh recently wrote a straight satire on the Hollywood funeral industry which came off quite well. This author, however, has tried to combine the best elements of such a straight satire and the psychological novel, with amorphous and unpleasant results." Nika Standen

— Commonweal 48:337 Jl 16 '48 280w

Kirkus 16:175 Ap 1 '48 160w

"One hopes the manner of presentation which includes rather ghoulish details, will not deflect attention from the principles which the author rightly attacks." Donald Wasson

Library J 73:707 My 1 '48 100w

Reviewed by Richard Mealand

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Je 20 '48 600w

"Entertaining."

New Yorker 24:78 My 29 '48 150w

"The author has obviously done a good deal of research into the mechanics of embalming and prettifying corpses and he had a wide open target in the commercialized bad taste with which people permit their funerals to be handled, but he is more interested in the mechanics of the undertaker's trade than in his people. He holds them up on a pin for us to see without turning them around to give us a full-sided view." E. M. T.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 4 '48 210w

"Peppered as it is throughout with unending physical details of cremation, embalming, preparation of corpses for burial, and other such vivid detail, the novel soon becomes a test for the reader with a touchy stomach, and a trial as well. Its insistence on naturalistic detail often blunts whatever satiric darts Mr. Belfrage has to offer." Max Wilk

— Sat R of Lit 31:23 S 4 '48 420w

Springf'd Republican p10B Je 27 '48 420w

BELL, ARTHUR ERNEST. Christian Huygens and the development of science in the seventeenth century. 220p il $4.50 Longmans

B or 92 Huygens, Christiaan. Science—History [48-3906]

A study of the life and work of the seventeenth century Dutch physicist, Christian Huygens. "Among our debts to him are some of the basic theorems of mechanics and especially the emphasis he laid on the concept of energy which is now so dominant in physical theory; the establishment of the pendulum clock as a practical instrument for time-keeping; the wave theory of light and 'Huygens's Principle,' which is still used in practical optical designing; and the discovery of the ring form of Saturn's mysterious appendages." (Manchester Guardian) Bibliography. Index.

"A very valuable account of a critical stage in the history of thought which can be strongly recommended to all who are interested in this subject. It is based on a study of the original documents and written in a manner intelligible to those without specialised scientific knowledge." Herbert Dingle

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 9 '48 300w

Reviewed by J. Bronowski

New Statesman & Nation 36:79 Jl 24 '48 750w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:25 Ja '48

"Until now there has been no English biography of Christian Huygens. Dr. Bell has therefore chosen a new theme for his first essay in the history of science, and he has produced an excellent book."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p192 Ap 3 '48 1500w

BELL, HAROLD SILL. Oil shales and shale oils. 157p il $4 Van Nostrand

622.338 Oil shales. Petroleum 48-10508

"This book presents an economic background of the industry throughout the world, describing various developments in the commercial exploitation of oil from shale. It gives a detailed account of shale oil technology, covering all processes from mining to processing of the oil. Mining, crushing, retorting, oil refining and residue disposal methods are discussed, illustrated with diagrams of apparatus, flow sheets of processes and layout of plants. The chapter on refining reflects the author's experience in the petroleum industry." (Library J) Chapter references. Indexes.

"The value of Bell's work lies mainly in the fact that it brings together and summarizes the existing information on the methods and economics of producing oil from shale. Most data come from hard-to-find foreign sources, and it is a pleasure to know that some of it has been slipped through the narrowing cracks of the Iron Curtain." J. R. C.

+ Chem Eng 55:291 D '48 200w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:1515 O 15 '48 90w

BELL, HERMON FISKE, comp. Religion through the ages; an anthology; ed. and interpreted by Charles S. Macfarland. 445p. $5 Philosophical lib.

208.2 Religious literature—Collections 48-6588

"A collection of theistic philosophers, theologians, essayists, dramatists, historians and poets, Stoic, Protestant and Catholic, from Cleanthes, 300 B.C., to the twentieth century, including Epictetus, Hugo, Carlyle, Augustine, Calvin, Bunyan, Kant, Dante, Browning, Whittier and George Eliot, among immortals in religious literature." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The selections are well chosen for the purpose indicated, and both illustrate the spiritual biography of the compiler and stimulate the thoughts and feelings of the reader." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 25:376 O '48 200w

"Mr. Bell seems to have compiled it as a kind of literary gospel of humanism. For him, having undertaken the labor of searching out his material himself, it might have served. For the reader, who comes upon it as a diet of predigested sweetness and light, it is as bland and lacking of savor as are most prepared and packaged foods." E. M. T.

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 4 '48 120w

BELL, MARGARET ELIZABETH. Watch for a tall white sail. 222p $2.50 Morrow

48-5408

A novel for older girls in which Alaska in 1887 is the background. Florence Monroe at sixteen leaves Victoria and goes with her family to Wrangell island. All thru one harrowing summer Florence cooks for her brothers at the island fish saltery, some distance away from her father and mother and their new home. It is a time of hard work and even tragedy, but in the end the tall white sail brings happiness to Florence.

Booklist 44:235 Mr 1 '48

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Je 12 '48 270w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p13 O 14 '48 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '48

"A fine story of Alaska which rates equally high as a realistic picture of united family life and as a record of pioneer experiences through a winter of storms and hardships." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:196 My '48 110w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:211 My '48 70w

Kirkus 16:22 Ja 15 '48 80w

"An extraordinary story for teen-age girls—fine style, fast pace, good character delineation, and the ring of truth. . . Enthusiastically recommended." Dorotha Dawson
+ Library J 73:486 Mr 15 '48 80w

"The scene comes to life before a reader's eyes; the character of its Scots family and their several reactions under terrific strain make one live these crucial months with them." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 7 '48 360w

"The story is a little slow in getting under way and occasionally wordy, but the whole is an invigorating novel for older girls in which hardship and grief are met with courage and enriched by a delicately handled romance." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p31 Mr 7 '48 230w

"Reality and romance, so blended, make a very satisfactory novel for older girls; one above the milk and water trash so often offered them. The love story rings true, and will be cherished by those who appreciate the depth of feeling beneath the prim manner of a day gone by." Quail Hawkins
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 7 '48 350w

"It is a moving and, in many ways, an unusual story told against a background of the far North where the forces of nature test the force that man can bring to bear against them. The make-up of the book is very attractive. The frontispiece in color gives the feel of the North. The type is clear and readable. It is as if the designer said: 'Here is a good story. It needs no special ornament. Take it and read it.' " M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 Mr 13 '48 310w

Wis Lib Bul 44:65 Mr '48

BELLAH, JAMES WARNER. Irregular gentleman. 248p $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-5571

Random recollections of a wandering life, representing some thirty years spent in ranging around the world from Mexico to England, and from Canada to China.

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '48

"Always he had a faculty for being in the right place at the right time for a story; he knew all sorts of people, including Floyd Gibbons, Warden Lawes, Amelia Earhart, and many of them add spice to a potpourri of an adventurous life. There is almost nothing of the 'literary gentleman' in this portrait."
Kirkus 15:689 D 15 '47 150w

"If there was a dull page in the manuscript, someone removed it before publication; if there was a thoughtful page, it was also excised. The result is a burst of he-man anecdotes which detonate in succession and with increasing violence. Arms, legs, heads are lopped off. Men step from crashed planes and fall 'herring-dead.' Stabbed bodies float on quiet estuaries. . . It was all done quietly and in good taste, according to Mr. Bellah. . . There is no continuity, no chronology, no particular pattern to the anecdotes as Mr. Bellah relates them, but they build in detail the picture of a man, a man with a large appetite for living." Thomas Sugrue
N Y Times p7 F 22 '48 650w

"It is impossible not to have a certain respect for all the things Mr. Bellah has done, as acknowledged here. It is equally impossible not to wish that he had let the adventure tell itself, and had left out the purple writing that too often gets in the way of his narrative." M. S.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 18 '48 320w

"There is an unmistakable Mitty quality in all this that disturbs the desired sense of awe. Mr. Bellah's admitted purpose was to 'go out and know your town,' thereby further reducing the earth's surface. The accumulated knowledge is scant. The well-watered Richard Harding Davis approach seems much too consciously carefree and the determined restlessness immensely fatiguing." C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 31:12 My 22 '48 300w

BELLAIRS, GEORGE. Case of the seven whistlers. 198p $2.50 Macmillan 48-7867

Detective story.

Booklist 45:52 O 1 '48

"George Bellairs has written better tecs although this one is incidentally charming in an acrid way." James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p10 Ag 6 '48 110w

"Nicely characterized, neatly plotted, for those in not too much of a hurry."
+ Kirkus 16:270 Je 1 '48 110w

"As ever, Littlejohn provides excellent detection and Mr. Bellairs gives with amusing personae such as the vicar, Constable Puddiphatt and Uncle Alfred, inventor of a mole-trap that rings a bell in your bedroom when it functions. Recommended to literate puzzlers who can do with a bit of quiet fun on the side." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 1 '48 180w

"Inspector Littlejohn of Scotland Yard, who has moved faithfully and with fortitude through Mr. Bellairs' other mysteries, has as a co-worker a most interesting, liverish character named Superintendent Gillespie. They all come through, with wit and perception, and without any 'love interest' to fog up the works." H. B. Parker
+ N Y Times p13 Ag 1 '48 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 22 '48 120w

"Satisfactory."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:28 Jl 31 '48 40w

"George Bellairs, that delightful British author of detective stories, has brightened the summer season with another adventure of Inspector Littlejohn of Scotland Yard." D. F. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 29 '48 150w

BELLAMANN, HENRY, and BELLAMANN, MRS KATHERINE (JONES). Parris Mitchell of Kings Row. 333p $3 Simon & Schuster
48-6407

"This book, completed by Mrs. Bellamann after her husband's death three years ago, is the second installment of what was to have been a trilogy dealing with a small Midwestern town's transition from a somnolent late-nineteenth-century glen into an accelerated modern community. The forces of progress are typified by the young man, now in his mid-thirties and a psychiatrist, who dominated the first volume. Despite reactionary opposition to his brand of therapy, he moves confidently among his fellow-townsmen in the days just preceding the first World War, distributing professional formulas for mental health to all who seek him out." New Yorker

BELLAMANN, HENRY—Continued
Booklist 44:313 My 15 '48

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p9X Ap 18 '48 380w

Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 5 '48 650w

"Mrs. Bellamann has been faithful to the spirit of her late husband's book and to the parts of this sequel which he lived to block out. In some ways this is a better writing job, for 'King's Row' indulged in dialogue in the fashion which Henry James considers an evasion of the novelist's art. . . But the whole thing is blurred, for violence and outrage find no answer in musical therapy, the release of psychic energies—'for the sake of the genial humanity developed that way'—or the right romance at last. The really final problems are left just about where the four humors would have left them." Riley Hughes
Commonweal 48:82 Mr 7 '48 400w

"In plot structure, in character and mass of incident, there is a similarity of appeal—but the style, the dialogue, the literary values of this book indicate the loss of Bellamann's own facility of technical skill, and bear the mark of amateur handling of a book posthumously completed from notes, memory, and a few finished sections."
Kirkus 16:64 F 1 '48 200w

"Mrs. Bellamann shows logically and convincingly the development of people whom we first met in 'Kings Row,' and of others who come to play a part in the life of Parris Mitchell and of the town. As she points out, she has made no attempt to copy her husband's style, and in this respect the present volume sometimes lacks the smoothness and authority of the earlier novel. Like that volume, however, it is rich in the range of both character and event." Mary Ross
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 18 '48 800w

"Here in the life of this town during World War I are the makings of a good novel, but unfortunately Mrs. Bellamann hasn't rolled them well. She believes that when she has said something is so, she has made it so. The reader has different ideas. He can't believe in these characters, neither in the doctor, nor his shadowy wife, nor the wife's opposite with whom he falls in love, nor the politician whose long-drawn-out duel with Dr. Mitchell forms the central tension of the book. The style is slow and heavy, the exposition awkward and angular." Horace Reynolds
— N Y Times p17 Ap 25 '48 500w

"Mediocre."
New Yorker 24:104 Ap 24 '48 170w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 18 '48 650w

"It would be pleasant to grow exclamatory over 'Parris Mitchell of King's Row' if one could. Obviously the ethical intent of this book (as of the series) was and is laudable. Obviously the theme pleased a good many readers of volume one. Some of these I have talked to; they are a little vague about it, but they thought it was a 'good book.' Others remembered it as 'preachy.'" H. M. Jones
Sat R of Lit 31:19 My 15 '48 500w

"Through Dr. Mitchell, the Authors Bellamann attempt what amounts to a mass psychoanalysis of the town of Kings Row. Rape, murder and lesser sins are examined in language that seems lifted from a handbook of psychiatric clichés. And thanks to a brazenly contrived plot, good is rewarded and evil gets its comeuppance with a sureness and thoroughness that real life rarely witnesses."
Time 51:108 Ap 26 '48 400w

BELOFF, MAX, ed. See Federalist

BELOFF, MAX. Foreign policy of Soviet Russia; v 1: 1929-36. 261p $4.25 Oxford

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations (48-478)

"The volume opens with a review of Soviet Russia's international position in 1929, after which the author passes to the analysis of the Soviet foreign policy during the period of world depression and the rise of Nazism. More than half of the book is given over to the study of the search for collective security conducted by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics under the spur of the threat represented by Japan and Hitler's Germany. This section includes a consideration of the attitude of the Soviet Union in regard to the League of Nations, and of the development of the system of security pacts. There is also a brief but enlightening examination of Soviet nationalism and the Red Army." Ann Am Acad

---

"Aside from a strained effort to justify British diplomacy after 1933 and a rather softer handling of Poland for her choice of German as against Russian friendship than most unbiased writers have managed, Mr. Beloff's treatment of his subject is dispassionate and impartial. A serious weakness is the absence of an essay on the fundamentals of Russia's strategic position." M. C. Wren
Am Hist R 53:821 Jl '48 450w

"This scholarly and well-written book will be welcomed by American students of the Soviet Union. It is an important addition to the altogether too brief list of serious studies of Soviet foreign policy available in the English language." D. F. White
+ Ann Am Acad 256:229 Mr '48 460w

Foreign Affairs 26:576 Ap '48 110w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 17 '47 390w

"The material is so fascinating that, in spite of its dryness, the book makes interesting reading, even for the general public." Hans Kohn
+ N Y Times p25 Ja 25 '48 1150w

"So long as the Soviet Union and its affairs continue to command an overwhelming amount of public attention almost any book about Russia is sure of a ready welcome. The market is insatiable. But Mr. Beloff's work is not just another book about Russia. It is a scholarly and balanced account." G. B. Thomas
+ Spec 179:562 O 31 '47 1000w

"The volume, with its 248 tightly packed pages, is a mine of information. Equally valuable for reference are the long appendices dealing chiefly with the little-explored phases of Soviet activity in China, Mongolia, and Sinkiang. Intense research has justified itself in a work that achieves power through its restraint."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p571 N 8 '47 1800w

BEMELMANS, LUDWIG. Best of times; an account of Europe revisited, with 50 color and 110 black il. by the author. 188p $3.95 Simon & Schuster

914 Europe—Description and travel 48-10559

Essays and pictures in which the author-artist attempts to show various parts of post-war Europe, especially France, Germany, Switzerland and Austria. The book is based on the pre-war memories and his trips abroad since 1946.

Booklist 45:135 D 15 '48

Cath World 168:336 Ja '49 120w

"By far the best thing of its kind that has appeared. The book itself is extraordinarily well designed and handsome, the illustrations are both copious and eloquent, and the text is as lively as good conversation. Even more striking, perhaps, is the modesty of the author, who—unlike all too many literate travelers—refrains from writing about himself and concentrates his benign but accurate glance upon the new world of trans-Atlantic man." Iris Barry
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 14 '48 800w

Reviewed by Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p6 N 7 '48 450w

New Yorker 24:149 N 13 '48 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 11 '48 750w

"For sheer beauty of layout and good writing the material has suffered not at all in conversion from magazine to book. Bemelmans has a wonderful ear for conversation as he overhears it at the next table, or aboard the Arlberg Express. He covers Paris, Switzerland, Austria, Bavaria, Arles, and Venice, and always his writing smiles rather slyly, the way his paintings smile, at the foibles of types and nationalities."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:39 N 27 '48 220w

Springf'd Republican p18A Ja 16 '49 480w

"No man can be more superficial than he when commenting on the causes of contemporary misery . . . but it is precisely this relaxed laziness of thought that gives him not only his sensuous warmth but his faculty to echo, like a verbatim record, whatever scenes or conversations may happen to brush up against his impressionable senses. The Best of Times is . . . a nostalgic, often beautiful restatement of things that have survived, and a horrified reporting of things that now lie in ruin. Like the vivid paintings and drawings that accompany them, the numerous anecdotes carry a rich embroidery of Bemelmanly fantasy."

+ Time 52:113 N 8 '48 850w

BENEDICT, MRS RUTH (FULTON), and WELTFISH, GENE. In Henry's backyard; the races of mankind. [55p] il $2 Schuman

572 Race 48-5198

Henry, a very friendly man, dreamed that the world had grown so small it would fit into his own backyard. When morning came, there they all were. Henry then proceeded to greet them, but was stopped by his doubts of the suitability of such friendship. Then, by means of brief text and pictures, the essential samenesses of mankind are explained. The drawings are adapted from an animated color-film, Brotherhood of Man. The text is based on the pamphlet Races of Mankind.

Booklist 44:211 F 15 '48

Reviewed by T. H. Wright
Chicago Sun p8X Ap 25 '48 360w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:212 My '48 20w

Kirkus 16:50 F 1 '48 110w

"Don't waste this book on children; adults with brains are the ones to have it. The kids will take it away from them, anyway."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 7 '48 50w

"In view of the author's humanitarian intentions, it is a pity that the illustrative part of the book should be so flat. The dumb show of the pictures moves forward in jerks, and but for the captions would not be really intelligible. The raw, harsh colors do not bear out, as they ought, the cheerful protestations of the text." E. B. G.

+ — N Y Times p23 Mr 7 '48 450w

Reviewed by Lucien Warner
Sat R of Lit 31:27 Mr 27 '48 600w

School & Society 67:142 F 21 '48 70w

Springf'd Republican p8B F 29 '48 130w

Wis Lib Bul 44:61 Mr '48

BENESCH, OTTO. Catalogue of Rembrandt's selected drawings. See Rembrandt Hermanszoon van Rijn

BENET, WILLIAM ROSE, ed. Reader's encyclopedia; an encyclopedia of world literature and the arts. 1242p $6; thumb indexed $6.75 Crowell

803 Literature—Dictionaries, indexes, etc. 48-8901

"A one-volume collection, in one alphabet, of miscellaneous information on music, art, literature, history, mythology, and current affairs, using some of the material in the 20-year-old Crowell's Handbook for readers and writers." Booklist

---

"There are some omissions (for instance, Koestler and a number of noted painters, including Bonnard and Derain), striking in view of the many trivial contemporaries included. Still, the book is a superb achievement—immensely informative, a delight to browse through and an amazing value for the price." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 183:88 Ja '49 110w

"Will be useful for quick reference, in spite of careless alphabetizing and numerous bibliographical inconsistencies."

Booklist 45:85 N 1 '48

"Any library (or individual, for that matter) not possessing this reference work lacks the best one-volume encyclopedia of literature and the arts on the market." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 73:1744 D 1 '48 210w

"Those readers who remember with affection Dr. Brewer's little red 'Reader's Handbook' will relish Mr. Benét's new reference book for readers. . . The book is eccentric enough to leave out Augustus John, unconventional enough not to list the composer of 'Carry Me Back to Old Virginny.' It is also casual enough to be critical of some contemporary writers and not of others. As such, it is a reference book with a personality. It invites, not repels, reading." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p16 N 7 '48 260w

"Excellent reference volume." E. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 31 '48 150w

"What transforms 'The Reader's Encyclopedia' into a kind of masterpiece among miscellanies is simply the mind of Mr. Benét. Mr. Benét is not merely a compiler, but a scholar; he is not merely learned, he is educated. The evidences of his mental temper are not traceable in any single entry. They permeate the entire book. . . One can, of course, pick microscopic flaws even in the editor's almost perfect flair for the up-to-date." Clifton Fadiman

+ Sat R of Lit 31:20 O 23 '48 3150w

"As in any compilation of this kind, the choices within the space limitations are largely a matter of opinion, with space and importance often quite out of proportion. . . You can find Mary Pickford and Katharine Hepburn listed, but not Shirley Temple or Ingrid Bergman, Harry Vardon but not Bobby Jones, Jack Dempsey but not Joe Louis; Ty Cobb, Larry Lajoie and Christy Mathewson but not Hans Wagner, Lou Gehrig or Walter Johnson; the Davis cup but not the Stanley cup, the English Derby but not the Kentucky Derby, the World Court but not the World Series, the Iron Mask but not the Iron Curtain. There's a storehouse of information here on what one may come across and want to find out about, with many odd items you may never have encountered, but of course far from everything." D. B. B.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7B N 7 '48 420w

BENJAMIN, PARK. Poems; introd. and notes by Merle M. Hoover. 209p $3 Columbia univ. press

811 48-5652

One hundred poems selected from the writings of Park Benjamin, whose work was published in American magazines from about 1825 to 1864. Indexes.

Reviewed by F. L. Mott
New Eng Q 21:397 S '48 350w

"Useful chiefly as a collection of typical nineteenth-century polite poetry; that is almost to say, bad poetry." Maxwell Geismar
N Y Times p26 Ap 4 '48 40w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins
Sat R of Lit 31:19 Jl 31 '48 190w

"A magazine poet, Benjamin was particularly responsive to the section of the public which enjoyed the sentimental, the melancholy, and the genteelly amatory. There is no indication in the poems published here that Benjamin had deeper, uncultivated talents. . . Presenting this conscientiously edited collection as a typical sample of popular poetry, Mr. Hoover nevertheless overestimates the merits of these verses."

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:140 Je '48 200w

BENNETT, DOROTHY AGNES. Golden encyclopedia; il. by Cornelius De Witt. 125p maps $2.50 Simon & Schuster

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries—Juvenile literature 46-11939

For descriptive note see Annual 1946.

"The Golden Encyclopedia presents at low cost a wealth of information on topics about which most children have a lively curiosity. It should appeal particularly to children from eight to twelve years of age. It provides an excellent introduction to multi-volume encyclopedias and is also useful as a picture book for small children. It is not, however, inclusive enough in coverage to be considered a true encyclopedia and will have only very limited use as a reference tool. It is recommended for homes and for recreational reading in libraries serving elementary school children."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 19:1 Ja '48 500w

BENNETT, HENRY STANLEY. Chaucer and the fifteenth century. (Oxford history of English literature, v. 2, pt. 1) 326p $6 Oxford

820.9 English literature—History and criticism. Chaucer, Geoffrey 48-4950

"Mr. Bennett sets out 'to reassess the work of our greatest medieval author and to re-survey the fifteenth century in the light of modern scholarship.' His comment in the preface on the nature of his task raises a fundamental problem: the fact that much of the best-known fifteenth-century literature has been dealt with by Sir Edmund Chambers, he says, has been in some ways a gain, 'for it has allowed me to discuss the literature of that century with more attention to its promise than to its performance.' He is concerned with 'the fifteenth-century's contribution to the body and continuity of our literature' rather than with literary value." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Chaucer and the Fifteenth Century is not likely to attract a wide audience; but it fits easily into a place that was waiting to be filled." Paul Dinkins

+ Cath World 168:253 D '48 320w

"This is in many ways a rather unsatisfactory book, but it will derive a weight it does not deserve from the fact that it is one of the twelve volumes of the Oxford History of English Literature. Mr. Bennett may have a sufficiency of what passes for scholarship, though his habit of flourishing it under our noses lays him somewhat under suspicion. But he is deficient in insight and he is case-hardened in a gentlemanly sort of anti-Catholic prejudice. . . Only the first third of the book is about Chaucer himself; the rest is about the fifteenth century in general. And here Mr. Bennett is better, though his prejudice leads him to slight such spiritual writers as Walton Hilton and Richard Rolle." Theodore Maynard

— + Commonweal 48:624 O 8 '48 330w

"Whilst Mr. Bennett is supremely happy with Chaucer, adding a keener sense to our grasp of the ways in which Chaucer's variegated intercourse with the world and its affairs nourished his imagination, he is almost as engrossing in his presentation of the thousands of lines of verse and the reams of prose which the often tedious and seldom adept writers poured into the fifteenth century. Mr. Bennett achieves this without making any false claims for the literary merit of his authors. . . Best of all is Mr. Bennett's section on the prose of the time." H. B. Charlton

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 27 '48 320w

Reviewed by H. S. Davies

New Statesmen & Nation 35:360 My 1 '48 750w

"Here Mr. Bennett is at his best. In his interpretation of the poet's great characters there is not much that is very novel—it would be difficult to write at once with originality and authority on such a theme; but notably excellent is the study of the qualities of Chaucer's style: the clear cut, limited meaning of words and phrases, without the associative value which later poetry possesses, which is part of Chaucer's pellucid charm; the development and final mastery of metrical forms; and the light irony, good humor, and pervasive tolerance of his outlook upon life." S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N 7 '48 430w

"Mr. Bennett turns resolutely away from Sir Edmund [Chambers'] audience of earnest research students to address the plain man, and on the whole he serves him well. It is after all the plain man that Chaucer was out to catch. More puzzling is the curious lay-out of the material in this new history, with a division of interests which will ultimately make for inconvenience in a standard work of reference. . . There is some imperfect sympathy in dismissing The Testament of Criseyde as 'a not unworthy pendant to Chaucer's poem.' However we judge it, as success or failure, the Testament is either more or less than that. It lives with an independent spirit of its own, and to some readers it is one of the great moving achievements of its century. Mr. Bennett does not set out to present a new view of Chaucer, but he restates old truths with conviction and freshness; and much is put with point in small space." John Bryson

+ — Spec 180:230 F 20 '48 600w

"Mr. Bennett accompanies his account of Chaucer with chapters on the life of the age which convey a great deal of scholarly information in a readable manner, but seldom rise above the conventional notion of 'social background.' All this has its usefulness for the student, but it remains so much inorganic material. Mr. Bennett seems to lack a certain inwardness in the understanding of medieval habits of mind and sensibility, or at all events he has not succeeded in communicating it to the reader."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p221 Ap 17 '48 1950w

BENNETT, RICHARD. Mick and Mack and Mary Jane. 47p il $1.75 Doubleday

48-8545

Story of how Mary Jane, a mountain mouse, saved loggers Mick and Mack from a forest fire. For grades 3-4.

Booklist 45:90 N 1 '48

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 168:220 D '48 120w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p4 N 9 '48 250w

"A bit of the foolery and exaggeration of the folk tale, and perhaps a bit adult in its implications as to characteristics of the Scot and the Irishman. But there's enough fun and adventure."

Kirkus 16:477 S 15 '48 90w

"Appealing to any age group, this humorous and homely tale will prove especially valuable to storytellers. . . Recommended." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 73:1519 O 15 '48 100w

Sat R of Lit 31:29 N 13 '48 50w

Wis Lib Bul 44:186 N '48

BENNETT, SAMUEL V. Full employment. See Upjohn institute for community research

BENNEY, MARK, pseud. See Degras, H. E.

BENTLEY, ERIC RUSSELL. Bernard Shaw. (Makers of modern literature) 242p $2 New directions

B or 92 Shaw, George Bernard 47-12491

"The most recent appraisal of a man whose long life has been partially spent in evaluating himself. The author feels that Mr. Shaw's public personality has obscured his importance as a writer and thinker; in the course of an attempt to disengage the real Shaw from the legendary one, he argues that the Shavian philosophy is a sensible eclectic body of thought rather than a bundle of conflicting epigrams, that his plays are not as abstract as they are generally believed to be, and that Shaw should be viewed as one of the great modern teachers." (New Yorker) Bibliographical notes. Index.

Booklist 44:186 Ja 15 '48

"Eric Bentley has written a considerably better volume than his The Playwright as a Thinker. He doesn't contribute any appreciable amount to Shavian scholarship but he has a certain clarity about his writing which will be pleasing to students. His thinking about the theatre is pretty undistinguished and undeveloped but any book about Shaw should be bought by drama and theatre collections." George Freedley

Library J 73:199 F 1 '48 60w

"To New Directions 'The Makers of Modern Literature' series, Mr. Bentley contributes the inevitable treatise on Bernard Shaw. He has performed the service ably and, though it would seem there is little, if anything, left to say about the Grand Old Irishman of modern English literature, he has re-said what is familiar in a fresh and interesting manner and has even added a few personal observations of more vernal color. The small volume, in this opinion, is its author's best critical performance to date." G. J. Nathan

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja 4 '48 900w

"There is a good deal of random cleverness in the book, which leads in too many ways at once to be constantly helpful to Shavian beginners. But Bentley does put his finger right on the spot when he stresses 'the standard conflict of vitality and system.' . . Eric Bentley is not himself another Shaw in expository skill. But he knows his master's mind and hand and his 'polemical defense' is full of lively thrusts which are not unworthy of his theme." Ivor Brown

+ — N Y Times p3 Ja 25 '48 1550w

"Convincing, although the ungrateful subject would probably scorn every word of it."

+ New Yorker 23:93 D 20 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 18 '48 200w

"To my way of thinking, the fairest, the most illuminating, and the best analysis so far to have been written of [Shaw's] beliefs, his methods, and his meaning." J. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 31:22 F 7 '48 1700w

Time 50:64 D 29 '47 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:11 Mr '48 240w

"A good wine needs no bush; it is more rewarding to read a great playwright than to read about him." H. T. Perry

Yale R n s 37:546 spring '48 420w

BENTLEY, PHYLLIS ELEANOR. The Brontës. (English novelists ser) 115p $2 Swallow, A.

928 Brontë family [48-390]

A short study of the Brontës and their works. The book is divided into three parts: the story of the Brontës' lives and background; a description of their works; and a brief summing up of their place in English literature. Very brief bibliography. No index.

"Miss Bentley's book belongs to a series, on the English novelists, that is intended to be an introduction as well as an up-to-date assessment. She has accomplished both these tasks successfully. She retells the well-known story with ability and discernment; and, at the same time, she presents some of its elements in a light that, if not new, will appear so to many who may think they know all about the Brontës." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 4 '47 800w

Kirkus 16:616 N 15 '48 30w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 73:1742 D 1 '48 20w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 120:27 Ja 3 '49 240w

"Miss Bentley has been able to make use of one of the most absorbing pieces of recent literary research—the transcription and analysis of a hundred or so tiny manuscript books of their early writing. . . Miss Bentley has the great merit as a writer on the Brontës of being neither patronising nor possessive, and she does not indulge in the game of speculation without some honest evidence. Attractively written, concise, yet abounding in ideas, her book is a model of the short critical biography." Naomi Lewis

+ New Statesman & Nation 34:316 O 18 '47 750w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 D 19 '48 200w

"Miss Phyllis Bentley is exceptionally well qualified to write of the Brontës. Herself a Yorkshirewoman, she knows the moors and the people. She understands the world of the Brontës, the social pattern and economic conditions, which hemmed them in, causing them to be 'buried with inferior minds.'" Abbott Martin

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 9 '49 330w

"Miss Bentley's book is, in short, an entirely worthy telling of a tale which must always fascinate and move those who read it, because it is at once so extraordinary, so tragic, and so triumphant." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 32:16 Ja 29 '49 410w

"The first section, which is also the longest, does precisely what a book of this sort should do; it establishes the setting and arouses interest in the characters. It is marred, I think, by a sentimental turn both of thought and of phrase. . . However, on the whole, this part of the book is well done, and in particular the account of the two dream-worlds. . . But the later part of the book can arouse little enthusiasm. Here, if you like, is an example of the danger of trying to combine Third and Light Programme techniques: the result is sometimes irritating and often dull." Lettice Fowler

+ — Spec 179:690 N 28 '47 550w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley

Springf'd Republican p6B D 26 '48 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p495 S 27 '47 550w

BENTLEY, PHYLLIS ELEANOR. Life story. 290p $3 Macmillan

48-8343

Family chronicle depicting the lives and fortunes of a family of West Riding mill owners. The central figure is Hannah Moorhouse Tyas, and her story is supposedly pieced together by her grandson from stories told by Hannah or other members of the family. The period covered is from Hannah's tenth birthday in the 1860's until she is a vigorous old lady of ninety.

Booklist 45:32 S 15 '48

"Although the theme seems at times to be rather obviously stressed (while, on the other hand, the expanding of the application from individuals to groups wears an air of contrivance), these faults do not impair the real quality of the novel—which is what a novel ought to be: a warm, understanding, and honest portrayal of interesting characters and the drama of their reactions one upon another." W. K. Rugg

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 S 28 '48 480w

"Accurate enough—not only in the delineation of character, but in the analysis of the effect of oppression on the oppressed, on the picture of the industrial heritage which is an integral part of the people rooted in it. But frankly, I found it heavy going."

Kirkus 16:289 Je 15 '48 150w

"PB draws characters well and gives a picture of industrial conditions that is convincing. She is never thrilling. Recommended." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 73:1192 S 1 '48 80w

"At times modern psychology intrudes rather unnecessarily upon imaginative insight. But Miss Bentley has written a very human story and in Hannah has created a character as lovable in her faults as in her virtues." H. I'A. Fausset

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 My 7 '48 130w

BENTLEY, PHYLLIS E.—Continued

"Obviously Miss Bentley had quite a lot of fun both in the creating and in the actual writing of 'Life Story.' She makes use of the most modern psychiatric methods in analyzing her Victorian characters. And then chooses as her technique for telling their story, a style consciously derived from the quaint, old-fashioned sententious novels of the period now gathering dust on library shelves. This deliberately anachronistic effect adds piquancy and charm to the telling of a basically significant and interesting tale." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 19 '48 800w

"It's something to think about, though not for very long."

New Yorker 24:114 S 25 '48 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 3 '48 350w

"There is power in 'Life Story' and much to remember. The terror and the loneliness of youth are matched skilfully with the final cumulative emptiness of old age. 'Now' merges with 'then,' and the whole struggle levels down to insignificance. Miss Bentley's detachment, her adroitly directed shifting of sympathies, and her able manipulation of characters make for timeless writing. In her lexicon the straight novel is far from old fashioned." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 31:19 O 16 '48 550w

"Miss Bentley tells her story well, but this mild, accomplished novel touches no more than the fringes of a psychological problem, the understanding and presentation of which would call for the powers of an Emily Brontë." Olivia Manning

Spec 180:566 My 7 '48 360w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p10B S 26 '48 180w

"[The author's] accuracy fails to bring her people to life, although they are familiar enough, as most of them have been met before in fiction. Edith Tyas, a romantic consumptive who recalls Emily Brontë, is an old friend of the novel-reader, and the speech and behaviour of the half-witted Percy are also sadly predictable. The book is none the less well constructed, and there is a certain charm in the simple gravity of the writing. Within the limits of the conventional family novel, Miss Bentley makes no mistakes, and the principle she sets out to prove is a true one, but a lack of inspiration and originality makes the result heavy reading."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p257 My 8 '48 250w

BENTON, WALTER. Never a greater need. 62p $2.50 Knopf

811 48-5298

Collection of poems by the author of This is My Beloved (Book Review Digest 1943). "Several of these poems have appeared in Poetry, Esquire, Fantasy, and The Saturday Review of Literature. Most of the poems in part V were composed before 1942. Those in parts I and IV were written in Europe."

Kirkus 15:692 D 15 '47 150w

"One long boyhood dream of eroticism, breath-takingly silly, easier to read than a tabloid but a good deal emptier and less moving." Weldon Kees

— N Y Times p16 Ap 4 '48 270w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 13 '48 130w

"One cannot read a book of this kind without pondering the problems of contemporary poetry. We recognize in Walter Benton's big periods and apparently amorphous combinations of syllables and cadences the huge, equivocal horizons that confront us in other fields. This sensual poetry, strewn all over the page, as it were, has a way of giving the reader a sense of utter formlessness and then it suddenly stiffens and clarifies, and we become aware of the evolution of poetic speech." Martha Bacon

Sat R of Lit 31:17 Mr 20 '48 600w

BERCOVICI, KONRAD. Savage prodigal. 255p $3 Beechhurst press

Rimbaud, Jean Nicolas Arthur—Fiction 48-6968

A novel based upon the life of the French poet and adventurer, Arthur Rimbaud.

Booklist 44:382 Jl 15 '48

"Throughout most of 'Savage Prodigal' . . . Mr. Bercovici, perhaps wisely, solves his problem of explaining his subject by avoiding it altogether. . . He allows his facts to speak for themselves. . . The same flat treatment is accorded the poet's relationship with Verlaine. . . For the first two-thirds of the book, Mr. Bercovici's method is not too unfortunate. He writes with engaging raciness, and the bare facts of Rimbaud's life are in themselves so extraordinary that they make up in part for the absence of interpretation. It is especially in the third stage of Rimbaud's life, in Abyssinia, that the author's treatment seems inadequate." Marc Brandel

+ — N Y Times p16 Je 20 '48 550w

"Very lively whether it's Rimbaud or simply Mr. Bercovici."

New Yorker 24:114 My 22 '48 150w

"My chief objection to 'Savage Prodigal' is that it helps us in no way to understand Rimbaud's genius. Rimbaud was no child wonder; he was a highly conscious artist and it is necessary to understand his studies in occult philosophy, magic, and the Cabala, his Faustian struggle to penetrate to the heart of the mystery, his esthetic doctrine, his disgust with his own achievements, if we are to comprehend what was going on inside him. The best things in Mr. Bercovici's book are those he has Rimbaud say. Since most of these are culled from the poet's own writings, they have a toughness and vigor and vividness of imagery that are always refreshing." Edwin Seaver

— + Sat R of Lit 31:14 Jl 17 '48 750w

"In augmenting Rimbaud's words with his own interpretations and emotional dialogs, Bercovici has succeeded admirably in transmitting the flavor of the irresponsible genius, particularly in his weird relationships, and what is more he has caught the incredible magic of some of the nigh untranslatable poetry itself. Konrad Bercovici has always written with a copious and elaborate pen, and in 'Savage Prodigal' he has found the finest expression of his imaginative talent." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p10B Je 13 '48 210w

BERDIAEV, NIKOLAI ALEKSANDROVICH. The Russian idea [tr. by R. M. French]. 255p $2.75 Macmillan

914.7 Russia—Civilization 48-5698

"Berdyaev regards the Russians as essentially religious in spirit, and Russian atheism, nihilism and materialism as being shot through with a religious colouring. The basis of his whole conception is a religious faith in Russia. His aim here is to analyse Russian nineteenth-century thought and literature as illustrating the prophetic, apocalyptic and messianic essence of 'the Russian idea.' . . Despite all the onesidedness of his conception of 'the Russian idea,' Berdyaev admits the contradictions and schisms and dualisms which are so pronounced in Russian life and history and thought, and he fully allows that 'the Russian idea' was in profound and tragic conflict with the most powerful forces that have shaped Russian history." Spec

Reviewed by O. Halecki

Cath World 167:565 S '48 600w

"Let no unwary layman assume, from the crisp and simple title, that this is a crisp and simple book. It has paragraphs seven pages long. Despite its profound and thoroughgoing analysis and its mass of valuable material, it is hardly a volume for those unschooled in the ways of philosophers." DeWitt John

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 26 '48 420w

"Like most exiles who defend their country of origin, Professor Berdyaev is a lonely figure. [This work], his major attempt to bridge two worlds, is unlikely to be appreciated in the East or understood in the West. As a philosophy of history it shows remarkable insight into the social and religious currents which determined Russia's destiny, and Berdyaev's masterly examination of the prophetic elements of nineteenth-century Russian literature and thought reveals clearly Russia's universal Messianic consciousness. . . But its interpretation by Russian Man utterly contradicts that of Soviet Man." S. S.
Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '47 240w

Reviewed by Joshua Kunitz
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 My 9 '48 650w

"This is a serious work of potential merit, but its merits are obscured by a labored style and faulty construction. It is verbose and rambling; paragraphs, apparently organized on a free-association scheme, run on to eight pages." Sidney Harcave
— + Sat R of Lit 31:24 My 22 '48 400w

"This is not an easy book, and it is somewhat repetitive. It is also loose in construction, though it gains thereby in freshness. Parts of it, notably those dealing with Khomyakov, Leontiev and Dostoievsky, though excellent in themselves, do not add to what Berdyaev has already written. But it has great attraction and also great interest—the fascination which comes with listening to a sage of great distinction, who has lived through two revolutions and then as an unembittered exile, who has felt profoundly the deepest issues of life and of his country, and talks out of the richness of his experience on a noble and tragic theme with which he has dealt most of his four-score years." B. H. Sumner
+ — Spec 179:436 O 3 '47 1000w

"In order to get much out of this book some familiarity with at least the general outlines of Russian history in the 19th century is advisable. Readers who have such information, and who are prepared to accept some of the author's sweeping comments about the genesis and progress of Russian ideas with a certain amount of caution (to say the least) will find this work a suggestive contribution to the history of Russian culture at one of its more active and fascinating periods." Donald Derby
+ — Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 11 '48 360w

"Professor Berdyaev's book is slighter, more personal and more dogmatic than that of the liberal Masaryk. But, like all his work, it displays an always fresh and acute, though sometimes rather wilfully one-sided, insight into Russian conditions and ways of thought, past and present."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p513 O 11 '47 650w

BERENSON, BERNHARD. Aesthetics and history in the visual arts. 260p il $4 Pantheon bks.

701.17 Esthetics. Art—History 48-8952

"Long an authority on Italian art, Mr. Berenson uses his vast erudition to explore, in essays, such matters as the relation between artist and spectator, changing art styles and the reasons behind them, successive attitudes toward art through history, and so on." (New Yorker) Indexes.

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist
Commonweal 49:333 Ja 7 '49 390w

"His is a book of cultural memoirs, discursive, crotchety, studded with charming aperçus, neither carefully written nor edited. It is the mirror of a mandarin rather than the edifice of a philosopher. Since it contains innumerable strict observations it is more rewarding than most academic dissertations published annually by the university presses. Whatever else Berenson has been, he remains the lover of specific works." Lincoln Kirstein
New Repub 120:16 Ja 10 '49 1450w

"Obviously, he is proud of his bias, which is a very respectable one. But, fortunately, it is more professed than felt, and when we come to the latter and best part of his book, where he lets his taste roam at large over the art of the past, we notice a catholicity of appreciation that largely belies the profession. . . Whatever his shortcomings as a writer and thinker, Mr Berenson has succeeded to a great extent in his endeavor to 'make of himself an instrument of precision in the appreciation of works of art.' " Clement Greenberg
+ — N Y Times p14 N 28 '48 800w

"His book, though at times desultory and slightly old-fashioned in its point of view, is clearly the product of a finely trained, highly sophisticated, and experienced mind."
+ — New Yorker 24:138 N 6 '48 80w

"So closely packed are these pages that they must be read at least twice, not because the writing is obscure but because the specific gravity of the thought is so great." Stuart Preston
+ Sat R of Lit 32:17 Ja 1 '49 700w

"Here is no dry and scholarly speculation, but the outcome of a life of the closest intimacy with art of every kind."
+ School & Society 68:343 N 13 '48 30w

"The book, on the whole, though rather discursive, is richly suggestive for any reader interested in art, especially painting." R. S. B.
+ — Springf'd Republican p7B N 7 '48 240w

BERGER, OSCAR. A la carte; the gourmet's phantasmagoria in fifty cartoons. 63p $3 Dutton

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 48-9069

Fifty cartoons ridiculing the fancy French names used on menus from civet de lièvre (jugged hare) to fruits frais (fresh fruit).

"The idea is original and amusing, and you will have fun recognizing the celebrities." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D 5 '48 70w

"Mr. Berger's volume can be highly recommended as the Christmas gift for the gourmet —in a year when even the gourmet cooks in oleo." Lewis Nichols
+ N Y Times p5 D 5 '48 140w

BERGER, OSCAR, ed. Aesop's foibles; with six hundred quotations of the great minds of the ages; il. by [the editor]. 96p $3 Day

808.8 Quotations 48-90

Collection of sayings of famous people on such subjects as achievement, ambition, career, fate, leisure; forty subjects in all. On the pages opposite the sayings are humorous animal drawings. Index of authors quoted.

"An entertaining jumble." Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 7 '47 140w

"Readers of this newspaper are acquainted with the political cartoons of Mr. Berger and his mastery of the expressive and essential line. His activities go back at least a quarter of a century when he pilloried the figures at the Nazi 'Putsch' trial, his drawings once causing such laughter among the foreign scribes that the whole group was cleared out of the court room. . . His skill serves him as well for a pelican on a bender (or an owl reading a book on the atom) as for premiers and parliamentarians." Thomas Lask
+ N Y Times p24 D 14 '47 500w

BERGLER, EDMUND. Battle of the conscience; a psychiatric study of the inner working of the conscience. 296p $3.75 Wash. inst. of medicine, 1720 M st, N.W, Washington 6, D.C.

131.34 Conscience. Psychoanalysis 48-6619

"A study of the human conscience, which attempts to establish, by psychoanalytic technique, the existence of an 'inner,' or unconscious, conscience—as opposed to the conventional moral code that often goes by that name—from which no one can escape. Dr. Bergler, a follower of Freud, cites many case histories of normal persons, neurotics, and criminals, to show how every one of them is constantly under the influence of that 'inner department of the personality,' whether or not he knows or admits it. The book's thesis, that no one is immune to self-punishment for his acts, is one more instance of the psychiatrists' corroboration of ancient Judaic and Christian precepts." (New Yorker) No index.

BERGLER, EDMUND—Continued

New Yorker 24:110 My 8 '48 140w
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 1 '48 200w

BERGLER, EDMUND. Divorce won't help. 240p $3 Harper
392.5 Marriage. Divorce 48-6769

A psychoanalyst who was associated with Dr Freud in Vienna, here studies the problems of divorce. He argues that divorce is a solution to their marriage problems sought by neurotics. Dr Bergler says that divorce is not the answer: that changing the external factors cannot solve the inner conflict, and he states the case for monogamy. Partial contents: The futility of divorce; Psychic masochism in marriage; Neurotics can't love; Wolves and frigid women; Patterns in neurotic marriages; Hang-over after Reno; The case for monogamy.

"A lucid, provocative, and, I think, important book written for laymen. Bergler stresses that he is not speaking here of the well-adjusted person, who turns to divorce only as a last resort."
+ Atlantic 181:118 Je '48 500w
Booklist 44:345 Je 15 '48

"Doctor Bergler has made a valuable contribution to the body of material available to the marriage counselor." D. F. Cleary
+ Commonweal 48:312 Jl 9 '48 380w
Kirkus 16:141 Mr 1 '48 130w
Reviewed by Marjorie Farber
Nation 167:133 Jl 31 '48 1700w

"The book is well written, and I know of none in the field of popular literature that makes a better case for the psychoanalytical interpretation of marital ills." J. F. Bender
+ N Y Times p12 Je 20 '48 600w

BERGMANN, ERNST DAVID. Isomerism and isomerization of organic compounds. 138p $3.50 Interscience
541.7 Isomerism. Chemistry, Organic 48-7036

Monographs based on a series of lectures presented at the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn. It provides an introduction to isomerism and isomerization.

"The book (in the opinion of this reviewer) can be recommended only as a bibliography; even for this purpose its incompleteness detracts considerably from its value." G. W. Wheland
— + Chem & Eng N 26:2918 S 27 '48 450w

"An extremely interesting introduction to isomerism and isomerization. Ernst Bergmann is an expert in this field and many of the examples cited are from his work. . . The book, however, suffers from two serious defects. First, numerous errors occur in the formulas. . . Second, many of the theories presented are no longer generally accepted." R. M. Dodson
+ — J Phys & Colloid Chem 52:1276 O '48 240w

BERGQUIST, LILLIAN, and MOORE, IRVING. Your shot, darling! 217p $2.50 Morrow 48-5095

Detective story.

"Good pace, action and machinegun technique."
Kirkus 15:612 N 1 '47 70w

"Lively example of the missing link mystery." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 8 '48 130w
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p30 Ja 25 '48 130w
Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ja 18 '48 100w

"Dead-center toughie."
Sat R of Lit 31:34 Ja 24 '48 50w

BERGSTROM, EVANGELINE H. Old glass paperweights; their art, construction and distinguishing features. 132p il col pl $7.50 Crown
748.8 Paperweights. Glassware 47-11402

"The making of glass paperweights represents the epitome of expression on the part of the glass craftsmen, and the author gives a comprehensive survey of the developments in glass-making down through the centuries. For, while the first paperweights are not supposed to have been made until around 1820, it was the centuries before which developed the art and skill which produced them. The finest paperweights are superlative examples of the abilities of the master workmen in the glass industries of France, England and America." N Y Times

Booklist 44:250 Mr 15 '48

"This highly authoritative story of a unique art was first published in a privately printed, limited edition. This new edition is identical with the original in both format and plates and is—in itself—a fine item for the book collector. . . Perhaps the most alluring parts of this volume are the twenty full-color plates of prime examples of glass paperweights, which show vividly the rich colors and the intricacies of design which characterize the art and account for the romance and fascination surrounding it. The book is well written and will be invaluable to paperweight collectors." R. S. Robbins
+ N Y Times p38 D 7 '47 270w

"This book will delight any collector of old glass." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 22 '48 250w

BERLIN, ELLIN (MACKAY) (MRS IRVING BERLIN). Lace curtain. 375p $3 Doubleday 48-7283

The Reardons were "lace curtain Irish." Veronica was the most devout Catholic of the family, but she fell in love with a Protestant. The novel tells of the difficulties she faced in her mixed marriage.

Booklist 44:382 Jl 15 '48

"The book is curiously baffling and depressing. It needs both a lighter and a surer touch."
Cath World 167:476 Ag '48 250w
Reviewed by M. J. Ward
Chicago Sun p8X Jl 25 '48 180w
Reviewed by F. S. Childs
Commonweal 48:574 S 24 '48 700w

"At times the story interest lags; the book is overlong; the tale is told too soon. But it has a holding quality that keeps one reading."
+ — Kirkus 16:220 My 1 '48 250w

"Recommended as worthwhile and timely because of its tolerance theme." M. H. Zipprich
+ Library J 73:943 Je 15 '48 130w
Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Je 27 '48 800w
N Y Times p22 Jl 11 '48 240w
New Yorker 24:66 Jl 10 '48 160w
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 11 '48 220w

"While Mrs. Berlin offers no solution to the problems which her story poses, either of prejudice or of mixed marriage, she deftly avoids taking sides. It is the sensitive, tender study of the emotional development of young Veronica. . . Marriages headed for destruction are far from new as fictional themes. Yet this one, with the family happiness which was a contributing factor in its disharmony, lays hold on our emotions and lingers in the memory." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 Jl 3 '48 750w

Time 52:77 Jl 5 '48 300w

BERMAN, ELEANOR DAVIDSON. Thomas Jefferson among the arts; an essay in early American esthetics [pref. by Horace M. Kallen]. 305p il $3.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas. Art—U.S. Art—Philosophy 48-5425

It is the author's thesis that "to Jefferson art was an integral part of life. He looked upon life's daily round with the eye of a humanist and an empiricist. . . Dr. Berman comes to her conclusions after assembling, classifying and collating in a series of chapters, each of which can stand by itself, all of Jefferson's available observations on painting, sculpture, architecture, gardening, music, oratory, rhetoric and poetry, fiction and letter-writing." (Introd) Partial contents: Jefferson's philosophy of art; Jefferson's ideas about painting; Architect Jefferson; On gardening as a fine art; Jefferson as litterateur and critic. Bibliography. Index.

"This book, a thesis for a doctor's degree, depends too much on secondary sources to have any real value as a contribution to our knowledge of Jefferson and the arts. . . The book is well documented, has a useful bibliography, and several good illustrations." E. M. Sowerby

— + Am Hist R 53:894 Jl '48 330w

"Readable, recommended for larger libraries." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 73:398 Mr 1 '48 110w

"An out-of-the-way item unmistakably a Ph.D. thesis but interesting for the additional light it throws on one of the most civilized of our great men."

+ New Yorker 24:119 Mr 20 '48 160w

Reviewed by Carolyn Stull

San Francisco Chronicle p15 My 16 '48 140w

"The first comprehensive book on the subject of Jefferson's wide interest and activity in the arts."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:149 Je '48 200w

BERNANOS, GEORGES. Sanctity will out; an essay on St Joan; tr. by R. Batchelor. 58p $1.50 Sheed

B or 92 Jeanne d'Arc, Saint 47-12454

Pictures the trial of Joan of Arc, giving the author's own version of the conflict between the judges and the Maid.

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 47:453 F 13 '48 290w

"This essay is likely to appeal more to admirers of Bernanos than to those interested in Joan of Arc." Granger Ryan

N Y Times p27 Ja 25 '48 230w

BERNHEIM, BERTRAM MOSES. Story of the Johns Hopkins; four great doctors and the medical school they created. (Whittlesey house publication) 235p il $3.50 McGraw

362.11 Johns Hopkins university. Welch, William Henry. Halsted, William Stewart. Osler, William. Kelly, Howard Atwood 48-8971

Johns Hopkins, as the author has known it during the past fifty years as undergraduate, medical student, doctor and staff member. The story is told largely thru the accomplishments of "the four saints" (Welch, Halsted, Osler, and Kelly) and their followers. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:150 Ja 1 '49

Kirkus 16:423 Ag 15 '48 170w

"Here, as in his earlier books, Dr. Bernheim writes frankly and courageously. He pulls no punches when he thinks that the institution or a man has made a mistake, and he points resolutely to gaps and shortcomings in his beloved profession. . . His book has much of interest to the general reader, though its particular appeal will be to those who have known the dozens of doctors of whom he tells. . . His informality is fine much of the time, but it leads to occasional solecisms and as irritating a case as I have ever seen of what might be called dash-itis, whereby sentence after sentence includes injected phrases that become as irritating to the reader as what the doctor knows as 'foreign bodies.'" Mary Ross

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 O 24 '48 550w

Reviewed by A. H. Weiler

N Y Times p43 O 24 '48 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 28 '48 300w

"Dr. Bernheim's . . . approach is critical, not worshipful, and if he finds much to praise, few can challenge the true excellence of his subject matter. The book is replete not only with sound exposition of a great chapter in American medicine but with a wealth of diverting sidelights." T. M. Sanders

+ Sat R of Lit 31:19 N 20 '48 1200w

School & Society 68:271 O 16 '48 40w

BERNHEIMER, CHARLES SELIGMAN. Half a century in community service. 146p $2.50 Assn. press

B or 92 Social work

"Some of the early efforts that have led to the establishment of social services on a systematic basis are chronicled in this autobiography of one of the pioneers in communal service in America. The volume is more than a personal account of the author's crowded and varied career. It throws considerable light on the social problems, the human needs, and the methods for meeting them that in many recognizable ways gave rise to the present day practices of social work." (Survey) Bibliography. Index.

N Y Times p52 N 21 '48 310w

"While the book is an autobiography, and the personality and career of the writer is bound to be revealed in the chronicle, the volume is in a real sense the vehicle for interpretation of many aspects of social work itself as it developed during the past fifty years." Louis Kraft

+ Survey 84:378 D '48 460w

BERNSTEIN, DAVID. Philippine story. 276p $3.75 Farrar, Straus

991.4 Philippine Islands—Politics and government 47-30761

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"Well written and easy reading, the book deserves wide circulation." A. E. Nuquist

+ Am Pol Sci R 42:592 Je '48 380w

"This is an interesting and as a rule impartial account, though the author's strong sympathy for the Filipinos occasionally influences his judgment." L. A. Mills

+ — Ann Am Acad 255:192 Ja '48 450w

Foreign Affairs 26:408 Ja '48 50w

Reviewed by E. H. Vaughan

Social Forces 26:471 My '48 1050w

"Except in its treatment of the more controversial issues, where some bias is evident, this compact volume presents an excellent summary of the whole history of the Filipino people, beginning with the landing of Magellan."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:360 D '47 280w

BERRY, ERICK, pseud. See Best, A. C.

BERRYMAN, JOHN. Dispossessed. 103p $2.50 Sloane

811 48-6929

Collection of poems by a young American poet, whose work has been appearing during the last ten years in such periodicals as The

BERRYMAN, JOHN—Continued
Kenyon Review, Accent, The Southern Review, and The Nation.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun My 31 '48 200w

"Berryman belongs to the Wallace Stevens' school of writing, and takes Stevens as his model. He is less important in what he has to say, less marmoreal in his architecture, but he has structure and craft. A poet to be followed by those interested in America's current poetic trend."
+ Kirkus 16:185 Ap 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by Shirley Barker
Library J 73:948 Je 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by Randall Jarrell
Nation 167:80 Jl 17 '48 700w

" 'Winter Landscape,' beginning with a limpid description of a Breughel painting and proceeding to meditate on it, is as fine an example of the Berryman method as one could wish. . . Mr. Berryman is less good with passion, and such a poem as 'Conto Amor' lacks the grave and quiet precision of his best work." David Daiches
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 N 21 '48 500w

"One closes Mr. Berryman's book of poems with the satisfaction taken from a craft skillfully and lovingly exercised, but somehow without the excitement that attends the transformation of a craft into a completely realized art. It is obvious that we are dealing here with a poet whose gifts . . . are salient; a poet, moreover, of discriminating sensibility and a saving wit; yet there clings about all but the very best of his work an aura of academic contrivance, a certain muzziness that is as hard to define as it is to ignore." Dudley Fitts
+ — N Y Times p4 Je 20 '48 600w

"He is serious, he is ingenious, but his verse, written when experimentalism is showing signs of exhaustion, often seems to shut the reader into a dark room with a rather frightening amount of ungalvanized language."
— + New Yorker 24:107 O 2 '48 90w

Reviewed by Richard Eberhart
Poetry 73:43 O '48 850w

Reviewed by Thomas Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 5 '48 60w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer
Sat R of Lit 31:21 Jl 10 '48 470w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p374 Jl 3 '48 1250w

BERRYMAN, OPAL LEIGH. Pioneer preacher [a biographical narrative about a Baptist missionary pastor in west Texas]. 248p $3 Crowell

B or 92 Berryman, George Carroll 48-8801

Reminiscences of two years of the author's childhood. The family moved to western Texas about 1905, where the father had been appointed Baptist missionary. Murderers, the Klan, cowboys, dogs, and Texas storms feature in this account, along with the picture of a wise and dependable father.

Booklist 45:65 O 15 '48

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 25:65 Ja '49 30w

"Good Americana, regional values and a personal record of a relatively recent frontier."
+ Kirkus 16:328 Jl 1 '48 110w

"Written with sincerity, affection and a fine sense of humor, which added to genuine excitement of the old West, produces an appealing story which one finishes with a feeling of pride for the pioneers whose faithful labors gave Americans a glorious heritage." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 73:1083 Ag '48 130w

"A tribute of love and admiration, touched with humor and homely detail, altogether refreshing."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 O 24 '48 180w

Reviewed by L. S. De Camp
N Y Times p36 N 14 '48 130w

"[An] affectionate and entertaining memoir." Pamela Taylor
+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 D 4 '48 380w

Wis Lib Bul 44:212 D '48

BERTO, GIUSEPPE. Sky is red; tr. from the Italian by Angus Davidson. 397p $3.50 New directions
48-9030

Novel translated from the Italian. It is the story of four teen-aged children living in a bombed city in Italy. In order to exist they are forced into strange ways: Tullio is the leader of a black market gang; Carla becomes a prostitute; Giulia who kept house for the others dies of tuberculosis; and Daniele, who loved Giulia, commits suicide. The essential goodness of the children is brought out, in the midst of the ugliness of life in wartime.

"The Sky Is Red is thoroughly sentimental but never cloying. Written with unflinching realism and a deeply tragic sense of life, it has a heartbreaking sadness, an intensely human appeal." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 182:108 O '48 1100w

Booklist 45:88 N 1 '48

Reviewed by Jex Martin
Chicago Sun p8X O 3 '48 500w

" 'The Sky is Red' is one of the few current documents which take their strength from poetic insight rather than from reportorial accuracies. It is a deep and quiet book, one which draws good from its steady insistence on the humble and familiar." John Gross
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 30 '48 550w

"It is not a pleasant book; rather it is a thoughtful, perceptive, realistic study of much ugliness and tragedy and some love."
Kirkus 16:455 S 1 '48 190w

"Recommended." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 73:1272 S 15 '48 110w

"It is questionable if the immediate physical destruction of modern warfare has ever been better described than it is in The Sky is Red. . . The remarkable thing is that though, apart from the general effect of desolation, the story is a sad one, it is not depressing. This is probably because it brings out the recuperative powers and practical resourcefulness of the young." Charles Marriott
+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 17 '48 250w

"It is the work of a man of good-will. It is tender and compassionate and never sentimental. But it is not a very good novel, and I think it important to define the reason why. . . [Signor Berto's] book is entirely predictable. Good-will leads him straight into an oversimplified allegory. The lesson of the horrors of war, especially as they fall on the poor, must be taught. And so the typical in the four main characters, the fact that they behave precisely as one would expect, finally blurs the individual." Ernest Jones
+ — Nation 168:23 Ja 1 '49 320w

Reviewed by E. C. Crose
New Repub 118:24 My 10 '48 330w

"A bitter and even hopeless tale. The hope is in the writing, in the fact that it was written at all, in the resolute confrontation of tragedy. The hope is in its tenderness, its eloquence through quiet, its warmth without bathos. Its sentiment is simply truth unashamed. It has a reality that stands out clearly in the glow of a steady, subdued light." Harold Clurman
+ New Repub 119:24 O 25 '48 650w

Reviewed by Simon Harcourt-Smith
New Statesman & Nation 36:309 O 9 '48 170w

"It is so characteristic and moving a response to the despair felt by millions of ordinary, non-political Italian victims of the war that it will be read as a document of the times. Yet I must add that despite its truth and power of sympathy, its literary distinction is slight. . . The influence of Hemingway is enormous and unhappy. . . Berto lacks Hemingway's secret lyricism and above all Hemingway's insistence on the ultimate dignity of man. With one word following stolidly after another, Berto's simplicity seems not so much a way of reaching for essential things as a reaction against centuries of the national rhetoric." Alfred Kazin

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 10 '48 1350w

"Exquisitely wrought novel." Nancy Lenkeith
+ N Y Times p5 O 3 '48 470w

Reviewed by John Lardner
New Yorker 24:126 O 16 '48 1550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 16 '48 700w

"I do not know when I have or will read a more piercing book, one so sorrowful and simple, so tender and despairing and direct as 'The Sky is Red.' " John Woodburn
+ Sat R of Lit 31:15 O 2 '48 700w

"Though the book would have been improved by cutting and does not always have the tautness of narrative one could have wished, it is kept alive by a deep genuine sympathy for ordinary human beings." Robert Kee
+ — Spec 181:444 O 1 '48 550w

" 'The Sky Is Red' seems more like a script for a motion picture than an actual novel, but there is a kind of sublime sorrow which darkens and depresses every page, which makes it chastening reading." L. S. Munn
+ Springf'd Republican p5C O 31 '48 360w

"As a novelist, Giuseppe Berto has a lot to learn. He knows very little about how to pace a novel, how to build up climaxes and tighten tensions; he often touches the incongruous by putting much too mature speeches into the mouths of his babes. But most U.S. readers will find in The Sky Is Red, as in such recent Italian films as Open City and Shoe-Shine, a raw and brutal vitality that slicker performances often lack."
Time 52:114 O 25 '48 350w

"Portrays, in very similar terms to the best of the contemporary Italian cinema, the tragedy of adolescent delinquency in those situations where there was no other means of survival. It is both appalling and convincing."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p565 O 9 '48 220w

BERTRAM, JAMES M. Beneath the shadow. 308p $3.50 Day

940.5481931 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, New Zealand. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, Japanese
47-11644

An account of the author's experiences during the four years he spent in Japanese prisoner-of-war camps, and since V-J day as an advisor to the New Zealand Far East commission. The author is a New Zealander.

"The author feels it necessary to explain his presence in Hong Kong, and to comment upon the Chinese war. As a result, the prologue to 'Beneath The Shadow' becomes a maze of personal contacts and experiences, through which Mr. Bertram's main point shows but vaguely. . . In the main body of his story things pick up amazingly. His narrative style is delightful. Although terse, it contains deft touches of description and characterization that leave the reader with splendid images." J. O. Frederick
+ — Commonweal 47:378 Ja 23 '48 420w

"Should have been one of the most interesting documents of contemporary literature on the East. He worked for a succession of good causes in China, fought as a volunteer in the siege of Hong-Kong, and was a prisoner first in Hong-Kong and later in Japan. Unfortunately his book is not very exciting. The trouble is that so many people with diverse experiences in China have recorded them already." G. W.
Manchester Guardian p3 D 30 '47 180w

Reviewed by Dorothy Woodman
New Statesman & Nation 34:454 D 6 '47 390w

Reviewed by Paul Butler
Pacific Affairs 21:206 Je '48 650w

Reviewed by Ben Ellman
San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 8 '48 550w

"His adventures with the red tape of military occupation and administration are as deftly related as those of his life in the prison camps. The combination of Mr. Bertram's experiences, first as a prisoner awaiting release, and then as a civilian official of the victorious powers, plus his agreeable style, make this book a revealing and often wryly amusing account of Japan at war and in defeat." Donald Derby
+ Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 4 '48 220w

BERTRAM, KATE, and BERTRAM, RICHARD H. Caribbean cruise. 292p il maps $3.75 Norton

917.29 West Indies—Description and travel
48-6006

An anecdotal account of a Caribbean cruise which started out to be a one-year-trip, and when the war intervened, stretched out into five years. The Bertrams started out in their 36-foot yacht from Long Island Sound, and sailed to Miami, and the Bahamas, then to Hispaniola, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, then to the Windward and Leeward Islands. This record is told largely by Mrs Bertram. An appendix: Galley hints, includes a number of her favorite recipes.

Booklist 44:280 Ap 15 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '48

"Warm, lively reporting of places and people."
+ Kirkus 16:105 F 15 '48 170w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:710 My 1 '48 40w

"Mrs. Bertram has the gift for simple story telling, whether she is explaining how to cook conch fritters or reciting the mental upsets of Dan, the dog that hated outboard motors." T. S. Sweedy
+ N Y Times p27 Ap 25 '48 360w

BESPALOFF, RACHEL. On the Iliad; tr. from the French by Mary McCarthy; introd. by Hermann Broch. 126p $2.50 Pantheon bks.

883.1 Homer—Iliad 48-5399

Essays on the Iliad which show the relationship of Homer's characters and ideas to the present day. No index.

"I am probably not the one to review this book, for I do not like oracular criticism, full of words like the All, the Cosmic, the World-content; and I detest criticism which, like the introduction, consists of constant comparisons involving great names. . . Rachel Bespaloff has written a series of poetic meditations, in the tradition of Nietzsche, using Homer as her point of departure. Hermann Broch has written another poetic meditation, using Rachel Bespaloff as a point of departure. Such writing may express the soul of the writer, but it does very little to elucidate Homer." E. P. Richardson
— Commonweal 47:549 Mr 12 '48 260w

"This book is about the best thing I have ever read on the art of Homer and that unless you have tasted the poem in Greek, Mme. Bespaloff will serve better than the translations to convey how distant, how refined an art it was. To stress the 'mythical' nature of the Homeric poems appears to be the best way for the contemporary mind to take hold of them, and Hermann Broch's introduction to this essay puts it intelligently, likening Homer's dawnlike detachment and coolness of effect to the wise, abstract music composed by Bach in old age." Robert Fitzgerald
+ New Repub 118:32 Ap 26 '48 360w

"To a discriminating reader the style of this book will make appeal: it combines—difficult as this may seem—fervor of conviction with aphoristic brevity. With ethical matters one finds less certainty of touch. Miss Bespaloff shows great acumen with Thetis and Helen

BESPALOFF, RACHEL—Continued
but not very much insight into the men." Howard Griffin
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:19 Je 19 '48 500w

"A brilliant and persuasive evaluation of the famous epic, not as a narrative but as an ethical lesson." H. L. Varley
+ Springf'd Republican p12B Mr 21 '48 130w

BEST, MRS ALLENA (CHAMPLIN). Seven beaver skins; a story of the Dutch in New Amsterdam; written and il. by Erick Berry. (Land of the free ser) 275p $2.50 Winston 48-10356

Historical novel for young readers. It is the story of Kaspar de Selle, born in Holland, who came to New Netherlands to exercise his two skills: the sorting of pelts for the fur trade, and falconry. Kaspar's story is traced thru his experiences in the Dutch colony up to the day when he decides to give up fur trading and settle down on a Hudson valley farm. This is the first in a series of historical novels to be called Land of the Free.

Booklist 45:143 D 15 '48

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:41 Ja '49 90w

Kirkus 16:404 Ag 15 '48 200w

"The historical background is colorful and the book has plenty of action. Recommended." M. M. Smith
+ Library J 73:1827 D 15 '48 80w

"The three contrasting and conflicting ways of life—fur-trading, farming and falconry—are well integrated and make a story richer in character and atmosphere than this brief review might seem to imply, for the book is both substantial and varied." Siri Andrews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 12 '48 290w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p14 Ja 2 '49 200w

BEST, HERBERT. Long portage; a story of Ticonderoga and Lord Howe; il. by Erick Berry. 250p $2.50 Viking 48-4724

Story of the youth Philip Dearborn, who ran away from New York to fight with Rogers' Rangers in the French and Indian war.

Booklist 45:123 D 1 '48

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p6 N 11 '48 250w

"Young people who like historical fiction will find this a gripping tale." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:41 Ja '49 90w

"There's meat for an exciting story here, but somehow the plot lags, and the reader bogs down."
Kirkus 16:404 Ag 15 '48 130w

"The first three-quarters of the book is so exciting it carries the last quarter which drags a little. Recommended for older boys and girls." C. W. Field
+ Library J 74:67 Ja 1 '49 80w

"After a little initial confusion, the story is one of continuous action, French spies, treacherous Indian attacks and the rough nobility of the ever-ready Rangers; but the author's reputation for careful historical research insures also a good historical background. The book will appeal to boys who like adventure and history." Siri Andrews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 2 '49 260w

"A rousing historical tale. . . The New York countryside is the setting, described with accuracy, while the author's style has in it something of the twang of backwoods talk." M. C. Scoggin
+ N Y Times p58 N 14 '48 140w

Reviewed by S. M. Boland
San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 14 '48 220w

"A fine characterization of Lord Howe before Ticonderoga and a convincing background of upper New York State."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:33 N 13 '48 50w

Wis Lib Bul 44:216 D '48

BESTON, HENRY. Northern farm; a chronicle of Maine; il. by Thoreau MacDonald. 246p $2.75 Rinehart

917.41 Maine—Social life and customs. Farm life 48-9179

Journal about life on a small Maine farm. It follows the seasons from the dead of winter on thru the year.

Booklist 45:101 N 15 '48

Christian Century 66:48 Ja 12 '49 220w

"Henry Beston writes quietly and thoughtfully, with a gentle penetration that might be missed by too hasty a reading. . . His book will cause many to pause and think, to observe more closely, and to live with greater awareness. 'Northern Farm' is a book to be savored; it is a book that will be remembered." Elizabeth Yates
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 9 '48 850w

"The elusive magic of a year on a Kennebec farm is captured here in truly beautiful prose."
+ Kirkus 16:543 O 1 '48 120w

Nation 167:612 N 27 '48 20w

"To the increasing shelves of country books he brings a self sufficient and almost austere discipline of words and methods. He is too skillful an artist to use the customary cliches of many who write on rural life. People are here, people aplenty, but he leans on none of them for comedy relief." Richardson Wright
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 7 '48 750w

"Henry Beston writes with facility and charm, and he conveys the human warmth of a rural community unusually well. He has his feet on the ground, sees life from the enduring foundations of a stony field. If at times there seems to be more charm than substance to his writing, it is because, in his own words, 'Who would live happily in the country must be wisely prepared to take great pleasure in little things.'" Hal Borland
+ N Y Times p36 N 7 '48 200w

BETHE, HANS ALBRECHT. Elementary nuclear theory; a short course on selected topics. 147p $2.50 Wiley

539.1 Nuclear physics
47-11150

"Based on a course of lectures given at the Research Laboratory of the General Electric Company, it deals chiefly with the descriptive theory of nuclei and the quantitative theory of nuclear forces. Such topics as the basic facts about nuclei; nuclear disintegrations; spin and statistics; the physical properties of proton, neutron and deuteron; the scattering of neutrons and protons; non-central forces; and the saturation of nuclear forces, are discussed. The meson theory of nuclear forces is sketched but not dealt with fully. Two chapters outside the main topic deal with beta disintegration, and the compound nucleus." N Y New Tech Bks

"This book is . . . not a textbook on the theory of atomic nuclei but is merely a selection of certain topics in the theory. The emphasis in the book is placed on the problem of nuclear forces, which is the central problem of nuclear physics. The problem is treated entirely from the empirical point of view and purely theoretical considerations about nuclear forces are treated with the greatest brevity. . . The author deals with these topics in a very competent manner. However, the prospective readers should have a thorough familiarity with quantum mechanics and should be prepared for a very condensed treatment of the subject matter." W. C. Fernelius
Chem & Eng N 26:1104 Ap 12 '48 270w

Reviewed by W. De Cew
Chem Eng 55:290 F '48 140w

"In spite of the word 'elementary' in the title, this work will be useful only to graduate physicists and others having had considerable education in mathematics and physics."
N Y New Tech Bks 32:69 O '47

BETHERS, RAY. Can you name them? a pictorial-informational quiz book; il. by [the author]. 48p $1.75 Aladdin

793.73 Information tests 48-10005

A pictorial quiz book. The subjects considered are history, geography, transportation, industry, etc.

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 24:436 N '48 30w
Kirkus 15:529 O 1 '48 90w

"This fascinating book will intrigue adults as well as older boys and girls. . . Recommended." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 73:1391 O 1 '48 60w

BETHERS, RAY. Pictures, painters, and you. 277p il $5 Pitman

759 Paintings. Art—Study and teaching 48-10532

An analysis of painting for those who know very little about art. "He shows you, by means of reproductions, diagrams, and the briefest possible text, just why pictures are composed as they are, why they function as they do, and why they cannot function otherwise. He makes no distinctions between traditional and modern art, but takes the whole field of painting in his stride and shows how its basic principles remain very much the same regardless of place or period." (San Francisco Chronicle) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:84 N 1 '48

"His approach is directly analytical; he indulges in no history, no fine writing, and no salesmanship." Alfred Frankenstein
+ San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 28 '48 170w

BETTINA, pseud. See Ehrlich, B.

BEVERIDGE OF TUGGAL, WILLIAM HENRY BEVERIDGE, 1st baron. India called them. 418p il $4.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Beveridge, Henry. Beveridge, Annette (Akroyd) [A48-41]

The originator of the Beveridge Plan has edited the great volume of letters left by his father and mother, and included them in this biography of the two. The elder Beveridge played a minor role in the British history of India during the last half of the nineteenth century. His wife, who also was interested in India, was teaching in a Hindu school for girls at the time of her marriage. Index.

Booklist 44:351 Je 15 '48

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis
New Statesman & Nation 35:299 Ap 10 '48 1200w

"This book would be a good corrective to those who think of the British in India only as imperialists gorging themselves on wealth ground out of Indian poverty. All but one in a thousand of the Britons lived as did the Beveridges and carried the 'white man's burden' until today's goal of independence was reached. . . But again, if this book lives, it will not be as a study of India. . . Its hope for survival will be as literature, as a touching, intelligent and human biography of two very interesting characters, as a story of a real and poignant adventure in marriage and everyday life, and as an excellent example of the high quality that English letter writing can attain in the hands of two very cultured, intelligent and passionate creatures." H. L. Matthews
+ N Y Times p4 My 2 '48 430w

"A high-minded, very human document."
+ New Yorker 24:110 My 8 '48 120w

"What makes this work of surpassing interest is the correspondence. Despite their differences of opinion on religion and politics, usually outspoken, there was never a more devoted couple. When they were apart, a day seldom passed without an exchange of letters on the subjects nearest to their hearts. Everyone will be the better from reading this noble book with its inspiring record." H. G. Rawlinson
+ Spec 180:202 F 13 '48 650w
Time 51:110 My 10 '48 850w
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p88 F 14 '48 1350w

BEVERLEY-GIDDINGS, ARTHUR RAYMOND. River of rogues. 378p $3 Morrow 48-6408

Romantic novel about life on the eastern shore of Maryland in the 1820's. The hero is a Scotsman who inherits money and position from his uncle, and marries a dangerously beautiful woman from New Orleans. Later it becomes apparent that his wife is involved with slave-kidnappers, but David hunts them down anyway, and destroys their stronghold. After the death of his wife David turns to the tranquil Quaker girl who had long loved him.

Booklist 44:336 Je 1 '48

"With all the appointments of romantic drama, this should satisfy popular tastes in this genre."
+ Kirkus 16:92 F 15 '48 180w

"A clever plot, beautifully developed to a thrilling climax, with a convincingly real reconstruction of plantation life. A genuine spellbinder. Excellent entertainment." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 73:472 Mr 15 '48 80w

"Using old records and legends of the Eastern Shore, where he himself makes his home, Mr. Beverley-Giddings has created a lively tale that offers a particularly interesting picture of a way of life in one part of the United States a century and a quarter ago." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ag 15 '48 380w

"The book, though far from first-rate, has a certain charm and freshness." B. V. Winebaum
+ — N Y Times p16 Ap 25 '48 490w
Springf'd Republican p15A Ag 1 '48 140w

BEVERLY, BERT IRA. Psychology of growth. 235p $2.50 McGraw

136.5 Growth. Personality, Disorders of Med47-646

"On the importance of fostering mental health through understanding of motives and capabilities characteristic of certain age periods." (Cleveland Open Shelf) List of visual aids. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

Reviewed by M. R. Brown
N Y Times p31 Mr 28 '48 400w
School & Society 67:326 Ap 24 '48 20w

BEWLEY, LOYAL VIVIAN. Two-dimensional fields in electrical engineering. 204p il $5.50 Macmillan

537 Electricity. Mathematical physics 48-6982

"For field theory and undergraduate electrical courses in electric machines and transmission lines. The laws of mathematical physics and of the theory of functions of a complex variable are invoked for the solution of practical engineering problems. The course ties in with concurrent courses in transmission, symetrical components, electrical machinery, and communication, and is followed by dependent courses in operational calculus, traveling waves, machines and system stability." (Library J) Index.

BEWLEY, L. V.—Continued

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:949 Je 15 '48 100w

"The treatment is very concise and the exposition is carried forward chiefly in worked examples."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:38 My '48

BIALK, ELISA (MRS L. MARTIN KRAUTTER). Horse called Pete; il. by William Moyers. 80p $2 Houghton

Horses—Legends and stories 48-6068

Story of a lonely little boy and the blind circus horse his grandfather bought for him. In training his beloved horse to be fearless the boy learns to be brave himself. Glossary.

Booklist 44:288 Ap 15 '48
Chicago Sun Ap 17 '48 140w

"A good boy and horse story, with a familiar outline but some new angles."
+ Kirkus 16:21 Ja 15 '48 100w

"Excellent plot and exciting climax told by an author who evidently understands people, both children and adults. It is limited in vocabulary to the Thorndike fifth grade list. This restriction could be a handicap but it is not apparent in this attractive story for easy reading. Recommended." M. F. Cox
+ Library J 73:656 Ap 15 '48 90w

"A stirring story, it encourages slow readers by making it almost impossible to read slowly." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Je 20 '48 230w

"An easy-reading book for 8 to 10 year olds and also for older children in need of remedial reading. This story has both style and wisdom. There are moving overtones in this portrait of a hard-working, frugal family, and the relationship between the boy and his grandfather is especially satisfying." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 4 '48 140w
Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 11 '48 120w
Wis Lib Bul 44:84 Ap '48

BIANCO, PAMELA (MRS ROBERT SCHLICK). Playtime in Cherry street [il. by the author]. 95p $2 Oxford

48-8060

A story for younger children telling how two five-year-olds amuse themselves from day to day.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p4 N 16 '48 330w

"As exquisite as all the books Pamela Bianco has done, this simple story of five-and six-year olds in Cherry Street unfolds gently along a path of tenderness and beauty. A book for bedtime to read aloud, with pictures to dream about."
+ Commonweal 49:150 N 19 '48 40w

"There is the same unrestrained, imaginative quality to the stories of these two five-year-olds that Margery Bianco, Pamela's mother, brought to her writing; and the same feeling for toys." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:368 S '48 90w

"There's plenty of sound matter of fact might-be-true material in this, but frequently Pamela Bianco has shifted focus in the telling so that it takes on an adult and sometimes patronizing tone, which could have been avoided. The incidents are authentic in feel, the sorts of things two five year olds would experience and enjoy sharing with others. Personally, I've always felt the Pamela Bianco illustrations too mannered for the average child's taste. Pretty solid reading for beginning readers; reading aloud for 5 to 7."
+ — Kirkus 16:396 Ag 15 '48 90w

"Highly recommended." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 73:1676 N 15 '48 80w

"Would not appeal to normal, red-blooded boys and girls of today." Claire Nolte
— Library J 73:1676 N 15 '48 60w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 14 '48 110w

Reviewed by H. K. Lippmann
N Y Times p57 N 14 '48 180w

"There is humor and understanding in the story, and the exquisite designs and full-page illustrations in black and white make the book a treasure for grown-ups as well as for children." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 31:37 O 16 '48 110w

BIANCOLLI, LOUIS LEOPOLD, ed. Book of great conversations; from historical sources, in dramatic form and with biographical sketches. 577p $5 Simon & Schuster

808.8 Literature—Collections. Dialogs
48-11286

"This is a book of recorded talk. . . The recorders here are only diarists and letter-writers, biographers and autobiographers, not machines. What they record is the talk of statesmen, musicians, artists, and writers of many centuries. As a rule they are not themselves literary artists, these faithful chroniclers. Strictly speaking, only a scant few are men and women of letters. Mostly, they are the friends, secretaries, and associates of people whose words were memorable enough to invite perpetuation in a midnight diary entry or some chatty, gossipy note to a distant correspondent." (Introd) Among those included are: Socrates, Michelangelo, Frederick the Great, Jean Jacques Rousseau, Dr. Samuel Johnson, Goethe, Napoleon, Charles Lamb, Alexandre Dumas, Victor Hugo, Heinrich Heine, Lincoln, the Goncourt brothers, Leo Tolstoy, Oscar Wilde, Thomas Hardy, Shaw-Chesterton, H. G. Wells-Joseph Stalin. The editor sketches in the background in each case and introduces the characters. Index.

"Variety is the spice of such a book as this, as it is of the temperaments who figure in it. A mere juxtaposition of names will reveal this: Rousseau, Voltaire, Casanova, Franklin, Goethe, Byron, Hardy, Stendhal, Wagner, Bismarck, Wilde, Walt Whitman, Clemenceau. Uneven such conversations are bound to be, running the whole gamut from the superlatively noble to the merely innocuous and inexpressibly dull." John Cournos
+ — Commonweal 49:330 Ja 7 '49 650w
+ Kirkus 16:392 Ag 1 '48 150w

"We are all fond of keyholes. Nothing delights us more than a peep into other people's lives or a snatch of other people's talk, especially when we have not been asked to look and listen. Louis Biancolli has provided us with the paragon of keyholes. His artful selection of Great Conversations gives us ordinary eavesdroppers, who usually must be content with what we can pick up in subways, hotel lobbies, and barrooms, the chance to overhear the casual talk of some of the most fascinating men and women who have ever had minds to air and aired them. . . Decidedly, the book is to be read in much the same manner its contents originated: piecemeal, in foot-loose curiosity, as the spur to the imagination." Marvin Lowenthal
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ja 2 '49 1050w

"A generally sparkling volume. . . Working from authentic sources, with scholarly enthusiasm, Mr. Biancolli has brought together a variety of dramatic moments from history and literature." Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p11 Ja 2 '49 550w

"This [anthology], for a change, is a real pleasure, even though the phrase 'great conversations' in the title shows how truly absurd the careless use of the word 'great' can be. . . The conversations have been put into dramatic form for easy reading, and all of them are stimulating."
+ New Yorker 24:113 D 18 '48 200w

"If the most brilliant and delicate flowers of the conversational art cannot travel in time, we are still the heirs of much past talk that is interesting, amusing, informative, stimulating, revealing, and historically important. No other evidence than Mr. Biancolli's rich collection is required to demonstrate the fact. It was a happy chance that led this avid ransacker of world literature to stumble on four dialogues of Michelangelo, and it was an even happier chance, for the reading public, when this accident gave Mr. Biancolli the idea of making 'an anthology or treasury of such salvaged talk,' composed in large measure of dialogues 'threatened with ultimate interment in forgotten books.' " B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 32:25 Ja 8 '49 700w

BIBBY, CYRIL. How life is handed on. 159p il $2 Emerson

612.6 Reproduction. Sex instruction 47-11701

The story of reproduction in animals and humans, including information on courtship, mating, birth and family life. There is also a chapter on the declining birth rate in the United States. Four appendices include Things to do; Other books to read; Some films to see; The meaning of uncommon words. Indexes.

"In addition to being a sound scientist Bibby is a good story teller—one who knows how to make life and growth not merely tolerable but interesting." R. H. Everett
+ Am J Pub Health 38:1023 Jl '48 320w

"Although announced as a book for children and younger adolescents, the material is written in too elementary a style for children much above the seventh grade. The style is friendly, chatty, and personal; at the same time, it is clear and concise because of the use of correct, scientific terminology. Diagrams are clear and easily followed, and pictures satisfy a child's need to see as well as read. The book is devoid of emotionalism and sentimentality and contains no preaching or moralizing." Winifred Hazen
J Home Econ 40:269 My '48 220w

Kirkus 15:582 O 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 68:141 Ag 28 '48 270w

BIBLE. NEW TESTAMENT. SELECTIONS. Scenes from the life of Jesus in woodcut; comp. by Susan Nichols Pulsifer. 168p $7.50 Beacon press

232.9 Jesus Christ—Art. Bible. New Testament—Gospels—Pictorial illustrations 47-12132

Selections from the King James version of the Bible, illustrated with woodcuts chosen from fifteenth and sixteenth century illustrators. Many of the pictures are from one source book, printed in Florence in 1495.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 64:1522 D 10 '47 70w

"A distinguished book." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 24:24 Ja '48 360w

Library J 73:1093 Ag '48 60w

"If you want something expensive and permanent . . . you might consider 'Scenes from the Life of Jesus in Woodcut.' "
+ New Yorker 23:139 D 6 '47 140w

BICKERMAN, ELIAS. The Maccabees; an account of their history from the beginnings to the fall of the house of the Hasmoneans [tr. by Moses Hadas]. 125p $1.50 Schocken

933 Maccabees 47-12195

History of the Maccabees "from the beginnings to the fall of the house," in the light of modern research. Chronology. No index.

Booklist 44:186 Ja 15 '48

"Dr. Bickerman's quiet, exciting and scholarly study of the Maccabees is excellently done: only one wishes the two books of the Maccabees themselves had been included, perhaps in a modern translation." A. F.
+ Commonweal 47:405 Ja 30 '48 120w

Reviewed by E. M. Tainton
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 7 '48 350w

Reviewed by Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 31:20 F 21 '48 260w

BIKERMAN, JACOB JOSEPH. Surface chemistry for industrial research. 464p il $8 Academic press

660 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical. Chemistry, Technical 48-5983

"Author has adapted fundamentals of surface science to industrial research and deals with both surface physics and surface chemistry. Discusses theory and experimental investigations that have been published. The action of adhesives, friction and lubrication, ore dressing, emulsion stability, detergency, and other phenomena are considered. Author is a noted authority on the science of colloids and surfaces. Many references." Library J

"The author is to be commended for bringing to the fore the difficult surface problems presented by three-phase systems. However, one wishes that the discussions could have been more critical even though some of the factual material had to be left out. Industrial investigators will find a lot of useful information; the bibliography is quite complete and up to date. The book is well illustrated and the subsections of each chapter have numbers which run consecutively from the beginning of the book. This makes it easy to cross reference the whole subject. Many industrial libraries will no doubt find this work of value. Advanced workers on the fundamental problems of surface chemistry and physics may also find the facts here presented to be of some use." L. H. Reyerson
+ Chem & Eng N 26:2387 Ag 9 '48 400w

"The book abounds in well chosen figures, illustrating tables and concrete examples. A noteworthy feature is the frequent references to recent Russian literature. The book is well organized, well documented and very well indexed. It can be heartily commended for the purposes for which it is intended." V. K. LaMer
+ Chem Eng 55:330 My '48 250w

"The book would not be very satisfactory as a textbook; in fact, it was not intended that it should be so used. It is, however, an excellent reference book and should be at the disposal of all research workers in the field of surface chemistry." F. E. Bartell
+ J Phys & Colloid Chem 52:1266 O '48 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:818 My 15 '48 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:7 Ja '48

BILL, ALFRED HOYT. Campaign of Princeton, 1776-1777. 145p maps $2.50 Princeton univ. press

973.3326 U.S.—History—Revolution 48-5265

"Detailed description of the brief but important Trenton-Princeton engagements between Christmas night, 1776, and January 4, 1777 told in exciting narrative, with reverence for the Colonial troops and General Washington." Current Hist

Current Hist 14:174 Mr '48 30w

Sat R of Lit 31:15 Je 5 '48 150w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Social Educ 13:48 Ja '49 550w

BILL, ALFRED HOYT. Rehearsal for conflict, the war with Mexico, 1846-1848. 342p il $4.50 Knopf

973.62 U.S.—History—War with Mexico, 1845-1848 47-31194

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"In Rehearsal for Conflict, Mr. Bill has furnished the first worth-while one-volume work on this important American war. He has integrated the relationship between the Mexican campaigns and what followed in the next twenty years. Accepting many of Justin

BILL, A. H.—Continued
Smith's theses, he has contributed nothing that will revolutionize history, but has created an intensely readable book, capable of blasting some of the favorite myths, traditions, theories, and folklore embedded in the popular mind." Holman Hamilton
+ Am Hist R 53:563 Ap '48 500w

Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 117:27 D 1 '47 210w

"Written in a pleasing style, Rehearsal for Conflict is an informative and entertaining volume." R. R. Hill
+ Pol Sci Q 63:468 S '48 450w

"Livelier and more compressed than Justin H. Smith or George Lockhart Rives, this volume will replace both for the general reader. Its subtitle is not strictly accurate; the conflict was not a rehearsal for the Civil War so much as a prelude to it. Mr. Bill might have said more of its importance in bringing into the foreground of national life the almost irrepressible conflict between those who were determined to expand slavery, and those who were still more determined to hem it in. But he has produced a capital short history of a neglected part of our national story." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 31:16 Ja 31 '48 900w

BILL, ALFRED HOYT. Ring of danger; a tale of Elizabethan England; il. by Frederick T. Chapman. 259p $3 Knopf 48-8740

Romance of England in the time of Queen Elizabeth, written for teen-aged readers. There is a plot to put Mary, Queen of Scots, on the English throne; there is a mysterious sapphire poison ring; heroes and villains; and a seventeen-year-old heroine.

Booklist 45:143 D 15 '48

'A grand yarn."
+ Kirkus 16:530 O 1 '48 130w

"Vivid characterizations of real and imaginary persons. Recommended for older boys and girls." C. W. Field
+ Library J 73:1827 D 15 '48 100w

"There are times when Walter is so enmeshed in high intrigue that you wonder how Mr. Bill can ever clear him. The bold, black-and-white action illustrations by Frederick T. Chapman suit the text perfectly." M. E.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 14 '48 270w

"There is a plethora of adventure and there are scenes that seem forced, but no more so than in some currently popular historical fiction for adults. Boys and girls with a taste for historical romance will enjoy the action and the vivid Elizabethan background." F. C. S.
+ N Y Times p58 N 14 '48 140w

"There is plenty of action and two excellent characters—Prosper Grange and the sea captain, old Diggory."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:33 N 13 '48 50w

BINGHAM, HIRAM. Lost city of the Incas; the story of Machu Picchu and its builders. 263p $5 Duell
985 Machu Picchu, Peru. Incas 48-9227

"The story of an archaeological find in Peru—Machu Picchu—in 1911 and of later exploration in the area. . . Senator Bingham has revised his earlier book Machu Picchu (published 20 years ago in a limited edition) in the light of new material, scientific interpretations, and assembled theories and reasoning to describe the Incan civilization the ruins revealed. Here are the identification of the finds, the excitement of the search for evidence, the historical significance of the discoveries they made, and the overall picture of archaeological procedure and investigation." (Kirkus) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:155 Ja 1 '49

"The author's personal enthusiasm for his subject, and his handling of his material makes a book that will fascinate any follower of exploration."
+ Kirkus 16:423 Ag 15 '48 150w

"He has endeavored to tell the story in 'popular form', and the general public may be interested; but the book, rather full of details, is more likely to interest the archeologist and the student of Latin American history. There is no denying, however, that Bingham writes with verve and an enthusiasm that will captivate his readers." Joseph Borome
+ — Library J 73:1381 O 1 '48 100w

"The book is so beautifully put together as to cause publisher and author and reader warm pride: good paper and type, exciting photographs—views of the cordillera with its peaks of 20,000 feet and more; of the fortress walls of Sacsahuaman; of jars and pots; of bronze knives and axes and chisels and crowbars; of today's Indians whose fathers built so mightily; of stone walls of delicately fitted white granite ashlars. And all told with fine reserve and grace." Hubert Herring
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 D 5 '48 1000w

Reviewed by V. W. von Hagen
N Y Times p18 D 5 '48 850w

"A first-rate job, bolstered with numerous fine photographs."
+ New Yorker 24:165 N 20 '48 120w

"Allowing plenty of room for differences of opinion between Mr. Bingham and the other experts on controversial matters such as Inca chronology, we should be grateful to have this first-hand account of an epochal discovery, told with winning modesty and conveying its sense of excitement without over-dramatization and without even one purple patch in the writing. The photographs, generous in number, form a perfect complement to the text." Herschel Brickell
+ Sat R of Lit 31:8 D 18 '48 650w

Reviewed by Wayne Smith
Springf'd Republican p18A Ja 16 '49 1250w

BINNEY, IDA. Boppet, please stop it; il. [by the author]. 48p $1.50 Scott, W.R.
48-5978

"The tale of a puppy who was so lively he tired everyone until he met his match in a little boy who had been doing likewise." Springf'd Republican

---

Kirkus 16:47 F 1 '48 90w

"I don't know a funnier book: it is good for laughs now and as long as its covers hang together." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 9 '48 250w

"Although some of the humor is of the adult variety, there is plenty of hilarity for the 5-to-8-year-olds, especially if the story is read aloud. The illustrations seem to derive from the Bemelmans school, not so well done, but appropriately droll and filled with action." E. L. B.
N Y Times p24 My 9 '48 140w
Springf'd Republican p10B My 9 '48 40w
Wis Lib Bul 44:134 Je '48

BIOGRAPHY index; a cumulative index to biographical material in books and magazines; quarterly with annual cumulation. Service basis Wilson, H.W.
016.92 Biography—Indexes

Supplement to Volume 1 which appeared in Book Review Digest, August 1947.

"Examination of succeeding issues shows that the plan for indexing biographical data from books and periodicals, described in the April 1947 review, has been continued. . . The coverage of biographical material offered by this well-organized index is comprehensive and reliable. The Biography Index will be a useful and time saving reference service for all types of libraries. It is recommended."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:49 O '47 100w

BIRD, GEORGE LLOYD. Article writing and marketing. 483p il $5.50; to colleges $4 Rinehart

029.6 Authorship 48-5683

A practical guide to magazine and newspaper article writing. "This book is for the individual who intends to devote part or all of his time to the craft of article writing—that is, to the production for magazines and newspapers of entertaining or informative pieces, excluding fiction, poetry, newspaper reporting, and a number of highly specialized types of the column." (p.3) Lists markets for different types of writing. Index.

Booklist 44:345 Je 15 '48

"This is an especially useful and competent discussion."

+ Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '48

School & Society 68:439 D 18 '48 70w

BIRD, HARRY LEWIS. This fascinating advertising business. 405p il $4 Bobbs

659.1 Advertising 47-12090

A history and description of the advertising business, written by a man who has been in advertising since 1922. He tells what it is, how it is used, why, and what part it plays in modern business. Contains an "adman's" glossary. Index.

Booklist 44:229 Mr 1 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '48

BISHOP, MRS CLAIRE (HUCHET). Blue Spring Farm. 183p $2 Viking

48-2029

Blue Spring Farm in the Pennsylvania hills was a very small experiment in international living. Here children could spend the summer and learn music. Some of the youngsters went unwillingly, but changed their minds after they arrived. This story of one summer includes an experiment in truck farming as a sideline, and both music and beets brought success.

Booklist 44:320 My 15 '48

+ Commonweal 49:151 N 19 '48 130w

"The informative sections of Blue Spring Farm are sound, the fun is natural and spontaneous and there is plenty of lively conversation." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:196 My '48 160w

"The story is new in setting, there's much of value here. But unfortunately, there's an intangible aura of priggishness, of goody-goody atmosphere that spoils the natural spontaneity of incident. Overstress on music, for any but musically inclined young readers. And not Claire Bishop at her best."

Kirkus 16:53 F 1 '48 130w

"Recommended for ages 10-14." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 73:716 My 1 '48 80w

"Though I have my own ideas about the effect of truck-farming on the hands of pianists, it sounds well in a story and Claire Huchet Bishop is a born and experienced story-teller." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 18 '48 290w

"The unusual story is told partly through the diaries and letters by the children." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 25 '48 140w

New Yorker 24:135 D 11 '48 60w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 31:33 My 8 '48 180w

Wis Lib Bul 44:106 My '48

BISHOP, MRS CLAIRE (HUCHET). France alive. 227p $3 McMullen

282.44 Roman Catholic church in France. France—Religion 48-5494

For two winters Mrs Bishop traveled thru France questioning, listening, reading all the literature she could get, and observing. This account of what she calls "a renewed religious spirit in France" is the result of her journeys and observations. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 44:262 Ap 1 '48

"Mrs. Bishop has avoided the deeper social implications of this transformed, Christian France. She has not sufficiently underlined the new Christian's acute awareness of the necessity of rethinking a new society in all of its institutions, his enthusiasm for the city of tomorrow. Yet France Alive with its thorough bibliography is an excellent introduction." S. W. Cassidy

+ Cath World 167:88 Ap '48 370w

Reviewed by E. S. Skillin

Commonweal 47:569 Mr 19 '48 900w

Current Hist 15:103 Ag '48 20w

"If only a fraction of the people of France are affected by the growing dynamic Christianity Mrs. Bishop reports, it is a positive, a hopeful thing. We may feed their bodies today; they may feed our spirit tomorrow." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 F 29 '48 1000w

Reviewed by C. A. Brady

N Y Times p18 Ap 4 '48 490w

School & Society 67:175 F 28 '48 10w

BISHOP, HILLMAN M. and HENDEL, SAMUEL, eds. Basic issues of American democracy; a book of readings. 323p $2.40 Appleton

321.8 Democracy. U.S.—Politics and government 48-6179

Fifty-seven selected readings to be used in introductory courses in political science. They are grouped under five main headings: The 'science' of politics; Democracy in a changing world; The living constitution; Some problems of political control; Some problems of American foreign policy. Emphasis is placed on contemporary thinkers and commentators, but there are also selections from the Federalist, and some nineteenth-century political philosophers.

"Since the emphasis is upon political theory and philosophy, intellectually immature college students may find some of the selections rather hard going. Nevertheless, this collection of readings should prove stimulating, provocative, and educational in the truest sense. It will certainly induce in students a fuller appreciation of some of the underlying, persistent problems of government." J. E. Kallenbach

+ Am Pol Sci R 42:594 Je '48 300w

School & Society 67:415 My 29 '48 10w

"The uses of such a volume are many and varied. At the college level this book would make an excellent collateral text for a course in introductory social science, political institutions, or American history. In the senior high school this would make an excellent reference book for classes in American history or in modern problems. Even at the junior high school level this volume should prove of value with the better readers and more mature pupils." R. A. Brown

+ Social Studies 39:379 D '48 450w

BISHOP, JOHN PEALE. Collected essays; ed. with an introd. by Edmund Wilson. 508p $4.50 Scribner

814 48-8528

"The essays here brought together, from Bishop's published volumes and from the many journals and periodicals to which he contributed, range from general discussions of art and literature to book reviews or bits of criticism." Publisher's note

Booklist 45:63 O 15 '48

"This fat book of essays on literature and painting, of revived book reviews and stories, can be read with great pleasure." Leo Kennedy

+ Chicago Sun O 4 '48 100w

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 49:262 D 17 '48 240w

BISHOP, J. P.—Continued

"Bishop showed early and brilliant insight into the art of the cinema—an original talent in this country. To all material he brought a fresh if not definitive viewpoint; he met new things with intellectual lucidity. There are more profound American critics; there are few who write with so much point and wit."

+ Kirkus 16:78 F 1 '48 170w

Reviewed by Dudley Fitts

N Y Times p26 O 10 '48 300w

New Yorker 24:134 O 16 '48 140w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer

Sat R of Lit 31:24 O 2 '48 330w

BISHOP, JOHN PEALE. Collected poems; ed. with a pref. and a personal memoir by Allen Tate. 277p $4 Scribner

811 48-4117

In collecting these poems four years after the death of their author, the editor states that his aim is "to bring a larger public a more complete view of Bishop and his work." Besides poems from Bishop's published work the editor has included considerable unpublished verse.

Booklist 45:63 O 15 '48

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun O 4 '48 360w

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 49:262 D 17 '48 240w

"All phases of his poetry are represented. . . They vary greatly in quality, and it is somewhat difficult to assess them, for they make no coherent whole. If any quality unites them, it is a certain classical restraint, combined with a light and delicate sense of color; a few achieve wit, others maturity of feeling. Though Bishop's poetical contribution is not so great as his critical one, it is welcome to have his works in one volume."

+ Kirkus 16:78 F 1 '48 180w

"Allen Tate has rarely put his powers of criticism to better use than in selecting and arranging the poems of his close friend in this volume that is likely to stand as definitive for some time to come. . . Needed by any collection of American poetry claiming to be at all representative." Shirley Barker

+ Library J 73:1277 S 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by Dudley Fitts

N Y Times p26 O 10 '48 300w

"His best later poems show mature strength, and many memorable lines and stanzas, of great formal charm, are scattered through this well-arranged and sympathetically edited posthumous volume. Selections from his four books of verse, which were published during the years after his graduation from Princeton, in 1917, not only trace the development of an American talent but, because of Bishop's variety of interests, provide a casebook of American poetry during a crucial literary era."

+ New Yorker 24:106 O 2 '48 140w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer

Sat R of Lit 31:24 O 2 '48 330w

BISHOP, MORRIS GILBERT. Champlain: the life of fortitude. 364p il $4 Knopf

B or 92 Champlain, Samuel de 48-8873

Biography of the Father of Canada, who was an explorer, soldier, and dreamer combined. In all he went on twelve voyages for the French kings, and the stories of these voyages are given here. Index.

Booklist 45:176 Ja 15 '49

"There are a hundred and one passages in which Professor Bishop illuminates the life and work of Champlain, and indeed the history of his time; but perhaps enough has been said to show that his book is a notable contribution to the history of New France. It is, moreover, eminently readable, and is a shining example of how the most scholarly work can be set forth in a manner that appeals to the lay reader." W. S. Wallace

+ Canadian Hist R 29:424 D '48 700w

"Admirably written biography of Samuel Champlain." Theodore Maynard

+ Commonweal 49:232 D 10 '48 700w

"A somewhat sober, but competent account of a good man whose exploits are history."

+ Kirkus 16:464 S 1 '48 120w

"Mr. Bishop, noted for his light verse and mystery novels, also displays a deft touch as historian. Recommended for both American and Canadian libraries." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 73:1505 O 15 '48 140w

"The portrait, with its fine Renaissance bloom, that emerges at Bishop's hands is of a character molded in the traditions of the enlightenment that two centuries later was to bring forth a Thomas Jefferson on the American continent. Bishop reconstructs the background of Champlain's activities . . . as deftly and intelligently as he portrays the explorer's character." Howard Doughty

+ Nation 167:672 D 11 '48 700w

"While some of Mr. Bishop's guesses are helpful and penetrating, others seem forced and unlikely, and arrived at by an imposition of the modern mentality upon the seventeenth century. However, most readers will find Mr. Bishop's freely confessed exercises in imagination less distressing than pedantic scholars' passionate quibbles over minor matters. Whenever Mr. Bishop encounters a long-vexed point, he blithely refers the reader to a terse but thorough appendix, and gets on with his story. The tone of the book is that of an able popular lecture by a man who is more interested in making his audience share his enthusiasm for the subject than in parading his erudition." Mason Wade

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 O 17 '48 1300w

"Mr. Bishop, who is chairman of the Department of Romance Literature at Cornell, has brought light where it is needed; and in so doing he has made Champlain's personality as important as his deeds. This is not to say that literary skill has been used merely to create a figure, heroic but fanciful. On the contrary, Mr. Bishop's sensitive imagination evokes from the record a man whose motives are understandable and whose character shines through both failure and success." J. A. Krout

+ N Y Times p4 N 7 '48 650w

"The history is solidly based on scholarship, and benefits from the author's informed and personal style. The book, however, deserves a better index."

+ — New Yorker 24:180 D 4 '48 160w

"A remarkable man, whose fame is kept well burnished in Canada but who, despite Parkman's record of his work, is little known to Americans. Mr. Bishop's carefully planned and beautifully written book should do something to extend his renown among us." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 31:19 N 27 '48 750w

Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 9 '49 130w

BISHOP, ROBERT, and CRAYFIELD, E. S. Russia astride the Balkans. 287p $3.50 McBride

949.8 Russia—Foreign relations—Rumania. Rumania—Politics and government 48-9065

Chronicles Rumanian history from August, 1943, when American planes bombed Ploesti, to December, 1947, when King Michael went into exile, with stress on the Russian part in that history. The authors spent four years in Rumania as intelligence service operators.

"This book chronicles Rumanian, not Balkan, history. . . Since Rumania is but a mountain-ringed enclave in the Balkans, not a saddle, the title is ambitious and somewhat misleading. . . Despite its faults, 'Russia Astride the Balkans' does add something to our pitifully inadequate knowledge of what is happening in the Soviet-dominated countries of Eastern Europe. A scholarly book on postwar Rumania remains to be written, and until it is, Americans must be grateful for what is available." Russell Hill

+ — Nation 167:730 D 25 '48 700w

"Messrs Bishop and Crayfield will seriously disappoint readers who expect to find anything in this book that is 'revealing,' in spite of the fact their narrative is readable." Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '48 240w

BJORK, KENNETH. Saga in steel and concrete; Norwegian engineers in America. 504p il $4 Norwegian-Am. hist. assn.

926.2 Engineers. Norwegians in the U.S. 47-7050

"This is a story of Norwegian engineers who migrated to America during the fifty-year period ending about 1929 to apply the skills they had acquired in the schools of Europe in the industrial conquest of a continent. During this period of feverish technological development, rivers were spanned with bridges and tunnels to open great arteries of freight and passenger transport; cities of magnificent skyscrapers were built and furnished with sewers, tunnels, subways, and power and communications facilities. In the changed and changing mold of living and thinking in America, the Norwegian engineer left deep imprints of his training, skill, inventiveness, leadership, vision, and philosophy." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by J. W. Oliver
Am Hist R 53:854 Jl '48 490w

"It is fortunate that the Norwegian-American Historical Association has encouraged Professor Bjork to study this migration and its effects on American technology, and that it has supplied the funds with which to publish his fascinating story." J. A. Goff

+ Ann Am Acad 257:228 My '48 400w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:53 Jl '48
Social Studies 39:96 F '48 10w

BLACK, MRS IRMA (SIMONTON). Spoodles, the puppy who learned; pictures by Johnny Whistle. [48p] $1.25 Scott, W.R.

48-5936

Picture book describing what happened when Spoodles, half a spaniel and half a poodle, was left home alone.

"Spoodles is a fast moving dog story for anyone under seven, and certainly shows that owning a dog is a responsibility, as well as a pleasure. . . This combination of mishap and happy ending makes 'Spoodles' an important and satisfying book for young children." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Mr 27 '48 270w
+ Kirkus 16:47 F 1 '48 130w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 21 '48 180w

"An engaging story. . . The funny name of this pup, Johnny Whistle's comical line drawings of Spoodles, guilty or triumphant; the humor and brevity of text per page all appeal to readers aged 6 to 8." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p21 Je 13 '48 150w
Springf'd Republican p10B My 9 '48 40w

BLACK, MRS IRMA (SIMONTON). Toby, a curious cat; pictures by Zhenya Gay. [59p] $1.50 Holiday

48-7295

The adventures of a kitten as he learns about how to live in an apartment. For ages six to eight.

Booklist 44:370 Jl 1 '48

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Jl 17 '48 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:274 Jl '48 40w

"The brief adventures of Toby who enjoys a series of pleasant antics in his new home provide good read aloud material for somewhat younger children. Pleasant format."

+ Kirkus 16:235 My 15 '48 70w

"Recommended." Gertrude Andrus
+ Library J 73:1101 Ag '48 70w

"Lacks the spark that makes some very simple stories so interesting. The vocabulary is difficult for a small child's own reading. Not recommended." R. O. Bostwick

— Library J 73:1101 Ag '48 50w

"His tricks and gambolings, so well presented by the author, are less successfully pictured by Zhenya Gay, for the illustrator, whose profile views of a cat have vigor and beauty, seems unable to draw as good a full-face portrait—and Toby meets everything head on. The large print and amusing narrative will attract and hold first and second grade readers, and listeners who are younger." S. C. Gross

+ — N Y Times p29 My 23 '48 150w

BLACK, JOHN DONALD, and others. Farm management. 1073p il maps $5.50 Macmillan

631 Farm management Agr47-314

"This textbook is intended primarily for use in the junior and senior years in agricultural colleges. It is intended also to provide the materials for a substantial course on the same level of intellectual maturity as the usual courses in Feeds and Feeding, Soils, Genetics and the like, and to be preceded by the first two especially, and to build upon them. It also assumes that the student will have had an elementary course in the Principles of Economics, or the more or less equivalent course given instead in some colleges of agriculture. The content of the beginning course in economics taken by agricultural college students varies so much, however, that it has been necessary to restate some of the principles in order to be sure that all readers will be equipped with those that are basic to Farm Management." (Pref) Bibliographies. Index.

"Already in use in the classrooms of several colleges and universities, Farm Management is probably the most comprehensive work of its kind available today. Written at the upperclass college level, the book is of value to teachers and workers in general economics for its thorough treatment of production economics as applied to the agricultural industry." L. S. Hardin

+ Am Econ R 38:962 D '48 1150w

"This thousand-page book is designed for a full year of work at the upper-division level. . . It touches nearly the whole field of agricultural economics as seen from the standpoint of the individual. Only time will determine its attractiveness to the teachers of farm management as a medium for presenting their subject. It is the belief of this reviewer, however, that we have here a more mature and scientific textbook than has ever before been offered in this field, and one that will achieve a wide and deserved popularity." M. R. Benedict

+ Ann Am Acad 254:211 N '47 460w

"The authors have done a remarkable job of integrating the technical aspects of agriculture and the practical problems of farm operation. . . The book is not entirely without minor shortcomings. Under their discussion of systems of farming the authors have posed certain problems, such as the most profitable rates of fertilizer application or feeding dairy cows. The analytical tools are given more detailed treatment in a later chapter dealing with the combination of productive agents. It is this reviewer's opinion that the detailed treatment of the tools might well have come first." E. O. Heady

+ — J Pol Econ 56:182 Ap '48 1200w

BLACK, PAUL HOWARD. Machine design. 357p il $4 McGraw

621.8 Machinery—Design 48-4645

"This text is written for advanced engineering students who have a background knowledge of mechanics, strength of materials and related topics. Stresses and strains in machine parts are discussed at some length, but the greater part of the volume deals with the designing of specific machine elements. The author is Professor of Machine Design at Cornell University." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

BLACK, P. H.—Continued

Booklist 45:99 N 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1668 N 15 '48 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:72 S '48

BLACKMORE, PETER. Fickle moment. 244p $2.75 Putnam

47-7279

An amusing story of an English family and the complications in their usually quiet lives when both daughters got engaged and circumstances altered their fates. There is considerable humor in the final situation.

Booklist 44:184 Ja 15 '48

"English in character and humor, this is gentle entertainment."
+ Kirkus 15:606 N 1 '47 120w

"'Fickle moment, prithee stay!' is a line from 'The Mikado' and that operetta's first night is the story's culminating point of delectable merriment. The whole town is involved, and no outline of the imbroglio could do justice to Mr. Blackmore's deft and rollicking narrative." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 7 '48 200w

BLACKMUR, RICHARD P. The Good European and other poems. 39p $5 Cummington press

811 48-13886

"This is R. P. Blackmur's third book of poems. Since the publication of his first, 'From Jordan's Delight,' ten years ago, he has been maneuvering himself steadily and insistently away from that book's relatively simple lyricism toward poems marked by great seriousness and considerable individuality—muscular, intricate, devious, crafty, recalcitrant, and among the most curious of the time." N Y Times

"Many of Mr. Blackmur's later poems were written as the man in the story played the violin, by main force; they seemed to me interesting as an awkward, tortured, all too sincere diary, but surprisingly unsuccessful as works of art. But several of the poems in 'The Good European' are successful, and most of them are interesting. They were written in a style that is partly an extension of the night side of Hopkins, partly a sort of lowest common denominator of 'the' traditional English poetic style, and partly no style at all, speech whose extraordinary awkwardness of strain is a guaranty of truth or the intention of truth." Randall Jarrell
Nation 166:447 Ap 24 '48 950w

Reviewed by Robert Fitzgerald
New Repub 118:33 Ap 26 '48 150w

Reviewed by Weldon Kees
N Y Times p4 Ja 11 '48 800w

New Yorker 23:100 D 20 '47 50w

"If it were only for the third section of 'Three Poems from a Text: Isaiah LXI: 1-3,' an elegy called 'A Garment of Praise for the Spirit of Heaviness,' Mr. Blackmur's new book would be a contribution of signal importance to American poety. As it happens, the elegy need not stand alone: there is nothing here that is not ponderable, and much that is as moving, philosophically (not, perhaps, so bitterly compelling), as that poem. The writing, not least in the two sets of epigrams, 'Scarabs for the Living,' is nervous, extraordinarily complex in texture, and urgent with a kind of religious New England cantankerousness that one has scarcely heard in contemporary verse since the too-early death of John Wheelwright." Dudley Fitts
+ Sat R of Lit 31:28 Mr 20 '48 400w

BLACKSTOCK, JOSEPHINE. Rue plays the game; a story for young people. 215p $2.50 Putnam

48-5398

"Rue is a clergyman's daughter who goes to Chicago to learn to be a play director. Her father has a bank account in heaven, but Aunt Laura, with one on earth, thinks learning to play is nonsense and pays expenses only on the stern stipulation that Rue comes back if she falls below straight A's in every subject. The value of the story is that it gets at the meaning of play, the part it takes in physiology, mental health, racial relations." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Booklist 44:286 Ap 15 '48

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Je 26 '48 140w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 9 '48 240w

"There is in the story a good touch of American democracy, different groups and nationalities working and playing together. Recommended for older girls." Marian Webb
+ Library J 73:486 Mr 15 '48 70w

"One sees in this lively book how a play director trains and works—Miss Blackstock has been one—but you also see what is even more important, why she works." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 29 '48 230w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
N Y Times p22 Jl 18 '48 220w

BLACKWOOD, ANDREW WATTERSON, comp. The Protestant pulpit; an anthology of master sermons from the reformation to our own day. 318p $2.75 Abingdon-Cokesbury

252 Sermons 47-12188

Thirty-nine sermons by leading Protestant preachers from the reformation to the present. The first section contains sermons by preachers of the past; the second section has sermons of such men of the present as Ralph W. Sockman, Joseph Fort Newton, and others. Partial contents: Martin Luther: Justification by faith; John Bunyan: From The Pilgrim's Progress; John Wesley: The scripture way of salvation; Jonathan Edwards: The Christian pilgrim; W. E. Channing: The character of Christ; Phillips Brooks: The fire and the calf; D. L. Moody: What think ye of Christ?; J. H. Jowett: The Magnetic power of the uplifted Lord; Karl Barth: Repentance; H. E. Fosdick: Forgiveness of sins; R. M. Jones: The heart of Christianity; C. E. Macartney: Your unknown self; Martin Niemöller: Maundy Thursday. Bibliography. Biographical index of authors.

Booklist 44:127 D 1 '47

Christian Century 65:547 Je 2 '48 170w

"There are some great themes, well developed and fully developed, in the old sermons of Luther, Wesley, Whitefield, Edwards, Brooks, and the rest; and the sermons of today's masters are also good. The selection of representative preachers is excellent, and the reading of this volume is good fare for both clergy and laity." R. C. Miller
+ Churchman 162:17 Ja 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. C. Herrick
Crozer Q 25:171 Ap '48 900w

BLAICH, THEODORE PAUL, and BAUMGARTNER, JOSEPH CORNELIUS. Challenge of democracy. rev ed 739p il $3.20 Harper

309.173 Democracy. U.S.—Social conditions. U.S.—Politics and government 47-31348

Textbook on problems of life in a democracy. This revised edition stresses the principle of change which is always present in the United States. First published in 1942. Chapter bibliographies. Index.

School & Society 67:47 Ja 17 '48 20w

Social Studies 38:380 D '47 10w

BLAIR, THOMAS ARTHUR. Weather elements; a text in elementary meteorology. 3d ed 373p il maps $5.65; to schools $4.25 Prentice-Hall

551.5 Meteorology 48-2450

"Extensive revision with new chapters on air masses and the relation of weather to aviation. Recent advancements in techniques and use of instruments are included." (Booklist) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1943 and 1937.

Booklist 45:69 O 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1515 O 15 '48 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:74 S '48

BLAKE, FORRESTER. Johnny Christmas. 278p $3 Morrow

48-5629

Novel of the western frontier between the years 1836 and 1845. It is the story of the growing up of Johnny Christmas, and pictures life on the plains of Texas, in the Central Rockies, and along the Spanish trail to California.

Booklist 44:248 Mr 15 '48

"Johnny Christmas never emerges as an individual, while his comings and goings seem artificially contrived to fit in with the author's material. With both characterization and narrative thus lacking in vitality, what interest there is derives almost wholly from the setting, for Mr. Blake is far more at ease in describing at length the country whose magnificent terrain he knows almost as well as any frontiersman ever did." M. W. S.
— + Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 12 '48 330w

"Good reading in a super-western market."
+ Kirkus 15:681 D 15 '47 150w

"It is weakness of conception that the movement of the plot hinges on nothing more than the casual whim of the leading character. Other persons drift in and out of the story, almost without reason. They seem not quite finished. Except some of the Indians. Mr. Blake does well with them and it is good to see them approached as human beings. But who cares about people and who cares about plot when one can slip into page after page of music, big and little, loud and soft, and all filled with the right sounds?" Elliot Arnold
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 7 '48 550w

"Those who seek romance will find 'Johnny Christmas' disappointing. Nor can it be defined as adventure or as historical fiction. Its pattern is as unconventional as Johnny himself, a composite of all those restless ones whose names no history or contemporary diary records. It was they who found Mosca Pass and Cochetopa and the High Tanks. Men who called themselves pioneers followed them. Therein Mr. Blake's novel is notable and praiseworthy." Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p12 Mr '48 490w

"None of the characters has much coherence, and the descriptions of the landscapes could have been worded better, but there's a lot of material about beaver trapping, migrations of the Ute Indians, and the decadent rule of the Spanish colonies in New Mexico and California for those who are interested in such things."
New Yorker 24:85 F 28 '48 100w

Reviewed by Allan Bosworth
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 14 '48 850w

"This is a miraculously good Western, and by a good Western I mean a book that has the feel of the body of America in it: hills, rivers, winds, trails, the history rising out of old conflicts with Indians and Frenchmen and Mexicans, and the men who seemed to rise out of the hills and the history with a consciousness of dedication to both." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 Mr 13 '48 500w

BLAKE, NICHOLAS, pseud. See Day-Lewis, C.

BLALOCK, GROVER CLEVELAND. Direct-current machinery. 367p il $3.75 McGraw

621.3132 Electric machinery 47-6367

"College text on basic and specialized D.C. machines and their control. Electromagnetic induction dynamos and armatures are explained. Operating characteristics of generators and motors are discussed. Chapter on batteries. Author assumes that the student has knowledge of principles of electric and magnetic circuits and necessary mathematics for understanding the derivations of essential equations. Practical illustrative examples given." (Library J) List of visual aids. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:44 Ja 1 '48 70w

"Intended chiefly for junior students in engineering and technical schools, it should be useful, also, as a review book for self-instruction text. The discussion assumes that the reader will have had some groundwork in engineering mathematics and electrical theory."
N Y New Tech Bks 32:73 O '47

BLANCK, JACOB. Jonathan and the rainbow; il. by Louis Slobodkin. 47p $2 Houghton

48-8473

Story of how Jonathan rescued a stolen rainbow from a retired pirate. For ages 5-9.

Booklist 45:90 N 1 '48

"Healthy imagination. Real charm." Emmett Dedmon
+ Chicago Sun N 13 '48 90w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 11 '49 180w

+ Kirkus 16:478 S 15 '48 50w

"Highly amusing picture storybook for younger readers. . . Slobodkin's illustrations are unusually good—as full of chuckles as the text. Recommended." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 73:1672 N 15 '48 70w

"Everyone will feel that it all actually happened, because Mr. Blanck tells the story in such a matter-of-fact manner and Mr. Slobodkin pictures exactly the moods and actions of the characters. This is definitely a very special book for 4- to 8-year-olds." Lois Palmer
+ N Y Times p43 N 28 '48 110w

Reviewed by Ruth Broggen
San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 14 '48 120w

Wis Lib Bul 44:186 N '48

BLANSHARD, PAUL. Democracy and empire in the Caribbean; a contemporary review by [the author]. 379p $5 Macmillan

330.9729 Caribbean sea 47-30919

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"The historical background material is weak; sometimes the analysis of current conditions seems faulty, and sometimes Mr. Blanshard fails to make his own position clear, notably in regard to the role of the Roman Catholic Church in this area. Nevertheless, this is on the whole an admirable study of an area which possesses great interest for the people of the United States because of our investments, possessions, and military bases there." A. P. Whitaker
+ — Ann Am Acad 255:186 Ja '48 750w

Foreign Affairs 26:408 Ja '48 30w

"In his own field of specialization, Mr. Blanshard is careful to document his statements, but otherwise he sometimes accepts as authoritative, theories insufficiently supported." Muna Lee
+ — Survey G 37:223 Ap '48 650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:385 D '47 240w

BLANTON, CATHERINE. Pedro's choice; il. by Harold Price. (Whittlesey house publication) 64p $2 McGraw 48-8764

A story of Mexico for grades 4-7. Pedro's dearest wish was to be a matador; but when he recognized his former pet bull in the arena he soon decided to listen to his elders and become a farmer.

Booklist 45:108 N 15 '48

"This warm and touching story is beautifully handled both by the writer and the illustrator."
+ Commonweal 49:150 N 19 '48 40w
Horn Bk 24:457 N '48 80w
Kirkus 16:527 O 1 '48 70w

"The anti-bullfight angle is new and handled very well. Animal lovers will rejoice and young converts will be made. Recommended for the fourth and fifth grade group especially." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 74:65 Ja 1 '49 70w
+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 N 13 '48 40w
+ Springf'd Republican p7B N 7 '48 70w

BLEGEN, THEODORE CHRISTIAN. Grass roots history. 266p $3 Univ. of Minn.
917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs. Frontier and pioneer life—Minnesota 48-431

In order to reconstruct a part of the American past the author has made a study of local history thru the means of diaries and letters, songs and ballads brought to America by the immigrants and pioneers. Minnesota as seen thru the eyes of its early settlers is one case in point. Index.

"This volume is good reading for both the amateur and the professional historian, and both will find it rewarding. Itself a substantial contribution to the kind of research in American cultural and social history on the local levels which its author is eager to promote, it should stimulate investigation and writing in this rich and still largely untilled field. The author's deep loyalty to the people from whom he sprung, and to the region to whose cultural development he has made significant contributions, is apparent in every chapter and makes the book a warm, human document, as well as a work of sound and imaginative historical scholarship." Carl Wittke
+ Am Hist R 53:567 Ap '48 600w
Booklist 44:199 F 1 '48

"Interesting and suggestive book. . . One of several worth-while jobs [the author] has done is to collect the letters written by the Norwegian settlers of the Northwest back to their relatives and friends in Norway." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 6 '48 700w

"Mr. Blegen writes with grace and clarity and has an intense interest in his subject which he manages to implant in the reader."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Mr 7 '48 140w

"The case for regionalism in literature and history has been aggressively put forth in recent years. So vigorous have been its defenders, so obvious its benefits, that hardly any responsible person today would deny the value of the grass roots approach. This book argues the regional case again, lucidly and energetically." Leo Gurko
+ N Y Times p21 Ag 22 '48 500w

"What Dean Blegen is saying here may sound commonplace. It is that our history should pay attention to the commonplace. Yet these slight-seeming addresses and essays carry a charge of historical dynamite with an explosive force reminiscent of the Turner thesis. The freshness and shock of his words are due both to Mr. Blegen's insights and to his profession's oversights. American history-writing has not changed so much since the heroic age of Bancroft, Parton, Rhodes, Schouler, McMaster." R. M. Dorson
+ Sat R of Lit 31:14 Je 5 '48 500w
School & Society 67:62 Ja 24 '48 20w
Times [London] Lit Sup p27 Ja 8 '49 150w
Wis Lib Bul 44:62 Mr '48

BLEILER, EVERETT FRANKLIN, ed. Checklist of fantastic literature; a bibliography of fantasy, weird and science fiction books published in the English language; with a pref. by Melvin Korshak. 455p $6 Shasta pubs, 5525 Blackstone av, Chicago 37
016.8083 Fiction—Bibliography 48-6709

A bibliography of fantastic literature. "There are six main divisions in the Checklist: Listing by author, giving essential bibliographical information; Listing by title; Appendix Notes; Annotated list of critical and historical reference works; A few associated items; and Bibliographical sources. Over 5,000 books in prose, non-classical in nature and written after 1764 (Horace Walpole's Castle of Otranto) are included. Each entry is on a separate book." (Library J)

"The list is uncritical so that the unaccustomed reader is as likely to pitch upon Edgar Rice Burroughs as upon Charles Williams. But it is a useful guide to a fantastic country and one that collectors, librarians and experienced readers will find indispensable." James Sandoe
Chicago Sun My 14 '48 120w

"Collections and anthologies have not been analyzed. This lack appears to be the one weakness of an otherwise well planned, easy-to-use 'bible.' Recommended wherever the need exists." H. G. Kelley
+ — Library J 73:712 My 1 '48 160w

BLOM, ERIC, comp. Everyman's dictionary of music. 706p $3.50 McKay
780.3 Music—Encyclopedias and dictionaries 48-9031

"Covers only Western music of the Christian era with little about the early centuries and without illustrations and examples of music; the brief entries contain a good many abbreviations. First published in this country in 1946 by Universal distributors. The publisher says that there are some 10,000 entries covering about 3000 composers, 1300 titles of works, 1200 musical terms, 1400 performers (deceased), 1000 other musical personalities, 200 instruments, 200 institutions, 700 literary references, and 1000 cross references." Booklist

Booklist 45:139 D 15 '48

"Fact-wise, the compilation is a sound job for the most part. A few errors have slipped in. Puccini, Borodin and Villa-Lobos each are granted more time on this planet than destiny awarded them. All the same, an inexpensive book of this kind is always welcome. The literary references are especially valuable, as is the complete list of national anthems. However, the student who seeks out the national hymn of Zanzibar is in for a letdown. Straight-faced as you please, the entry reads, 'an unidentifiable tune.'" James Lyons
+ — N Y Times p13 D 19 '48 170w

BLOOM, JULIUS, ed. See Year in American music

BLOOM, SOL. Autobiography. 345p $3.50 Putnam
B or 92 48-4933

The life story of the New York congressman, whose varied career began seventy-eight years ago in San Francisco. At the age of seven he started to work to help support the family. His formal schooling amounted to very little, but his native intelligence overcame his lack, and by the time he was eighteen he was making $25,000 a year. He has lived in San Francisco, Chicago, and New York, and has been in Congress since 1922. Index.

Booklist 45:102 N 15 '48

Reviewed by Ben Kartman
Chicago Sun N 11 '48 300w

"Sol Bloom's humility, philosophy, and kindliness give this backward look at life in official Washington a glow that is as satisfying as it is warm." Harlan Trott
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 3 '48 550w

"Heartily recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 73:1505 O 15 '48 130w

"The parts of Sol Bloom's autobiography on his early years and his showmanship are more interesting than those on his political and international activities, because in these he gives us pleasant details of the things he did and pictures of the people he met, whereas for his official career he relies too much on a review of the agonizing recent history we all remember well. . . However, the autobiography of Sol Bloom gives a pleasant portrait of a valuable and entertaining citizen." M. R. Werner
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 17 '48 900w

"Intimate observers of the political scene have always been aware, in a general way, that Sol Bloom was a rather unusual person. . . But it takes Mr. Bloom himself, in a frank and charming autobiography reviewing his seventy-eight years of work, to really bring it home. . . He is frank in his appraisal of the compromises a politician must make, of the favor-doing that he takes for granted as part of a Congressman's job. But he is more fun to read about when he tells of running a syndicated claque in San Francisco's theatres." Warren Moscow
+ N Y Times p34 O 17 '48 500w

"Looking back over this review, I find that it has been impossible to give you more than the sketchiest idea of the active, busy life the author has led. The only thing to do is to read his book. You will be as thoroughly entertained as I was by the way in which the quick, ambitious boy made himself a success by hard work and fast thinking, educating himself in the best tradition of the self-made man. But you will get something else from this autobiography, too. You will find that Sol Bloom is a man who has kept his balance, who has thought intelligently as he went along." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 14 '48 950w

"Sol Bloom's autobiography, like the man himself, is very human and very ingratiating. It is not a 'great' autobiography, in the classic sense. The author makes no pretense of that, just as he has never professed to be a 'statesman.' He is a decent and kindly person, and his book is a mellow and very readable account of his long and colorful life." R. S. Allen
+ Sat R of Lit 31:12 O 16 '48 700w

Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 9 '49 360w

BLOUGH, GLENN ORLANDO. Beno, the Riverburg mayor; il. by John F. De Cuir. 73p $2.25 Holt
48-5581

Nonsense story for grades three to five. It tells how the Mayor of Riverburg insisted that no town clock was needed. The council rebels and after a session of trying to do the work of the members of the council and making poor success of it, the Mayor finally gives in. He holds a carnival in order to raise money for a town clock.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ag 14 '48 60w

Kirkus 16:235 My 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Je 6 '48 240w

"The ingenious vein of nonsense runs rather thin toward the end of the story, but there is a merry carnival to sustain interest and a reformed Mayor plus the promise of a fine clock to satisfy one's sense of justice." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p29 F 15 '48 140w

Wis Lib Bul 44:64 Mr '48

BLUEMEL, CHARLES SIDNEY. War, politics, and insanity. 121p $2 World press

301.155 Leadership. Personality, Disorders of. Social psychology. Politics, Practical 48-3402

"It is the purpose of this book to study the psychological qualities of political leadership and to identify the disorders of personality with which aggressive leadership is commonly associated." Pref

Reviewed by Hilden Gibson
Am Pol Sci R 42:1249 D '48 300w

"This is a slender volume and cannot be exhaustive; rather it is provocative. It is a critical synthesis of existing data, a critical evaluation of leadership from the point of view of the citizen-follower. Perhaps such books as this should be written in simplified form for use in schools, adult education classes, labor unions, and popular forums. Unless the masses learn to understand what forces move their would-be masters, they will be unknowing victims of the pecking-order, and democracy may die." J. A. Kindwall
+ Ann Am Acad 259:161 S '48 400w

Reviewed by W. A. R. Leys
Christian Century 65:782 Ag 4 '48 650w

"There can be little quarrel with the author's thesis that, since history is made by men, any attempt to improve the course of history must concentrate on the improvement of the quality of leadership, especially on the national level. However, when he makes concrete proposals as to how this is to be achieved, he betrays a political naïveté of an appalling character." J. H. Howson
— + Crozer Q 26:84 Ja '49 700w

Reviewed by Glenn Negley
Ethics 59:75 O '48 170w

School & Society 67:415 My 29 '48 10w

Social Studies 39:380 D '48 20w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 21 '48 480w

BLUMENTHAL, LOUIS H. Administration of group work. 220p $3.50 Assn. press

360 Group work A48-6454

Explains the principles and techniques of group work, and discusses their application to the administration of various types of social welfare agencies. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 44:331 Je 1 '48

"A helpful book for administrators in social-welfare agencies."
+ School & Society 67:301 Ap 17 '48 10w

"Here is a valuable addition to the literature of social work practice. . . It is rich in many practical ideas and methods of work, and the subject matter is ably handled and interestingly written." Lilian Sharpley
+ Survey 84:346 N '48 500w

BLYTHE, LEGETTE. Bold Galilean. 317p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

Jesus Christ—Fiction 48-8146

A Biblical novel, the scene of which is Palestine during the last years of Christ's life. Christ's ministry is described as seen by the centurion whose faith healed his absent servant; by the tribune who conducted Him to the execution; by a leper; and by the disciple Peter.

Booklist 45:32 S 15 '48

"The general tone of the novel is uplifting, and the various characters are well portrayed. A goodly number of readers should find pleasure and edification in this book." L. E. Cannon
+ Christian Century 66:144 F 2 '49 300w

"Among the many novels of recent years laid in Bible times this one may not rank as outstanding; but it is sincerely conceived and readably written, and should cause not a few

BLYTHE, LEGETTE—Continued
to ponder for a space upon that life that has never ceased its loving task of changing a world." Millicent Taylor
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 18 '48 600w

"The story holds the interest and would appeal to many Christian readers, both Catholic and Protestant."
+ Kirkus 16:515 O 1 '48 120w

"Crucifixion and resurrection suspense somewhat weakened by sentimentality. Recommended for the many who enjoy biblical novels." L. A. Miller
+ Library J 73:1192 S 1 '48 80w

"This is a reverent and appealing novel of the time of Christ. Too often, unfortunately, a religious novel is overly-sentimental or overly-evangelical, but the author of 'Bold Galilean' avoids both pitfalls by admirable simplicity and sincerity, letting the message of Christ speak for itself without elaboration or paraphrase." P. J. Searles
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 O 31 '48 360w

Reviewed by Catharine Brody
N Y Times p30 N 7 '48 270w

"'Bold Galilean' is compelling drama extremely readable—both old and modern in its wisdom." Lon Tinkle
+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 N 6 '48 600w

BLYTON, ENID. Sea of adventure; with il. by Stuart Tresilian. 220p $2.50 Macmillan 48-3677

An English mystery-adventure story for ages ten to fourteen. The four children who have appeared in the author's earlier books spend a brief holiday with their friend Bill Smugs among the bird islands in the northern sea. There is an exciting end to their holiday.

"An intensely interesting and thrilling story. . . Recommended for ages 10-14." S. J. Robinson
+ Library J 73:1283 S 15 '48 70w
Sat R of Lit 31:29 N 13 '48 40w
Springf'd Republican p7B S 12 '48 130w

BOARDMAN, NEIL S. Long home. 338p $3 Harper
48-6365

Minnesota in the 1920's and 30's is the scene of this novel. The central character is the illegitimate son of the supposedly correct wife and mother of a conventional family. Theodore is accepted as a cousin and attends the University of Minnesota for a time. But he leaves to join the militant radical proletariat of the 30's and for a time he is at odds with his family. Finally he loses all faith in his party and loses the girl he loves as well.

Reviewed by Leslie Waller
Chicago Sun Ap 27 '48 370w
Kirkus 16:62 F 1 '48 160w

"Highly competent, substantial and sensitive first novel. . . Parallels in method and subject, large sections of Haydn's The Time is Noon. Recommended for adult collections." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:472 Mr 15 '48 80w

"A vigorous, plain-spoken, concentrated coverage of the life of youth in a small Minnesota town and in the Twin Cities during the period between the two World Wars. Written without sensuous beauty, and with too little direction, it is notable for its sincerity of purpose, its dogged courage in facing up to the author's conviction that life—i.e., human nature—is something, both at its best and its worst, on which one cannot depend." F. H. Bullock
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 18 '48 550w

"Many readers will find in this ambitious first novel something of the rich humanity of 'A Tree Grows in Brooklyn.' . . In Mr Boardman, too, there is a deep compassion for people. And yet other readers, while generally applauding the author's gift of sympathy, will not entirely approve his uncritically comprehensive capacity for forgiveness. They will find his mercy maudlin. . . 'The Long Home' is a book of large merits, but it is not without flaw." C. L.
+ — N Y Times p14 Mr 28 '48 650w
New Yorker 24:114 Ap 17 '48 120w
Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 25 '48 180w

BOAS, GEORGE. Essays on primitivism and related ideas in the middle ages. 227p $4.50 Johns Hopkins press 901 Primitivism. Civilization, Medieval 48-6618

"Documents from Patristic and Medieval literature which illustrate the growth of primitivism and anti-primitivism from the first to the thirteenth centuries. Among the subjects discussed are the original condition of man, Christianity and cynicism, Earthly Paradises, the noble savage, and anti-primitivism. The book should prove useful to students of the history of ideas who are interested in seeing how a doctrine arising in Pagan antiquity developed under Christian influence, what modifications were introduced into it, and in what form it was taken up by the great scholastics and early Renaissance thinkers." (Publisher's note) Indexes.

Reviewed by J. R. Strayer
Am Hist R 54:184 O '48 320w
School & Society 68:15 Jl 3 '48 10w

BOAS, WALTER MORITZ. Introduction to the physics of metals and alloys. 193p pl $3.50 Wiley
669 Metals. Alloys

"A general introduction to the physics of metals for metallurgists and chemists. It is built on the thesis that the properties and arrangement of crystals determine the properties of polycrystalline aggregates." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:201 F 1 '48 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:42 My '48

BOBBIO, NORBERTO. Philosophy of decadentism; a study in existentialism; tr. by David Moore. 60p $1.50 Macmillan
111 Existentialism

"When, some ten years ago, Norberto Bobbio began to turn his attention to existentialism, he was already known in Italy for a number of essays on the phenomenological doctrine of Husserl and Scheler, particularly in its application to social and juridical problems. To the Italy of those days existentialism had the appearance of a reaction against academic philosophy. . . But existentialism was in fact only an evasion; it did not seem to contain rich material for the building of a new culture. Accordingly, Bobbio drew attention to what was at once the fascination and the danger of this evasion in a number of essays published in philosophical reviews and in a lecture delivered at Rome in 1942, in which for the first time he expounded the existentialist thesis. . . In the spring of 1944 [he] wrote this book, in which he collected and classified his reflections during the various preceding years on the theme of existentialism and at the same time, spurred on by events and taught by his own experience, passed a moral judgment on his own generation. The book now presented to the English reader is an interesting indication of the trend of Italian thought since the heyday of Croce." Biographical note

"The power of this especially brilliant essay on existentialism lies not only in the learning and philosophical skill of the author, but also in the fact that he recognizes in existentialism a spiritual attitude which is far wider in influence than the particular philosophies which bear this label. Bobbio is a young Italian professor of legal philosophy in the University of Padua. . . Professor Bobbio's essay, more than any other I know, makes clear what are the spiritual roots of this morbid consciousness." D. D. Williams

+ Christian Century 66:18 Ja 5 '49 500w

"The virtue of Professor Bobbio's brief essay is that it sets out to relate existentialism to an attitude of mind which is not confined to academic philosophy. Like so many writings of Italian origin, it deals to an undue extent with large abstractions in a somewhat rhetorical manner, but it would be a pity if this Italianità of style, which we can scarcely blame the otherwise excellent translator for being unable to remove, should deprive the essay of its proper number of readers."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p545 S 25 '48 650w

BOBER, MANDELL MORTON. Karl Marx's interpretation of history. 2d ed rev 445p $6 Harvard univ. press

335 Marx, Karl. History—Philosophy 48-8857

Revised and enlarged edition of a book published in 1927 (Book Review Digest 1928). "This revision was governed by the desire to expand the exposition of certain topics, to change the emphasis or the attitude in dealing with certain issues, and to consider additional questions—in the perspective of new writings, by Marx and Engels that have come to light, of discussions directly bearing on Marx by new personalities, of the newer theories and viewpoints in economics, and of the greater prominence assumed of late by certain problems, e.g., the business cycle and economic calculation. Over two thirds of the former book has been rewritten, and hardly a page of the remainder has escaped revision." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:105 N 15 '48

"To the average reader . . . some of the more theoretical chapters may make heavy reading. But there are many sections, such as Marx's View of Human Nature, Science and Philosophy, The Transition to Communism, and Observations of Institutions, which should be of highest general interest.'" E. S. P.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 18 '49 750w

"Mr. Bober's book is stimulating. . . It analyzes with scholarly patience and objectivity, and with keen intelligence, the Marx-Engels theory of history." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 31:35 N 20 '48 90w

School & Society 68:255 O 9 '48 10w

BODE, BOYD HENRY, and others. See Modern education and human values

BOGARDUS, EMORY STEPHEN. Development of social thought. 2d ed 574p $4 Longmans

309 Sociology—History 47-7154

"This is the second edition of the well-known student text. Minor errors of the first edition have been corrected, and there have been additions to the bibliographic references at the close of the chapters. The only major change is the addition of a chapter on 'Park and Social Processes.'" (Am J Soc) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1940.

Reviewed by H. L. Smith
Am J Soc 54:92 Jl '48 300w

School & Society 66:519 D 27 '47 30w

Reviewed by J. E. Fleming
Social Forces 27:95 O '48 500w

Social Studies 39:144 Mr '48 20w

BOLEY, JEAN. Baby lamb. 252p $3 Dutton 48-1035

Satirical novel about American business men and their families in Buenos Aires and their futile efforts to dodge boredom and homesickness. The action centers about the Buttonfields from Mortonville, New Jersey. Mary, their only child battles for maturity, and goes thru some harrowing times before she marries a young American vice-consul.

Reviewed by R. G. Cohn
Commonweal 48:336 Jl 16 '48 460w

"A sophistication, both satiric and sexual, gives this its virtue, acidulous as it may be, but probably limits its market and certainly precludes it for P.L.'s."

Kirkus 16:4 Ja 1 '48 120w

"The Latin background is lightly sketched. A novel for sophisticated readers." M. A. Johnson

Library J 73:335 F 15 '48 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Jl 11 '48 60w

"In addition to writing with authority about the Argentine, the author describes B.A.'s culture as 'only French oil on troubled Latin waters.' She has a keen and economical style which cuts through to the essence of character and situation and omits the parsley." Nancy Ladd

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 21 '48 500w

"The lampoon is rather sluggish, but the description of the heroine's conduct during her period of social release is quite well done."

— + New Yorker 24:124 Mr 13 '48 140w

BOLITHO, HECTOR. Reign of Queen Victoria. 437p $5 Macmillan

B or 92 Victoria, queen of Great Britain 48-9319

A retelling of the life story of Queen Victoria. "The present volume is a synthesis of the author's Albert the Good (1932), Victoria, the Widow, and Her Son (1934), and Victoria and Albert (1938); and it includes many identical passages from those earlier works." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Personal, not political, in focus, the book would have gained from a touch of Strachey's glitter and iconoclasm. Still, it's good reading and the most thorough study of the Queen and those around her."

+ Atlantic 183:89 Ja '49 100w

Booklist 45:119 D 1 '48

Christian Century 65:1431 D 29 '48 140w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 162:16 D 15 '48 120w

"A monumental, scholarly study of the reign of Queen Victoria. . . A massive piece of research, written in the best traditions of authentic history."

+ Kirkus 16:425 Ag 15 '48 90w

"An easy familiarity with the overwhelming amount of correspondence relating to the period, together with a skillful use of excerpts from letters to, by, and about the Queen, give this account validity and liveliness." B. B. Libaire

Library J 73:1186 S 1 '48 150w

"A detailed, competent, and judicious biography that is bound to suffer in comparison with the edge and elegance of Strachey."

+ Nation 167:612 N 27 '48 20w

"Mr. Bolitho's book . . . should bring to many readers something of the flavor of Victorian times. It is a portrait of Victoria and her family, a faithful, sympathetic portrait posed only in the sense that all photographers (even the candid ones) must have poses. By comparison Lytton Strachey's is an imaginative and once-modern painting." Crane Brinton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 N 7 '48 650w

"When [the author] comes to the old Queen he finds he is no longer dealing with a person but an institution—and his hitherto faithful portrait is apt to dissolve in a sunset haze of

BOLITHO, HECTOR—Continued
patriotic fervor. . . For at least two-thirds of its length the author keeps a firm grip on his subject. Sympathetically but candidly he presents the story of a woman whose imperious nature was constantly irked by the restrictions which hedged her throne." Keith Hutchison
— + N Y Times p4 O 31 '48 1150w

New Yorker 24:133 N 6 '48 150w

Reviewed by George Dangerfield
Sat R of Lit 31:18 D 25 '48 800w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '48 210w

"This new biography of Victoria, which is Bolitho's ninth about this period, has nothing of Strachey's amused, amusing manner, nothing of his skepticism and silky grace. Above all, it does not contain a single sentence that even runs a risk of being thought dangerously brilliant. All present or accounted for are the famous, fascinating figures of the great era—Baron Stockmar, Lord Melbourne, Lord Palmerston, Mr. Gladstone, Disraeli, the Duke of Wellington, et al.—and so frigidly correct that they appear to have been hewn from frozen blocks of Birds Eye."
— Time 52:116 N 8 '48 280w

BOLTON, IVY MAY. Wayfaring lad; il. by Lorence F. Bjorklund. 192p $2.50 Messner 48-6741

Richard Nolan, a sixteen-year-old orphan, did not make good in the Tennessee frontier village of Watauga, and was sent out alone, to make his way back to his former home in Virginia. As he made his way thru the wilderness he escaped from the Chickamaugas, was befriended by the Cherokees, and found a home with the French settlers. Here he redeemed himself by becoming a person of responsibility. Later he heaped coals of fire on Watauga by saving the outpost from an Indian raid. For older boys.

Booklist 44:339 Je 1 '48

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:278 Jl '48 100w

"The Indians here are not so fantastic a race of trappers as sometimes shown; there are fools and scoundrels, hard-working honest men and women everywhere. Good story, good adventure."
+ Kirkus 16:51 F 1 '48 150w

"Recommended for grades 7-9." Elizabeth Burr
+ Library J 73:656 Ap 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 2 '48 260w

Wis Lib Bul 44:135 Je '48

BOMBAL, MARIA LUISA (MRS FAL DE SAINT-PHALLE). Shrouded woman. 198p $2.75 Farrar, Straus 48-6390

Ana Maria, the principal character, lies awaiting her own funeral. As she lies in state she sees her life in retrospect as various relatives and friends come to pay their respects. Her first lover, her husband, her children, her father-confessor, all pass her, and she reviews her life as affected by each of them.

"All the entanglements are brushed in, episodically, evocatively, and with a lack of restraint which many, who do not care for a display of passion, may find disturbing."
Kirkus 16:5 Ja 1 '48 120w

"While the theme is definitely eerie, the writing is dextrous and has a delicate charm. Some of the romantic touches are discomfortingly amoral, too much dwelling on past raptures; but story does hold reader's interest. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 73:651 Ap 15 '48 100w

"To the present reviewer it seemed inferior to the same author's 'House of Mist' published last year, a book with the same perceptiveness concerning feminine sensibility and considerably more skill in plot construction and the arousing of suspense. The Latin American preoccupation with death doubtless caused her compatriots (she is a Chilean) to set a higher value on this static plot structure than is likely to be accorded it here." B. D. Wolfe
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ap 18 '48 600w

Reviewed by Patricia Page
N Y Times p14 Je 6 '48 270w

"Commendable for spurts of good descriptive writing dealing with the atmosphere of hacienda life and the splendors of Latin-American vegetation, but only moderately successful as an account of grand passion and suffering."
+ — New Yorker 24:121 My 15 '48 130w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 16 '48 70w

"It is all, as Jane Austen remarked about the Gothic romance, most amazing horrid and uncommonly dreadful. It is also a kind of writing seldom produced in this country, the ideology of which does not encourage a mysticism of destructiveness. . . In real life, of course, despite the stagy rhetoric of such books, people do feel and even act like Miss Bombal's characters." Marjorie Brace
Sat R of Lit 31:26 My 1 '48 650w

BONN, MORITZ JULIUS. Wandering scholar [autobiography]. 403p $5 Day
B or 92 World politics 48-8693

Recollections of a German political economist who has spent many years teaching and lecturing in the United States. He gives a picture of German finance between the two wars, and comments on his travels in Africa, and on United States policies, beginning with the Roosevelt administration. Index.

Booklist 45:65 O 15 '48

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N 14 '48 1200w

"Delightfully written book. . . His autobiography is distinguished by its pleasant, urbane style, its sustained interest and value as introduction to the modern world and its problems. Readers will find here something of the mood, the charm and the wise objectivity of the period before 1914 when it was possible to live securely and graciously in the peace and freedom of a hopeful world." Hans Kohn
+ N Y Times p21 O 31 '48 470w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 26 '48 140w

" 'Wandering Scholar' is far and away one of the best of [its] kind. It has nearly everything: graceful discourse, memorable facts, and, most wonderful of all, some useful ideas. I do not know of a better informal account of the political and economic inflations which followed Germany's defeat in the First World War." Asher Brynes
+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 D 4 '48 600w

BONNELL, JOHN SUTHERLAND. Psychology for pastor and people; a book on spiritual counseling. 225p $2.50 Harper
258 Psychology, Pastoral 48-5426

"The body of the book consists of lectures originally delivered at Union Theological Seminary in Virginia in which Dr. Bonnell shares with his fellow ministers and with theological students his experiences in counseling and his convictions concerning the value of this phase of the Christian ministry. . . Dr. Bonnell has prepared himself for this work by a thorough study of psychology, but he makes it clear that his personal work with individuals is definitely a religious ministry and that the clergyman in spiritual counseling is not to trespass upon the field of the psychologist or the psychoanalyst, still less upon the field of the physician. In successive chapters Dr. Bonnell deals with the mental and spiritual equipment necessary to counseling and with the methods which he has found successful in his ministry. The volume includes a chapter on 'How to Read the Bible' which fits in logically with Dr. Bonnell's conception of spiritual counseling." (Kirkus) The author is pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church of New York. Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 44:243 Mr 15 '48

"A wise and well balanced book."
+ Christian Century 65:303 Mr 31 '48 40w

"The book does not add a great deal to the 'science' of counseling, but it is testimony to the fact that the minister with a listening ear and responsive heart may have his time and skill put to the test of increasing calls from his people. Perhaps the most important contribution of the work is its studied attempt to advance a movement well under way among religious counselors to emancipate themselves from a too close association with psychiatry." O. H. Baker
+ Crozer Q 25:372 O '48 350w

"Not the least valuable part of the book is its extensive bibliography. Clergymen and others interested in the religious approach to individuals and their problems will find this a most helpful book."
+ Kirkus 16:80 F 1 '48 270w

BONTEMPS, ARNA WENDELL. Story of the Negro; il. by Raymond Lufkin. 239p $3 Knopf 325.26 Negroes 48-6629

Written for young people, this is a history of the Negro race from the days of antiquity to the present. A chronology gives the events in the story of the Negro from 1700 B.C. to 1946, with comparable dates in world history. Index.

Booklist 44:338 Je 1 '48

"At long last, here is a book that tells the real story of the Negro, a book that is by far the most complete and most satisfying work on the subject yet written." E. B. Thompson
+ Chicago Sun p8X Je 13 '48 290w

Reviewed by Henrietta Buckmaster
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 1 '48 240w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p13 O 14 '48 210w

Reviewed by Siri Andrews
Horn Bk 24:476 N '48 160w

"The most absorbing presentation of Negro history that I have ever read. Here again is a book that has been warmed in the heart while it hews to the line in giving the history of the race as far back as it goes in terms that any boy or girl will thoroughly respect and will read with imagination alight. Mr. Bontemps has made notable contributions to children's books, and his name is a familiar one to American boys and girls." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 24:267 Jl '48 80w

"Important reading for young people of our time." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:280 Jl '48 90w

"A book that meets a very real need, in schools, libraries, and for young adults as well as High School students. . . The chronology, the index, give the book added value as a reference tool. A bibliography for further reading would have been a valuable addition."
+ Kirkus 16:195 Ap 15 '48 300w

"A fascinating and much-needed story. . . No young people's library, no high school library can afford to be without this book." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 73:825 My 15 '48 100w

"Arna Bontemps's style has distinction and a touch of deep, troubled beauty. . . Offered to the teens, it is for anyone old enough to think and young enough to keep on thinking." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 30 '48 340w

"Mr. Bontemps, librarian of Fisk University, has given us the answer to a librarian's prayer. With an aroused consciousness of the contribution of Negro Americans to our national life, thoughtful teachers everywhere are sending their students to 'read up' on this contribution. The shelves are pretty bare. . . Of factual history there is almost nothing. The present volume exactly meets that lack." N. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p21 Je 20 '48 220w

Reviewed by N. V. Morgan
San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 14 '48 170w

"From the Civil War, Mr. Bontemps's story skims briefly into the present. This, of course, makes his work chiefly important for its early history, which I presume was his intention. This much, at any rate, is poetic and moving, and indeed notable for its accuracy and objectivity. . . The book might well be described as a 'primer for white folks,' young and old." Roi Ottley
Sat R of Lit 31:14 Je 26 '48 850w

"Raymond Lufkin's black and white drawings add beauty and dignity to a book that in text and format presents a vitally important subject with conspicuous success."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 Ag 14 '48 230w

Reviewed by M. J. Wormley
Survey G 37:483 N '48 430w

Wis Lib Bul 44:130 Je '48

BOORSTIN, DANIEL JOSEPH. Lost world of Thomas Jefferson. 306p $4 Holt
191.9 U.S.—Intellectual life. Jefferson, Thomas. Philosophy, American 48-8589

The author aims to study the world of Thomas Jefferson by examining the manner in which the intellectuals of his day faced certain problems. He examines Jefferson's writings, as well as those of a small group of philosophers and scientists who belonged to the American Philosophical society in Philadelphia. Among them are Benjamin Franklin, David Rittenhouse, Benjamin Rush, Joseph Priestley, Benjamin Smith Barton, and Thomas Paine. Index.

Booklist 45:98 N 15 '48

"Boorstin's admirable reconstruction of the Jeffersonian intellectual milieu is a distinct contribution to our understanding of our own past. The Jeffersonian world may be lost; we can still learn much from it about strengthening of the moral foundations of our own society." R. B. Nye
+ Chicago Sun p63 S 29 '48 600w

"It seems to me to be a pity that Boorstin should desert his exegesis, which I think a creative, original and lucid piece of work, in order to extend Jeffersonian thought into realms where its influence can only be inferred in a most tentative way. . . I do not believe that Jeffersonian thought is susceptible of these extensions." George Dangerfield
+ — New Repub 119:22 N 15 '48 2150w

"In so far as this book attempts to state the shared outlook prevalent among these leaders of thought—in theology, in the natural sciences, in social philosophy—it attempts something new which should interest students of the history of ideas. Unfortunately, Mr. Boorstin's book does not realize the promise inherent in his materials. The author spends his main strength in creating a false unity, 'The Jeffersonian Circle.' . . Secondly, the unity created is false because the author ignores the real differences among the members of the society. . . At the root of Mr. Boorstin's failure is his impatience with naturalist philosophy." Adrienne Koch
— + N Y Times p16 O 17 '48 1400w

School & Society 68:311 O 30 '48 20w

BORDEN, PERRY ARCHIBALD, and THYNELL, GUSTAVE MILTON. Principles and methods of telemetering. 230p il $4.50 Reinhold
621.374 Telemeter 48-3758

"Analytical and descriptive treatment of a large variety of telemetering devices. Authors' definition of telemetering is 'Telemetering consists of reproducing at a convenient

BORDEN, P. A.—Continued
location measurements made at a remote point' and classify telemetering systems as current voltage, frequency, position, and impulse with detailed treatment of each. Book includes classified lists of patents in telemetering and allied fields for reference purposes. Appendix contains data on fluid telemeters and a bibliography." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1515 O 15 '48 70w

"In their preface, the authors of this work modestly disclaim originality and refer to themselves as compilers. Nevertheless, they have produced a compact survey of their subject such as has not existed before."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:61 Jl '48

BORING, EDWIN GARRIGUES, and others, eds. Foundations of psychology. 632p il $4 Wiley
150 Psychology 48-7277

"Intended originally as a revision of the editors' earlier Introduction to Psychology, published in 1939, but additional information and the psychological fraternity's changing point of view were found to require an almost entirely new book. This volume is organized around the concept that the response of the organism to stimuli is the psychologist's initial concern. References given for each chapter." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:98 N 15 '48
School & Society 67:447 Je 12 '48 20w

BORN, WOLFGANG. American landscape painting; an interpretation. 228p 143il $7.50 Yale univ. press
758.1 Landscape painting 48-8092

"History of the development of ideas in American landscape painting, which observes that the contribution of lesser-known artists is often more significant than that of the popular ones, and that we have always demanded literalness in our landscapes." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:61 O 15 '48

"[There is] extraordinary scope in this scholarly study of American landscape painting by a noted authority."
+ Kirkus 16:419 Ag 15 '48 150w

"Professor Born follows his survey of American still life with a survey of American landscape painting. The latter field is richer and can be more logically treated by this method; furthermore, Professor Born has discovered some new and quite interesting things in it." A. F.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 16 '49 460w

"A book whose text and plates are sometimes highly rewarding, but whose compartments have occasional rough edges. The contemporary section is especially weak, and shows the same bias toward the precisionist school of Demuth, Dickinson, and Sheeler which was evinced in Mr. Born's earlier work 'Still-life Painting in America.' " J. T. Soby
Sat R of Lit 31:45 O 9 '48 230w

BORNEMANN, ERNST WILHELM JULIUS. Tremolo. 224p $2.50 Harper
48-6896

Mystery story.

"A sample of the showy but specious exercise in suspense. It is as likely to hold your attention for most of its length as to make you exceedingly angry in its final stretch of explanations." James Sandoe
— + Chicago Sun My 21 '48 230w

"Perfect marks for the jazz background, passing for the somewhat obvious denouement, and plus for the nice people."
+ — Kirkus 16:128 Mr 1 '48 120w
New Repub 118:26 Je 21 '48 20w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 36:331 O 16 '48 110w

"Almost too abundant jazz trimming [in] this otherwise thinnish riddle." Will Cuppy
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 23 '48 150w

Reviewed by W. J. Glick
N Y Times p16 Je 27 '48 140w

"The victim of the unpleasantness, a former clarinettist, finally manages to figure out who is trying to disrupt his domesticity in one of those scenes that are doubtless sound enough psychiatrically but that leave the reader rather skeptical. Above average in most other respects, though."
+ — New Yorker 24:120 My 22 '48 90w

"Good, but not quite good enough." E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Je 6 '48 100w

"Above average."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:32 Je 12 '48 50w

BORSKI, MRS LUCIA (MERECKA) (LUCIA MERECKA SZCZEPANOWICZ), tr. Polish folk tales; il. by Erica Gorecka-Egan. 123p $2 Sheed
398 Folklore, Polish 47-12388

A collection of Polish legends which the translator first heard in Poland, where she spent her childhood. Later she told the stories to groups of children at the New York public library. There are sixteen tales, all known to Polish children, and all of a deeply religious nature.

Booklist 44:236 Mr 1 '48

"Adapted for telling to American children, the stories have given great pleasure in library story hours." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:119 Mr '48 100w

"Beautifully printed and characteristically illustrated in brilliant colors, this is one of the handsomest of the recent folklore books. It is also one of the most distinctive in spirit, for these stories are Catholic to the core. . . In each there is a sense of race and religion, one coloring the other." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 15 '48 180w

"Striking illustrations in three colors enhance the folk quality of the tales and supply the humor lacking in the text." Elizabeth Hodges
+ N Y Times p33 Mr 28 '48 130w

"In translating the old Polish legends Mrs. Borski preserves their curious simplicity and their humor. They are not told for children, but there is a great deal in them that boys and girls will enjoy. . . It is a handsome book and one that forms an important record for anyone who is interested in folklore." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 31:37 Mr 13 '48 110w

BOSLEY, HAROLD AUGUSTUS. Main issues confronting Christendom. 204p $2.50 Harper
261 Christianity. Sociology, Christian 48-2671

"This book is an attempt to clarify some of the main issues before the Christian church today. Much of the material was presented in lecture form to the Pastors' Conference held at Florida Southern College, Lakeland, Florida, in April, 1946. . . Each chapter both gives a statement of some facet of the central spiritual problem of our time and suggests an answer. In each case, the responsibility of the church to lead toward a better world is stressed. This is not to say that the church can or should try to do it all alone, but it must and can take the lead in all these matters. For this cause it was brought into being and only by losing itself in this cause can the church find the kind and quality of life which it deeply desires for itself and mankind." (Pref) The author is dean of the Duke university divinity school. Index.

"The book of the month, probably of the year, in this reviewer's opinion. Here is a man who clearly sees the symptoms and diagnoses the disease of our distressed age, and prescribes for its cure something other than putting the patient back into his ancient bondage. . . Here is neither shallow optimism, nor laden-eyed despair, nor frantic haste to retreat from the dangerous fields of freedom, but a faith that is not blind and an urgency without frenzy. A sober assessment of the weaknesses and perils of our time takes the place that some recent books give to slapdash generalizations and selected samples of contemporary degeneracy. Also, there is pungent writing without selfconscious smartness or stylistic exhibitionism. I do not want to appear to exaggerate, and there may be some details that need further clarification or support, but it is a very good book." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 65:599 Je 16 '48 850w

"Here is a clear and forceful manifesto for what, one must believe, is a soon-coming resurgence of a confident and militant Liberalism. One can hardly conceive a more promising stance from which to press such a crusade than the headship of the strongest and most influential interdenominational seminary in the South. . . Dr. Bosley appears to conceive his rôle as a modest apostle to such a movement. All must wish him well as he strives to build Duke into an even more powerful theological centre and to press further the evolution of his own creative thought. We shall watch both developments with interested and hopeful expectation." H. P. Van Dusen

+ Crozer Q 25:361 O '48 700w

"This is a very thoughtful and thought-provoking volume."

+ Kirkus 16:284 Je 15 '48 170w

School & Society 68:159 S 4 '48 20w

BOSSARD, JAMES HERBERT SIWARD. Sociology of child development. 790p $4.50 Harper

392 Child study. Sociology 48-1453

"Previous investigations of child behavior have been oriented in physiological, psychological, or psychiatric terms, but this treatment consistently deals with child development from the point of view of the sociologist. The author is Director of the William T. Carter Foundation for Child Helping at the University of Pennsylvania, in which capacity he has conducted both intensive and extensive researches into the sociology of child development in its normal and abnormal aspects." Ann Am Acad

---

Reviewed by S. M. Strong

Am J Soc 54:254 N '48 900w

"The Sociology of Child Development is a big book, as texts go, containing approximately 800 pages. It is logically and simply written with excellent chapter summaries and introductory sections which should endear it to the student public. Typographical errors are few. It should find an important place in sociology, child development, and pre-social work curricula." E. B. Harper

+ Am Soc R 13:499 Ag '48 600w

"An outstanding contribution to the literature of sociology." F. E. Merrill

+ Ann Am Acad 258:168 Jl '48 460w

"The book should be most valuable to educators and social workers. Many parents will also find it useful, although its length and academic style probably will limit its appeal to this group." E. E. Prevey

+ J Home Econ 40:593 D '48 260w

"The chapter summaries, footnotes, extensive bibliography, and complete index make this volume a convenient work of reference, as well as a serviceable classroom text. In history, however, Dr. Bossard is sometimes out of his element; his generalizations tend to be too broad." W. W. Brickman

School & Society 68:75 Jl 31 '48 280w

"An outstanding contribution to the entire field of sociology as well as to the specific study of the child in our culture." W. W. Ehrmann

+ Social Forces 27:101 O '48 900w

Reviewed by M. R. Brown

Social Studies 39:369 D '48 1000w

"A wide reading public can be predicted for this compendious work. It deserves this, and all the more because the publishers, in the face of present trends and in proportion to its size are distributing it at a moderate price." William Healy

+ Survey 84:254 Ag '48 500w

BOST, JACQUES LAURENT. Last profession; tr. from the French by Alfred van A. van Duym. 254p $2.75 Doubleday

48-7570

A series of connected sketches, depicting the experiences of a group of French soldiers during the first year of the war.

Kirkus 16:150 Mr 15 '48 110w

"Jacques Laurent Bost, a young French university instructor, introduces himself with this first novel as a realistic new talent. But he is too realistic to have an appeal except for the bedeviled few who seem never able to redeem themselves from the recent horror. For them, this book will have the slap of a shellburst." Bennell Braunstein

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 25 '48 330w

"An illuminating but rather fragmentary piece of work."

New Yorker 24:72 Je 17 '48 170w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 5 '48 200w

"Bost is, if anything, a better writer than Remarque; his impressionism is more objective, his imagery (perhaps for that reason) far more evocative and sharper at the edges. Although there is plenty of emotion in his narrative, and that rueful love of man out of which he and Remarque draw their common moral, Bost, unlike Remarque, has absolutely no use for sentimentality or melodrama." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 Ag 7 '48 850w

BOSWORTH, EDWARD INCREASE. Christian religion and human progress; ed, with an introd. note, by Ernest Pye. 328p with Pye, E. Biography of a mind $8 Bosworth memorial committee; distrib. by O. C. McKee, Oberlin savings bank co, Oberlin, Ohio

230 Theology. Progress 48-7486

Consists of a selection from the writings and addresses of the late dean of Oberlin. There are twenty-six of the papers, including spring lectures at the School of Religion, Athens, Greece. Index.

"There is scholarly substance, spiritual power and the radiance of a great Christian personality in the volume." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 65:735 Jl 21 '48 100w

"Presents a philosophy of life most helpful in times like these." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 73:706 My 1 '48 40w

"Bosworth, calm, strong and assured in his grip of the over-all benevolence, appeals to no institutional authority. His creeds are what (in love for God and man) have been found 'practical' within his own experience, scholarship, service and worship. His appeal to others is founded upon the bedrock of what, as he submits, cannot be questioned by the honest common sense of decent citizenship. He is very assured, but only because he is very persuasive." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p22 Ag 29 '48 180w

BOTHWELL, JEAN. Empty tower; il. by Margaret Ayer. 160p $2 Morrow

48-7800

Story describing how the children of the Charity Abide school of Rajahpur, India, earned money to buy a school bell. Bittu, the heroine of Star of India (Book Review Digest 1947) is one of the characters in this story for grades 3-5.

Booklist 45:15 S 1 '48

BOTHWELL, JEAN—Continued

"The characters are real and appealing and the style has beauty and distinction." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 18 '48 300w

"Native customs and beliefs, described with authority, give atmosphere to the story and the reality of the characters brings a good sense of racial friendliness to the readers." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:371 S '48 90w

Kirkus 16:363 Ag 1 '48 100w

"Appealing story, well told, for children between the ages of eight and eleven." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 73:1825 D 15 '48 70w

"Miss Bothwell's Hindu children are so genuine, so true to the universal child-spirit, that their foreignness sinks easily into the background. . . A funny, touching story that will enchant the 8 to 12's." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p49 N 21 '48 180w

"There is not the exciting plot here of 'The Thirteenth Stone' or 'The Star of India.' The mood is more that of 'Little Boat Boy.' Miss Bothwell's understanding of people and of human relationships makes this another convincing picture of India for boys and girls." R. H. Viguers

+ Sat R of Lit 31:28 N 13 '48 160w

Springf'd Republican p14A Ja 23 '49 110w

Wis Lib Bul 44:166 O '48

BOTTOME, PHYLLIS (MRS ERNAN FORBES-DENNIS). Search for a soul. 306p $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-8431

A partial autobiography, describing the years of the author's childhood and youth in Victorian England and America. Her father was an American, her mother an English beauty with little adaptability to the social demands of a clergyman's wife. After shifting from parish to parish in England the family came to America for a time, but eventually returned to the English scene. The book closes with the death of her older sister, while the author herself was still in her late teens.

Booklist 45:30 S 15 '48

Reviewed by F. E. Luchs

Christian Century 65:1304 D 1 '48 650w

"A revealing, intimate picture of a Victorian family, set against a clerical background." M. W. Stoer

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 23 '48 600w

"It is her honesty and choice of pertinent detail that makes this exceedingly literary autobiography so fascinating. We feel again the awful trepidations, wonderful excitements, golden happinesses and soul-shaking awakenings of childhood. No novel could be as exciting or as rewarding to read." Virginia Bennett

+ Commonweal 49:98 N 5 '48 550w

"Very English, with much that will seem strange to American readers."

Kirkus 16:71 F 1 '48 180w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N 7 '48 450w

"Miss Bottome's writing here is uneven and the elaborate significance which she attributes to such a childish accident as her watering a tulip to death at the age of 3 (indicative of a faulty life plan) falls rather heavily on the ear. It is when the novelist takes over from the psychologist, and she recreates the enchantment of summers at Quogue and pictures two nursery-bred English children, fresh from the feudal atmosphere of the Lake Country, roaming the streets of America and tasting their democratic delights, that 'Search for a Soul' is most memorable." Mary McGrory

+ — N Y Times p56 N 14 '48 650w

"It is fascinating, modest, over-kind to her parents (but what a relief that is), over-severe at times to herself, at once good narrative, provocative psychology, and wistful, rather ineffective philosophy. 'Search for a Soul' is certainly one of the most remarkable self-revelations made by a living novelist." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 31:15 N 6 '48 700w

"The effect of [her] upbringing on the formation of her own character is Miss Bottome's theme; in pursuing it she is sometimes touching and sometimes amusing, but almost always clear-sighted and impartial."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p659 D 20 '47 600w

BOTTUME, CARL HUNTINGTON. Hills around Havana. 297p $2.75 Appleton 48-5627

"A first novel that deals with the drinking and mating habits of Havana's Café Society, as reflected in the behavior of some representative types—an expatriate American painter, a Spanish prostitute, a temporarily addled veteran of the recent war (the painter's son), a wealthy American nymphomaniac, a German shopgirl, a professional jai-alai player, and so on." New Yorker

---

Kirkus 15:658 D 1 '47 170w

"It must be said to the author's credit that the warmth of his affection for his subject never quite spills over into cuteness and that there are several passages in his book in which he is genuinely amusing, even moving. One gets, too, a curious, fleeting impression from his writing at times that he has discovered something, a mood, a style, that is authentically brilliant and satirical. But then, abruptly, that impression is lost, as though the author himself were not absolutely certain what it was he was aiming at and could not completely control his medium." Marc Brandel

N Y Times p25 Mr 7 '48 500w

"Hardly memorable."

New Yorker 24:97 Mr 6 '48 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 9 '48 220w

"This is a well-written book designed for pleasant, quick reading. The author has produced a light, casual tale which is, in its own quiet way, very effective. . . Although there is no lasting merit to the book, it is fast-paced, tastily-written and, for all its hit-and-run tactics, it leaves behind the faint, delicately-spiced aroma of the tropics, of romance, of love." A. C. Fields

+ Sat R of Lit 31:17 Mr 6 '48 750w

BOVEY, MARTIN KOON. Whistling wings; phot. by the author and Martin Bovey, jr; drawings by Francis Lee Jaques. 162p $7.50 Doubleday

799.24 Duck shooting. Photography of birds Agr47-41

An American sportsman and lecturer here recounts some of the high points in his thirty years of duck and goose hunting. Illustrated with photographs and with drawings by Francis Lee Jaques.

Kirkus 15:456 Ag 15 '47 110w

"Highly recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:41 Ja 1 '48 30w

"An excellent piece of work, though its photographs do not approach the excellence of Cruickshank's. . . The drawings of Francis Lee Jacques more than compensate for flaws in Bovey's photography. And any sportsman who has spent a day in the field feeling like a hold-up victim will appreciate the training in gun handling which Bovey learned from his father and passed on to his sons." Stanleigh Arnold

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 14 '47 200w

BOWDEN, MURIEL AMANDA. Commentary on the general prologue to the Canterbury tales. 316p $4 Macmillan

821 Chaucer, Geoffrey—Canterbury tales 48-8462

A gathering together of criticisms, commentary, and annotations of scholars on the Prologue to Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, with the author's own comments and interpretation bringing them into a complete study. Bibliography. No index.

"Dr. Bowden's own contribution is creative and gives readability and meaning to the materials, making of them much more than a source book. It will prove convenient for those who have access to large scholarly libraries and a basic reference for those whose library sources are limited. It, together with Edith Rickert's Chaucer's World, mark this year as outstanding in additions to the Chaucer reference shelf." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 73:1275 S 15 '48 130w

"Miss Bowden has scored soundly. The scholars will find her commentary work a most welcome handbook. The students will find her book a compendium of materials rarely found in any one school library. The general reader will be fascinated by the wealth of information concerning Chaucerian England, and by the wise and occasionally witty interpretations of various lines." W. R. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 24 '48 240w

Reviewed by Christopher Morley
Sat R of Lit 32:15 Ja 29 '49 650w
School & Society 68:176 S 11 '48 20w

BOWEN, RALPH HENRY. German theories of the corporative state; with special reference to the period, 1870-1919. (Whittlesey house publication) 243p $2.75 McGraw

335.6 Germany—Politics and government. Trade and professional associations 47-6561

"After a careful analysis of the organic conception of the [German] state as foreshadowed by Fichte, developed by the Romantics, and synthesized by Hegel, this study discusses the main lines of corporative doctrine before 1870. Chief emphasis, however, is given to the period after that date. Singled out for special attention are three major types of doctrine: the Social Catholicism of Ketteler and Hitze, variants of monarchical socialism as advanced by Albert Schaffle and Adolf Stoecker, and the collectivist economic theories of Rathenau and Wichard von Moellendorff. Besides treating the chief representatives of these movements, the study points out carefully the relationship between the development of doctrine and contemporary political and economic tendencies." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Margaret Spahr
Am Pol Sci R 42:384 Ap '48 380w

"Highly competent study." Seba Eldridge
+ Am Soc R 13:351 Je '48 250w

"This is a welcome study in the history of ideas. It deals with corporatism—that much discussed concept, open to divergent interpretations, vascillating in today's omnipresent drive for social integration, and laden with political dynamite in this age of ideological warfare. There is hardly any political doctrine that is in greater need for clarification from the pen of a trained historian. Ralph Bowen has performed a neat job in tracing the rich and intricate German ancestry of that concept throughout the nineteenth century up to the great debate of the first aftermath of World War I." Sigmund Neumann
+ Ann Am Acad 258:128 Jl '48 550w

"Dr. Bowen, a member of the History Department of Columbia University, has produced a study which will be of deep interest to the specialists in the minutiae of political economy."
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 13 '47 120w
Current Hist 14:297 My '48 50w
Foreign Affairs 26:745 Jl '48 10w
Kirkus 15:460 Ag 15 '47 160w
School & Society 67:47 Ja 17 '48 10w
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:67 Mr '48 280w

BOWEN, ROBERT SIDNEY. Murder gets around. 192p $2 Crown

47-6456

Detective story.

"Gerry is tough and knows some tricks that he picked up in the OSS during the war. He is an able citizen when it comes to rough-and-tumble fighting. As a detective he is not so hot, though he is a good guesser. We should hate to have to explain how he discovers what all the garroting is about." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p50 N 30 '47 180w

"Fast-paced item with adroitly mingled moments of merriment and horror. Unquenchable sleuth and peppery girl-friend an engaging pair."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 25 '47 50w

BOWEN, ROBERT SIDNEY. Winning pitch. 206p $2 Lothrop

48-6409

A rookie pitcher, who is the snobbish son of a wealthy old Boston family, is converted to democratic ways by a session in the Maine woods, from which his family's wealth came originally. A forest fire and the saving of a man's life help to complete the boy's regeneration.

Kirkus 16:170 Ap 1 '48 100w

"Well-told story with plenty of action and even a slight romantic interest. Larger print will appeal to slow readers. Ages 12-16." Lillian Morrison
+ Library J 73:717 My 1 '48 40w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
N Y Times p20 Je 27 '48 140w

BOWEN, VERNON. Lazy beaver; il. by Jim Davis. [34p] $2 McKay

48-9087

Picture-story book for ages four to six. The hero is a lazy little beaver who would not work. When he was threatened with punishment he ran away. But all alone in the forest at night he was terrified, and he had a hard time before he got back home. He arrived just in time to save the beaver town, and for once in his life he worked!

Kirkus 16:571 N 1 '48 90w

"A charming picture book which with illustrations and text teaches the small child quite a bit about the habits of beavers." J. M. Smith
+ Library J 73:1825 D 15 '48 40w
New Repub 119:32 D 6 '48 110w

"Told in a fluid prose, easy to read aloud, which lends humor and vitality to a durable theme. The pictures are uneven in quality, often crowded on the page, but in general they give a convincing feeling of beaverdom at work —and also at play." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p41 N 7 '48 130w

BOWES-LYON, LILIAN HELEN. Collected poems; introd. by C. Day Lewis. 191p $2.75 Dutton

821 48-8728

Poems compiled from five books of the author's poems, published in England since 1934.

"Hers is a rare and soaring spirit, but she has learnt to clothe it in the humility of earth. Her verse crystallises moments in a journey towards a hard rebirth. And if its beauty is 'signed with sorrow,' the joy of life, purely apprehended, shines in it." H. I'A. Fausset
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 29 '48 240w

BOWES-LYON, L. H.—Continued
Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 167:731 D 25 '48 50w

Reviewed by Giles Romilly
New Statesman & Nation 36:222 S 11 '48 270w

Reviewed by David Daiches
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Ja 30 '49 330w

"Mr. Day Lewis relates Miss Bowes Lyon's meditative quality to the influence of her native Scottish landscape and finds in her poetry traces of the human compassion that persuaded her to do relief work in London's East End during the war."
New Yorker 24:152 N 13 '48 90w

Reviewed by William Elton
Sat R of Lit 31:27 N 27 '48 360w

"The more one studies the rhythm of her work, the more its likeness to that of D. H. Lawrence emerges, especially in the initial setting of her poems, their opening phrases and cadences. . . Soon we find her verse 'wearing the faint sun like a silver shawl,' withdrawn from the world into a nunnery of half-explicit suffering. Out of this habit, however, the whole beauty and originality of her work has been established. That being so, it was inevitable that she should have looked to Emily Dickinson for some points in technique. . . In the later pages of this book, however, containing the poems from a recent volume called A Rough Walk Home, all experiment and imitation have vanished, and the poet emerges with a complete idiom of her own. It is intensely quiet; almost as though life has reduced her to whisper, so close, poignant is her vision." Richard Church
+ Spec 180:652 My 28 '48 900w

"These years have not been, in the general experience of humanity, years conducive to warmth and gaiety or the uplifting of the heart in song. . . Miss Bowes Lyon has not that temperament. She pipes a sober note; even before the impression of the war years came to justify and reinforce it, the sense of a pervading outer failure that must be countered by the ardent mind was never far away."
Times [London] Lit Sup p388 Jl 10 '48 950w

BOWLES, MRS ELLA (SHANNON), and TOWLE, MRS DOROTHY (SIEMERING). Secrets of New England cooking; with drawings by F. Wenderoth Saunders. 327p $2.75 Barrows
641.5 Cookery, New England 48-482

These recipes for New England cooking were collected by two New Hampshire women, who were inspired by stories of the cooking prowess of Aunt Fanny Aldrich, famous for her good cooking even now, years after her death. Partial contents: Chowder kettle and soup tureen; Brick-oven cookery; The sallet bowl; Cakes of all kinds; Preserving kettle and pickle jar; Winter picnics; Special day menus. Index.

Booklist 44:196 F 1 '48

"An excellent book for a rainy day when one has nothing to do but sit before an open fire and read awhile, doze awhile, and then try out one of the fictional recipes. I say fictional recipes because many of them require several readings—first, to get the story; second, to get the general idea; third, to pick out the directions; and perhaps a fourth reading for writing out definite proportions and directions. A busy homemaker would find the book tedious for everyday use but one that she should by all means add to her collection of cookbooks." Mrs J. B. Cooper
+ — J Home Econ 40:469 O '48 160w

Reviewed by A. H. Taylor
+ New Eng Q 21:422 S '48 600w

"Those from 'Down East' and those who have enjoyed the hospitality of New England will prize 'Secrets of New England Cooking.' . . The authors have hunted down and put into usable form the very best in the old-time favorites, and menus of today will be the richer for their efforts." Lois Palmer
+ N Y Times p25 Ja 18 '48 140w

BOWMAN, JOHN WICK. Religion of maturity. 336p $3 Abingdon-Cokesbury
232 Christianity. Jesus Christ—Teachings 48-7257

"[A] study of the essence of true religion, which the author finds in the mind of Jesus, 'what he took from his spiritual heritage, what he contributed, and its meaning for us in our times.' He finds in the prophets the source of the Hebrew religion, and analyzes the Religion of the Altar, the Religion of the Book, and the Religion of the Throne, apocalyticism, as attempts to interpret and apply this religion. Each discussion ends with a study of Jesus' relation to that manifestation of religion. The final section of the book, the Religion of Maturity, interprets the meaning of the new wine and the 'new wine-skins' which Jesus contributed." Churchman

"That this book will have widespread circulation as a result of receiving the Abingdon-Cokesbury award is a good thing, for it deserves to be read by as many people as possible. It is a profoundly biblical approach to a satisfying and mature Christian faith for living in our 20th century world, backed by the best possible scholarship, written with charm and winsomeness, and full of the faith of the writer in God and his church." R. C. Miller
+ Christian Century 65:805 Ag 11 '48 750w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
+ Churchman 162:15 Ag '48 180w

Reviewed by E. M. Tainton
San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 17 '48 320w

BOYCE, BURKE. Miss Mallett. 247p $2.75 Harper
48-5905

Novel of the life of a New Jersey school teacher whose ideas of faith and of understanding remained steadfast during thirty-five years of teaching.

Booklist 44:282 Ap 15 '48

"It probably would surprise Mr. Burke Boyce very much indeed to be 'accused' of having written a great book. It is so evidently unpretentious, and yet it is one of the most logical, sympathetic, poignant, sane little numbers published in many a day."
+ Cath World 167:189 My '48 220w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 24 '48 90w

"A sedately interesting story."
Kirkus 16:30 Ja 15 '48 170w

"Mr. Boyce not only pays a tribute; he earns one. Teachers, pupils, principals, parents, school board—all come warmly alive and make strangely compelling reading, in a story whose most spectacular incident occurs when Miss Pettingill, a timid and aging teacher, 'agitates' for better pay and is tried and dismissed by the Board. There are faults, to be sure. It is difficult to make Miss Mallett's exploits in the art of teaching always as impressive as their results seem to be. And apparently the author shares both Miss Mallett's lack of sympathy for the new 'progressive' principal who succeeds her favorite, and her scorn for most educational theory—which is not compatible with the understanding and forbearance he has exercised in his treatment of the older generation of teachers." Hiram Haydn
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Mr 21 '48 750w

"If there was, in your youth, a teacher who seemed to make you feel you would one day be capable of doing something worth while, then you will especially appreciate and enjoy this portrait of a public school teacher. . . Mr. Boyce succeeds not only in making Miss Mallett a 'character' but an extremely real person as well." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p15 My 23 '48 400w

"Although the author treats most of the major events in the heroine's life with restrained commiseration, his sympathy occasionally becomes so militant, as when the central character is gently pushed into an inadequately pensioned retirement, that one gets the impression the story was written in direct support of the Taft education bill."

— + New Yorker 24:117 Mr 20 '48 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 23 '48 300w

School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 20w

Wis Lib Bul 44:104 My '48

BOYD, MARTIN (MARTIN MILLS, pseud). Lucinda Brayford. 439p $3 Dutton
48-5561

Family chronicle of three generations of an Anglo-Australian family. The central character is the beautiful Lucinda who marries an aristocratic Englishman and goes with him to England. The time is from 1880's to the early 1940's, when Lucinda's son failed to go to war because he was a conscientious objector.

Booklist 44:233 Mr 1 '48

"For this reviewer it is abysmally boring, and four generations of such uninteresting people is, at least, three too many to read about. . . It has some high moments, but, we again say it is too exhausting to wade through."
— + Cath World 167:286 Je '48 150w

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson
Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 13 '48 550w

"Inevitably the comparison arises between this family chronicle and the 'Forsyte Saga.' So far as the story-telling goes, Mr. Boyd stands up well with Mr. Galsworthy; he has a far keener sense of satire but his preoccupation with sex narrows his outlook and his characters like his writing lack a certain distinction. 'Lucinda,' however, comprises enough action for four Galsworthy novels." E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 48:167 My 28 '48 800w

"A leisurely book, somewhat old-fashioned in its rhythm . . . [and] uneven in interest."
+ — Kirkus 15:680 D 15 '47 210w

"Recommended without reserve." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 73:122 Ja 15 '48 100w

"By far the most entertaining part of Lucinda Brayford is the apparently veracious description of Australian society on the upgrade in the nineteenth century. It is not positively satirical but written with a demure enjoyment of the situations that arise." Charles Marriott
+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 27 '46 90w

"For all its lively and sustained narrative interest, 'Lucinda Brayford' is essentially a study in dissolution. . . Yet despite the grim ideas which underlie it, 'Lucinda Brayford,' like the heroine whose name it bears, is gay and easy and vivid, the kind of novel that almost any reader will find steadily entertaining, with its first rate story and its pictures of life in bustling, vigorous Australia set in strong contrast with the author's one last sustained look in perspective at the oldest part of England." F. H. Bullock
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 29 '48 1100w

"Quietly, and with considerable narrative skill, it tells the story. . . The work of a veteran British novelist in his fifties (who, in the main, is writing of years he has lived through), it has suspense, interest, and veracity." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p6 F 22 '48 700w

"Stock characters, antique plot, and pedestrian style."
— New Yorker 24:86 F 28 '48 80w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 29 '48 1100w

"Mr. Boyd has few intellectual pretensions. His prose style is rather pedestrian. His characters do not strive for effect. His romances are palatable, but never truly passionate. His satirical darts are often blunted. And yet his novel has a sturdy texture, a life-like opacity that seems to contain all these ingredients in natural proportions." William Soskin
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:30 Mr 13 '48 800w

"An admirably respectworthy and sincere novel, well written and packed with interest." Walter Allen
+ Spec 178:58 Ja 10 '47 180w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 18 '48 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p641 D 28 '46 1000w

BOYLE, KAY. 1939, a novel. 152p $2.50 Simon & Schuster
48-5587

"Tells the story of what happened to Ferdl Eder, a young Austrian expatriate in the French Haute Savoie in war time. To the little Alpine inn which the young professional skier had built . . . there came, a couple of years before the events of '1939', Corinne Audal, the truant wife of a French Army officer. Young Mme. Audal had forsaken a background of brilliant sophistications . . . to linger on at the inn with the handsome skier as long as the dictates of love required. . . The here and now of Miss Boyle's story deals with the day following Ferdl's departure down the mountain to offer, in all good faith, his service to the French Army." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"Miss Boyle writes a charged prose; with Rumer Godden, Rebecca West, and Katherine Anne Porter she is one of the fine stylists of our day, and it seems to me disappointing craftsmanship that in a novelette of such brevity she has not been able to sustain either the characterization or the emotional conflict which engages her readers at the outset. Ferdl, so resourceful on the upper slopes, proves to be a man of pathetic indecision at sea level. The author has not prepared us for this, and his behavior seems blundering but not tragic. . . The story simply sits down." Edward Weeks
+ — Atlantic 181:108 Ap '48 420w

Booklist 44:233 Mr 1 '48

Kirkus 15:683 D 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 16 '48 210w

"Through the darting incisiveness of the narrative we are permitted the most intense perception of the emotional situation in which Ferdl and Corinne jointly and separately find themselves, of their relation to the villagers down below, to Ferdl's father and mother and adoring younger sister and to a harsh world at war. Kay Boyle is a master hand at giving full value not only to the explicit words spoken and the scene described, but to the delicate overtones that hover around and above her so-innocent seeming statements." F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 F 15 '48 700w

"Sensitively conceived, Miss Boyle's novel disappoints, chiefly on one score. Since choice is the essence of character, one would expect a certain stature of her protagonist. Yet through more than half the book, Ferdl is little more than a glamor-boy athlete and lover. Nor does his later heroic operatic role (there are several references to Lohengrin) help to add complexity to his character. Despite Miss Boyle's beautiful, poetic prose, we are not quite convinced that Ferdl was a happy choice for the part of a modern Knight of the Swan." Nona Balakian
N Y Times p22 F 15 '48 650w

"As a love story, the book has considerable impact, but the hero is such an improbably picturesque figure that his struggles with his political conscience seem pretty glossy."
New Yorker 24:123 Mr 13 '48 120w

"The story is told with a sustained inner tension, and Miss Boyle's style is fully equal to that demand. She observes, selects, and phrases with a miraculous freshness, as though she brought to the task of writing a new equipment. The high, dry mountain atmosphere permeates this little book, filling it with silence and a searching light, and there is an austere understanding that finds the fatal weakness lurking in Ferdl Eder's strength." Walter Havighurst

BOYLE, KAY—Continued
Sat R of Lit 31:12 F 28 '48 550w

Reviewed by Robert Kee
Spec 181:124 Jl 23 '48 220w

Time 51:92 Mr 1 '48 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p441 Ag 7 '48 180w

BRACE, RICHARD MUNTHE. Bordeaux and the Gironde, 1789-1794. 279p $3 Cornell univ. press

944.04 Girondists. France—History—Revolution 47-11767

"This study is concerned with the history of Bordeaux and the department of Gironde from the old régime to the Terror. An attempt has been made to focus upon the development of Girondism, both at the local and national levels. It is hoped that through the use of manuscripts and pamphlets in the archives of Bordeaux a better understanding of the Girondin mentality has resulted. But . . . perhaps the work is most concerned with presenting some of the issues of a great Revolutionary epoch and reconstructing the parade as it passed." (Prefatory note) Bibliography. Index.

"This clarification of Girondism is a significant contribution to French Revolutionary history."
+ Am Hist R 53:602 Ap '48 330w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
Ann Am Acad 258:133 Jl '48 360w

"Perhaps the chief limitation of this book is its almost total neglect of the colonial issue, the outcome of which strongly affected the destiny of the proud city at the mouth of the Garonne River. Nevertheless, scholars desiring to know the details of what went on in Bordeaux and Gironde during the Revolution will find the volume useful. The Note on Local Archives will benefit future researchers, as well."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 4:171 Je '48 260w

BRADBURY, BIANCA. Curious wine. 272p $2.75 Beechhurst press

48-9475

A novel on anti-Semitism. After marrying a Jewish physician, Martell returned to Connecticut to help her husband establish a practice in her home town. Her domineering mother and the community seemed determined to ostracize the newly weds. Before the year was over they had to fight a law suit for malpractice; but eventually mother left them alone.

Booklist 45:158 Ja 1 '49

"'The Curious Wine' is the product of a genuine impulse to uphold tolerance and human dignity, but it loses much of its force in a series of domestic skirmishes."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 26 '48 110w

"The story is told solidly in terms of believable characters. Though some of these characters tend to be stereotypes, Marty remains a sympathetically human protagonist, and the basic warmth of the relationship between herself and Luke is portrayed in a moving and convincing way. The events which shape their early married life have been patterned into a plot that is on the whole well-rounded and ably constructed, though the book's dramatic impact is unfortunately weakened by the fact that two of its more important happenings—the trial and the fire—are narrated at second hand. The book would also gain in power if the reactions of the townspeople in general, their bigotry or lack of bigotry toward Luke, were more fully described and dramatized. None the less 'The Curious Wine' is an honestly conceived, honestly written book." Blythe Morley
+ — N Y Times p22 D 12 '48 500w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 9 '49 130w

BRADFORD, ROARK. How come Christmas; a modern morality; with il. by Peter Burchard. 22p $1 Harper

Christmas plays 48-9848

"Republished in a special edition for the Christmas season. . . [It] is a short sketch that starts in dialogue form and turns into a monologue. It presents an apocryphal version of the Christmas story as expressed in the simple reverent words of an imaginary Negro minister in a little southern Sunday school room. . . The quaint little volume is attractively illustrated by Peter Burchard. It is hand set in foundry cloister oldstyle type." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p5 D 5 '48 100w

Reviewed by D. L. Cohn
Sat R of Lit 31:20 D 4 '48 1750w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '48 210w

BRADLEY, DAVID JOHN. No place to hide. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 182p $2 Little

612.014482 Atomic bomb—Physiological effect. Atomic energy 48-9321

An account of the experiments conducted by Joint Task Force One at Bikini in the summer of 1946. The author is a doctor who served as radiological monitor, which included testing surfaces for radioactivity by means of a Geiger counter. He stresses the aftermath of the explosion, and the impossibility of escaping the consequences of the bomb, exploded or even partially exploded. No index.

Booklist 45:116 D 1 '48

"No Place to Hide is a protest against false complacency. In breezy and memorable prose, [Dr. Bradley] presents the truth about the lethal aftermath of the two Bikini bombs as seen and heard by an expert eyewitness. Because of official secrecy, he cannot lift the atomic curtain very high; but he lifts it high enough to reveal just what will happen to each one of us in any future atomic war if we are lucky enough to escape alive from the blast and heat of the bomb burst itself." J. R. Stirrett
+ Canadian Forum 28:238 Ja '49 420w

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 168:334 Ja '49 250w

Chicago Sun p7X D 5 '48 90w

"How it all came to pass is described in this carefully written log. . . Obviously Dr. Bradley is anxious for others to share his deep and painful concern over the potential disaster of an atomic war in 'a world where the atom and the universe are the playthings of the modern physicists.' But one becomes conscious of more than the author's concern, for there develops an acute awareness of what is not said, the essential and most important facts and observations which he was obviously not permitted to include. The book becomes a teaser, whetting one's appetite for the full story of what happened and what was learned at Bikini." F. D. Elmer, Jr.
+ Christian Century 66:20 Ja 5 '49 500w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer
Christian Science Monitor p14 N 22 '48 750w

"Unlike most unprofessional writers, David Bradley has a brilliant gift for description. Nothing of the beauty of the environment in which he found himself seemed to escape his pen. . . The book gains in force because it is based on the diary he kept before, during and after the explosion of the bomb. What his instruments found after the explosion is a sobering story." Leander Danley
+ Churchman 163:16 Ja 15 '49 150w

Commonweal 49:334 Ja 7 '49 70w
Kirkus 16:547 O 1 '48 100w
Reviewed by J. E. Brown
Library J 73:1663 N 15 '48 120w

"'No Place to Hide' is a generally valuable book not only for the public but also for those military men who think the bomb is merely a new fangled variation of the blockbuster." Daniel Lang
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 28 '48 1050w

"A singularly well-written diary. . . [The book] will be welcomed not only as a contribution to world peace but also as first-hand raw material for future historians of the early days of the atomic age—and (last but not least) as a real contribution to literature, atomic or otherwise." M. L. Laurence
+ N Y Times p1 N 28 '48 1250w

Reviewed by E. B. White
New Yorker 24:171 D 4 '48 1750w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 24 '48 900w

"There is no law to compel anyone to read this book. But one thing is certain: If you do, you will have a missionary fervor about it and will try to badger everyone you know into reading it. It is that kind of book. It is simply, effectively, occasionally beautifully, written. It is a short book—you can read it at a single sitting—and in addition to coming away with a thoroughly satisfying reading experience, you have the feeling that you have filled in an important gap in your atomic-age education." Norman Cousins
+ Sat R of Lit 31:15 D 11 '48 850w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein
Springf'd Republican p6B D 26 '48 750w

Time 52:105 N 29 '48 750w
Wis Lib Bul 45:11 Ja '49

BRADLEY, MURIEL. Devil in the sky. 188p $2 Doubleday 48-5324

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:661 D 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Mr 7 '48 70w

"A forest fire on Mount Diablo brings the narrative to an exciting finish. Otherwise it is rather dull and much too confused." Isaac Anderson
— + N Y Times p30 Mr 7 '48 180w

"Attractive setting, sundry interesting people, adequate action, rudimentary detecting, and fiery climax that finishes both slayer and story."
Sat R of Lit 31:34 F 14 '48 40w

BRADNER, LEICESTER. Edmund Spenser and the Faerie queene. 189p $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press
821 Spenser, Edmund 48-6359

An analysis of the Faerie Queene, by a professor of English at Brown university. After an introduction and a biographical chapter, the author proceeds to examine the poem in "an attempt to arouse in the educated general reader a desire to become acquainted with one of the great classics of English literature which is at present suffering from unmerited neglect. For this reason the treatment has been to present the Faerie Queene as it will appear to a person who has no professional interest in it." (Pref) Index.

New Eng Q 21:287 Je '48 30w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 O 17 '48 500w

"Despite inevitable differences of opinion, the important thing is that Mr. Bradner has done a difficult job admirably, with restrained enthusiasm rather than the expected 'puff,' with enviable knowledge of the vast scholarship blanketing his subject, with an unerring sense of proper emphasis as well as of the suitable approach for the present-day student. And he shows great gift for making, without serious compromise, a neglected poet not only comprehensible but exciting." W. B. C. Watkins
+ N Y Times p24 My 23 '48 500w

"This study is commendable for its broad conclusion that the poet should be regarded as a man of action intimately concerned with the affairs of the world. To a much greater degree it is disappointing because it evades any serious historical or esthetic criticism and throughout is a perfunctory performance." H. W. Wells
— + Sat R of Lit 31:19 Je 19 '48 330w

BRADSHAW, GEORGE, ed. Collection of travel in America, by various hands. 372p $4 Farrar, Straus
917.3 U.S.—Description and travel 48-5838

"Informal prose anthology which originated in the desire of the compiler, while he was serving with the U. S. Air Force in Africa, to re-read descriptions of his native land that were haunting his memory. Result is a personalized selection of travel literature drawn from an interesting variety of sources, many of which are not books of travel as such. There are excerpts from Anthony Trollope, from Mark Twain's Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, from Thoreau's Cape Cod. Less to be expected are unhackneyed, 'atmospheric' pieces from Ring Lardner, Henry James, Aldous Huxley, Thornton Wilder, F. Scott Fitzgerald and Jean Cocteau." Library J

"The twenty-eight selections, three from Trollope, a detailed describer, ought to be required State Department reading and volunteer choice for the rest of us."
+ Commonweal 48:680 Ap 30 '48 360w
Kirkus 16:17 Ja 1 '48 150w

"Not just another anthology about America. Good for reading aloud." B. B. Libaire
+ Library J 73:469 Mr 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by Joseph Kraft
Nation 166:400 Ap 10 '48 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 10 '48 950w

BRADY, CHARLES ANDREW, ed. Catholic reader; with introd. notes. 337p $3.50 Desmond & Stapleton, 7 Seneca st, Buffalo 3, N.Y.
820.8 Roman Catholic literature—Collections. English literature—Collections. American literature—Collections 47-6891

An anthology of prose and poetry by Roman Catholic authors, stressing the Catholic philosophy in life and letters. Among the contributors are: Maurice Baring, F. J. Sheed, Finley Peter Dunne, John Dryden, Thomas Malory, Evelyn Waugh, G. K. Chesterton, Francis Thompson, G. M. Hopkins, J. H. Newman, J. B. Tabb.

Booklist 44:279 Ap 15 '48

Reviewed by J. S. Kennedy
Cath World 168:216 D '48 60w

"This is a delightful anthology, full of good things. . . It is a book to read and browse in and enjoy." Edward Littlejohn
+ Commonweal 47:232 D 12 '47 100w

"Mr. Brady presents such a large display of wares that every taste will find at least several offerings to its liking. At first sight, the reader may be somewhat startled by the apparently irresponsible manner in which the editor skips about, ignoring chronology or logical sequence. . . But closer inspection shows that Mr. Brady's pose of debonair dilettante is carefully calculated to stimulate and almost trick his readers into quickened interest in the material presented." J. W. Chase
+ N Y Times p22 F 8 '48 500w

BRAMHALL, MARION. Murder is an evil business. 188p $2 Doubleday
48-7281

Detective story.

"The failure to manage suitable decoration for an ingenious plot makes Marion Bramhall's 'Murder is an Evil Business' disappointing. Miss Bramhall's manner is not lush but pedestrian and she leans upon the device of the interloping narrator (female) without lending her amateur much vitality or charm." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun Jl 2 '48 50w

Kirkus 16:201 Ap 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Je 27 '48 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 Je 27 '48 130w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 27 '48 60w

"Honest and unquaint treatment of Cape Codders redeeming feature of tale that moves swiftly and with copious thrills to dubious solution. Entertaining."
Sat R of Lit 31:30 Je 26 '48 40w

BRANCH, HOUSTON, and WATERS, FRANK. Diamond head. 371p $3.50 Farrar, Straus 48-6272

Historical romance, based on the exploits of the Confederate cruiser Shenandoah, which was sent into the Northern Pacific to hunt down the New England whaling fleet. The romance of the story is between a former U.S. naval officer and the daughter of the whaling tycoon, Captain Macy.

"Part of the story is a bit lurid. . . The characters are cardboard, the writing downright bad in spots, but the sea stuff is good, and the whaling fleet and the gallant 'Shenandoah' make a fresh background for a familiar arrangement."
— + Kirkus 16:95 F 15 '48 100w

"Decidedly mediocre." R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:651 Ap 15 '48 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38 N 14 '48 50w

"In most essentials, the Messrs. Branch and Waters, who know a good story when they see one, have faithfully followed the log of the Shenandoah." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p7 My 2 '48 700w

BRAND, CHRISTIANNA, pseud. See Lewis, M. C. M.

BRANDT, ALLEN DEMMY. Industrial health engineering. 395p il $6 Wiley
613.6 Hygiene, Industrial 47-12353

"The author has said that his specialty may be defined as 'the science of maintaining the worker's environment in a condition conducive to good health, that is, keeping all harmful environmental exposures away from workers.' Thus the scope of the work includes not only protection from harmful substances and radiations used in industrial processes, but ventilation, heating, air conditioning, illumination, noise control, water supply, toilet and eating facilities in industrial establishments. These subjects are competently discussed from the viewpoint of industrial hygiene engineers and of students who are planning to enter the field. An extensive bibliography is included. The author is Industrial Hygiene Engineer with the Bethlehem Steel Company." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 44:229 Mr 1 '48

"While this book will prove useful to the industrial hygiene engineer, since it gathers together much valuable information scattered in many governmental publications and other sources, it has only limited value for the chemist. . . It is regrettable that the chapter on radiant energy hazards has serious omissions and poor arrangement." M. B. Jacobs
+ — Chem & Eng N 26:1479 My 17 '48 450w

Eng N 140:95 Ap 1 '48 120w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1273 S 15 '47 60w

Management R 37:380 Jl '48 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:76 O '47

"The book is eminently practical in method, and should be useful to a large group of engineers and other persons engaged in the air-conditioning, material-conveying, and public health fields."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:89 Mr '48 300w

BRANN, ESTHER. Five puppies for sale; story and pictures. 80p $1.50 Macmillan 48-9088

John and Susan had to sell five of their six puppies; but found good homes for all. Spot worked on a farm; Blackie helped a newsboy; Duchess joined the circus; Bubbles became a pampered lap dog, and Boots returned home after his young master pulled his tail. For grades 1-3.

Booklist 45:123 D 1 '48

"Format and style of writing make this a book particularly useful for third-grade reading." J. M. Smith
+ Library J 73:1672 N 15 '48 50w

BRANSON, HENRY C. Last year's blood. 214p $2 Simon & Schuster
47-12505

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Ja 30 '48 50w

— Kirkus 15:559 O 1 '47 80w

New Repub 118:30 Ja 19 '48 40w

"Bent deduces soberly and satisfactorily right up to a shooting finish that gives the tale a lift in the right place." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ja 25 '48 120w

"The complete naturalness exhibited by the redoubtable Bent makes him as plausible a detective as the reader could wish. Nonchalant and unassuming, resourceful John soon gets to the crux of the situation, solves murders (there's even a third one), mayhem and blackmail." Jack Glick
+ N Y Times p10 D 28 '47 180w

"An excellent job."
+ New Yorker 23:60 D 27 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 1 '48 70w

"Upper brackets."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:24 Ja 3 '48 50w

BRANT, IRVING. James Madison [3v; v. 2] The nationalist, 1780-1787. 484p il $6 Bobbs
B or 92 Madison, James (41-19279)

This second volume on James Madison covers seven years, during most of which time he was in the Continental Congress or the Virginia General Assembly. It closes in 1787 as Madison was about to set out for Philadelphia as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Horton
Am Hist R 54:153 O '48 700w

Reviewed by M. E. Dillon
Am Pol Sci R 42:1026 O '48 410w

Booklist 44:247 Mr 15 '48

Reviewed by Walter Johnson
Chicago Sun Mr 18 '48 360w

"With imagination and through diligence, Mr. Brant has presented a more complete and a more interesting Madison than has been done by any of his predecessors. If the Madison of these pages is not as interesting or as human as a Franklin or a Jefferson, it is scarcely Mr. Brant's fault. The figure that does emerge is challenging." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 2 '48 900w

"At times the author devotes more attention to Franklin than to Madison but there is always a justification for it. The book is actually a history of the Second Continental Congress and of the Congress of the Articles of Confederation government. It has to be that in order to trace Madison's varied interests. The author has made the period 1780-1787 come to life again. More than forty pages of explanatory notes indicate the research that preceded the writing of the book. An excellent index increases the utility of an exceptionally fine addition to American biography." Paul Kiniery

Commonweal 48:83 My 7 '48 550w

Current Hist 14:295 My '48 50w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith

Ethics 59:49 O '48 3500w

"Well documented and of value to students of American history." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 73:195 F 1 '48 120w

"Irving Brant has done a competent job of research; and he writes with verve, pungency, and humor." R. W. Leopold

+ Nation 166:482 My 1 '48 700w

Reviewed by George Dangerfield

New Repub 118:27 Mr 22 '48 1300w

"In illustrating Madison's increasing parliamentary powers Brant never loses sight of his complex inner personality... Like any book packed as this one is with the life of an era no less than a great man, it will not always prove easy going for the escapist or skimmer. Some readers, too, may feel that the study concentrates too much on politics. The only answer here is that an inspired conjoining of political theory and action was the key to this period of Madison's life and to this era in our country's history, just as politics—the vision to plan and the will to act—holds the only hope for the world's predicament today." Douglass Adair

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 F 29 '48 1700w

"Even for a day of long biographies, this is an unusually detailed work. It is based on a thorough-going investigation of the sources. Largely disregarding secondary works (perhaps too much so), the author has gone straight to manuscripts and printed collections to ferret out the last item of Madison's activities. He has devoted close attention to contemporary figures, also. Some of these he describes or characterizes rather harshly, but it seems to me that he understands the major ones (with the possible exception of John Adams) exceedingly well. Altogether, the biography will be of great value to all serious students of this important period in our history." Dumas Malone

+ N Y Times p3 F 29 '48 1300w

"As a study of Madison's theory of republican government, and of his peculiar kind of nationalism, the book is thoroughgoing, if painfully slow-paced. But Madison emerges as a vivid and highly important American personality."

+ New Yorker 24:119 Mr 20 '48 110w

Reviewed by Gordon Pates

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 18 '48 550w

"This is a long volume for a seven-year span in the life of a legislator. In it the biographer has conceded nothing to popular taste. The treatment may fairly be called exhaustive." L. H. Butterfield

Sat R of Lit 31:11 My 15 '48 900w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Social Studies 39:279 O '48 320w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 37:264 My '48 140w

Time 51:108 Mr 15 '48 440w

BRAUN, KURT. Union-management co-operation; experience in the clothing industry. 259p $3 Brookings

331.188 Industrial relations. Clothing trade 47-31470

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

Reviewed by F. J. Roethlisberger

Ann Am Acad 256:200 Mr '48 550w

Reviewed by R. J. Myers

J Pol Econ 56:367 Ag '48 1300w

"This book does a service in making clear that union-management co-operation must be preceded by a period of bona fide collective bargaining. This conclusion is justified notwithstanding the fact that methods and techniques adopted in the clothing industry to bring about to-day's level of co-operation may not always be practicable in other industries. Business men, labor leaders, Government officials would do well to study this valuable presentation." George Moskowitz

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 14 '48 550w

"The author is careful to limit his conclusions to the subject of his intensive study, but is not unaware of their further implications."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:385 D '47 340w

BRAY, CHARLES WILLIAM. Psychology and military proficiency; a history of the Applied psychology panel of the National defense research committee. 242p il $3.50 Princeton univ. press

355.22 Psychology, Applied 48-6452

"An abbreviated summary of the work of some two hundred psychologists in World War II. The studies were done on a contract basis with the armed forces, primarily the Navy, with the National Defense Research Committee acting as middleman. The problems tackled were those of physiological psychology and not of social psychology. They included tests for classification into assignment on such bases as interest, emotional stability, leadership, tests for the selection of specialists, aids in training, improvements in communication, improvements in the handling of complicated weapons and machinery, tests of achievement and proficiency." Am J Soc

"From the standpoint of psychological science, the studies reported added nothing to theory and little to method. . . The leadership studies, too, duplicated much that had already been completed. . . Despite these weaknesses, the book demonstrates the meticulousness, the high practical value, and the great scientific intelligence of the psychologists who served the nation in a professional capacity during World War II." A. M. Rose

+ — Am J Soc 54:247 N '48 420w

"The book is clearly and informatively written. It contains a minimum of technical psychological terms, and should appeal equally to the layman and the professional psychologist. It should be of special interest to industrial designers as indicating how similar psychological methods may be applied to their problems." S. W. Fernberger

+ Ann Am Acad 258:147 Jl '48 550w

Management R 37:383 Jl '48 100w

BRAY, JOHN LEIGHTON. Non-ferrous production metallurgy. 2d ed 587p $6 Wiley

669 Metallurgy 47-6564

New edition of a textbook first published in 1941 (Book Review Digest 1941). "Preface indicates the following additions: methods used for calculating furnace charges, gas volume, recoveries, efficiencies; a new chapter on the application of physical chemistry to metallurgy; new material on aluminum, magnesium, nickel, tin. A discussion on the strategic position of this country has been added to each chapter. Some descriptive matter and sketches have been deleted." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:218 F 15 '48

BRAY, J. L.—Continued

"This book was written primarily as a textbook for students of nonferrous metallurgy and is admirably suited for this purpose. . . In addition, it should prove to be a valuable reference book for practicing metallurgists and engineers because of its systematic and detailed presentation of the subject matter." R. S. Stewart

+ Chem & Eng N 26:1104 Ap 12 '48 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1376 O 1 '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:78 O '47

BRAYNARD, FRANK OSBORN. Lives of the liners; with il. by the author. 204p $3.75 Cornell maritime

623.824 Ships. Shipbuilding 48-304

"The passenger-carrying steamships, both great and small, that dominated ocean travel between the two world wars are the subject of this book. Anecdotes and statistical details about their design, building, launching, speed records, accidents, and—for many of them—their adventures in World War II, are woven into essays that make exciting reading for persons interested in ships. The book is illustrated with reproductions of the author's own pen-and-ink drawings." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Reviewed by Walter Hamshar

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 D 14 '47 380w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:83 O '47

"The book contains good stories, with new anecdotes and intimate details, of ships once more plying their peacetime lanes. While Mr. Braynard is an expert on maritime lore, some of his conclusions are open to question, for example: that super-liners are not generally profitable and that the master of the ill-fated President Hoover took her through an inadequately charted Pacific passage on the basis of his own judgment. And some sharp editing would be in order if there is another edition, to eliminate the too-frequent typographical errors and misspelled ship and place names." George Horne

+ — N Y Times p23 My 9 '48 430w

BREAN, HERBERT. Wilders walk away. 244p $2.50 Morrow

48-5828

Mystery story.

Booklist 44:300 My 1 '48

"A nicely paced and startling thriller which leans candidly on a number of fairly ancient tricks and manages a steady interest to, if not including, its finale. . . The consequence is not Carr but it's diverting." Emmett Dedmon

+ Chicago Sun Ap 2 '48 110w

"Holds together and should satisfy all fans."

+ Kirkus 16:34 Ja 15 '48 110w

"Mr. Brean needs a good talking to about the way all his characters stare and stare to express emotion—any emotion. It almost spoils an attractive mystery." Will Cuppy

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Ap 11 '48 200w

"It is an enthralling mystery even though some of the explanations are just a little too pat to be completely satisfactory." I. A.

+ — N Y Times p27 Mr 21 '48 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 4 '48 70w

"Grade A."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:44 Mr 20 '48 50w

BREARLEY, MARY, pseud. See Jayne, M. S.-R.

BRECHT, BERTOLT. Parables for the theater; two plays: The good woman of Setzuan; and, The Caucasian chalk circle; English versions by Eric and Maja Bentley. 192p $3.50 Univ. of Minn.

832 48-8694

Two allegorical plays by a contemporary German leftist poet. The plays are The Good Woman of Setzuan, the scene of which is China; and The Caucasian Chalk Circle, a kind of Caucasian judgment of Solomon.

"Essential for all drama collections as well as those of German literature." George Freedley

+ Library J 73:1667 N 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 N 28 '48 500w

Reviewed by T. Q. Curtiss

N Y Times p5 Ja 9 '49 750w

"They are beautifully and eloquently written, no matter what one thinks of their dialectic."

+ New Yorker 24:135 O 16 '48 140w

School & Society 68:399 D 4 '48 70w

BRECHT, BERTOLT. Selected poems; tr. and introd. by H. R. Hays. 179p $3.50 Reynal

831 47-12241

"Since the 1920's, in Germany and now in the United States, Bertolt Brecht has written poetry, plays, novels and films, and his overall contribution to contemporary writing is considerable. H. R. Hays . . . has chosen for this volume a selection of Brecht poems with both English and German text, and in addition to the poems proper, a selection of songs and ballads from the most famous Brecht plays: The Three-Penny Opera, The Mother, etc." Publisher's note.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun p24 Ja 5 '48 320w

Reviewed by Randall Jarrell

+ Nation 167:80 Jl 17 '48 180w

"There are pathetic ballads, hard-bitten jokes and bits of poetic folk-wisdom. The translation, though uneven, is always clear and often effective. Fortunately, the original German is printed on the opposite page and it is not difficult to catch the tone of these poems. The bleak simplicity creates a special problem, that of not translating a just-caught ironic understatement into a banal and obvious propagandistic phrase." M. L. Rosenthal

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 F 29 '48 750w

"The obvious qualities in Brecht are the external ones: the revolutionary, the satiric, the popular and proletarian. But within this hard, strong external shell there is a peculiar, sometimes almost repellent, but certainly very original sensibility which is the real Brecht. Brecht's power is not so much in his ability to create a hard poetic shell as to get inside this shell, much as the hermit crab gets inside the shell of a whelk." Stephen Spender

+ N Y Times p5 Je 27 '48 850w

"The translator would have us see a continuous development of dialectical purity and power in this collection, in which the poems are presented in the original German as well as in translation. Actually, the vigor and brilliance of his early poems, marked by folk rhythms and a theatrical ingenuity, are later replaced by dullness and rigidity."

New Yorker 23:98 D 20 '47 160w

"Brecht uses poetry as a means, not an end. Whatever he says is preconditioned by his social or political convictions. These are sincere and forceful enough, but an honest passion does not always make a good poem. There is little here, in fact, that could not have been said more effectively in prose. . . Rilke probes the enigma of love, beauty, man, God, and eternity. Brecht sees only economic oppression, social injustice, horror, futility. And this, as J. Donald Adams says, 'is not good enough for our time.' We are looking for 'a literature of courage,' not of defeat." Gustav Davidson

Sat R of Lit 31:19 Mr 20 '48 450w

BRECK, VIVIAN, pseud. See Breckenfeld, V. G.

BRECKENFELD, VIVIAN GURNEY (VIVIAN BRECK, pseud). High trail; il. by Leonard Weisgard. 214p $2.50 Doubleday
48-8742

Story of a city girl's struggle over a mountain trail to obtain medical aid for her father, injured while fishing. Halfway on her journey Chloe Cassidy collapses with mountain sickness, but is rescued by two young climbers. Together they race thru snow, cold and storm to the nearest town. Mr Cassidy receives expert care and Chloe finds a new friend in one of her rescuers. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 45:108 N 15 '48

"The author is an experienced mountain climber, and, although this is her first book, her fine sense of drama and proportion give assurance it will not be her last. The decorations by Leonard Weisgard are exactly right. It is a beautiful book in its feeling for nature and in the naturalness of the romance growing out of thrilling adventure which bears the stamp of reality." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 24:436 N '48 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:462 N '48 100w

Kirkus 16:438 S 1 '48 80w

"Highly recommended for young adults." M. A. Herr
+ Library J 73:1747 D 1 '48 100w

"This is a young people's novel of real value." M. C. S.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 N 14 '48 250w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p28 Ja 23 '49 170w

"The background of the Sierras and the details of mountain climbing are obviously written from experience, and there is one unusually fine description of a sunrise after a difficult night. But it is the insight, the lack of sentimentality, and the skill in drawing Chloe and David Starling that make this book so satisfying."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 N 13 '48 320w
Wis Lib Bul 44:187 N '48

BRELAND, JOHN HENRY. Chef's guide to quantity cookery; foreword by Crete Dahl; pub. in co-op. with Dahl pub. co, Stamford, Connecticut. 470p $6 Harper
641.57 Cookery for institutions, etc. Restaurants, lunch rooms, etc. 47-12462

Collection of recipes for quantity cooking, with some emphasis on Creole food. Could be used by housewives who are willing to cut down recipes; or by owners of large restaurants, who could multiply the ingredients to accommodate their trade. Index.

Booklist 44:197 F 1 '47

"Although the print is small, the material is well planned and directions are given clearly. To aid in preparation, quantities of ingredients are given by volume and weight. Cooking temperature is provided where needed and preparation time noted. This book will also be useful to church and club groups." Lois Palmer
+ N Y Times p25 Ja 18 '48 180w

BRELAND, OSMOND PHILIP. Animal facts and fallacies; with decorations by Leo Hershfield. 268p $3 Harper 591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 48-8951

Short articles about mammals, birds, fish, amphibians, reptiles, etc. compiled by the zoologist of the University of Texas. The data answer questions, some of them asked by the author's students. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:99 N 15 '48

"Many items correct old superstitions. Reading along, absorbed, you learn a lot of zoölogy and come finally to a valuable bibliography. No other book like it exists; a grand gift for anyone over twelve."
+ Commonweal 49:149 N 19 '48 130w

"A boon for the parent wanting to answer questions the young fry ask, for nature classes and groups, this is easy to handle from the reference angle because of its classification, arrangement, table of contents made up of paragraph headings, and index. To check facts against superstition produces an intriguing book."
+ Kirkus 16:327 Jl 1 '48 100w

"Should be helpful for compilers of quiz programs. Recommended for people enthusiastic about unrelated facts." D. F. Lucas
+ Library J 73:1083 Ag '48 90w

"Professor Breland covers a good deal of ground and he seems to have taken great pains to get the best as well as the latest information. Fundamentalists, who do not get much comfort these days, will be pleased to learn that the sperm whale could have swallowed Jonah and that individuals have been captured containing pieces of squid larger than a man's body." J. W. Krutch
+ Nation 167:553 N 13 '48 220w

"It contains an amazing amount of oddity information in the field of zoology. It also reveals the fantastically mistaken beliefs that have been held concerning wild creatures. An index facilitates use of the book as a reference volume." E. W. Teale
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 D 5 '48 230w

Reviewed by E. B. Garside
N Y Times p24 D 5 '48 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 28 '48 160w

Wis Lib Bul 45:11 Ja '49

BREWSTER, RAY QUINCY. Organic chemistry. 840p $7.35; to schools $5.50 Prentice-Hall
547 Chemistry, Organic 48-6184

"One year college undergraduate textbook in organic chemistry. Principles of organic chemistry in which emphasis is placed upon the mechanism of reactions. Extensive use is made of the electronic structure and resonance forms of molecules of a substance in presenting the properties of the substance. Author stresses application of the modern electronic resonance theories. Questions and problems follow each chapter." Library J

Booklist 44:307 My 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1031 Jl '48 70w

BRIDGES, WILLIAM. True zoo stories. 127p il $2.50 Sloane 591.5 Animals—Habits and behavior of 48-3241

Fifty stories of Bronx zoo animals, from "the antelope that hid her baby" to "the zebra that chased a wart hog." "Each story is followed by a short description telling where the animal comes from, what he eats and what he looks like. Photographs, many of which are action pictures, illustrate the stories and give the young reader an idea of how the animals look and how they are handled at the zoo." (N Y Times) For ages 4-8.

"To little children who like animals these stories about some of the many different kinds that live in the greatest zoo in the world, in the Bronx, will prove entertaining and informative. The stories are generally about a page in length, not long enough to tire the attention of a young child. They relate surprising, often amusing, facts about individual animals." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:367 S '48 80w

BRIDGES, WILLIAM—Continued

"Excellent book. . . Special recommendation: school libraries." J. F. Kennedy

+ Library J 73:1519 O 15 '48 70w

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 8 '48 180w

BRIDGES, WILLIAM. Wild animals of the world; animal portraits by Mary Baker; introd. by Roy Chapman Andrews. deluxe ed 272p $4.95 Garden City pub. co.

599 Wild animals 48-10950

Pictures and descriptive text showing and describing most of the wild animals of the world. Can be used in both juvenile and adult collections. The author is curator of publications at the New York Zoological society. Index.

Booklist 45:131 D 15 '48

"This is a particularly effective animal book in the sense that it can be read—and looked at—with pleasure by adults and children alike. Mr. Bridges writes very simply, as he must, yet does not patronize the mature reader. He also has a knack for choosing the dramatic fact, the impression which would be most memorable to a beginner were he suddenly set down in the wilds to see for himself. . . Miss Baker's animal pictures are both anatomically correct and beautiful to look at." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p12 N 28 '48 450w

BRIER, HOWARD M. Phantom backfield; il. by Jay Hyde Barnum. 246p $2.50 Random house

48-3505

High school football story for older boys. The closing of one of the city high schools scatters the student body among other schools, and means a separation of friends. The story is of one boy who almost loses his whole football career in the process.

Booklist 45:72 O 15 '48

Kirkus 16:310 Jl 1 '48 100w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 24 '48 140w

"Mr. Brier has hit upon a different approach to sports fiction. The characterization, action, drama and authenticity are all of a high quality and result in a very excellent story." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p45 O 17 '48 180w

Reviewed by Margaret Goodloe

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 28 '48 150w

"Although this is a high-school story, it is a bit tame for the older students. Boys in junior high will like it, whether they are interested in football or only want a good story." M. P. A.

+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 N 13 '48 200w

BRINDZE, RUTH (MRS ALBERT W. FRIBOURG). Seamanship below deck. new ed 298p il $4 Harcourt

797.14 Yachts and yachting. Seafaring life 47-12197

"A revision of her 'Seamanship Below Deck,' first published for the yachting clan eight years ago [Book Review Digest 1939]. The book deals almost entirely with that department which (on too many family boats) becomes solely the responsibility of the female member of the crew. It may be hard work occasionally on deck aboard a small boat; but below it is usually drudgery. Miss Brindze advises on how to minimize [that]. . . In this edition she covers many of the new items in bedding, lights, heating, stoves and below-deck equipment made available since the war." N Y Times

Booklist 44:250 Mr 15 '48

"'Seamanship Below Deck' covers a lot of ground—perhaps a little too much to do justice to every subject. But in the small book space available on the average boat, that has advantages. Both the new and the old hand will find some excellent ideas on ventilation, care of children and mascots, refrigeration and the week-end guest. There is a chapter on first aid. The food recipes are practical and good and the lists of supplies, galley equipment, clothing and stand-by canned goods should be of value to all below-deck slaves, male or female. All in all, 'Seamanship Below Deck' is a mighty handy book to have aboard." Theodore Sweedy

+ N Y Times p42 N 9 '47 400w

BRINES, RUSSELL. MacArthur's Japan. 315p $3.50 Lippincott

940.5352 MacArthur, Douglas. Reconstruction (1939-)—Japan. Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 48-8662

"Assays, after initial attention to the surrender, the methods and achievements of the occupation with particular reference to scope of the task as laid down at Potsdam and later extended; the position of Hirohito; MacArthur as moving spirit of the venture; demobilization of Japanese forces; the war crimes trials; economic reform and rehabilitation; the position of labor; the Japanese bureaucracy; politics and reeducation." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:63 O 15 '48

Reviewed by John Beaufort

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 24 '48 1050w

Current Hist 15:294 N '48 60w

"Not the final word, but an extensive, careful, balanced preliminary accounting. Recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 73:1268 S 15 '48 130w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer

Nation 167:500 O 30 '48 400w

"This latest survey of the amazingly peaceful American occupation of Japan is the most favorable to MacArthur yet published in this country, excepting, of course, Noel Busch's 'Fallen Sun.' . . Despite this, and despite the fact that the author is billed by his publishers as a 'long-time friend and associate' of General MacArthur's, it's safe to assume that the Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers in Japan will probably not entirely like Russell Brines's new book. . . On the whole Mr. Brines has compiled an eminently fair, dispassionately presented record of how SCAP functions, measuring its successes and limitations by the best short-range yardsticks available. He has not gone out of his way to crusade, even in such a worthy cause as freedom of the press for American correspondents in Japan." Richard Lauterbach

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 O 17 '48 900w

"Russell Brines' book is as detailed, as objective, as sane an evaluation of the occupation and its policies as has been written." Foster Hailey

+ N Y Times p6 O 24 '48 500w

Reviewed by P. M. Mezey

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 10 '48 600w

"Mr. Brines has written the best book to date on our occupation of Japan. In every aspect of the occupation which he takes up he shows a commendable knowledge of the Japanese past, a keen reportorial mind, a good eye for illuminating detail, and, above all, a balanced judgment." Bradford Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 31:15 O 16 '48 700w

BRINK, FREDERICK WRIGHT. This man and this woman; a guide for those contemplating marriage. 79p $1.50 Assn. press

392.5 Marriage. Sex 48-6410

"Written primarily for young men and women who are contemplating marriage. Its aim is to give an over-all picture rather than specific details and its treatment is definitely religious. Unlike some material in this field, this book does not emphasize the physiological side of sex unduly. The approach is rather a middle course between romantic affection and physical desire. The author calls it 'the realistic-religious approach to marriage.'" (J Home Econ) Brief bibliography.

Booklist 44:275 Ap 15 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '48

"The chapter on the engagement period is of particular value in its pointing out the essential decisions which should be made before marriage. . . The book is not exhaustive in content but is rather an introduction or starting point to stimulate further reading." H. A. Burnham

+ J Home Econ 40:536 N '48 170w

"It is a simply written book but sufficiently comprehensive to cover the subject adequately for most young couples. . . It is a book which may be recommended to clergymen for use in instructing couples contemplating marriage and to the young people themselves."

+ Kirkus 16:80 F 1 '48 120w

BRINKLEY, WILLIAM W. Quicksand. 255p $3 Dutton

48-7801

Mark Cleveland, an officer on an LST stationed off the coast of Italy, finds his memory of his American wife of one week growing dimmer as time passes. He meets Anna, an Italian girl of good family, and falls deeply in love. Just as he decides to ask for a divorce, he learns that his wife has engineered his transfer to London, where she has come to join him.

"A first novel which is assured, often affecting, provided the market can get past the popularly accepted deterrent of the war background."

+ Kirkus 16:291 Je 15 '48 140w

Reviewed by C. W. Roth

Library J 73:1025 Jl '48 110w

"William Brinkley's first novel is a work of maturity, scope and incisive style."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ag 22 '48 190w

Reviewed by H. B. Parker

N Y Times p4 S 5 '48 220w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 7 '48 800w

Springf'd Republican p7B S 19 '48 180w

Wis Lib Bul 44:164 O '48

BRINTON, CLARENCE CRANE. From many one; the process of political integration, the problem of world government. 126p $2.25 Harvard univ. press

341.1 International federation 48-6888

A study of political integration, based on three lectures delivered by the author at Pomona college in the spring of 1947. The Roman empire and medieval France are cited as examples of this slow "process of making from many one." In examining the contemporary problem the author concludes that a world state will not be established in the near future but that the present world-system of nation-states will continue for the time being.

Reviewed by F. M. Russell

Ann Am Acad 260:194 N '48 360w

Booklist 45:5 S 1 '48

Reviewed by Blodwen Davies

Canadian Forum 28:166 O '48 700w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 14 '48 180w

"An arresting viewpoint on a prime topic."

+ Current Hist 15:228 O '48 50w

Kirkus 16:141 Mr 1 '48 170w

"Recommended for larger and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 73:704 My 1 '48 130w

"It will be difficult at best to live sanely in our insecure age and to survive it. Illusions are tempting at such a time, but they are also irrelevant, and they may be dangerous. That is why this little book is an important contribution to the counsels of the nation." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 166:578 My 22 '48 950w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

N Y Times p3 My 16 '48 900w

"An exceptionally clear, constructive and realistic outline of the practical problems involved in forming a world government." Gilman Ostrander

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 8 '48 950w

"Mr. Brinton's thoughtful warning to the excessively optimistic should not discourage but rather heighten the spirit of all who work, patiently and intelligently, for some political union transcending the sovereign nation state." J. A. Krout

Sat R of Lit 31:14 My 15 '48 360w

School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 30w

BRISTOL, CLAUDE MYRON. Magic of believing; with an introd. by Palmer Hoyt. 245p $2.95 Prentice-Hall

131.32 Thought transference 48-1813

A handbook on the theme that "belief works wonders." The author is an Oregon newspaper man.

"To me it was a disappointment to find that almost all of this concentrated belief was directed toward increasing one's income or acquiring wealth. If this is your end in life, this book may be the map you have been looking for to set you on the highway to prosperity. If, however, you think the Biblical text, 'If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth,' applies to goals other than those of material well being, you will find little solace in these pages." Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun p6X Je 6 '48 270w

Kirkus 16:164 Mr 15 '48 120w

"Bristol reports numerous incidents of people becoming successful because they wanted to enough. It is possible that this kind of thing will inspire the lethargic and despairing to action. It is unlikely, however, that many people will be able to accept the mystical inference Bristol draws from some of the success stories he tells." M. S.

— San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 18 '48 160w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich

Springf'd Republican p11B Je 6 '48 240w

BRITANNICA junior; the boys' and girls' encyclopaedia; prepared under the supervision of the eds. of the Encyclopaedia britannica [Walter Yust, ed-in-chief]. 1947 ed 15v il maps $96.50 Encyclopaedia britannica

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 47-5915

"Britannica Junior is planned for elementary and junior high school levels, grades four through nine, ages ten to fifteen inclusive, and totals fifteen separately paged volumes. There are no split letter volumes. Volume 1 is a ready reference index and volume 15 contains an atlas section in addition to the letters W-Z. The study guides, included in the last volume of the 1943 printing and which contained all the bibliographies afforded by the set, have been eliminated and the tabulated information on Famous Rivers, Modern Inventions, National Parks, Presidents of the U.S., and material such as the U.S. Constitution, Magna Carta, the Declaration of Independence, is now incorporated in the alphabetical text. . . A careful analysis of the 1947 edition shows many new articles added and extensive revision of articles formerly included." Subscription Bks Bul

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

Commonweal 49:285 D 24 '48 400w

BRITANNICA junior—Continued

"Without question, the format is excellent for the purpose. This 1947 printing of 15 volumes has a good look and 'feel.' Binding, paper, the greatest number of illustrations and, above all, the large print, with headings and subheadings in still larger print, are splendid. The articles themselves are interesting and well written with a simplicity and directness that are commendable in spite of an occasional overly enthusiastic, sprightly approach designed to put the young reader at his ease." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 73:1829 D 15 '48 1000w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit

N Y Times p11 D 21 '47 600w

"Here at last is an encyclopedia that the average child of 10 can read with enjoyment and profit. In this new edition the editors have accomplished their purpose to produce an extremely usable and inviting reference work for elementary school children. This achievement indicates thorough familiarity with current curricula, understanding of children's natural interests and abilities, and skill in presentation. Add to these an attractive format, and the result is an outstanding publication." H. H. Van Gelder

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 16 '47 1100w

"The 1947 printing contains carefully selected material, well illustrated, dealing with subjects in which children are interested and about which they need information written so that it is easily understood and enjoyed. Britannica Junior is recommended for home, public and school library purchase. Since revision is so complete owners of earlier printings will need the 1947 printing as a replacement."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 19:22 Ap '48 1600w

BRITTAIN, FRED. Arthur Quiller-Couch; a biographical study of Q. 174p il $3.50 Macmillan (for the Cambridge univ. press)

B or 92 Quiller-Couch, Sir Arthur Thomas 48-9318

A biographical study of a well-known English man of letters. The author stresses the personal aspect rather than the formal, but sketches in something of the various sides of his career: the novelist; the poet; the journalist; the critic; the scholar; the patriot, and always the Cornishman. Chronological list of Q's publications. Index.

"Mr. Brittain writes charmingly. He tells many agreeable stories. His book has the air of easy distinction we should expect from the biography of such a man as 'Q.'" Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 1 '47 600w

"Mr. Brittain knew him intimately in his later life at Jesus College, and the portrait he draws of him as poet and novelist, critic and professor, yachtsman and patriot, Cornishman and Mayor of Fowey is as admirable in insight as in composition." H. I'A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '47 260w

Nation 168:80 Ja 15 '49 90w

Reviewed by Delancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 D 5 '48 800w

"If Q took his work seriously, he took himself with grace and humor. These qualities handsomely emerge from Mr. Brittain's modest little book." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p4 N 21 '48 900w

+ New Yorker 24:147 N 13 '48 140w

"No man lent himself better to biography, and Mr. Brittain, who for the last twenty years or so of Q's life kept on the same staircase with him, and was almost daily acquainted literally with his downsitting and uprising, has peculiar qualifications for the task. He has in fact produced a volume of singular interest, in which Q's many-sided and picturesque personality is portrayed with convincing fidelity. . . A rather fuller discussion of Q's influence here would have been welcome. But to suggest that does not qualify the recognition due to Mr. Brittain for the skill and discretion with which he has portrayed a colleague, a friend and a striking and memorable figure in English letters and academic life." Wilson Harris

+ Spec 179:440 O 3 '47 800w

"Mr. Brittain has presented as speaking a likeness of 'Q' as the portraits of him by Sir William Nicholson and Henry Lamb, and as Commodore of the Royal Fowey Yacht Club, with which the book is embellished."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p8 Ja 3 '48 3200w

BRITTAIN, MARY ZWEMER. Arab lands; il. il. by Rafaello Busoni. 24p $1.25 Holiday

953 Arabia—Juvenile literature A48-6345

History of the Arabians from ancient times to the present, with emphasis on their political and economic life. The solution to their problems is shown to be dependent not only on themselves but on the actions of the United Nations as well. Map on lining papers.

Reviewed by M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Ja 10 '48 70w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:124 Mr '48 30w

"This book on a timely subject should be useful . . . for ages 11 and up." Sonja Wennerblad

Library J 73:49 Ja 1 '48 70w

Wis Lib Bul 44:24 Ja '48

BRITTAIN, VERA MARY (MRS GEORGE EDWARD GORDON CATLIN). On being an author; with an introduction and notes by George Savage [Eng title: On becoming a writer]. 218p $3.50 Macmillan

029.6 Authorship. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-7846

Advice for the beginning author, which contains quite a bit of autobiographical material about its English author. Dr. George Savage of the University of Washington has added footnotes containing information about publishing practices, markets and literary prizes in the United States. Bibliography. How to submit a manuscript. Index.

Booklist 45:4 S 1 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '48

"Though designed for a professional, literary audience (or aspirants to it) this is at all times interesting to anyone concerned in writing or publishing, in its integrity of purpose, its concessions to the practicalities of authorship, its advice, based on actual experience."

Kirkus 16:228 My 1 '48 140w

"Serious writers are likely to find her essay a candid guide to the economics of authorship, and a sober but bracing sermon." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 73:938 Je 15 '48 120w

"A lively and sensible guide for the literary beginner. She is refreshingly lacking in cynicism but, happily, not unduly encouraging to the dreamers of golden dreams."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 2 '47 120w

"Those looking for practical hints on how to write better will find it thin fare; those looking for portraits of literary personalities and notes on modern literature will be disappointed. . . 'On Being an Author' lacks the excitement, the zest, the infectious quality of a somewhat similar little book, published forty-five years ago, Arnold Bennett's gay but highly practical 'The Truth About an Author.' Miss Brittain's most interesting chapters are the autobiographical pair devoted to her apprentice days and the break-through to recognition and popularity." Gorham Munson

+ — N Y Times p17 Ag 8 '48 450w

Reviewed by W. R. White

San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 3 '48 280w

"Any honest book by a successful writer should inevitably be of some help to those who are determined to learn to put words on paper so chosen and arranged as to arouse the interest of other members of the human race, and Miss Brittain's, as might be expected, is an honest book. Hers is a sound intelligence and a sensitive spirit, and the solid accomplishment of her two best books, the autobiographical 'Testament of Youth' and the biographical 'Testament of Friendship,' lend authority to what she has to say on an inexhaustible subject." Herschel Brickell

+ Sat R of Lit 31:24 Ag 14 '48 500w

Reviewed by J. W. Bogan
Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 29 '48 470w

Wis Lib Bul 44:182 N '48

BRO, MRS MARGUERITTE (HARMON). More than we are. 144p $1.50 Harper

264.1 Prayer 48-3312

Inspirational essays on prayer, with chapters on how, where and when to pray. Partial contents: Beginning to pray; A place to pray; Meditation; Intercession; Prayer and forgiveness; Prayer alters character and conduct; Obstacles to prayer: pride and opacity; Prayer and knowledge of the self.

Booklist 45:4 S 1 '48

"Among books telling why and how to pray, this deserves a place of preeminence. Its excellence lies partly in its simplicity and directness, in the fact that its language is completely understandable and colloquial without being odiously intimate or flippant, and in the avoidance of conventionally pietistic phraseology."
+ Christian Century 65:784 Ag 4 '48 160w

Reviewed by R. W. Schloerb
Crozer Q 25:377 O '48 180w

"Among the best of the recent devotional books, both as to content and style."
+ Kirkus 16:506 O 1 '48 110w

BROADLEY, CHARLES V., and BROADLEY, MARGARET E. Know your real abilities; understanding and developing your aptitudes. (Whittlesey House publication) 209p $2.75 McGraw

151.223 Ability—Testing. Psychology, Applied. Profession, Choice of 48-5630

"Composed almost entirely of personal histories told in narrative style this book describes how the aptitude tests devised by Johnson O'Connor's Human Engineering Laboratory have been used in matching men and jobs—in eliminating the problem of 'square pegs in round holes.'" (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:479 Mr 15 '48 30w

Management R 37:384 Jl '48 60w

BROBECK, FLORENCE RICHARDS, and KJELLBERG, MONIKA. Scandinavian cookery for Americans. 341p $3 Little

641.5 Cookery, Scandinavian 48-5974

"Danish, Finnish, Norwegian, and Swedish recipes in alphabetical order under classified headings. One chapter on food habits and holiday customs in the four countries and one on specialities of famous people and places." (Booklist) Indexes.

Booklist 44:307 My 15 '48

"Will be of special interest to any American who wishes to be a connoisseur of tasty and unusual dishes." V. M. Toepfer
+ J Home Econ 40:594 D '48 250w

"Workable and worthwhile extra volume in the cookbook department."
+ Kirkus 16:160 Mr 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by H. L. Mason
N Y Times p39 N 28 '48 80w

"The recipes are intended for the use of average American cooks, and it is reassuring to note that they have not been adapted out of all resemblance to their succulent originals."
New Yorker 24:110 Ap 24 '48 100w

Wis Lib Bul 44:102 My '48

BROCK, EMMA LILLIAN. Little duchess, Anne of Brittany. 197p il $2.50 Knopf

B or 92 Anne of Brittany, consort of Louis XII, king of France—Juvenile literature 48-7494

The life of Anne, Duchess of Brittany, up to the time she was crowned Queen of France at the age of sixteen. For teen-age girls. Chronology. Bibliography.

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 24:350 S '48 40w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:465 N '48 100w

"Somehow, the characters and the situations and the settings never come to life. They are of a piece with the studied quality of the line drawings. A disappointing book."
— Kirkus 16:308 Jl 1 '48 130w

"Well written; lovely black and white illustrations. An excellent book for older girls. Recommended." C. W. Field
+ Library J 73:1100 Ag '48 70w

"However, spirited, resourceful, charming, Anne is often lost in a maze of political maneuverings and high personages. Only occasionally does the reader see her outside the formality of the court. Nevertheless historical detail has been carefully adhered to and there is a great deal of information about the period. Miss Brock's illustrations show the costumes of the time and are beautifully done." V. H. Mathews
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 15 '48 240w

"Most teen-age girls will like Anne and will enjoy the vivid accounts of her daily living. Some, however, will doubtless become too discouraged by the accounts of endless military campaigns to follow the story to the end, when Anne's marriage to the King of France brings happiness to herself and peace to her country. Delicate line drawings suggest the decorations of medieval manuscripts." Elizabeth Hodges
+ — N Y Times p17 Ag 22 '48 150w

"Miss Brock has made some valuable drawings for the story. In both the full-page illustrations and the chapter headings fifteenth century France is brought to life. Anne's emblem, so familiar to travelers in France, heads the prelude. It is a well-designed book with good type and wide margins." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 31:38 S 18 '48 210w

BROCK, STUART. Death is my lover. 250p $2.50 Mill 48-9070

Detective story.

Kirkus 16:457 S 1 '48 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30 N 14 '48 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p40 N 7 '48 200w

Sat R of Lit 31:36 O 30 '48 40w

BROCK, STUART. Just around the coroner. 247p $2.50 Mill 48-1783

Detective story.

Kirkus 16:96 F 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Je 6 '48 90w

BROCK, STUART—Continued

"Operative Cory and artistic girl friend move rapidly through exciting and gruesome scenes to ending that comes as no special surprise. Adequate toughie."

Sat R of Lit 31:32 My 15 '48 50w

BROCKELMANN, CARL. History of the Islamic peoples; with a review of events, 1939-1947, by Moshe Perlmann; tr. by Joel Carmichael and Moshe Perlmann. 582p $6 Putnam

953 Mohammedan empire—History. Mohammedanism 47-5836

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"This book is especially valuable for its grasp and range in all areas of central and western Islam. But it cannot be relied upon for complete accuracy of detail. . . Subject to the cautions suggested, Dr. Brockelmann's book is of first-class value and importance to scholars and to the public." A. H. Lybyer

+ — Am Hist R 53:521 Ap '48 850w

"The translators are to be generally commended on a first-class performance. The early chapters form the substance of the narrative and are quite illuminating. The marks of profound learning and painstaking, long-sustained scholarship are in full evidence. Closer scrutiny of the bibliographical material and documentation, however—despite the noteworthy additions which the translators have inserted—shows that dependence on continental European authorities is heavy. Perhaps the basic weakness of the work as a whole derives from its subtle disregard of the native point of view, whether Turkish, Persian, or Arabic." E. J. Jurji

+ — Ann Am Acad 256:224 Mr '48 400w

"Brockelmann's book is not only fascinating reading but also a very clear and concise reference book." Max Fischer

+ Commonweal 47:452 F 13 '48 320w

Foreign Affairs 26:394 Ja '48 100w

"This book is a political history in the rather ponderous tradition of German scholarship. . . A serious shortcoming is the offhand way in which sects and movements within Islam are dealt with, not from their philosophical and cultural background, but only for their political results. The reader is left with no sense of Islam as a vast cultural movement, but only with an impression of centuries of bickering between a number of men, most of whom were named Muhammad, and who incidentally professed the faith of the prophet." E. M. T.

San Francisco Chronicle p17 D 21 '47 300w

"The author is concerned, above all, with the narration of facts as they actually happened. While not forgetting to link causes and effects, he seldom indulges in generalization. He avoids passing judgment upon the process by which Islam, from its humble beginnings, developed into one of the greatest and most dynamic of world civilizations. . . The translators have not only respected the author's text but have done their best to improve upon it; and have generally succeeded in doing so. Dr. Perlmann is responsible for a carefully selected summary of the political events from 1939 to 1947 which brings the historical narration up to date and adds a flavor of freshness. The bibliography has been substantially extended. A few remaining factual errors of the author's were perhaps unavoidable." G. Levi Della Vida

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:32 F 21 '48 700w

BROEKMAN, DAVID HENDRINES. Shoestring symphony. 247p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-1318

"David Broekman safely and prosperously back on the podium again as a composer and conductor, nevertheless spent two uncomfortable mid-depression years as an unemployed artist who could find nothing better to do than 'to go through all the indignities connected with borrowing a livelihood.' His story, a mixture of fact and fiction, [is] of what happened to him during those two years." N Y Times

"As a commentary on American musical life it lacks any kind of humor, in its biting picture of the price it costs to be a musician, but the high, wide and handsome vicissitudes that attended the creation and production of his work are described in minor lunacy. . . Not a book for the arty music lover, but for those sincerely interested in young musicians and their problems."

+ Kirkus 16:18 Ja 1 '48 200w

"Through the first few chapters of this tale of a Hollywood musician who lost his job during the depression . . . one cannot help liking the author and sympathizing with his adventures on Poverty Row. . . This part of the book does not sound as if it were a novel. It reads like a diary, written with a bitter and penetrating humor. Then, suddenly, what seems to be reality . . . bends into a hilarious and amusing tale which, for all the reader can make out, must be purely or at least largely fiction. Here a certain monotony of style and a lack of descriptive power become apparent." H. W. Heinsheimer

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 5:374 Je '48 650w

"On the whole an amusing book, with the humor often cut in with a keen-edged blade, it is also a tactful work. For the characters who are recognizable, Mr. Broekman has nothing but good to say; for the characters who are not persons but types, he has nothing good to say. Sound practice for an artist meet up with a musician who can read" with two fortes—he can never tell when he'll Nancy Ladd

+ N Y Times p37 My 2 '48 500w

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Malabar Farm; with drawings by Kate Lord. 405p $3.75 Harper

630.1 Farm life. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Agr48-220

A sequel to Pleasant Valley (Book Review Digest 1945) recounting the events that have taken place at the farm since the earlier book was written. One third of the present work consists of entries from Mr Bromfield's journal, dating from August 31, 1944 to August 31, 1945.

"A record and a book to be proud of." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 181:110 Je '48 650w

Booklist 44:332 Je 1 '48

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun My 5 '48 500w

"He has not the humor of a John Gould, and his book is repetitious and poorly planned. But it tells an interesting and important story, brings a strong note of wise planning and hope into a world which can do with a bit of both." R. M. H.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 My 17 '48 600w

Reviewed by Emerson Hynes

Commonweal 49:121 N 12 '48 420w

"Not so consistently entertaining reading as the earlier book, though there are chapters with the same contagious feel of the countryside, [Mr Bromfield's] fresh enthusiasm for the progressive ideas he is putting into practice, the animals of the farm and house, the neighbors, the guests. Much of the text is intended for the practical agriculturist, and is pretty scientific for the layman."

Kirkus 16:97 F 15 '48 140w

"Highly recommended—for farmer and would-be farmer." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 73:647 Ap 15 '48 100w

"A skilled fashioner of books, Mr. Bromfield uses sections of his diary since 1944 to lighten the more serious matters of farms and their future." Richardson Wright

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 My 9 '48 1000w

"Mr. Bromfield has an interesting and important story to tell, a story of vital interest to every man, woman and child in these United States. He has written a book which will give much pleasure and do a lot of good. No doubt some of the deductions Mr. Bromfield makes on the basis of his limited experience at Malabar will find critics, but out of the controversy they stir up is bound to come something of value." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p19 My 23 '48 800w
Reviewed by E. B. White
New Yorker 24:104 My 8 '48 750w
Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 29 '48 800w
Wis Lib Bul 44:130 Je '48

BROMFIELD, LOUIS. Wild country. 274p $2.75 Harper
48-8800

Looking back, after more than forty years, upon the time when he was in his early teens, the narrator describes the lives of his family and friends on a Missouri farm. It is a story of human passions, not thoroly understood at the time by the boy, but clear in retrospect. The boy's grandfather, the judge, a very wise and courteous figure, handles the complicated situations with such intelligence that the events of those years left no bitter after affects.

"The details are expertly interwoven and skillfully narrated in a lovely prose that becomes lyrical when it touches upon the beauties of the country-side. . . The sensual, brutal story of The Wild Country is told chastely enough. The secularist will find it mildly elevating. The Catholic will find it a literary mirror in which the moral confusion and vapid philosophy of today's world are reflected."
+ — Cath World 168:335 Ja '49 200w
Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 24 '48 180w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '48
Kirkus 16:377 Ag 1 '48 180w

"Delightfully written, and many of the characters are splendid and upright people, but there is a concentration on sex—from the stud farm to the sensual politician—that seems over-emphatic. Not a major work." J. L. Ross
+ — Library J 73:1384 O 1 '48 60w

" 'The Wild Country' gives immediacy to the bewilderment, pleasures and pain of a sensitive youngster who is forced to break out from his own self-centered childhood and find his place among adults, many of whom are still childish. Its distinction lies in the skill with which Mr. Bromfield shows the feelings of the lad as he became aware of emotions that guided or drove very different kinds of people." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 17 '48 800w
Reviewed by W. M. Lowry
N Y Times p50 N 14 '48 410w

"Vinnie's story will, in some respects, recall Willa Cather's 'My Antonia,' but there is nothing imitative in Mr. Bromfield's manner of telling, you may be sure. No admirer of Bromfield should pass up 'The Wild Country.' It shows him at his most perceptive." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 5 '48 360w

"There is no telling whether Louis Bromfield will write a finer novel than this in the future, or whether he will become the Secretary of Agriculture in a new administration, an ambition he once announced; but at any rate, the reader will be grateful that he came back to live close to the land where he was born, and will hope for more novels that have the sensitivity and insight and honesty of 'The Wild Country.' " Harrison Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 O 23 '48 750w
Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p6B D 26 '48 480w
Wis Lib Bul 44:213 D '48

BROMHALL, WINIFRED. Mary Ann's first picture; il. by [the author]. [32p] $1.50 Knopf 48-5570

Picture-story book about Mary Ann's seventh birthday and her most appreciated gift—a box of paints. When an accident almost spoiled her picture Mary Ann used her ingenuity and the picture was saved.

Booklist 44:253 Mr 15 '48
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:189 My '48 50w
Kirkus 16:85 F 15 '48 120w

"Recommended." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 73:560 Ap 1 '48 70w

"Childhood itself and some of its deepest emotions are in this quiet story with its pictures of Mary Ann, what she saw and what she painted." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 9 '48 320w

"Since the author is also the illustrator, Winifred Bromhall's softly rounded drawings are exactly right for her well-told story." S. C. Gross
+ N Y Times p34 F 29 '48 170w
Wis Lib Bul 44:64 Mr '48

BRONSON, WILFRID SWANCOURT. Pinto's journey [pictures by the author]. 56p $2.50 Messner 48-6274

Adventure story for eight to ten year olds. It describes the experiences of Pinto, an Indian boy, who lived in a village near Santa Fe. When the turquoise mines were closed and Pinto's grandfather could no longer work, the boy made a dangerous trip into the mountains and came back with two sacks of stones for the old man.

Booklist 44:302 My 1 '48
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:192 My '48 80w

"Sound characterization and a good story."
+ Kirkus 16:110 Mr 1 '48 70w

"Delightful addition to titles on the Indian today. . . Recommended." Margaret Miller
+ Library J 73:560 Ap 1 '48 70w

"Good for a small boy to read, it is inspiring when read aloud to groups of young folks." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 My 9 '48 250w

"A story scaled just right in its excitement for 8 to 10 year olds. A good deal of interesting information about the Pueblos and their country is unobtrusively included in a text which is both colorful and easy to read. The book is abundantly illustrated by the author with pictures which are realistic, occasionally flamboyant, but full of action." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p19 Ag 29 '48 180w
New Yorker 24:133 D 11 '48 100w
Wis Lib Bul 44:105 My '48

BRONSON, WILFRID SWANCOURT. Starlings; il. by [the author]. [75p] $2 Harcourt 598.2 Starlings 48-6940

A book about starlings, their song, troubles, history, habits and relations with other birds. For grades 3-6.

Booklist 44:320 My 15 '48

"A book that is both entertaining and informative." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 26 '48 150w
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:275 Jl '48 80w

"This is an engaging book that manages to put across a considerable amount of information about birds, with humor and affection throughout."
+ Kirkus 16:214 My 1 '48 90w

BRONSON, W. S.—Continued
"There is but one small regret, that the margins around text and illustrations are not wider. Recommended for school and children's libraries." J. F. Kennedy
+ — Library J 73:824 My 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ap 25 '48 250w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer
N Y Times p14 Ag 8 '48 130w

New Yorker 24:140 D 11 '48 50w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 31:28 Jl 10 '48 50w

Springf'd Republican p10A Jl 18 '48 100w

Wis Lib Bul 44:134 Je '48

BRONWELL, ARTHUR B., and BEAM, ROBERT EDWIN. Theory and application of microwaves. 470p il $6 McGraw

537.5 Electric waves. Radio—Short wave 47-11917

"Presents underlying theory of microwaves communication systems, with description of modern mircowave equipment. Up-to-date text in the field which includes electronic theory of microwave tubes. Emphasis on fundamental theory but text is written from engineering point of view and includes problems with supplementary information. For electrical engineering departments, senior graduate courses and practicing electrical engineers." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1613 N 15 '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:80 O '47

"The engineering point of view has been stressed and, wherever possible, the analytical results have been expressed in a form convenient for engineering use. It is a little disappointing, however, not to find some of the theoretical advances of the last few years incorporated [here]. . . The book includes problems and is addressed to the senior and graduate student in electrical engineering or the professional engineer learning microwave techniques."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 4:107 Mr '48 280w

BROOKE, CHARLES FREDERICK TUCKER. Essays on Shakespeare and other Elizabethans. 220p $2.75 Yale univ. press

822.33 Shakespeare, William. English literature—History and criticism 48-6391

Collection of essays written by a Shakespearean scholar over a period of thirty-two years. All but two of the essays, those on Spenser and Marlowe, have been published previously. Partial contents: Shakespeare's queen; Shakespeare remembers his youth in Stratford; Hamlet's third soliloquy; The romantic Iago; Shakespeare's study in culture and anarchy; Sir Walter Raleigh as poet and philosopher; Latin drama in Renaissance England; Willobie's Avisa; Christopher Marlowe.

Booklist 45:10 S 1 '48

Christian Century 65:1338 D 8 '48 180w

"The book suffers somewhat from unevenness because the essays were originally aimed at different kinds of readers (and also because they vary in quality). But in all of them there is good sense, learning, and urbanity, and the glimpses of Queen Elizabeth are alone worth the price of admission." P. W. T.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 26 '48 600w

Reviewed by T. A. Kirby
Commonweal 48:481 Ag 27 '48 370w

"Brooke possessed so much felicity and wit in addition to his scholarship that these essays make an excellent introduction to Shakespeare for the student or the average reader. Highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:816 My 15 '48 70w

"Textual and bibliographical matters are treated with the relish of a seasoned editor. . . In what he has selected, rejected and modified, Professor Brooke is his own best reviewer, displaying always his integrity, modesty and good sense. As a critic, he is at his best when most forthright, least embarrassed, when he deals plainly with plain things, as in '"King Lear" on the Stage,' which says little about the stage but most of what there is to say about 'King Lear.'" Alfred Harbage
+ N Y Times p17 Je 27 '48 700w

"If one can single out for special praise one quality of Professor Brooke's work, it is surely his good sense. As editor, scholar, teacher, and critic, he stood consistently and steadfastly for the reasonable, the median, the predominantly sensible viewpoint, fortified by sound knowledge. . . All in all, reading Professor Brooke's book is a delight, but a mixed delight for it renews one's sense of loss at the passing of so fine a scholar." Milton Crane
+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 Je 19 '48 500w

"These essays reveal his admirable literary qualities and many of the facets of his wise and whimsical personality. Each one of the essays—those written at the beginning of his career as surely as those published shortly before his untimely death—bears the indelible stamp of an acute and original mind. Even the review of a work of severe scholarship or a paper read to learned colleagues at a convention of the Modern Language Association is an expertly conceived work of art. . . It is a rare experience to find a man of Tucker Brooke's vast and precise scholarship who wears his learning so lightly and who can express it in the entertaining form of the essays in this volume." O. J. Campbell
+ Yale R n s 37:752 summer '48 1350w

BROOKE, TUCKER. See Brooke, C. F. T.

BROOKS, JOE. Bass bug fishing. 69p il $1.50 Barnes, A.S.

799.1 Bass fishing. Flies, Artificial Agr47-384

Information on fishing for black bass with bass "bugs" resembling minnows, frogs, grasshoppers and other insects.

Booklist 44:153 D 15 '47

"A good, sensible book." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 73:42 Ja 1 '48 20w

Reviewed by L. E. Cooper
+ N Y Times p24 Ag 10 '47 140w

BROOKS, RICHARD. The boiling point. 312p $2.75 Harper 48-5199

A southwestern town is the scene of this novel of violence and political and racial tensions. It is the story of a battle between two political factions for the endorsement of Roy Nielsen, a returned war hero. The woman Roy loves makes his life more difficult, but in the end they are united, altho it means death for both of them.

"I am sure that Richard Brooks, whose last novel 'The Brick Foxhole' was made into the good movie called 'Crossfire,' is really on the right side of the fight; but I am not sure that this novel does the liberal cause much good. In an effort to be crudely frank about sex, the author clinically analyzes people as if they were animals; and the result is so steeped in cynicism that his characters never emerge as real people. For its writing, 'The Boiling Point' is a disappointment, except in occasional flashes of brilliance. . . As a plot for a movie, this novel, with considerable cleaning up and changing, could be visualized in forceful cinema." P. T. Hartung
— + Commonweal 48:660 Ap 23 '48 380w

"Brutal, lustful frequently, and in crude terms—disillusioning as to the role of the veteran making use of the violence he has learned at a hard school. The man has tremendous power in his writing—but the tender-skinned will find it tough reading."
Kirkus 15:656 D 1 '47 200w

"Brooks' first novel was The Brick Foxhole on which the movie Crossfire was based. His story here, credible in spite of its somewhat lurid atmosphere, suggests a James M. Cain hero and heroine cast in an action reminiscent (at its best) of Steinbeck's In Dubious Battle." H. W. Hart
+ — Library J 72:1777 D 15 '47 70w

"'The Boiling Point' may make a good movie, but it is not a good novel." Richard Match
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 F 8 '48 650w

"'The Boiling Point,' Mr. Brooks' latest adventure into social indignation, is mostly shudders. . . The boiling point is reached early in the book, and the characters sweat it out in a cloud of moral steam. The good ones are saved, after a fashion, although they are not, as in so many 'proletarian' novels, beatified. They typify an urgent problem without indulging in the moral fastidiousness which so often sterilizes the socially awakened. Even so, the book is preachy and melodramatic. Yet if 'The Boiling Point' is unsatisfactory as a novel, it is still quite a good scenario." David Dempsey
— + N Y Times p18 Ja 25 '48 500w

"Absurdly hardboiled at times, but generally successful."
— + New Yorker 23:66 Ja 31 '48 120w

"The tragedy of 'The Boiling Point' is that it so blatantly overstates what should have been a very good case. You will agree with Brooks time after time, (after all, he is on the side of the angels) but you will wish that he had dealt with humans instead of 'types.'" W. R. White
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 31 '48 550w

"The reader may sense what Mr. Brooks should have said, supplying the missing conjunctives he may be willing to accept this kind of writing for the sake of an exciting and conventional story. Richard Brooks's further adventures into literature will be halted at the threshold of Hollywood and the radio studios if he does not take some pains with the English language; and if he continues to try to interpret post-war America through similar hackneyed and worn-out symbols." Harrison Smith
Sat R of Lit 31:16 Mr 6 '48 800w

BROOKS, VAN WYCK. Chilmark miscellany. 315p $4 Dutton
818 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-9120

Selections from the author's writings, essays, biographical sketches, and sketches of places and scenes. The author's note indicates that most of the material has appeared in his printed work. "The sketch of Llewelyn Powys was written as a preface for his Earth memories, and a few of the Notes From a Journal are new."

Booklist 45:85 N 1 '48

Reviewed by Theodore Kalem
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 9 '48 1100w

"The introductory section—Notes From a Journal, and the last long inclusion, The Literary Life in America are delightful and refreshing and challenging reading and measure his stature as a critic. All of the material drawn from the books make very good rereading."
+ Kirkus 16:431 Ag 15 '48 130w

Reviewed by Byron Dobell
Nation 168:136 Ja 29 '49 700w

"The 'Miscellany' not only brings together a fine collation, but it also proves that those longer works contain many briefer passages which are delightful when read alone."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 N 7 '48 180w

New Yorker 24:181 D 4 '48 160w

"This 'Chilmark Miscellany' will show you enough of the author's mind, enough of his approach to things, so that if by any chance you do not already know his books you may be stimulated to enlarge the acquaintance. You'll be the gainer if you do. Meantime you will find this assortment of samples a very good thing in itself." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 7 '48 700w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 32:30 Ja 29 '49 80w

Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '48 330w

BROOKS, WALTER ROLLIN. Freddy goes camping; il. by Kurt Wiese. 258p $2.50 Knopf 48-8629

A mystery story for boys and girls, in which Freddy the pig goes camping to solve the mystery of a haunted hotel.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 D 14 '48 110w

"The usual good, clean fun, which young fans of the Freddy series will welcome."
+ Kirkus 16:528 O 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins
Library J 73:1825 D 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross
N Y Times p41 N 7 '48 180w

BROOKS, WILLIAM FERN. Radio news writing. 200p $2.75 McGraw 070.46 Radio news 48-6067

An introduction to the subject of writing news for the radio. The author is vice president in charge of news and international relations at the National Broadcasting Company. Index.

Booklist 44:362 Jl 1 '48
School & Society 67:253 Mr 27 '48 10w

BROSNAC, ETHEL. How to make money in commercial art; drawings by Andrew Brosnac. 222p $2.95 Dodd
741 Art, Commercial 48-6019

Written for art-school graduate who wants to go into commercial art work. Contents: Commercial art: an x-ray view; Job hunting; Free-lancing; Fashion; General illustration; Layout; Lettering; Retouching; Cartooning; Breaking into business without benefit of art school; Methods of reproduction; Terms used in advertising and commercial art. No index.

Booklist 44:278 Ap 15 '48

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 73:878 Je 1 '48 70w

BROWN, ALAN WILLARD. Metaphysical society; Victorian minds in crisis, 1869-1880. 372p $4.50 Columbia univ. press
110.6242 Metaphysical society 47-4322

"Relatively short-lived, 1869-1880, and with a comparatively small membership, the Metaphysical Society of London was one of Britain's most important leaders in grappling with the intellectual problems which were particularly pressing during the eighteen-seventies. Nine times each year the members met to read papers and to discuss 'the many problems raised anew by the growing antagonism between religion and the critical spirit of science.' . . [In this study] primary emphasis is placed upon the account of the Society itself, but with the purpose of contributing to modern intellectual history by presenting the interrelations of Victorian science, theology, philosophy, and literature." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Selected bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Brown provides a very attractive account of the members and their subjects of discussion. . . Some of the last chapters, in which the author analyzes the issues of the day and their relation to our own age, seem rather discursive. But anyone interested in the intellectual history of the later nineteenth century will find this volume stimulating and altogether delightful." F. H. U.

BROWN, ALAN W.—Continued
+ — Canadian Forum 28:118 Ag '48 350w

Reviewed by Arthur Child
Ethics 58:153 Ja '48 600w

"A brilliant and illuminating book." R. V. Holt + Hibbert J 47:97 O '48 1500w

Reviewed by H. M. Lynd
Nation 165:315 S 27 '47 1200w

Times [London] Lit Sup p512 S 11 '48 3300w

"The work is suggestive, sound, and contains a mine of valuable information."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:334 D '47 320w

BROWN, CALVIN SMITH. Music and literature; a comparison of the arts. 287p $4.50 Univ. of Ga.

780.1 Music and literature 48-8071

A comparative study of the two arts of music and literature. "The work is divided into four general sections. The first of these (Chapters I-IV) deals with preliminary considerations and discusses the elements which music and literature have in common. The second (Chapters V-VIII) considers their collaboration in vocal music. The third (Chapters IX-XVII), after a preliminary investigation of the structural principles of the two arts, discusses the influence of music on literature and the attempts of writers to model their work on musical compositions. And the fourth (Chapters XVIII-XXII) is concerned with the converse problem of the effect of literature on music, especially as it is seen in program music." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 45:61 O 15 '48

"A systematic study by an expert, written for the intelligent general reader as well as the specialist in either field. . . Highly recommended." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 73:1513 O 15 '48 130w

"The book is written in a flowing, readable style, with an occasional touch of humor and a constant feeling for accuracy of expression and soundness of judgment. Numerous musical and literary examples, the latter often fairly extensive, are effectively used to illustrate the text. An interesting device employed is the separation of bibliographical references from notes that contribute to the thought by placing the former at the back of the book immediately before the index, and the latter at the foot of the page. There is no formal bibliography." Glen Haydon
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 6:162 D '48 1150w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 28 '48 350w

"It is claimed for this book that it is the first in the English language to undertake a general study of the relationship between literature and music. It is a large subject, and Professor Brown's thoroughness in investigating first the raw material of each art makes it even larger. But even so, the relationship appears as very one-sided: music seems to owe a good deal more to literature than literature to music."
Times [London] Lit Sup p650 N 20 '48 700w

BROWN, EDWARD KILLORAN. Matthew Arnold; a study in conflict. 223p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Arnold, Matthew 48-6255

A critical study of the writings of Matthew Arnold and the man himself. "The thesis is clear. After stating poses and uncertainties in Arnold's thought, Brown proceeds to account for them. Arnold strove for 'disinterestedness.' But during his thirty-five years as Inspector of Schools, Arnold became involved in the life of action, and carried it over into his search for a practical criticism. In his later writings he works out a 're-enactment with variations.' " (N Y Times) The thirty pages of notes contain bibliographical references. Indexes.

Booklist 44:297 My 1 '48

Christian Century 65:784 Ag 4 '48 120w

Reviewed by Denham Sutcliffe
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 22 '48 650w

Current Hist 14:348 Je '48 50w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 11 '48 700w

"E. K. Brown's study is a model in form. . . He sees Arnold steadily and whole. The scholarship is here in admirably full notes at the back. And the writing is civilized and intelligent." D. A. Stauffer
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 11 '48 600w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley
Sat R of Lit 31:16 Je 5 '48 490w

School & Society 67:463 Je 19 '48 20w

BROWN, ESTHER LUCILE. Lawyers, law schools and the public service. 258p $3 Russell Sage

340.7 Lawyers. Law—Study and teaching 48-1216

"The author was concerned 'with the question of how the law school may minister more effectively to the education of those many thousands of law-trained persons who will subsequently find themselves legislators, judges and members—on the policy-making levels—of the executive branch of government, or who, as lawyers outside the government, will nevertheless exert large influence over it.' She visited law schools and Federal law offices, studied the entire problem, and emerged with a number of recommendations." School & Society

"A real contribution to the field of legal education in the United States." Wallace Brewster
+ Am Pol Sci R 42:1039 O '48 380w

"Law teachers will be particularly interested in Dr. Brown's detailed account of the experiments which have been and are being tried at law schools throughout the country for the purpose of communicating to law students an awareness of the realities of government administration and law enforcement. Through the energy and imagination of individual teachers at many schools, new methods and materials have been developed for the more realistic presentation of the issues and problems of public law. But the law schools will never fully meet their responsibilities to the increasing number of their students who are headed for public service until the hard work now being given to the problem by individual law teachers is brought together and coordinated. Dr. Brown's book will be a valuable source for cooperative law school endeavor in the strengthening of public law offerings." H. W. Jones
+ Columbia Law R 48:818 Jl '48 850w

"This study of American legal education may be viewed as a report or as a prescription. As a report it is eminently satisfactory. Dr. Brown has visited some twenty-three American law schools and has spent many hours conferring with their faculties and watching their classes in operation. She gives a realistic and discerning account of what she saw and heard. . . All in all, one could not wish a better summary of 'What's New in American Legal Education.' Had the book borne that title, there could be little but praise for it. The book has, however, a more serious and constructive purpose. Its author believes that American legal education stands in need of substantial overhauling before it can adequately meet the demands of the times. She obviously hopes to make a contribution toward effecting the reorientation it must undergo to satisfy the aims she sets for it. This more ambitious purpose imposes on Dr. Brown the obligation to analyze with some particularity the respects in which our system for training lawyers needs to be changed and improved. I do not believe that she has satisfactorily discharged that obligation." L. L. Fuller

+ — Harvard Law R 62:155 N '48 1700w

"Guidance practitioners will find Dr. Brown's book most helpful." W. W. Brickman
+ School & Society 67:170 F 28 '48 430w
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:169 Je '48 230w

BROWN, ESTHER LUCILE. Nursing for the future; a report prepared for the National nursing council. 198p $2 Russell Sage

610.73 Nurses and nursing 48-8562

"A report prepared for the National Nursing Council. The author hopes that nursing education will soon be established on a sounder and more substantial base, that the pioneers of this education will be able to look ahead, sure in the knowledge that theirs is a socially vital, and socially recognised profession." (School & Society) No index.

Booklist 45:59 O 15 '48
School & Society 68:463 D 25 '48 60w

BROWN, FREDRIC. Dead ringer. 224p $2.50 Dutton
48-1133

Detective story.

"Fredric Brown's first book stirred up an uncommon amount of interest and praise last year. Readers poised for a plunge into disappointment at his second might as well relax for 'The Dead Ringer' is an able successor." Emmett Dedmon
+ Chicago Sun Ap 2 '48 310w

"Adequate enough, if you care for this particular mise-en-scene."
Kirkus 16:8 Ja 1 '48 80w

"Perhaps you recall 'The Fabulous Clipjoint' some time back? If so, you won't have to be told that the new Brown opus is one of the season's choicer items." E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 11 '48 100w

"Bull's eye—if not for squeamish."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:32 Je 12 '48 50w

BROWN, FREDRIC. Murder can be fun. 219p $2.50 Dutton
48-10248

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p48 N 5 '48 40w

"So-so humor and a fair to middling job."
Kirkus 16:416 Ag 15 '48 70w

"Unless our memory is at fault, this is by far the best thing that Frederic Brown has done up to this time. It bids fair to be the most ingeniously plotted detective story of the year." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p40 N 7 '48 180w

"Fast and funny."
+ New Yorker 24:111 O 30 '48 100w
Sat R of Lit 31:36 O 30 '48 40w

BROWN, GORDON STANLEY, and CAMPBELL, DONALD PIERCE. Principles of servomechanisms; dynamics and synthesis of closed-loop control systems. 400p $5 Wiley

621.8 Servomechanisms 48-3265

"Treats servomechanisms as a problem in dynamics rather than a consideration of only the static characteristics of components. Procedures for understanding the complexities involved in servomechanisms and regulations, and a technique for a direct approach for system design, or synthesis, as a substitute for an experimental approach, or analysis." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1032 Jl '48 60w

"An important addition to the literature of servomechanisms, it is designed primarily for senior and graduate engineering students; but, since it is written from a fresh viewpoint and contains some material not published hitherto, it will be of interest to persons already engaged in research and engineering design."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:60 Jl '48

BROWN, HIRAM, and others. Aluminum and its applications. 338p il $5.75 Pitman

669.7 Aluminum. Aluminum alloys 48-1355

Chapters by authorities in the fields of aircraft castings, automotive manufacture, railroads, marine assemblies, electrical appliances, and the chemical industries, which are discussions of the practical applications of aluminum and its alloys. The book contains diagrams, sketches, definitions of technical terms, illustrations of processes and machines, and selected bibliographies. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:818 My 15 '48 70w

"This semi-technical survey is especially suitable for executives and others who need specific and accurate information but do not need it in great detail. Laymen will also find the book useful. Many of the chapters are written by specialists in specific industries but the treatment in these conforms to the general pattern of the book."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:2 Ja '48

BROWN, IVOR JOHN CARNEGIE. I give you my word; and, Say the word; with an introduction to the American ed. by J. Donald Adams [2v in 1] 146,130p $2.75 Dutton

422 English language—Words 48-2847

A further collection of essays on words by the author of A Word in Your Ear, and Just Another Word (Book Review Digest 1945). His purpose is to compile an anthology of "likeable and useable" terms chosen chiefly from older English and Scottish words. Index.

"Mr. Brown's books make us conscious of the beauty and the glory and the permanence which can live in mere puffs of air. Here is a book which does what Horace thought poetry should do. It both pleases and instructs." R. M. H.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 8 '48 550w

"Although most of this lexicon may be too special for ordinary uses, writers and teachers should find it fruitful; and admirers of the informal essay will take pleasure in Brown's amusing commentary." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 73:810 My 15 '48 130w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Jl 18 '48 950w

"The Scotsman Ivor Brown, who here presents to American readers his third and fourth books on words, is surely the most graceful of contemporary verbalists. The beauty of his quiet comment soothes minds too often assaulted today by prose restless with surface excitement. . . For the man who loves words, who feels the turnings in the word 'weird' and sees the flesh behind 'incarnadine,' Mr. Brown's books are a treasure-house of rare delights, a word-lover's palace of pleasure. For those who have not yet learned that words, like men, have biographies and fortunes, possess shape, sound, texture and color, these books will be portals of precious discovery." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 4 '48 750w
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Jl 18 '48 160w

"In spite of the mass of matter that he has packed into less than three hundred pages, he is always light-hearted and true to his great purpose of wanting 'the collection to be fun' and also 'fruitful.' He has his wish, and we have abundant fun and fruit. Moreover, he has a concise, luminous, and incisive style; he writes with enviable ease and, like the good essayist that he is, digresses admirably." G. J. L. Gomme
+ Sat R of Lit 31:33 Ag 28 '48 450w

BROWN, JOHN MASON. Seeing more things. (Whittlesey house publication) 347p $3.50 McGraw

814 48-8561

Collection of essays on the theater and theater personalities, motion pictures, and books, with some excursions into the personalities of members of his own family. The essays are reprints of his recent weekly contributions to the Saturday Review of Literature. Index.

Booklist 45:63 O 15 '48

Reviewed by Robert Pollak
Chicago Sun p9X O 31 '48 220w

"This volume, new essays on the theatre and films and ordinary incidents, capped by an unerring and challenging commencement address, is of the same high calibre as Mr. Brown's earlier writing. Few drama critics of repute have been the witty and wise writer that John Mason Brown is. . . I think the clue to his special accomplishment is that he sees through and around the motivation of the idea being presented, whatever its form." Elizabeth Johnson
+ Commonweal 49:20 O 15 '48 700w

"An urbane gentleman, sometimes quietly clowning, sometimes gently professing, but always capable of freshly arresting expression."
+ Kirkus 16:359 Jl 15 '48 120w

"Highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:1512 O 15 '48 30w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 O 10 '48 550w

"Mr. Brown, although he has become one of our most widely popular, weekly beloved, writers, happens to remain just what he first vowed in knightly vigil at Professor Baker's court that he would be: a strictly distinguished—and distinguishing—critic. His latest clip-book, 'Seeing More Things,' offers proof thereof in quite every cheerfully sophisticated sentence it contains. What Mr. Brown sees by now is considerably more than first-nightly plays. . . And he invariably comes back with a lively truth, perhaps a troublesome but a chucklesome truth, wriggling in his suitcase." G. W. Gabriel
+ N Y Times p28 S 26 '48 750w

"A fine, large package of bits from his journalistic work. In it you will find the same humanity, the same glint of wit, in fact the same John Mason Brown so many have enjoyed for years." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 22 '48 700w

"John Mason Brown is doing more than any other man of our time and in our world to keep the informal essay alive. Brother to Lamb and to Hazlitt, he has managed to reclaim, in a day that does more running than reading, a large measure of popularity for a genial and urbane style in the communication of liberal ideas." James Gray
+ Sat R of Lit 31:23 O 9 '48 1100w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 14 '48 240w

"Readers who find themselves struggling helplessly in the morass of Mr. Brown's inverted style and lengthy sentences—trying to get from page 93 to 94, for example—are urged to stick with it, because every now and then Mr. Brown displays the talent which made To All Hands one of the best books of recent years." Sally Deutsch
Theatre Arts 32:93 O '48 230w

Wis Lib Bul 44:212 D '48

BROWN, KARL. Incorrigible. 214p $2.75 Duell

47-11475

The hero is a seven-year-old boy, who becomes a juvenile delinquent due to neglect. His father comes out of the services a psychoneurotic; his mother is a weak-willed creature and helps her husband to spend his mustering-out pay on drink. Skipper is left to his own devices and lands in a state mental hospital, but finally adjusts himself to life in a military school.

"A bad novel, per se, and not the muted psychological approach of a James Farrell, but none the less case history of wide dimensions, too vigorous, too over-flowing, too biased for squeamish stomachs, too orthophonic for pleasure—but nonetheless a sincere, if sometimes confused, picture of the ramifications of social responsibility."
— + Kirkus 15:513 S 15 '47 170w

"An unpleasant but touching story which may encourage a reappraisal of certain aspects of society." E. P. Nichols
Library J 72:1469 O 15 '47 80w

"'Incorrigible' throws some light on delinquency, but Skipper's short sojourn in Bedlam amounts to a genuine exposé and a first-rate literary shock treatment." Richard Match
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 F 29 '48 550w

"Mr Brown's novel should make a fine, strongly realistic film, of the type Mervyn Le Roy used to direct for Warner Brothers. In novel form, though its narrative is exciting enough, 'Incorrigible' displays too many loopholes. In short, it is incredible—just what you'd expect in a movie." W. R. W.
San Francisco Chronicle p11 F 22 '48 220w

BROWN, LEO CYRIL. Union policies in the leather industry. 246p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

331.88175 Trade unions—U.S. Leather industry and trade 47-2895

"This comprehensive account of collective bargaining in the leather industry not only describes the policies which the unions have pursued but analyzes the effects of those policies in the light of the industry's underlying economic trends." Management R

"The chapters dealing with union structure and government (seven pages) and the machinery and process of collective bargaining (fifteen pages) are less satisfactory than those on wage policies and the economic character of the industry. . . This type of study would require a closer familiarity with a particular collective-bargaining situation than it may be possible for an outside research worker to acquire, but the attempt should be made. In any case, such research should certainly include the kind of economic analysis which distinguishes Father Brown's study as one of the few outstanding monographs on collective bargaining in a particular industry." C. A. Myers
J Pol Econ 56:87 F '48 950w

Management R 36:614 N '47 40w

"Emphasis on economic factors in industrial relations and policies of trade unions in the industry under survey is the particular contribution of this study. The author's approach contrasts sharply from that customary in the older studies of union industrial relations, which stressed the forms of union organization, the human struggles involved, and the personalities of labor leaders. . . Labor leaders in every industry should find this study useful, although they may not find it pleasant reading."
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:291 S '47 300w

BROWN, LOUISE FARGO, and CARSON, GEORGE BARR. Men and centuries of European civilization. 628p il $6.25; text ed $4.75 Knopf

940 Europe—History. Europe—Civilization 48-3955

"A compact survey enabling the reader to understand the evolution of European civilization from the fall of Rome to the present time." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is well written and will serve admirably on the reference shelf of any American's library. Maps, plates and drawings in text add to the appeal of the book."
+ Current Hist 15:225 O '48 100w

"Fine illustrations and good bibliography add to value of volume which is heartily recommended for college and public libraries; will be useful for purposes of adult education." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 73:1268 S 15 '48 160w

"To the reviewer the method seems to work very well for the early centuries, but to be less satisfactory for the much greater diversity and complexity of more recent times. Perhaps it would be wise to end an introductory course in the history of European civilization with the nineteenth century and to leave the more contemporary development to a later study." Hans Kohn

+ — N Y Times p22 N 28 '48 230w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly

Sat R of Lit 31:19 D 25 '48 800w

School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 20w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Little farmer; pictures by Esphyr Slobodkina. [38p] $1.50 Scott, W.R.

48-5906

Picture storybook for ages three to seven. It tells the story of the big farmer, who had everything big on his farm, and the little farmer who lived nearby, and had everything little on his farm—even rainbows.

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Ag 28 '48 250w

Kirkus 16:46 F 1 '48 130w

"Recommended for ages 5-7." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 73:656 Ap 15 '48 70w

"It is not a highly varied pattern, except for the paradox at the end, being a kind of antiphony of rhythmic repetitive prose describing the actions of the two protagonists which differ only in proportion, but it is eminently suited to 2- to 4-year-olds who are very conscious of size in a world they never made." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 11 '48 130w

"This is a simple, rhythmic text about a little farmer and a big farmer, but the drawings are unusual. They are in full, brilliant color with a wide perspective of hills and fields and sky. . . It is an attractive and an informing book." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 31:31 My 8 '48 60w

Wis Lib Bul 44:84 Ap '48

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Wait till the moon is full. [33p] il $1.75 Harper

48-9278

Children's story of a little raccoon who wants to see the night, but has to "wait till the moon is full."

Booklist 45:182 Ja 15 '49

"This is her best story so far, but it is the delectable drawings of Garth Williams that really make the book. The combination is irresistable." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 168:221 D '48 70w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 N 16 '48 270w

+ Kirkus 16:598 N 15 '48 70w

"Highly recommended." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 73:1825 D 15 '48 70w

"The mystery and wonder of nighttime is presented here in a way to sharpen the awareness of the very young child and to dispel any fears of it which the more timorous may have. . . This is very slight, but the words, the rhythm and the mood have a great deal of charm and humor, which is matched by Garth Williams' pictures of a cozy, well-furnished raccoon home and the moonlit world waiting outside." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p5 N 14 '48 110w

"Garth Williams has a gift for humanizing animals, and his raccoons deserve a small niche in the gallery of ingratiating nursery creatures. Don't miss the cozy mother raccoon at the sewing machine."

+ New Yorker 24:124 D 11 '48 80w

Sat R of Lit 31:37 D 11 '48 50w

BROWN, MARGARET WISE. Wonderful story book; pictures by J. P. Miller. 92p $1.50 Simon & Schuster

48-6753

"Lively and spirited collection of poems and stories about animals, people, and things. A few of the stories have been published before in the author's The Fish with the Deep Sea Smile and Lucy Sprague Mitchell's Another Here and Now Story Book." Library J

Kirkus 16:195 Ap 15 '48 110w

"Clear color and childlike humor of the many illustrations by J. P. Miller add to the irresistible charm of this Big Golden Book." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 73:880 Je 1 '48 70w

New Repub 119:32 D 6 '48 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 23 '48 170w

"This generous collection reveals both the strength and the weakness of Miss Brown's writing for young children. A few of these forty-two stories and poems are so tenuous that they would blow right off the page were it not for the author's characteristic manipulation of words and rhymes. The sum total, however, is on the credit side." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p20 Je 27 '48 140w

Springf'd Republican p10A Jl 18 '48 60w

BROWN, PAUL. Pony farm [pictured by the author]. [92p] $2 Scribner

48-8273

Story and pictures describing life on a Shetland pony farm.

Booklist 45:72 O 15 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun O 9 '48 70w

"The story, written for seven and eight-year-olds, is not nearly up to those enchanting pictures." F. C. Darling

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 S 28 '48 150w

Commonweal 49:158 N 19 '48 30w

Kirkus 16:280 Je 15 '48 70w

"Recommended only for those libraries where there is an insatiable demand for horse stories." J.M. Smith

Library J 73:1388 O 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by Helen Masten

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 19 '48 280w

New Yorker 24:139 D 11 '48 90w

Sat R of Lit 31:42 N 13 '48 30w

BROWN, RALPH HALL. Historical geography of the United States; under the editorship of J. Russell Whitaker. 596p maps $7.50 Harcourt

973 U.S.—Historical geography 48-1500

"This is a survey of the character of American regions in earlier times. 'American' identifies mainly the United States, but the eastern provinces of Canada form integral parts of the preliminary chapters. Although present-day conditions are not wholly neglected, the chief emphasis is on past periods within time limits varying with the region considered. . . Each chapter is provided with a brief bibliographical list, placed at the end of the complete text." (Pref) The author is Professor of geography, University of Minnesota. Indexes.

"A freshly conceived geography of the peopling of a continent. . . The careful reader will feel the need of an atlas that shows basic features of terrain, climate, vegetation, and other aspects of the natural environment, because few of the maps provided by the author give more than the locations of places. Unfortunately, some of them cannot even be readily deciphered without a reading glass. . . The death of the author just as this volume appeared means a loss to the two disciplines, geography and history, which he has here synthesized so thoughtfully." Derwent Whittlesey

+ — Am Hist R 54:146 O '48 550w

BROWN, RALPH H.—Continued
Reviewed by R. V. Harlow
Ann Am Acad 258:150 Jl '48 450w
Booklist 44:334 Je 1 '48
Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 73:814 My 15 '48 130w

"Though his volume is primarily a textbook, Professor Brown's interest in and enthusiasm for his subject hold the attention of the lay reader as well as of the scholar. The book contains thirty-two pages of valuable bibliography and brief notes on the sources. Its value is further enhanced by 147 illustrations." Claire McGlinchee
+ N Y Times p21 Ag 22 '48 470w
Reviewed by R. E. Riegel
Social Educ 12:380 D '48 500w

BROWN, RICHARD LE ROY. Teaching progressions for the swimming instructor. 160p il $3 Barnes, A.S.
797.2 Swimming 48-8242

Outlines the qualifications of a successful swimming instructor, and analyzes various strokes in swimming, illustrated with line drawings.

Booklist 45:8 S 1 '48

"Extremely practical, cleverly, amusingly illustrated, from elementary to advanced strokes. For instructor, but useful for others. Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 73:1514 O 15 '48 20w

BROWN, ROLLO WALTER. Harvard Yard in the golden age. 208p $2.50 Current bks.
920 Harvard university—Biography 48-9265

Studies of twelve of Harvard's great figures "not in any idealized isolation, but as they moved in the full course of life that included their distinguished contemporaries and distinguished successors." The twelve are Charles William Eliot, Santayana, William James, Royce, George Herbert Palmer, Münsterberg, George Lyman Kittredge, Shaler, Charles Eliot Norton, George Pierce Baker, Charles Townsend Copeland, and Dean Briggs. No Index.

Booklist 45:171 Ja 15 '49

"A quiet appreciator of a brilliant period, Mr. Brown writes with personal warmth of an age that he knew intimately. Much of his material is not new, to be sure, and the style in which he communicates it seems unnecessarily slow-paced; but doubtless there will be readers who will find here much of the savour and bouquet of old Harvard." D. E. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 27 '48 180w
Kirkus 16:544 O 1 '48 160w

"Himself a Yankee puritan by nature, though by birth a member of the Ohio rather than the Cambridge subspecies, Mr. Brown is naturally less happy in dealing with the skeptical and disillusioned Santayana than with the saintly Palmer or the unworldly Briggs. . . Being a kindly interpreter, he takes an affectionately indulgent view of Copeland's vanity and gives us no inkling that Briggs may have been a somewhat dreamy administrator. Yet the qualities that Mr. Brown celebrates in these men are after all the important ones, and he does it with understanding and often with memorable justness of language." F. L. Allen
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 N 28 '48 850w

"This book belongs to a category which charms a reader but baffles a reviewer. Its deftly compact character-personality studies defy paraphrase; and a reviewer is forced behind a verbal goal line from which he can kick out only with such blurb words as 'nostalgic, mellow, rewarding.' " S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p18 D 12 '48 800w

"Each reader of this little book, and there should be many, will of course, be attracted to the sketches of the men whom he knew best. Those of the vintage of 1914 will have a particular interest in the chapters on 'Copey' and Professor Kittredge and Dean Briggs. . . Mr. Brown has wisely added a final chapter giving recognition to some of the other Great Ones in this remarkable faculty whose full portrait he has not drawn. . . It was indeed a golden age in the Harvard Yard which Rollo Walter Brown has reconstructed with fidelity and charm." Edward Streeter
+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 Ja 15 '49 900w

BROWN, STUART GERRY, ed. We hold these truths; documents of American democracy. 2d ed 429p $2.75; text ed $2 Harper
342.738 U.S.—Politics and government 48-7243

"A convenient compilation of speeches, documents, and legal opinions representing American ideals of democracy, which was first published in 1941 and is now enlarged." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1941. Index.

Booklist 45:33 S 15 '48

"Two 'documents' appearing in 1941 have been omitted from the present compilation—one from Walt Whitman and the other from Thomas Wolfe. Ten recent statements pertaining to democracy, as well as two older ones, have been added. The newer volume is better than the excellent older one." R. H. Markham
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 29 '48 650w

BROWN, VINSON. Amateur naturalist's handbook; with drawings by Don Greame Kelley. 475p $3.50 Little 574 Nature study 48-8468

This handbook contains information and advice on what to observe and collect in nature, on equipment, techniques and methods of the naturalist. The book is in four principal sections addressed respectively to the beginning naturalist, the student naturalist, the advanced naturalist, and the explorer-naturalist. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:60 O 15 '48

"We could do without the purple passages, but in the main the book is sound scientifically, and provocative and stimulating. The one section that seems a bit above the reach of the amateur naturalist is that dealing with biology, which would seem to demand some basic knowledge of the subject."
+ — Kirkus 16:329 Jl 1 '48 160w

"Highly recommended for the amateur hobby collection, for school and college libraries." D. F. Lucas
+ Library J 73:1186 S 1 '48 100w

"This is a very fine biological handbook, intended primarily for the use of young people, but equally helpful to any adult whose enthusiasm for knowing the world in which he lives has not been blunted by the years. Mr. Brown's dynamic approach deserves blanket praise." E. B. Garside
+ N Y Times p37 O 3 '48 320w
San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 28 '48 180w
Wis Lib Bul 44:211 D '48

BROWN, WARREN. Win, lose or draw. 274p $3 Putnam
796 Sports. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-7122

Reminiscences of a veteran Chicago sportswriter. He includes anecdotes of many prominent athletes, journalists, and promoters, among them Judge Landis, Dempsey, Tunney, and Runyon. No index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '48
Kirkus 15:569 O 1 '47 120w

"General tone is gentle debunking of ballyhoo concomitant of sporting events. Healthy sophistication for older young people." R. W. Henderson
Library J 72:1786 D 15 '47 70w

"By being so witty, entertaining and informative, Warren Brown probably has done the sports-writing industry irreparable harm in writing his memoirs. Why couldn't this fellow confine himself to after-dinner speeches and the space alloted him each day in a Chicago newspaper? There will be no salary increases in the near future for sports writers whose publishers read Brown's exposé of our charming circle and find it a strong argument for less money, and longer hours." Harold Kaese

N Y Times p18 F 8 '48 400w

BROWN, MRS ZENITH (JONES) (LESLIE FORD, DAVID FROME, pseuds). The devil's stronghold. 209p $2.50 Scribner

48-7682

Detective story.

Booklist 45:52 O 1 '48

"The narrative is lively and teasing in spite of its familiarity, but its conclusion is a rather flattening revelation." James Sandoe

+ — Chicago Sun Jl 23 '48 190w

"Not up to her customary slick competency, reads better as a novel than a murder-mystery."

Kirkus 16:157 Mr 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 8 '48 200w

"Here is a fresh, amiable mystery set in Hollywood. In spite of two murders and a number of sinister circumstances, it manages to maintain a cheerful, amusing atmosphere." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 25 '48 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 1 '48 170w

"Smooth and satisfying."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 S 4 '48 50w

BROWNE, HOWARD (JOHN EVANS, pseud). Halo for Satan. 214p $2.50 Bobbs

48-7699

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Ag 20 '48 110w

"John Evans launches his 'Halo for Satan' with a fantastic and highly implausible idea and then carries it on in rapid and realistic style. . . The yarn is well put together, has a racy style and fast pace, and winds up with a double-barreled surprise ending." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p13 Ag 1 '48 180w

"Lurid and lively."

Sat R of Lit 31:56 O 9 '48 40w

BROWNLEE, KENNETH ALEXANDER. Industrial experimentation. 2d ed 151p $3.75 Chemical pub. co.

311.2 Mathematical statistics 47-6313

"An introduction to the use of statistical methods in the planning and interpretation of pilot-plant and plant-scale experiments. Emphasis is placed upon the application of tests of significance in making deductions from experimental data. Some previous knowledge of statistics is desirable for an understanding of the text. The present edition is a reprint of the second British edition, published in 1946 by The British Directorate of Ordnance Factories (Explosives) as an aid to research workers on chemical manufacturing processes in Royal Ordnance factories." N Y New Tech Bks

"In general, Mr. Brownlee has given an uncritical presentation of available methods. He emphasizes the advantages of these methods, but seldom refers to the pitfalls awaiting the unwary investigator. It is possible that Brownlee's book might make a useful companion in the study of Fisher's texts, since it would supply illustrative examples which would facilitate mastering the subject. This, however, seems to be the extent of the utility of Mr. Brownlee's monograph." H. M. Smallwood

Chem Eng 55:298 Ap '48 750w

"Those who must apply critical tests of statistical significance in practice, often without a full knowledge of their theoretical background, will find this volume particularly useful."

+ Management R 37:381 Jl '48 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:26 Ja '48

BRUCE, JOHN ROBERTS. Gaudy century; the story of San Francisco's hundred years of robust journalism; with an introd. by Joseph Henry Jackson. 302p $3.75 Random house

071.94 San Francisco—History. Newspapers 48-9414

"The city editor of the San Francisco Chronicle glances back over the history—1847 to the present—of San Francisco journalism. . . Mr. Bruce offers us portraits of some of San Francisco's most talented journalists, among them Henry George, Bret Harte, Ambrose Bierce, and Fremont Older, having their say about the great issues of their times and defending themselves, with their coats off when necessary, against those of their readers who begged to differ." New Yorker

Reviewed by Robert Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p21 D 4 '48 480w

Kirkus 16:548 O 1 '48 150w

"Remarkably amusing reading. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 73:1591 N 1 '48 140w

"From first to last Mr. Bruce's book is a swift and wholly absorbing story that will hold any reader, newspaper man or not, to the end." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 D 26 '48 700w

Reviewed by Gladwin Hill

+ N Y Times p6 D 19 '48 600w

New Yorker 24:144 N 27 '48 120w

"A fascinating reflection of the bustle and vitality of San Francisco from gold-rush times down to date; and it is also a constantly lively, fast-paced account of how a big city's newspapers came into being, how some of them throve and others died, how they all mirrored the various events, of the century Mr. Bruce so aptly calls 'gaudy' " J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 21 '48 1500w

BRUCKBERGER, RAYMOND MARIE. Seven miracles of Gubbio and the eighth, a parable; tr. from the French by Gerold Lauck; il. by Peter Lauck. (Whittlesey house publication) 60p $1.50 McGraw

48-9327

"A quiet little religious parable, set down by a Dominican who was the Chaplain General of the French Resistance. . . It concerns a wolf to whom Saint Francis of Assisi has granted the power of performing miracles. At first sensible to the dangers of his strange ability, the animal is later betrayed into employing his gift to effect such useless feats as putting on fireworks displays and making people fly. He is finally, however, absolved quite gloriously." New Yorker

Booklist 45:158 Ja 1 '49

Kirkus 16:535 O 1 '48 180w

"Fr. Bruckberger's book is a parable aimed at the heart, but also at the intelligence of an adult world. . . His translator Gerold Lauck reproduces excellently a simple, clear and unaffected prose; Peter Lauck's line drawings decorate and charm." Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 D 12 '48 800w

"Fr. Bruckberger has written a modern allegory of a sort that is very old, indeed. Of such are not only the 'Little Flowers' but the fabliaux of the medieval French and the besti-

BRUCKBERGER, R. M.—Continued
aries of the Anglo-Saxon Christians. However much the passage of time may change the outward form of the problems with which man is confronted, the essentials do not change. In Fr. Bruckberger's well-constructed little tale, these essentials are knowingly revealed. There will be longer books published this season, none that say more." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p24 N 14 '48 550w

"Written in an unadorned and lucid manner suitable to its content. . . Happily free of embroidery and dogma, and a fitting gesture to this season."

+ New Yorker 24:108 D 18 '48 120w

"An excellent performance in all departments. Everyone connected with its publication has just reason for being proud." W. R. White

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 D 19 '48 500w

"It is told with the grave simplicity and faith that mark the original story. The English wording is sensitive to this atmosphere and has in it all the gentle humor of the 'Fioretti.' Beautifully designed and printed, with delicate line drawings that follow in atmosphere the Italian editions of the 'Fioretti' this is a thought-provoking and satisfying little book." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 D 18 '48 190w

BRUEGHEL, PEETER, the elder. Fantasy of Pieter Brueghel [with 45 full page engravings; introd. and notes by] Adrian J. Barnouw. 100p $5 Lear

769 Engravings 47-12354

"Pieter Brueghel ranks second only to Hieronymus Bosch in his mastery of grotesque fantasy, but much of the complicated detail in his prints has often been incomprehensible to moderns for want of knowledge of the contemporary references on which it is based. This knowledge Mr. Barnouw, an authority on early Netherlands culture, supplies, and it adds a good deal to one's understanding of the forty-five full-page reproductions of Brueghel's work in the book." New Yorker

"Distinguished Columbia professor makes 16th century painter comprehensible. Engravings, rarely available, adequately reproduced through courtesy of Metropolitan Museum of Arts." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 73:40 Ja 1 '48 110w

New Yorker 23:146 D 13 '47 90w

"Although his work is over four hundred years old it has lost none of its appeal to the imagination. And the human parade of folly and virtue has never been so completely depicted as in the 45 full-page engravings which make up 'The Fantasy of Pieter Breughel.' . . The engravings are from the collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and have been given splendid reproduction. This is one of the most weird and wonderful books of the year." Hubert Buel

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 25 '48 220w

BRUFORD, WALTER HORACE. Chekhov and his Russia; a sociological study. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 233p $4.25 Oxford

891.73 Chekhov, Anton Pavlovich. Russia—Social conditions [49-742]

"Study of old Russia through the mirror of Chekhov's art. . . With regard to education alone, Professor Bruford finds enough matter in Chekhov to draw a vivid picture of primary education under the Tsars, of ecclesiastical education, of secondary and higher education, of the education of the gentry and the peasantry and the middle classes, and of women, of the different types of students and professors, of the economic situation of teachers, especially in the villages. . . Use of scissors and paste enables Professor Bruford to recreate in marvelous detail the vast Chekhovian panorama of Russian existence at the end of the last and the beginning of the present century. One chapter gives us Chekhov's portrayal of the Russian land and the people; another, his portrayal of the peasant; still another, of the landowner. There is an excellent chapter on the Intelligentsia. Another, on the Church. Another, on the bureaucracy and the police. Still another, on industry and commerce and town life." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"It is remarkable, and this is very well brought out in this study, that, with all his uncanny knowledge of his fatherland, Chekhov nowhere in his work shows any awareness of the approaching revolution or draws one single character that might be capable of leading such a revolution." Joshua Kunitz

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ag 15 '48 650w

"The difference which Professor Bruford sees between Chekhov's Russia and the Russia of our time is the appearance of the successful revolutionary, capable of fighting inertia. Chekhov said that logic and hard work were the cures for Russia's ills, and no one will deny that the second remedy is at last being applied. Perhaps the value of this book is that it gives the reader a sense of the continuity of Russian life and history. Were he to travel to Russia today he would probably see people whom he had already met in the stories of Chekhov." Philip Trower

Spec 180:744 Je 18 '48 650w

"Professor Bruford's delight in Chekhov's work is marked by the nicest sensibility and imaginative feeling, and provides a sound defence of the type of study he has attempted. . . Some of his remarks in the concluding chapter on 'Chekhov's Values' suggest all too plainly their origin in popular sentiment during the recent war, but for the rest he has certainly contrived to abstract from Chekhov's art an illuminating sketch of the general structure of Tsarist society."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p230 Ap 24 '48 900w

Reviewed by E. J. Simmons

Yale R n s 38:176 autumn '48 950w

BRUMME, CARL LUDWIG, ed. Contemporary American sculpture; foreword by William Zorach. 156p 130 pl $5 Crown

735 Sculpture, American 48-9357

The volume is composed of photographs of 130 pieces of contemporary American sculpture, arranged alphabetically by artist. Includes brief introductory chapter, and bibliographies of biographies, catalogs, early American sculpture, etc.

Booklist 45:132 D 15 '48

"Variety in subjects and methods; something for most tastes; adequate for popular use." A. S. Plaut

Library J 74:61 Ja 1 '49 130w

"Mr. Brummé, a sculptor himself, threads his way through this maze with discretion and acumen, and the hundred and thirty plates he has included in his book give a broad and unbiassed survey of the present-day field."

+ New Yorker 24:167 N 20 '48 80w

BRUNHOFF, LAURENT DE. Babar's cousin, that rascal Arthur; tr. from the French by Merle Haas [il. by the author]. 48p $3.50 Random house

48-8143

New adventures of Babar, written and illustrated by the son of his originator. The story tells of Cousin Arthur's stolen ride on a plane and his rescue by Babar.

"The new Babar book . . . is full of entertainment as if the famous elephant's adventures had never been interrupted. The fascinating details of the large pictures are just as absorbing as those in the earlier books. . . Seldom do we find the continuation of a series by another hand so completely successful." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:452 N '48 90w

Kirkus 16:434 S 1 '48 150w

"Incidents are more than usually exaggerated and the geography all wrong. Still, it will be enjoyed by Babar fans if any library can afford the price and has a shelf large enough to hold it." J. F. Carter
Library J 73:1672 N 15 '48 100w

"Comparison with the other Babar books is inevitable, and Arthur does not measure up. He lacks the personality of the original Babar heroes, and the invention runs thin. There are no pictures in the new volume that can compare in spirit or detail with that of Babar in pinstripes leaning on the mantel of the old lady's fireplace or taking a ride in the car she bought him (The Story of Babar). Arthur is unmistakably in the Babar family, but he is only a cousin."
New Repub 119:33 D 6 '48 170w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 14 '48 420w

"Written and illustrated by the son of the author of the original Babar stories, 'Babar's Cousin' has caught their spirit to a marked degree. The paper and color reproduction are unusually good." Alice Fedder
+ N Y Times p3 N 14 '48 110w

New Yorker 24:147 D 11 '48 80w

"The appearance of this newest of the Babar the Elephant books will be warmly welcomed by his followers of all ages." M. M. Moses
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 14 '48 190w

Sat R of Lit 31:24 N 13 '48 40w

BRUNO, FRANK JOHN. Trends in social work as reflected in the proceedings of the National conference of social work, 1874-1946. 387p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

360.973 Social work. National conference of social work 48-2295

"A history of organized social work in the U.S., drawing its information from the proceedings of the several conferences held by the National conference of social work and its predecessors." (Booklist) Index.

"The author has done a difficult task acceptably. Proceedings of an organization are, at best, only a partial record of the thought and influences of the period. Mr. Bruno has painstakingly supplemented the record with biographical and other background material that adds considerably to the interest and readability of the book. While one can find omissions . . . and while some might disagree upon interpretation occasionally, the book has a surprising clarity and consistency. On the whole, the Conference was fortunate in its selection of a historian." Arlien Johnson
+ — Ann Am Acad 259:195 S '48 360w

Booklist 44:331 Je 1 '48

School & Society 67:302 Ap 17 '48 10w

"Mr. Bruno has rendered a distinct service in summarizing the proceedings of the Conference in a concise and readable volume." R. M. Brown
+ Social Forces 27:103 O '48 700w

Reviewed by M. K. Simkhovitch
Survey 84:170 My '48 550w

BRUUN, GEOFFREY. The world in the twentieth century [maps by Theodore R. Miller]. 799p il $5.50 Heath

909.82 Twentieth century. History, Modern 48-6294

Textbook on twentieth-century international history. Analyses politics and economic problems for both the great powers and the small states. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:365 Jl 1 '48

School & Society 67:253 Mr 27 '48 20w

"An outstanding feature of the work is a style so readable that even advanced high school students may find the book usable. Maps, graphs, and photographs further attract the reader. . . The social studies teacher, as a student of contemporary history, will do well to become acquainted with Bruun's book." J. C. McLendon
+ Social Educ 12:377 D '48 320w

"Although the parts of the book may seem rather widely divergent, the author has remained true to his initial purpose, a rational synthesis and integration of dominant world forces today." G. S. Greene
+ — Social Studies 39:328 N '48 750w

BRYANT, BERNICE MORGAN. Miss Behavior: popularity, poise and personality for the teen-age girl; il. by Jean Baker. 295p $2.50 Bobbs

395 Etiquet. Girls 48-8527

"Emphasis upon italicized rules for popularity, poise and personality and upon specific examples of girls who exemplify various traits, good and bad. Part I explains teen-age psychology; Part II gives advice about grooming and dress; Part III is a brief handbook of social and business manners." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Index.

Booklist 45:122 D 1 '48

"Written with many puns and cute phrases. It got a bit too cute for me, but others may not feel that way." R. M. McEvoy
Library J 73:1522 O 15 '48 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 14 '48 70w

BRYANT, MRS BERNICE MORGAN. Trudy Terrill, high-school freshman; il. by Frederick T. Chapman. 280p $2 Bobbs 48-6572

Story of a girl's first year in high school—a year of joys and sorrows, new and old friendships, new problems and ways of solving them.

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Je 12 '48 170w

"The story emphasizes good citizenship, fair play, and tolerance for others. Not outstanding, but will be popular with girls 12-14 who may face the same difficulties in growing up." A. M. Wetherell
Library J 73:881 Je 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 9 '48 250w

"Trudy's tremendous enthusiasm and idealism are true to life, but her absorbing concern for the welfare of minority groups among her classmates does not seem believable in a freshman-year girl, although it provides a fine example for readers. Girls 11-13 will enjoy reading about Trudy." V. H. Mathews
N Y Times p17 Jl 25 '48 320w

BRYDON, GEORGE MACLAREN. Virginia's mother church and the political conditions under which it grew. 571p $7.50 Virginia historical society, Richmond

283.975 Protestant Episcopal church in Virginia. Virginia—Church history

"This is the first of a series of three volumes on the history of the Anglican Church and its successor the Episcopal Church in Virginia. The first volume, now issued, covers the period of 1607 to 1727; the second volume will carry the account from 1727 to the death of Bishop Madison in 1812; and the third volume will bring events from 1812 to the present time." Am Hist R

"The author has striven to present an impartial and balanced view, and has supported it with abundant notes and references. . . With this just and fair picture of the religious life of 1607 to 1727, the reader is left with a much more favorable impression of the clergy than he could get previously." E. G. Swem
+ Am Hist R 53:833 Jl '48 750w

"While the point of view is clearly Anglican, as is proper for the official historiographer of the diocese of Virginia, the abundance of well documented material which the author has assembled and organized makes his work valuable to any student of the social and religious history of the period treated." W. E. G.

BRYDON, G. M.—Continued
+ Christian Century 65:710 Jl 14 '48 280w

"This is definitely a book without which knowledge of church history in this country will be incomplete." F. J. Moore
+ Churchman 162:16 O 15 '48 180w

"Mr. Brydon's book assembles from original sources a wealth of historical material not accessible to the general reader who is curious about the significance of what went on in England's oldest colony on this continent. Thus, though its particular purpose is the true relation of the origin, progress and tribulations of the Anglican Establishment in the southern Chesapeake country, it is an important contribution to the broad picture of events in that country during the first 120 years after the first settlement at Jamestown. This effect is powerfully assisted by the copious notes which follow each chapter and a thick batch of appendices." H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p28 My 23 '48 700w

BRYSON, LYMAN, ed. Communication of ideas; a series of addresses. (Institute for religious and social studies. Religion and civilization ser) 296p $3.50 Harper

301.15 Communication and traffic 48-8279

Symposium composed of sixteen lectures by authorities on various aspects of the present crisis. Partial contents: Some cultural approaches to communication problems, by Margaret Mead; The structure and function of communication in society, by H. D. Lasswell; Mass communication, popular taste and organized social action, by P. F. Lazarsfeld and R. K. Merton; Communication and the arts, by Lennox Grey; Communication in practical affairs, by Leo Nejelski; Science and writing, by J. M. Clarke; Problems of freedom, by R. D. Leigh; A case history in cross-national communications, by Margaret Mead; Attention structure and social structure, by H. D. Lasswell. Index.

Booklist 45:59 O 15 '48

"An important book for serious readers. . . Should be useful with study groups in larger libraries."
+ Wis Lib Bul 44:161 O '48

BRYSON, LYMAN, ed. Learning and world peace. See Conference on science, philosophy and religion in their relation to the democratic way of life

BRYSON, LYMAN. Time for reason about radio; from a series of broadcasts on CBS; ed. for publication by William C. Ackerman. 127p $2 Stewart

384.5 Radio broadcasting 48-3889

"A compact discussion in book form of the general organization and philosophy of American radio. It covers the subjects that listeners and those interested in the operation of radio most frequently ask about, subjects that run the gamut from advertising to freedom and responsibilities of radio." (Publisher's note) No index.

Booklist 45:7 S 1 '48

Kirkus 16:185 Ap 1 '48 110w

"While Dr. Bryson's lectures try to be moderate and fair, they add up to a dull and uninformative presentation of a very exciting subject." J. H. Spingarn
Nation 167:106 Jl 24 '48 900w

BUAKEN, MANUEL. I have lived with the American people. 358p $4 Caxton printers

B or 92 Filipinos in the U.S. 48-6856

Partly autobiography, partly a treatise on American democracy, this is the story of a well-born, educated Filipino who came to the United States at the age of fourteen, worked hard and studied hard to gain an education in the American way, and is now a successful author and lecturer.

Am Soc R 13:649 O '48 170w

Booklist 44:306 My 15 '48

Christian Century 65:600 Je 16 '48 180w

"Sincere, shapeless, no doubt genuine, but of little more than routine interest."
Kirkus 16:38 Ja 15 '48 170w

"Recommended only for larger libraries which may desire to have a complete collection of books depicting American intolerance toward minority racial groups." Clarence Gorchels
Library J 73:331 F 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt
N Y Times p27 S 12 '48 600w

"A poorly edited and confusing book. At times it is personal narrative, at times it is history, at times it is sociology, at times it is straight reporting. And at times, for all his erudition, Mr. Buaken is uncertain of American ideas. It does, however, present us with a fresh view of the difficulties besetting a minority group, and for that it is worthwhile." W. R. W.
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 6 '48 220w

"Written during the war, Mr. Buaken's book has a slightly dated quality. But this does not destroy the interest of his narrative, for there has been too little told about the Filipinos in our midst. If he had written a straight personal narrative, weaving his historical and case history material into it instead of letting them run side by side, it is likely that this volume would have a wide popular appeal. Even so, it has the warmth, fervor, and gentle politeness one who knows them expects of the Filipino people." Bradford Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 31:12 My 29 '48 700w

Reviewed by F. W. Condit
Survey G 37:482 N '48 470w

Wis Lib Bul 44:146 S '48

BUBER, MARTIN. Between man and man; tr. by Ronald Gregor Smith. 210p $3.50 Macmillan

193.9 Man. Philosophy. Dialectic (theology) 48-11387

"Martin Buber, professor of social philosophy at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, has been influential in modern intellectual life for twenty-five years, since his I and Thou first appeared in Germany. In the present volume he brings together for English readers five separate short works, all of which are amplifications of the I and Thou theme. The heart of Buber's philosophy, which has come as an inspiration to many, is the conviction that both individualism and collectivism miss the deepest realities of human life, whereas what is basic is the mutual relation between man and man." (J Religion) Index.

"This is clearly an important book because Martin Buber is an important author. The pieces here collected are unequal in both interest and power, but we can be glad that more of this man's thought is thus made available to us." Elton Trueblood
+ J Religion 28:281 O '48 1050w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 My 2 '48 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p462 Ag 14 '48 3500w

BUBER, MARTIN. Hasidism [tr. by Greta Hort and others]. 208p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

296 Hasidism 48-9089

An exposition of the ideas and motives which underlie the Jewish religious movement of Hasidism. Index.

"Professor Buber, of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, is regarded as the most learned exponent of the great movement within Judaism known as Hasidism. . . It might be said to represent a democratic diffusion of the messianic concept—but this phrase expresses only my own groping for its meaning, and in any case states only one aspect of a deep and many-sided movement. Read Buber and get it from an authority." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 65:1403 D 22 '48 280w

N Y Times p52 N 14 '48 550w

BUCHAN, ALICE. Joan of Arc and the recovery of France. (Teach yourself history lib) 264p $2 Macmillan

B or 92 Jeanne d'Arc, Saint. France—History 49-408

A biographical study of Joan of Arc giving due attention to historical background, and describing the recovery of France after the death of Joan. Bibliography. Index.

"St. Joan figures in [this] narrative as a believable but not very lively heroine." Asher Brynes

Sat R of Lit 31:18 Jl 3 '48 40w

"Volumes in 'Teach Yourself History' series are not expected to be great historical works; they are expected to provide a straightforward introduction, designed for those who approach the subject with little previous knowledge. They must be accurate as to facts; balanced as to the wider judgments; written in simple, attractive English; not too picturesque; and yet not repellently dry. If this is a correct interpretation of the editor's intention, Miss Buchan has admirably fulfilled her task."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Ap 10 '48 850w

BUCHANAN, NORMAN SHARPE, and LUTZ, FRIEDRICH AUGUST. Rebuilding the world economy; America's role in foreign trade and investment; with the report and recommendations of the Committee on foreign economic relations. 434p $3.50 Twentieth century fund

382 Commerce. U.S.—Commercial policy. Investments, Foreign. Reconstruction (1939-) 47-11433

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"This book is one of the most generally useful studies in the international economic field which has appeared since the war. Although it is already somewhat out of date on current issues, and despite certain other shortcomings discussed below, it should be of great value to students and to the general reader." J. W. Angell

+ Am Econ R 38:435 Je '48 1000w

"There is little in the proposals with which one who is not an isolationist or Stalinist can quarrel. Events since the publication of the book, though they have moved far faster and more drastically than the authors foresaw, have served to underline the soundness of the basic analysis and constructive recommendations. . . But this reviewer feels that the authors and Committee should have anticipated the increasing gulf between the Western powers and the Soviet bloc, with the cleavage of the globe into Two Worlds, and the growing likelihood of an armed show-down. Then this volume could have been so modified as to serve even more directly the needs of statesmen and public during the coming critical days." Sidney Batner

+ — Am Pol Sci R 42:573 Je '48 1300w

Reviewed by J. V. Van Sickle
Am Soc R 13:354 Je '48 750w

"The authors of this volume, issued under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Fund, have attempted to paint a comprehensive picture of international economy as it emerged from the war, and to draw appropriate conclusions on policy. The volume was completed in June 1946, and though the reader a year and a half later cannot help noting that time has indeed traveled fast, the authors may well feel reassured, since their chief judgments still hold true and in many cases have been corroborated by events of the past year." Folke Hilgerdt

+ Ann Am Acad 256:212 Mr '48 550w

Reviewed by L. T. Morgan
Canadian Forum 27:285 Mr '48 420w

Reviewed by C. C. Concannon
Chem & Eng N 26:802 Mr 15 '48 350w

Foreign Affairs 26:569 Ap '48 60w

"The book is altogether a rich compendium of detailed information on the economies of the United States and the principal world nations." Louis Wasserman

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 7 '48 550w

School & Society 67:111 F 7 '48 10w

Reviewed by J. B. Condliffe
Survey G 37:269 My '48 100w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Big wave; il. with prints by Hiroshige and Hokusai. 61p $2 Day

48-244

"A story of Japan and the great wave that swept away the little fishing village under the mountain. The illustrations are photographic reproductions from Japanese artists of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 44:236 Mr 1 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Mr 20 '48 310w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '48

Commonweal 49:156 N 19 '48 90w

"Rather a grim story for the average child, but an understanding picture of the Japanese."
Kirkus 16:48 F 1 '48 120w

"Beautiful prose style and authentic Japanese prints that decorate book make this a valuable addition for grades four up. Recommended." Helen Kremer

+ Library J 73:483 Mr 15 '48 80w

"I am not entirely convinced that this book is a book for children, but it is beautiful, tragic and truthful, and as children in these last years have had to face catastrophe and utter bereavement, it may be that such things are not too much for them in print." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 16 '48 320w

"Not since Victorian days have we had a book for children—that is, 8-to-12-year-olds—which dealt so immediately with the fact of death as does this one. Unlike the Victorians, however, Miss Buck avoids sentimentality and morbidity, writes instead with dignity about life and death in a Japanese fishing village. . . No better illustrations could have been given the book than the reproductions of Japanese landscapes by Hiroshige and Hokusai." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 21 '48 230w

New Yorker 24:133 D 11 '48 100w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 31:37 Mr 13 '48 40w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 30w

BUCK, PEARL (SYDENSTRICKER) (MRS RICHARD JOHN WALSH). Peony. 312p $3 Day

48-1976

A novel of China of a hundred years ago. Ezra, a rich merchant, was the son of a Jewish father and a Chinese mother. His wife was loyal to the orthodox Jewish faith, and tried to hold her son David to it, also. Peony, their Chinese bond servant, loved David but knew she could never marry him. But in spite of his mother David married a Chinese girl, and Peony stayed on to help them all thru the difficult years which followed.

Booklist 44:313 My 15 '48

"While Peony is not as finished a product as was the Pavilion of Women it is a more convincing, and a far more probable tale."
Cath World 167:477 Ag '48 200w

BUCK, P. S.—Continued

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun My 18 '48 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '48

Reviewed by Ann Hunter
Commonweal 48:288 Jl 2 '48 130w

"Readable, grim in spots, vivid in characterization (though the Chinese fare best), and provocative in the author's own conclusion that absorption of groups into the civilization around them is mankind's hope." M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:290 Jl '48 160w

"The story suggests in its parallels something of Valley of Decision, in the devotion, the self-abnegation of Peony to the man, and the family, she loves. . . Not one of Mrs. Buck's major books, but good reading and a new field."
Kirkus 16:147 Mr 15 '48 270w

"The conflicts inherent in the Chinese and Jewish temperament are delicately and intricately traced with profound wisdom and compassionate understanding in this tale. . . This is an enchanting story, the theme of which is tolerance. Highly recommended." H. R. Forbes
+ Library J 73:651 Ap 15 '48 100w

"'Peony' has the vividness of scene and episode and character and the colorful detail that Pearl Buck's readers have come to expect of her novels of China. Like 'Pavilion of Women,' it deals with people whose lives are many-sided, rather than with the simpler patterns of peasant life in her earlier novels. Whether for that reason or not, the story gives the almost too wise and lovely Peony a stellar role that seems to me less effective than the organization of earlier books in less individualistic terms of life in a family." Mary Ross
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 My 9 '48 900w

Reviewed by Mary McGrory
N Y Times p12 Je 6 '48 500w

"Not a very stirring love story, but quite interesting for a number of secondary reasons, such as the implication that the hero, a Jew who has lost touch with his cultural origins, represents the strain of Judaism that has been absorbed into the mainstream of Chinese culture."
New Yorker 24:121 My 15 '48 160w

"Pearl Buck's approach often verges upon the sentimental as it has in her other books. She clings to her archaic prose touches and she makes frequent use of that little box of tricks that we associate exclusively with feminine fiction. Yet, on the whole, she reflects life more genuinely in this book than she has in her recent stories." Jane Voiles
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 10 '48 650w

"There is great simplicity in the telling of this tale. Perhaps it is expected, but it is nonetheless splendid. Miss Buck maintains her own high standard." C. M. Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 31:23 My 29 '48 600w

"'Peony' is a consistently interesting story, but in spite of its potentially important theme, it is a rather superficial one. The author has been content to tell a tale without lavishing much care on developing her characters or writing with distinction. In this respect the book is disappointing."
+ — Springf'd Republican p10B My 30 '48 350w

Time 51:113 My 17 '48 330w

BUCKMASTER, HENRIETTA, pseud. See Henkle, H.

BUELL, ROBERT KINGERY. California stepping-stones; a history for young Californians; il. by Margaret Marian Bailey. 238p $3 Stanford univ. press

979.4 California—History—Juvenile literature 48-11132

"The history of California, from the Indians and the Spanish Missions to the discovery of gold and oil and the coming of the railroads. It is told in incidents—'stepping stones'—with a child of the period as the central figure." Sat R of Lit

"Here is an outstanding book, written with imagination and verve, illustrated profusely and effectively, printed and bound with unusual care. It is the most satisfactory regional history for pre-adolescent youngsters that this reviewer has seen. Children in every section of the country should find it a thrilling book." R. A. Brown
+ N Y Times p11 D 26 '48 170w

Sat R of Lit 31:36 N 13 '48 40w

School & Society 68:271 O 16 '48 10w

BUKOFZER, MANFRED F. Music in the baroque era, from Monteverdi to Bach. 489p il $6 Norton

780.9 Music—History and criticism 47-12355

History of musical style during the one hundred and fifty years between Monteverdi and Bach (about 1600 and 1750). "A general introduction on 'Renaissance versus Baroque Music' prepares us for six chapters that deal with the early, the middle, and the late baroque in Italy, Germany, and the Northern countries, France, England, Spain, and even colonial America. A special chapter is devoted to Bach and another to Handel. The concluding chapters on 'Form in Baroque Music,' 'Musical Thought in the Baroque Era,' and the 'Sociology of Baroque Music' are not the least important nor the least informative of the book." (Music Lib Assn Notes) Checklist of Baroque books on music. Bibliography. Index.

"Excellent for comparison of Renaissance and baroque ideals and attainments for sociological background, and for bibliography. Assumes familiarity with the rudiments of music on the part of the reader." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 73:124 Ja 15 '48 110w

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 15 '48 90w

"Manfred Bukofzer has written learnedly in the past on musical subjects that extend all the way from the Middle Ages to modern times. In none of his earlier works, however, has he displayed such wide yet minute knowledge of a large and complicated field as in this book, and in none does his faculty for clear, concise, yet forceful exposition stand him in such good stead. . . The author's happy faculty for characterizing a composer and his works, as well as the composer's relation to his times and his contemporaries, in concise yet highly descriptive fashion is evident on page after page. It would be difficult to find in brief a clearer statement of Purcell's significance and style and of his relation to the baroque era in general. not merely in England, than in the fifteen pages devoted to this composer." Otto Kinkeldey
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 5:224 Mr '48 500w

Reviewed by David Boyden
San Francisco Chronicle p32 N 21 '48 1300w

"'Music in the Baroque Era' is a significant milestone in the long process by which American musical scholarship is coming of age." Raymond Kendall
+ Sat R of Lit 31:31 Ap 24 '48 900w

"The chief merit of this remarkable book is its profound scholarliness. Not only has the author a probably unrivalled knowledge of his very large subject, but he shows himself able, unlike many scholars, to deduce from the enormous mass of evidence general principles which are applicable to all periods. It should hardly be necessary to claim impartiality for such a work, but there have recently been examples of tendentious studies of apparently scholastic subjects, and it is a relief to find no suggestion of racial, political or class prejudices in Professor Bukofzer's pages." Martin Cooper
+ Spec 181:378 S 17 '48 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p539 S 25 '48 900w

"The first in English, this is also one of the best general historical accounts of the music of the Baroque era, 1600-1750, which have so far appeared. . . Two particularly valuable features of the book, to be found in the Appendices, are the check list of contemporary literature on Baroque music, and the well-selected list of modern editions. Taking into account all important previous scholarly work in its field, the volume combines a clear, accurate and comprehensive statement of facts with illuminating interpretations and judgements."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:7 Mr '48 200w

BULLA, CLYDE ROBERT. Riding the pony express; il. by Grace Paull. 95p $2.25 Crowell 48-8051

"The West in 1860 is the setting for this story about 11-year-old Dick Park, who travels alone from New York to St. Joseph, Mo., and then on farther west to join his father, a rider for the Pony Express. . . At Owl Creek Station he plays and studies with young Katy Kelly, tends the horses, learns a lot about the West and the Pony Express and takes part in several exciting adventures." (N Y Times) For ages 9-12.

Booklist 45:53 O 1 '48

Churchman 162:17 N 15 '48 10w

Commonweal 49:150 N 19 '48 50w

"In the effort to bring this down to reading level for third and fourth grade, wild and woolly adventure has been watered down for the innocent palate, unnecessarily. . . However, the attractive format, good type, Grace Paull's lively black and white pictures, and the popular subject will find a place with that market calling for regional material on phases of western expansion."

Kirkus 16:554 O 15 '48 150w

"Excellent material, vivid writing, and good illustrations by Grace Paull. Story contains many elements to make it a success with small boys. There are horses and Indians as well as real historical background. Recommended for ages 6-10." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 74:203 F 1 '49 80w

"This is a simply told, fast-moving story of the Pony Express." Rosejeanne Slifer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 22 '48 230w

"Mr. Bulla, whose grandfather was a rider on the Express, handles with sure knowledge this story of an important phase in the history of our country. There are four amusing little songs, complete with music, in the book and the illustrations are lively and attractive." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times p11 S 5 '48 180w

New Yorker 24:130 D 11 '48 80w

"A good adventure story for younger boys and girls."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 N 13 '48 70w

BULLENS, DENISON KINGSLEY. Steel and its heat treatment, by D. K. Bullens and the Metallurgical staff of the Battelle memorial institute. 5th ed 3v v1-2 il v 1 $6; v2 $4 Wiley

669.1 Steel 48-5394

"Volume 1 presents definitions, terminology and fundamental concepts necessary to discuss heat treatment. Volume 2 discusses applications of the principles and tools of heat treatment. This classic treatise by Bullens, a technical practice for practical men, is brought to date by the Battelle Memorial Institute." (Library J) For fourth edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Booklist 44:315 My 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:44 Ja 1 '48 40w

"The first edition of this work was published in 1916. As successive editions have appeared, it has become solidly established as a useful source of information for practical metallurgists and other persons who desire reliable information about the heat-treating of steel. The exposition is intended primarily for men who have picked up their knowledge of steel on the job, but the book appeals also to men who have studied metallurgy in college."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:27 Ja '48

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:227 Je '48 280w

BULLETT, GERALD WILLIAM. George Eliot; her life and books. 273p $3.75 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Eliot, George, pseud. of Mrs Mary Ann (Evans) Cross 48-6381

A biography and critical study of George Eliot, by an English author and critic. It is based in part on recently discovered diaries and unpublished letters. Contains a calendar of events in the life of George Eliot, and an index.

Booklist 44:351 Je 15 '48

"Gerald Bullett has brought much sympathy, a tact that is equalled only by his unswerving honesty, and great critical acumen to George Eliot. The result is a book that, besides being wholly delightful to read, does justice that was undoubtedly called for to a remarkable woman, and may even do something to rescue her novels from their undeserved fate of classics that remain on the shelf. . . The whole book is a model of what a critical biography should be, clear in its reasoning, judicious and calm, and orderly in its marshaling of facts, rightly disdainful of purely imaginative reconstruction, and always brilliantly alive in both narrative and discussion." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 17 '47 650w

Current Hist 14:348 Je '48 50w

"Her story [is] sympathetically and honestly told. . . The last half of the book is a critical essay on her writings, which established her as the 'most intellectual novelist of her time.' Generous excerpts and brilliant criticism go far towards proving his point, and may launch a tiny Eliot revival. For a literary market."

+ Kirkus 16:77 F 1 '48 210w

"Written with such artistry that the scholarly research upon which it is obviously based, is transmuted into a thoroughly entertaining biography." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 73:469 Mr 15 '48 70w

"A character so serious as George Eliot needs a biographer capable of leavening gravity with grace. In Mr. Bullett she has found one. Because he is a novelist himself he is not only qualified to appreciate her problems as an imaginative artist who was also an intellectual but he is also without any itch to confuse the arts of fiction and biography." H.I'A. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 3 '47 330w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 34:113 Ag 9 '47 1750w

"Perhaps in no other novelist are the qualities and the defects so fully aspects of one another. Mr. Bullett's portrait of the woman is sympathetic, his analysis of the novels stimulating and sometimes provocative, and the obiter dicta on novel writing scattered throughout the text are valuable." C. G. Stillman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ap 25 '48 1200w

"Gerald Bullett has a sound feeling for George Eliot as a complete personality, a sober and honest approach, a grasp of the English psychology in which she was supreme, and a comprehension of her life as a London critic and novelist which only another such critic and novelist could have. Mr. Bullett knows there is more to be said about her. But he has savored and digested American research; he is an experienced narrator; he conveys frankly and readably the essential quality of the artist in George Eliot, and his book can serve excellently as an introduction to a main literary achievement." Francis Hackett

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 11 '48 1700w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley

Sat R of Lit 31:16 Je 5 '48 490w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée

Spec 178:690 Je 13 '47 850w

BULLETT, G. W.—Continued

"The reader rises from Mr. Bullett's engaging work with a clear perception of a woman whose genius transcended her sex. She was more than a great woman: she was a great person; and it is a comfort to lesser people to learn that her high and noble heart was responsive to human needs. . . Mr. Bullett has probably made a revival of interest in her novels likely to occur sooner than would have been the case without his book, and all who love purpose and high achievement will thank him for it. Not to have read Middlemarch is a sign of intellectual poverty."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p390 Ag 2 '47 3250w

Reviewed by G. S. Haight

Yale R n s 38:167 autumn '48 950w

BULLETT, GERALD WILLIAM, ed. Silver poets of the 16th century; Sir Thomas Wyatt, Henry Howard, earl of Surrey, Sir Philip Sidney, Sir Walter Raleigh, Sir John Davies. (Everyman's lib) 428p $1.45 Dutton

821.08 English poetry—Collections A48-6358

"The poets collected in this new addition to the Everyman's Library are five in number—Wyatt, Surrey, Sidney, Ralegh, and Davies. . . All the poems that can with certainty be attributed to Ralegh are here; all of Surrey, except his translation of the 'Fourth Book of the Aeneid,' and his Old Testament paraphrases; and little, certainly nothing that matters, has been omitted from the works of the other three. Mr. Bullett's introduction, besides its biographical information, has many useful hints that help toward an understanding of the particular influences at work on this Tudor and Elizabethan poetry." Christian Science Monitor

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 13 '47 650w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 13 '48 40w

BUNKER, ROBERT MANSON. Amanda said the grass was green. (Swallow press bk) 221p $2.75 Morrow

48-5783

A first novel describing the efforts of a newly discharged naval officer to escape his own lack of resolution; to get a job; and take on the responsibility of a wife.

"Extremely limited in appeal."

Kirkus 15:682 D 15 '47 120w

"Compared to some of our more sensational books about service men's adjustment to civilian life, this is an honestly searching novel. . . It is unfortunate that Mr. Bunker got technically bogged down, for he has made a sensitive and sincere attempt to write a post-war novel refreshingly free of the returning veteran cliches of drink, sex and self-pity." Barbara Klaw

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Mr 14 '48 230w

"The theme is largely developed in stretches of italicized monologue by the principal character and in dialectical conversations, many of which are absorbing."

New Yorker 24:82 F 28 '48 130w

BURBANK, NELSON LINCOLN, comp. Practical job pointers [from American builder and building age]. 2d rev ed 211p il $4 Simmons-Boardman

694 Carpentry. Building 47-11693

"Hundreds of methods of doing various jobs worked out by men in the industry. The book is compiled from descriptions of short cuts, kinks, ingenious methods of building and repairing and job pointers sent in to the American Builder by readers. A practical how-to-do it book of interest to home mechanics as well as carpenters. 81 pages of new material." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:44 Ja 1 '48 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:70 O '47

"Editor Nelson Burbank takes first things first by beginning with a chapter on the use and care of tools. Although the emphasis is on actual full scale construction, there are any number of ideas that have utility for the hobbyist, craftsman and workman-in-miniature. The section on workbenches and attachments alone should provoke a wealth of material for the man who would rather make it than buy it." R. S. Robbins

N Y Times p29 Mr 7 '48 150w

"The working drawings and suggestions for methods and tools to be used are clear and complete. The volume covers everything from ant-proofing a cottage to completely modernizing a home." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 14 '47 80w

BURCHARD, JOHN ELY. Q. E. D.; M. I. T. in World war II. 354p il $3.50 Wiley

940.53185 Massachusetts institute of technology. World war, 1939-1945—Science 48-7385

Story of the contribution of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to the war. Gives an account of the work of the staff with national agencies; research during the war, and an epilogue describing the return to peacetime studies. Indexes.

Reviewed by H. C. Parmelee

Chem Eng 55:281 Ag '48 800w

"Of special interest to technical students."

+ Current Hist 15:102 Ag '48 40w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:654 Ap 15 '48 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:78 S '48

School & Society 67:463 Je 19 '48 20w

BURCHARD, JOHN ELY, ed. Rockets, guns and targets; rockets, target information, erosion information and hypervelocity guns developed during World war II by the Office of scientific research and development; with a foreword by Richard C. Tolman. (Atlantic monthly press bk; U.S. Office of scientific research and development. Science in World war II) 482p $6 Little 940.53185 U.S. Scientific research and development, Office of. Ordnance. World war, 1939-1945—Science 48-7328

Describes the developments in ordnance work during World war II. Covers rockets, the bazooka, ballistics, gun erosion, hypervelocity guns, jets, flame throwers, etc. Indexes.

Booklist 45:10 S 1 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:1279 S 15 '48 70w

"Especially interesting is the story of how the neglected art of rocketry suddenly forged ahead to give the infantryman the bazooka, to replace heavy howitzers with light recoilless guns, and to give a small plane a punch that could destroy a railroad train. This book is well edited and, of course, completely authentic." H. M. Davis

+ Springf'd Republican p14A Je 11 '48 330w

BURK, ROBERT EMMETT, and GRUMMITT, OLIVER JOSEPH, eds. Chemical architecture. (Frontiers in chemistry, v5) 202p il $4.50 Interscience

541.6 Stereochemistry. Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 48-5685

"Volume 5 in the Frontiers in Chemistry series. Five lectures presented to graduate students at Western Reserve University by a group of experts concerning the study and determination of intermolecular forces interpreting the architecture of the molecule. It deals with the molecular structure of things and its relationship to a number of industrial type processes. Brief biographical sketches of the contributors." Library J

Reviewed by S. B. Hendricks
Chem & Eng N 26:1396 My 10 '48 400w
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:654 Ap 15 '48 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:5 Ja '48

BURKE, RICHARD. Sinister street. 199p $2.50 Ziff-Davis 48-6425

Detective story.

"Unimpressive." E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 27 '48 20w
"Pretty cheap."
Sat R of Lit 31:43 Ap 24 '48 40w

BURN, ANDREW ROBERT. Alexander the Great and the Hellenistic empire. (Teach yourself history lib) 297p $2 Macmillan

B or 92 Alexander, the Great. Greece—History A48-7413

A study of the life of Alexander the Great. A concluding chapter discusses Alexander in world history. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p12 Jl 11 '48 70w

"It is doubtful that this greatest adventure story of all times has ever been related with greater brilliance, charm and scholarship than in the volume of Burn." R. G. C.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 11 '48 300w

"A brilliant performance as thrilling as a novel and yet solid history with a moral for our time." Asher Brynes
+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 Jl 3 '48 120w

"The first criticism of Mr. Burn's biography of Alexander the Great is that it does not conform to the pattern. It is a biography pure and simple. . . The second criticism is a very mild one. . . Mr. Burn's tendency to talk of the campaigns of Alexander of Macedon in terms of those of Alexander of Tunis is vivid to begin with . . . but is rather too frequent. . . Those few small points apart, there can be nothing but praise and admiration for a book which is high-spirited, stirring, popular in the best sense, on the one hand, scholarly and judicious on the other. . . The narrative is admirable and at times becomes brilliant, even allowing for the fact that the story Mr. Burn has to tell is one of the most exciting and amazing in the history of the world. . . Mr. Burn discusses temperately and persuasively, though all too hurriedly, the effects of Alexander's life on the world, and although we cannot altogether follow him there, this is nevertheless a fine little book."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 17 '48 600w

BURNS, CECIL DELISLE. The first Europe; a study of the establishment of medieval Christendom, A.D. 400-800. 684p pl maps $7.50 Norton

940.1 Europe—History. Church history—Middle ages. Civilization, Medieval 48-6256

The first Europe is medieval Europe, and this history deals with "the changes in the climate of opinion in Western Europe between A.D. 400 and A.D. 800." Indexes.

"Ruskin, in a somewhat petulant criticism of Gibbon, blamed him for studying a 'Decline and Fall' when a healthy-minded man would prefer to study a Rise and Growth. This is what Dr. Delisle Burns has actually done, and done with most remarkable learning, insight and historical imagination." Gilbert Murray
+ New Statesman & Nation 35:117 F 7 '48 1200w

"The late Dr. Burns was well prepared by his wide experience as an investigator into social institutions both of the past and the present to write this book. He had been, moreover, at one time a priest of the Roman Catholic Church, and this enabled him, as it were, to regard Christianity from within, while his later change of belief gave him the opportunity to criticize it objectively. He possessed also a fine historical imagination which enabled him to rise above the innumerable details in which his profound knowledge of the original sources of information might otherwise have entangled him." S. C. Chew
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 16 '48 1150w

"A well-written, cogently organized book of nearly 700 pages. . . Though the work is liberally sprinkled with well-chosen quotations and at intervals also with flashes of rare insight, there is little evidence that the author made a thorough, systematic examination of sources for even a single generation, let alone the four centuries that he has chosen to survey. Mr. Burns' implied promise to render moral judgments as well as to record facts is more than faithfully discharged. . . The reviewer is forced reluctantly to the conclusion that the author is even more fully blinded by his own twentieth-century 'climate of opinion' than the earlier writers whom he criticized; that the 'moral judgments' which color the whole book were already made before he undertook its writing. Whatever its value for the propagation of his own social ideal its contribution to our knowledge of this period is slight." A. C. Krey
Sat R of Lit 31:17 Jl 3 '48 850w

"His book is long—almost 700 pages—and a multitude of facts and incidents are recorded, but on every page the comment, which at times is almost didactic, outweighs the narrative. This has a peculiarly tiring effect; there is no relief, no transition from narrative to reflection, from evidence to conclusion, no change of tone or emphasis. It is, in fact, a book impossible to summarise save at a disproportionate expense of space. . . There is throughout abundant evidence of serious thought and wide reading, and that not in fields attractive to the dilettante or the journalist. The author did not live to see his book in print, and this fact, in addition to the evidence of careful study and illuminating reflection, increases the sense of regret that so much space in this review should have been taken up by criticism. But a book which is throughout neither narrative nor construction, but interpretation, must be judged by the value and truth of that interpretation, and by the strength of the evidence adduced in its support." David Knowles
Spec 180:200 F 13 '48 900w

"Dr. Burns is not a trustworthy guide to the understanding of medieval thought and belief. But when it is a question of the history of medieval institutions and the social changes that followed the fall of the Empire in the West he is on much firmer ground. He does not attempt to write a consecutive political history of the period, but analyses one by one the main factors of social change and the new institutions they produced."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p181 Mr 27 '48 2150w

BURT, KATHARINE (NEWLIN) (MRS MAXWELL STRUTHERS BURT). Still water. 287p $2.75 Macrae Smith co.
48-5108

Novel of suspense with the foothills of the Smoky mountains as background. Thomas Baird, a young musician and his wife Ruth return to an old family mansion, and an old mystery takes on a renewed life.

Reviewed by Jack Glick
N Y Times p30 Ja 25 '48 140w
Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p29 Ja 18 '48 170w

BURT, MRS OLIVE (WOOLLEY). Luther Burbank, boy wizard; il. by Clotilde Embree Funk. 188p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Burbank, Luther—Juvenile literature 48-5768

Story of the boyhood of the famous scientist and an account of his early experiments with Shasta daisies, green corn and potato seeds. The final chapter describes the honors paid him on Burbank Day in Santa Rosa, California, in the year 1911.

Booklist 44:269 Ap 1 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ag 7 '48 50w

"Grade A. The story is delightful." F. C. Darling
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 29 '48 270w

"Useful for beginning nature study classes and for slow readers who like farm stories. . . Recommended." Anne Izard
Library J 73:484 Mr 15 '48 80w

"The story is told with sympathy and imagination as well as with understanding. The illustrations are unusually fine." R. A. Brown
+ N Y Times p30 Ap 11 '48 190w

BURTON, ELIZABETH (SUSAN ALICE KERBY, pseud). The roaring dove. 260p $3 Dodd 48-6122

Satirical novel about an imaginary state-controlled island called Trionia, which is supposed to be a Utopia. A visiting Englishman, in search of material about the island's patron saint, gets mixed up with a revolution, and along with most of the island's nicest people, escapes to a more normal life.

"The satire is cleverly done and the narrative entertaining. Recommended." H. P. Bolman
+ Library J 73:396 Mr 1 '48 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Jl 11 '48 60w

"Miss Kerby makes use of a remarkable prose style. . . Readers may question her realism, as well as her interpretation of the socialist ideal. 'The Roaring Dove's' most obvious predecessors, 'Brave New World' and 'Animal Farm,' were infinitely more amusing and more forceful." P. B.
N Y Times p14 Je 27 '48 400w

"The intricacies of the plot may bog down the reader from time to time and a few maudlin passages are best skimmed over, but her satire is brisk and well-aimed." Rex Lardner
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:28 Je 12 '48 500w

BURTON, MRS KATHERINE (KURZ). Three generations. 312p $3.50 Longmans

920.7 Ewing, Maria (Boyle). Sherman, Ellen (Ewing). Fitch, Minnie Ewing (Sherman) 47-12460

Fictionized biography of three generations of a Roman Catholic family in Ohio, Missouri, and California. The chronicle begins with Maria Boyle Ewing born in 1801, and the last of the three dominant characters is Minnie Sherman Fitch, daughter of General William T. Sherman. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:201 F 1 '48

"The author has done her customary task of re-creation and interpretation with her customary finesse. This is important Catholic Americana, as well as an engrossing human document." J. S. Kennedy
+ Cath World 168:214 D '48 140w

"The story of the family is as readable as a novel and the manners and customs of American life from the sod house to the Capitol make fascinating reading. Recommended." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 72:1683 D 1 '47 120w

"This story of the women of three generations . . . lacks the form of either good cumulative memoirs or dramatic family chronicle. . . This is a book about dignified, beautiful and cherished women in unstable times, framed in the circumstance of their religion and fortified against, but not exempt from, common fate." Ernestine Evans
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 11 '48 550w

BURTON, LAURENCE V. Week-end painter [il. by the author]. (Whittlesey house publication) 218p $4 McGraw

751 Painting 48-9194

A book for the beginning oil painter who lacks the time to take art courses. Partial contents: Equipment and materials for oil painting; Paints and how to use them; Mixing colors; Limitations of pigments; Painting mediums, thinness, and driers; Brushwork; Care of brushes; Choosing the subject; How to paint sunlight; How to paint a tree; Books I have read. Index.

Booklist 45:153 Ja 1 '49

"A very helpful and practical book for the amateur artist."
+ Kirkus 16:428 Ag 15 '48 90w

Reviewed by W. G. Dooley
N Y Times p10 D 19 '48 400w

"Written with a kind of homely and extremely winning simplicity, [the book] ranges from advice about the purchase of equipment to an instructive introduction to the intricacies of modern color theory, and includes a number of technical hints—short cuts and such—that will save the beginning painter a good deal of time and disappointment."
+ New Yorker 24:147 N 27 '48 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 23 '49 100w

BUSCH, NIVEN. The furies. 352p $3 Dial press 48-8461

"Cattle baron T. C. Jefford writes off his two sons as successors to his unfenced empire, because they take after their dead mother and lack his ruthlessness and his vitality. But he takes the measure of his daughter, Vance, and finds her fully qualified. . . By marrying his mistress, he made an implacable enemy [of his daughter]. Her weapons were a match for his, but the ultimate advantage was hers—the advantage of being so like her father, and a woman." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Kirkus 16:447 S 1 '48 80w

"Niven Busch forges a melodrama dealing with primal appetites and uncurbed passions, spacious in setting and swift in action. His narrative style is a hard, hammered prose shrewdly designed to discourage the reader from too close examination of the logic of his plot, or the underlying feelings of his characters." George Conrad
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S 26 '48 230w

"The characters, most of them low enough to crawl under a flagstone, are about as subtle as Roy Rogers' wardrobe. And just for the record, it should be noted that enough 'g's' are dropped in the writin' to string every banjo and fiddle in the cow country." Nancy Ladd
— N Y Times p27 S 26 '48 320w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 29 '48 500w

BUSCH, NOEL FAIRCHILD. Fallen sun; a report on Japan. 258p $2.50 Appleton-Century

952 Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 48-584

An estimate of the results of the American occupation of Japan to date, and of its future significance. The author, a senior writer for Life, makes a study of the Japanese character and determines that their childlike need for a leader makes them particularly vulnerable to the machinations of Russia. Index.

"From the experience of an undisclosed number of months in occupied Japan, Mr. Busch, a senior writer for Life, adds one more book to the growing number of superficial, journalistic accounts of one of the most significant developments in public administration. The author's warning that it is the duty of correspondents to examine the occupation in detail and to be less concerned with the forest than with the trees appears to be unheeded in his own report on Japan." R. J. D. Braibanti

— Am Pol Sci R 42:797 Ag '48 1200w

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 181:118 Ap '48 500w

Booklist 44:231 Mr 1 '48

"The surface plausibility of this book can do a serious disservice to American understanding of Japan if it lulls readers into a complacent satisfaction with the adequacy of their efforts to date in the Far East." Robert Peel

— + Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 16 '48 550w

Foreign Affairs 26:751 Jl '48 20w

Kirkus 15:689 D 15 '47 150w

"Undocumented, and written in a loose and rather superficial manner, this work is recommended only for larger collections." A. J. Gaines

Library J 72:1370 O 1 '47 130w

"Mr. Busch, a Life reporter in Japan in 1946, presents three phases of the drama—the occupation, the character and attitude of the Japanese people, and the relation of Russia and communism to the future of Japan. He confesses that it is hard to judge the situation because it is a process of change, and he is not quite sure that what he saw is real. But on the whole he is both enthusiastic and optimistic over the achievements and the prospects. My own experience supports him." Roger Baldwin

+ Nation 166:331 Mr 20 '48 550w

"The main fault of so many books about Japan and the Japanese is that they tend to make everything so infernally complex. The main fault of Mr. Busch's book is that he makes all the problems so simple. His style and his thinking make for easy reading. Most of his conclusions, however, appear entirely too pat. Nothing can be quite that white, or black." Foster Hailey

N Y Times p16 Mr 7 '48 750w

New Yorker 24:99 Mr 6 '48 100w

"Your reviewer believes that Mr. Busch has not only done a superb job of understanding and interpreting and reporting but also that he has written a book that in some fashion or other, should be made required reading for the people of this nation." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 1 '48 800w

"Mr. Busch has maintained an exceptional standard of accuracy in his concrete facts. That breeds confidence in his other statements. However, he has an annoying habit of letting an occasional sentence run diot; a number had to be reread several times; some of them never did make sense." Stuart Lillico

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:13 Mr 13 '48 750w

BUSH, CHRISTOPHER. The case of the curious client. 223p $2.50 Macmillan 48-7557

Detective story.

"This is a necessity for serious jigsawers and an excellent buy for other fans who may wish to sharpen their wits, as the saying goes." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Jl 18 '48 250w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p25 Jl 18 '48 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 1 '48 120w

"Suave Travers-Wharton methods of dealing with group of unpleasant people are attractive, even if unexpected outcome leaves one rather cold."

Sat R of Lit 31:24 Jl 24 '48 50w

BUSHNELL, ADELYN (MRS MARSHALL BRADFORD). Rock Haven. 380p $3 Coward-McCann

48-8254

Chronicles the lives and fortunes of two brothers, and their descendants, from 1886 to 1945. Ulysses and Virgil Ulmer were sons of a Maine skipper and his school-teacher wife. When their father was lost at sea, the boys' mother proceeded to pamper her younger son, Virgil, and treat Ulysses, the dependable one, like a servant. In after years it was Virgil who made money, but it was the steady, kindly Ulysses whom people trusted.

Booklist 45:137 D 15 '48

"Persons in the story are complete paragons or utter miscreants, especially the Ulmer brothers: Ulysses patient and loyal, Virgil selfish and treacherous. Action is continuous and varied, conversations are adroit, but the narrative suffers from a lack of selectivity." W. K. Rugg

— + Christian Science Monitor p9 S 2 '48 110w

Kirkus 16:316 Jl 1 '48 90w

"A melodramatic tale, readable and forgettable in a week." F. A. Boyle

Library J 73:1088 Ag '48 80w

"Virgil is a blackguard from the day he can talk and toddle, and his brother's meekness is so abject that most readers will find it hard to accept. Adelyn Bushnell follows her saint and sinner pattern to the borders of burlesque."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 5 '48 170w

"The vagaries of fate notwithstanding, the naughty ones are miserable, and the good ones are not. Their only common vicissitude is death; but this, apparently, the nice ones handle without any fuss, while the others meet it with very bad grace. It's a black-and-white landscape, with its people engaged in a tug-of-war which is much more amiable than dynamic." H. B. P.

+ N Y Times p51 O 17 '48 140w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 31:57 D 4 '48 120w

"'Rock Haven' is precisely the kind of morally invigorating, leisurely told story that appeals to a wide audience of readers who enjoy old-fashioned romances that leave them with a comfortable liking for humanity—good and bad. Perhaps after the heavy dosages of moral delinquency the reading public has endured lately it's a rather nice idea." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p7B S 19 '48 210w

BUTLER, ELIZA MARIAN. Myth of the magus. 282p il $3.75 Macmillan

133.4 Magic 48-8910

"Study of the magical tradition in civilization, surveying in detail the legends of the great magicians from Zoroaster to Mme. Blavatsky, revealing that the lives of all such ritual heroes have followed the same Faustian pattern, with the same stock features of magical and supernatural powers and events. Ten such stock features are listed. Among the Magi studied are Moses, Zoroaster, Solomon, Pythagoras, Christ, Virgil, Faustus, Mme. Blavatsky and Rasputin." Library J

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 65:1206 N 10 '48 1000w

"A serious study, in a highly specialized field, which still includes some entertaining and original writing."

+ Kirkus 16:353 Jl 15 '48 110w

"A rewarding book, scholarly yet readable, an original contribution to the critical study of the mystical ritual of religions. Although not a 'popular' book college and public libraries will use." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 73:1021 Jl '48 130w

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 15 '48 210w

Reviewed by Richard Chase

Nation 167:635 D 4 '48 1950w

BUTLER, E. M.—Continued
Reviewed by Jacquetta Hawkes
New Statesman & Nation 35:298 Ap 10 '48 1050w

"Professor Butler does not shrink from the impacts of her own logic. What lends a chief interest to her book is the frank way in which she calls the role of the magi—using that term in a comprehensive sense. Good, bad and indifferent, they are all brought within the net. Moses, Elijah and Christ, Zoroaster, Solomon and the Popes are discussed with the same freedom and the same approach as Faust, Cagliostro and Rasputin." P. W. W.
+ N Y Times p43 N 14 '48 330w
San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 14 '48 370w
School & Society 69:31 Ja 8 '49 50w

Reviewed by Ernest Barker
Spec 180:650 My 28 '48 850w

"Professor Butler has cast her net wide, and though all may not agree with the mesh she has chosen, her catch is scholarly, original and entertaining."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p208 Ap 10 '48 2700w

BUTLER, GEORGE PAUL, ed. Best sermons, 1947-48. 318p $2.75 Harper
252 Sermons (44-51581)

Collection of fifty-two sermons representing the work of Protestant, Roman Catholic, and Jewish ministers of religion. In all 6,477 sermons were examined before the 52 presented here were decided upon for inclusion.

"These are excellent sermons by great preachers. They represent many different theological positions and ecclesiastical connections, but the central ideas of every one of them would be accepted by all." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 64:1456 N 26 '47 250w

"Some of the chapters will be worth re-reading, because of their value to our thinking and living." Sam Nader
+ Churchman 162:17 Mr 1 '48 70w

"It may be only a personal reaction, but the present volume seems to have achieved a higher level of sermons and a far more direct appeal to the Christian conscience of the hearers. The inclusion of European sermons extends the spiritual geography of the material." R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 25:190 Ap '48 120w

BUTLER, HAROLD BERESFORD. Peace or power. 269p maps $4.50 Macmillan (for Faber and Faber)
940.55 World politics [48-13092]

A survey of conditions in post-war Europe based on observations made during a visit to western and central Europe in 1946. The author was formerly Director of the International Labor Office and Minister in charge of information at the British Embassy in Washington during the war.

Reviewed by S. H. Brockunier
Am Hist R 54:406 Ja '49 280w

"In these days when people watch the tug and pull of forces which tend to unite nations and those which keep the world divided, Sir Harold Butler presents a short volume that should help to clarify a lot of muddled thinking. In twelve readable chapters, he surveys and comments upon the history of recent times. . . Americans, especially those who cling to the attitude that they are in the world but not of it, will find much in this book to acquaint them with the facts of international life." Jacob Van Der Zee
Am Pol Sci R 42:804 Ag '48 600w

Reviewed by L. L. Snyder
Ann Am Acad 259:162 S '48 440w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '48
Current Hist 15:102 Ag '48 50w
Foreign Affairs 26:737 Jl '48 40w

"With his unsurpassed knowledge and experience Sir Harold Butler has written in this book as clear, concise and objective an analysis of the post-war world situation, and the events which have led up to it since the end of World War I, as has been attempted." Gerald Barry
+ New Statesman & Nation 35:138 F 14 '48 750w

"A book as rich in wisdom and good sense as this one deserves a better title. The presence of power, when so arranged to prevent its abuse, is not incompatible with peace but, on the contrary, its complement and guarantee. That Sir Harold knows this to be true is manifest throughout the greater part of the book, yet it has not shielded him against lapses into loose and unfortunate phrasing. This, however, is a minor defect." C. G. Haines
+ Pol Sci Q 63:451 S '48 750w

Reviewed by M. Zvegintzov
Spec 179:774 D 19 '47 900w
Times [London] Lit Sup p20 Ja 10 '48 550w

BUXBAUM, KATHERINE. Iowa outpost. 253p $2.50 Dorrance
48-6928

"Childhood memories are the basis for sketches of life at the turn of the century in an Iowa town settled largely by German Moravian families." Booklist

Booklist 44:368 Jl 1 '48
+ Springf'd Republican p15A Ag 1 '48 140w

BYCHOWSKI, GUSTAV. Dictators and disciples from Caesar to Stalin; a psychoanalytic interpretation of history; pref. by Carl Binger. 264p $4.25 Int. univs. press
923.1 Dictators 48-8144

"Analyzing the careers of Caesar, Cromwell, Robespierre, Hitler, and Stalin, Dr. Bychowski arrives at the conclusion that 'the relationship between the masses and the dictator is based on a complete reciprocity in the sense of give and take going on in both directions.' Dictators, he shows—with abundant historic evidence—are wont to consider themselves the highest possible personification of the virtues, as well as the unconscious ambitions, of their people. And the masses, for their part, accept this claim because it enables them to experience a vicarious gratification from the rise, prestige and accumulating successes of their oppressor." (Christian Science Monitor) Bibliography.

"Dr. Bychowski's book is an outstanding contribution to the natural history of totalitarian regimes, and it is only to be regretted that he has greatly narrowed its appeal by studding it with psychoanalytic terms. All of the phenomena he describes, and most of the explanations he offers, could have been expressed just as lucidly without the use of such words as 'super-ego,' 'autistic,' and 'catathymic,' etc." Ernest Pisko
+ Christian Science Monitor p20 S 4 '48 550w

"An exceedingly interesting study. . . In effect, this book is a forceful restatement of Lord Acton's famous saying: 'Power tends to corrupt and absolute power corrupts absolutely.' "
+ New Yorker 24:130 O 9 '48 140w

"Like all psychoanalysts, Dr. Bychowski is far more successful in explaining the oddities of individual—in the present instances, dictatorial—behavior than in throwing new light upon the collective acceptance of such persons as arbiters of life and death. One hesitates to generalize about history; it is a touchy business, but apparently we will always have madmen among us. The question is why we elect them from time to time. Dr. Bychowski's clearest reply occurs in the chapter on Hitler, which is far and away the best in the book." Asher Brynes
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:17 O 2 '48 1050w
School & Society 68:358 N 20 '48 40w

C

CADELL, ELIZABETH. Gay pursuit. 246p $2.75 Morrow

48-3513

At forty-two Natalie Forrester, a gentle little English widow, found herself engineered into a second marriage, partly thru the offices of a managing young daughter. When Natalie arrived in Devon to visit her new husband's relatives until William's retirement from the Navy she found herself in just the kind of life she needed. The Romes lived in genteel poverty and thrived on it. Natalie's daughter tried to bring a little order into their feckless lives, but for once her managing fell flat, and eventually she saw the beauty of a philosophy of "live and let live."

Booklist 45:32 S 15 '48

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p15 S 23 '48 180w

Kirkus 16:317 Jl 1 '48 110w

"Recommended." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 73:1192 S 1 '48 80w

"For Angela Thirkell fans, for admirers of the early Margery Sharp stories, for any one who might like an amusing, delightful book. . . Elizabeth Cadell is more sympathetic than satiric, but like the novels of her two compatriots, her book is abundant in humor, neat in style." Joanna Spencer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 12 '48 460w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 31:57 D 4 '48 110w

Wis Lib Bul 44:165 O '48

CADY, EDWIN LAIRD. Precision investment castings. 356p il $6 Reinhold

671 Foundry practice 48-2066

"This improved development of the 'lost-wax process' is adaptable to mass production of small parts and can handle practically any metal that can be cast at all. It reduces costs and improves qualities of products. Chapters tell what precision investment casting is, what it does and how it does it with capabilities and limitations of precision products. It tells engineers what must be done in product design and redesign to obtain best results. Chapters cover economics of design, comparison with other processes, metals and alloys, plant practice, patterns and molding, clustering, investing, and casting." Library J

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:819 My 15 '48 100w

"The book will be useful not only to the technician, but also to the industrial engineer seeking new production methods, for the author discusses the possibilities and limitations of the process, and indicates where it can be applied most profitably."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:11 Ja '48

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:228 Je '48 240w

CADY, WILLOUGHBY MILLER, and others, eds. Radar scanners and radomes [prepared under the supervision of] Office of scientific research and development, National defense research committee. (Mass. inst. of technology. Radiation laboratory. Radiation laboratory ser) 491p il $7 McGraw

621.38 Radar 48-4097

"Deals with the problems of mechanical and electrical engineering and of servo design which underlie the scanners for practical radar sets for land base, ships or airplanes. Practical mechanical and aerodynamic problems of the design for radomes, the housing for scanners are discussed." (Library J) Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1279 S 15 '48 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:76 S '48

CAEN, HERBERT EUGENE. San Francisco book; photographs by Max Yavno. 119p $5 Houghton

917.9461 San Francisco—Views 48-11550

Impressions of San Francisco in photographs and descriptive prose. The author is a journalist who writes the It's news to me column in the San Francisco Chronicle; the illustrator has exhibited his works in various museums thruout the country, and has had a one-man show at the California Palace of the Legion of Honor.

"In Mr Caen's text the city lives, and the exile reading it, the unfortunate who never saw it, will long to be there. It isn't easy to 'review' photographs, but Mr. Yavno's do fit the text admirably." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p7 D 26 '48 550w

"Readers of Herb Caen's column will know that he is no man to sentimentalize unduly. And his text here is no mere promotional blurb. When Caen sees what one of the city's old-time officials used to call 'the earmarks of an eyesore' he'll say so, never fear. . . The photographs are splendid and the gravure process gives them a good break." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 21 '48 750w

CAIN, JAMES MALLAHAN. The moth. 373p $3 Knopf

48-2901

"The story begins with Jack Dillon's discovery of beauty (in a Baltimore park) shortly after he's risen from all fours to take his first real look around; it ends with World War II, when that same Jack (now a grim-lipped major, scarred by battle and boudoir) mates with the girl he's subconsciously desired since she was a toddler of 2. The adventures between include Jack's career as a boy soprano; a rather unconvincing whirl at big-time college football; a totally authentic series of chapters on his hobo days in the gloom of the Great Depression. . . For good measure, there's a freshman course in larceny." N Y Times

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 182:105 S '48 480w

"Cain can still manage rapid fire stuff with admirable skill, but his determination to write a more ambitious type of novel has caused him to deviate from his usually tight and efficient narrative structure. The result is choppiness and disorder more than additional breadth and depth." Jack Conroy
— + Chicago Sun Jl 14 '48 500w

"Sentimental, rather than elemental."
Kirkus 16:241 My 15 '48 170w

"Novel is a great improvement, entomologically speaking, over The Butterfly; less tough, with more happiness, it should regain many readers for the author." H. G. Kelley
+ Library J 73:1026 Jl '48 80w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 18 '48 500w

"The present reader can only report, in sorrow, that Mr. Cain's most ambitious novel is also his dullest. . . When you've closed 'The Moth' you may know just how to crack a cash register—or earn your living as a fruit-tramp. Jack Dillion remains a vaguely glimpsed stranger who has talked you to death, and beyond. And Mr. Cain's famous sense of pace, his knack with the wages-of-sin pattern, are lost in verbiage." James MacBride
N Y Times p5 Jl 11 '48 600w

"Excellent in its reportorial chapters—those about the oil fields, for example—but disappointing as a psychological study."
+ — New Yorker 24:71 Je 17 '48 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 26 '48 650w

"Occasionally James M. Cain writes like an angel—a slightly malicious, dyspeptic, and ribald angel with a lust for gore. More often he writes the way you think Rocky Graziano might if he were more literate. . . Maybe you'll feel that too often in 'The Moth' Mr. Cain takes himself too seriously. He does. And the rather high-falutin symbol from which he derives his title never comes to much. But when Mr. Cain isn't pouring in too much philosophy, when he's doing what he does best . . . then he's good. 'The Moth' is hardly enduring literature, but it's hardly ever dull either." Merle Miller

CAIN, J. M.—Continued
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:10 Jl 10 '48 650w

"As adolescence goes, The Moth is a more arrested case than The Postman, in which at least honest murder was done and paid for."
— Time 52:78 Jl 26 '48 650w

CAIRE, HELEN. Señor Castillo, cock of the island; pictures by Christine Price. 76p $1.50 Rinehart
48-5868

Story of Señor Castillo, a handsome, elderly Rhode Island rooster, who was lord of the barnyard on an island off the coast of California. One day he went in search of adventure, and always thereafter he had an urge to roam. For grade four and five.

Booklist 44:288 Ap 15 '48

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 13 '48 220w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:195 My '48 90w

Kirkus 16:47 F 1 '48 60w

"Although the style has charm, the story will have limited appeal. For large collections only." N. L. Rathbun
Library J 73:656 Ap 15 '48 70w

"Somewhat reminiscent of the old beast-myths, this picaresque story has a sly humor of its own. Like the harried cock, it limps occasionally, but there is plenty of genuine suspense to interest eight to ten year olds, and striking drawings by Christine Price." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p21 Je 13 '48 130w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 31:34 Je 12 '48 90w

Wis Lib Bul 44:106 My '48

CAIRNS, HUNTINGTON, ed. Limits of art; poetry and prose chosen by ancient and modern critics. 1473p $6.50 Pantheon bks.
808.8 Literature—Collections. Literature—History and criticism 48-9654

"Mr. Cairns has gone through the work of many critics, ancient and modern, to find in them instances of superlative praise or approval for brief masterpieces or passages from longer ones in the literature of the European tradition. He has included not only the critic's opinion in each case but also the work or passage on which it was based. The critical comments are in English; the creative examples in Greek, Latin, Italian, Spanish, French, German and English (early, middle or modern)." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Indexes.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun D 27 '48 420w

"Another anthology, but a superb one. . . Despite some regrettable omissions, The Limits of Art is an anthology of the highest standards, in fact, the relatively best we know." Max Fischer
+ Commonweal 49:283 D 24 '48 800w

"A fine and impressive collection of memorable writing. There is, however, a certain handicap in the method itself. First-rate critics are, on the whole, less likely than others to make use of superlatives. Mr. Cairns has found or thought himself obliged to take superlatives from critics about whom it matters little what superlatives they use."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 D 19 '48 350w

"A genuinely remarkable volume."
+ New Yorker 24:108 D 18 '48 150w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley
Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 9 '49 390w

CALDECOTT, SIR ANDREW. Not exactly ghosts. 213p $2.50 Longmans
[48-5247]

Twelve short stories in which the author deals with supernatural subjects.

"There isn't a standard, chain-clanking apparition in the lot, as one might infer from the title; the author's intent is simply to cause 'a mild and pleasurable discomfort' rather than to stand anybody's hair on end. This unorthodoxy is, on the whole, very pleasant, but admirers of the genuine shocker may claim, with some justice, that Sir Andrew's kind of story gets monotonous."
New Yorker 23:68 Ja 31 '48 90w

"Insufficiently harrowing, we'd say. But disquieting, nevertheless." E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 8 '48 110w

"The pieces in Not Exactly Ghosts are all of excellent and practised workmanship; particularly 'Sonata in D Minor' and 'Victim of Medusa.' Sir Andrew Caldecott has a somewhat mannered way of dealing with his material, and here and there phrases such as 'when it is necessary to proceed by Underground' recall Routine Orders, but they all hold the attention."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p573 N 8 '47 190w

CALDWELL, CYRIL CASSIDY. Henry Ford; il. by Edd Ashe. 246p $2.75 Messner
B or 92 Ford, Henry—Juvenile literature
47-11703

Biography of Henry Ford written for young people of fourteen or older. Stresses Ford's genius and his business ability. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:188 Ja 15 '48

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p14 D 9 '48 180w

"The author has done an interesting and generally fair picture of the man, with very little whitewash on the brush. Here and there is evident a tendency to ascribe some of Ford's questionable traits to whimsy or American rugged individualism, but on the whole the biographer achieves a well-written and relatively unbiased account of an important American industrialist."
+ — Kirkus 15:550 O 1 '47 100w

"There are many inaccuracies which detract from the value of the book. It can in no sense be compared with W. A. Simonds' Henry Ford, His Life, His Work, His Genius [Book Review Digest, 1943]. The style is not up to the standard the subject deserves. Book is of local interest and for students interested in automotive history." Dorotha Dawson
Library J 73:205 F 1 '48 50w

Wis Lib Bul 44:42 F '48

CALDWELL, ERSKINE. This very earth. 254p $2.75 Duell
48-7977

"Just about everything that is evil happens in this novel. Chism Crockett, farmer, sells his homestead and moves to town, taking his family with him. This uprooting results in the death of Grandpa, murder of one daughter, near-seduction of another, prostitution of the third, corruption of the eleven-year-old son and no happiness for Chism." Library J

"This Very Earth is certainly no landmark in Caldwell's work. But he has put aside that wryly detached bravado; he has written with some feeling and understanding about the Crocketts. One of them, Chism, is a first-rate charactertization." C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 182:104 S '48 600w

Reviewed by Nelson Algren
Chicago Sun Ag 19 '48 410w

"As characters of fiction, these poor-white Georgians here fail to interest us because they are not only without any conscience but, also, without any consciousness other than their own desires. They have the type-flatness of the puppets of the old morality plays; they are flatter than the gangsters in a Hollywood crime movie, dry as paper dolls. . . This new novel has no humor, no fantasy." Horace Reynolds

— Christian Science Monitor p18 Ag 18 '48 480w

"Caldwell enthusiasts will find this to their pattern; most readers will feel it is a more than twice told tale—Tobacco Road translated into slightly varied terms."

Kirkus 16:268 Je 1 '48 130w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson

Library J 73:1088 Ag '48 80w

"'This Very Earth' reads startlingly like Sartre's play, 'The Respectful Prostitute,' in the form in which it is now appearing at the Cort—that is like a monstrous caricature of an unpleasant actuality. Caldwell appears merely to be parodying his earlier novels with a lack of subtlety which reminds me of the worst kind of nineteenth-century melodrama." Ernest Jones

— Nation 167:212 Ag 21 '48 110w

"Caricatures of funny people produce laughs, of course, but caricatures of ugly people produce shudders. And the portrayal Mr. Caldwell gives of Noble Hair is so overdrawn as to produce shudders, and perhaps incredulity as well. Still, the fact remains that Mr. Caldwell at his best is seldom dull as a writer, and sometimes important. 'This Very Earth,' which is his tenth novel, is entertaining enough, but 'important' is hardly the word." Herbert Kupferberg

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 29 '48 500w

"It is notable that Mr. Caldwell in this story is not above suggesting that these people are pitiable as well as ignorant and/or comical. The life of the Crocketts illustrates indolence, sadism, immorality, blackmail and eventually murder, but in nearly every case Mr. Caldwell makes some effort to show that these are things that happened to the Crocketts as well as things done by them. Several of the characters are actually pretty decent individuals, and a number of others would have been if they could. . . This novel, the author's tenth, will hardly be considered his best, but it does make use of slight variation in material and method. At the same time, old Caldwellians will not be disappointed." N. K. Burger

N Y Times p4 Ag 22 '48 550w

New Yorker 24:79 S 4 '48 140w

"I have admired Caldwell's work in the past, particularly his short stories. But this book is just too thin—not so much a novel as an outline for a novel-to-be-written. . . What I want to make plain is that it is not the dreariness of the novel that I dislike. It's strong meat, and may be too much for some stomachs, but that's all right. It is the author's privilege to choose his theme, his characters, his setting, and to say what he pleases, with and through these. . . The trouble with 'This Very Earth' is the sketchiness of it all." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 24 '48 650w

"As a novel, 'This Very Earth' is basically unsatisfying. It will prompt instinctive admiration from any but the intellectual snobs who ought to admit that as a craftsman Caldwell perfectly frames the exact pictures he wants to paint. But what he paints is not 'this very earth'; it is the world of Erskine Caldwell. And that world is becoming increasingly artificial instead of deeply felt. It can hardly be more important to the reader than it is to the author. Can it be that Caldwell's experience on an international scale has made him impatient of provincialism?" Lon Tinkle

Sat R of Lit 31:12 Ag 28 '48 800w

"This Very Earth runs its weary preordained course of rape, murder and stupidity without once arousing the slightest emotional response. The dialogue bears no living relationship to the character speaking it, and the characters are all pressed from the same worn Caldwell dies. . . The reader soon gets the uncomfortable feeling that he is watching the uncoordinated performance of a once-talented dancer who still remembers all the steps and postures but has forgotten how to dance."

— Time 52:82 Ag 30 '48 550w

CALDWELL, JANET TAYLOR (MRS MARCUS REBACK) Melissa. 390p $3 Scribner

48-7146

After the death of her adored father Melissa married his publisher, Geoffrey Dunham, in order to obtain money for her brother's education, her sister's poetry and her father's manuscript. However the children had other plans, and Geoffrey discovered he had married a neurotic woman, nearly ruined by the strange education her father had given her. When Melissa found out her father's true nature, the shock nearly killed her, but Geoffrey's devotion saved her.

"This is a rather far-fetched story and consistently overwritten. It's long enough and slow enough, however, to while away a number of summer hours, and its lush setting and happy ending may endear it to some readers." Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun Jl 8 '48 420w

"Taylor Caldwell's style still seems amateurish and bombastic."

— Kirkus 16:178 Ap 1 '48 130w

"Absorbing to the last word. Public Library readers will demand it in quantities." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 73:943 Je 15 '48 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Jl 18 '48 350w

"Melissa is an authentic type, though the narrow confines of the plot don't give her much scope. Even so, the interest of her character, together with Miss Caldwell's steamroller style and her way with period elegance will keep her feminine public loyal to the end." C. B.

N Y Times p20 Je 20 '48 380w

New Yorker 24:74 Je 26 '48 180w

"Before you read very many of these 390 pages of stilted conversation stemming from a feeble and pseudo-psychological plot, you may wonder why the publishers bothered to affix the usual disclaimer reading, 'Any resemblance to actual persons or events is coincidental.' " E. J.

— San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 4 '48 150w

"Taylor Caldwell realizes full well the limitations and stupidities of her Melissa, daughter of a philosophic writer who has deliberately made a mess of her out of his villainous desire to dominate her and make her subject to his psychologically poisonous whims. But the author never intended that we should become painfully bored and irritated with the beautiful creature; and that miscarriage of Taylor Caldwell's purpose must be attributed to the apparent hurry, the lack of careful organization, the adjectival and prolifically adverbial style in which the novel is written. . . This novel is written in Taylor Caldwell's deepest purple." William Soskin

— Sat R of Lit 31:15 Jl 3 '48 700w

CALDWELL, ROBERT GRAHAM. Red Hannah, Delaware's whipping post. 144p il $3 Univ. of Pa. press

343.2 Corporal punishment 47-11326

"Red Hannah" was the name given to the last whipping post in America. It was in the state of Delaware, and the book is an account of its history. Appendices give enumerations of crimes punishable with public whippings, and tables of whippings in Delaware for the period 1900 to 1942 inclusive. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Florence Kuckhohn

Am J Soc 53:510 My '48 1200w

"Presents an excellent analysis of the history of the Delaware whipping post from the point of view of legislation and popular reactions to the penalty. . . The only portion of this book which is not entirely convincing is the explanation presented for the whipping post of Delaware. The explanation which is given greatest emphasis is the provincialism of Delaware, and especially of two counties, which are rural, isolated, and out of the current of modern thought. This is not convincing, principally because many other states are equally remote

CALDWELL, R. G.—Continued
from the currents of modern thought and do not have the whipping post." E. H. Sutherland

+ — Am Soc R 13:114 F '48 400w

"Apart from the statistical evaluation of the inefficacy of the lash as treatment for crime, Professor Caldwell has rendered an infinitely greater service. He has thrown probably the first shaft of strong white light on a corner of our system of criminal justice that hitherto has been shrouded in Stygian darkness. He makes abundantly clear—even to a mind stubbornly anchored to the doctrine of harsh punitive measures—that flogging is a vestigial remainder of primitivism." E. J. Lukas

+ Ann Am Acad 256:227 Mr '48 550w

"A scholarly work intended for those expressly interested in penology." W. R. W.

San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 30 '47 100w

Reviewed by Hans von Hentig

Social Forces 26:488 My '48 750w

"Although its subject is limited and even local, this study should be of value to the scholarly penologist, to those interested in progressive penal reform, and to the student of social history. Profuse and dramatic documentary descriptions of whippings add color to the narrative."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:81 Mr '48 240w

CALDWELL, TAYLOR. See Caldwell, J. T.

CALLAGHAN, MORLEY. Luke Baldwin's vow; il. by Stanley Turner. 187p il $2.50 Winston 48-8663

"Because Luke Baldwin's father had been an easy-going, idealistic doctor, the boy found it hard to adjust himself to living with his practical and business-like Uncle Henry. The conflict between the two centered around a once-beautiful collie, now old and useless and about to be destroyed. Luke's efforts to save the dog provide a good deal of excitement, including a dramatic dog fight and a near-drowning." N Y Times

---

Booklist 45:123 D 1 '48

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 168:219 D '48 60w

"The book is written in the distinctive pedestrian style of Callaghan's adult books, but sardonic humor, dramatization of worldly characters in a world not wholly ever to be seen, and fullness of thought-provoking content are there. A truly manly contribution to boys' reading." E. E.

+ Commonweal 49:151 N 19 '48 100w

"Thoughtful, sensitive young people may find something in this story of Luke wrestling with the problems of determining values for himself. . . Adults will be interested, the writing is moving but the characterizations are too rooted in talk to interest youngsters."

Kirkus 16:337 Jl 15 '48 180w

"Well-written story for older boys but so full of the abstract conflict of practicality versus the dream that most boys will find it hard going." S. J. Johnson

+ — Library J 73:1391 O 1 '48 70w

"Dog lovers of 9 to 12 will doubtless read the story eagerly; adults may find it over-sentimental and somewhat unconvincing." E. H.

+ N Y Times p60 N 14 '48 140w

CALLAHAN, MRS JENNIE (WAUGH). Radio workshop for children. 398p il $3.75 McGraw 371.333 Radio in education. Radio broadcasting—Children's programs 48-8426

"Describes a unique plan of teacher training in the rapidly developing field of school broadcasting. For the benefit of prospective teachers who are interested in using radio broadcasting as a teaching device, the author has developed the outline of a course based on workshop procedures, with the additional feature of a repertory group of child actors to provide the laboratory setting for the testing of suggested programs with respect to their suitability for use in normal classroom situations." (El School J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:58 O 15 '48

"It is apparent that this volume is of value to college teachers of radio, both in teacher-training institutions and in technical schools enrolling students who are interested in professional radio careers involving the presentation of juvenile programs. It will also be helpful to all teachers who desire to participate in the radio programs of their own schools."

+ El School J 49:244 D '48 600w

CALVOCORESSI, PETER. Nuremberg; the facts, the law and the consequences. 176p $2.75 Macmillan
341.3 War crimes—Trials A48-9009

An explanation of the trial in terms of the facts, the laws, and the consequences. The author is a member of the British prosecution at Nuremberg. No index.

Columbia Law R 48:489 Ap '48 100w

"An extremely sensible commentary. . . It is a great deal more persuasive, in its calm, critical temper than some other recent books on the project."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 6 '48 120w

"Scholars will require that this text be scrupulously faithful to the happenings in the courtroom, and that it be complete. They will not suffer disappointment in either respect. The editors have corrected trivial slips, but they have evidently resisted the temptation to make material changes to improve the sense. . . This publication is important and not only for scholars." Benjamin Kaplan

+ — N Y Times p7 Ap 4 '48 950w

Reviewed by R. G. Colodny

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 14 '48 400w

"Mr. Calvocoressi is clearly at his best in dissecting the military case, on which he is an unsurpassed expert. . . It is unfortunate that a work of such general merit should be marred with needless manifestations of chauvinistic partisanship. It is neither simple nor prudent to distribute garlands when one's possession of the facts is not complete. . . His rather foolish remarks on personalities are also subject to discount on the record as a whole." W. E. Jackson

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:13 Mr 6 '48 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p271 My 15 '48 700w

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann

Yale R n s 37:741 summer '48 220w

CAMERON, DONALD EWEN. Life is for living. 241p $2.75 Macmillan
131.32 Life 48-6582

"A professor of psychiatry at McGill University, Dr. Cameron writes for all who try to grope a way through the confusions of mid-century living. . . Convinced that 'life is for living and not for dying in some swirl of nationalistic hatred and hostility, not for bearing witness to some outworn ideological dogma, not for paying tribute to causeless anxieties and crippling guilt feelings or damaging beliefs with which we were indoctrinated in our childhood,' Dr. Cameron has written a straightforward book for his bewildered contemporaries." San Francisco Chronicle

---

"A reasonable, liberal interpretation of the moralities and motives which influence our lives, which at all times relates the individual to society."

+ Kirkus 16:139 Mr 1 '48 150w

"In spite of its success, popularization is mostly stupid and dangerous. Life is For Living is an exception. By a Scotch scientist who writes as slangily as the best Yankee—sometimes perhaps too much so—the book keeps pretty well away from dangerous generalizations. . . Could have a therapeutic effect on the hounded reader who suffers from some sort of neurosis, and might also help others to understand important ills of our 20th century civilization." Rudolph Hirsch

Library J 73:554 Ap 1 '48 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 18 '48 270w

CAMP, RAYMOND R., ed. Hunter's encyclopedia. 1152p il maps $17.50 Stackpole & Heck, inc, Telegraph press bldg, Harrisburg, Pa.

799.2 Hunting—Encyclopedias and dictionaries. Game and game birds Agr48-236

Encyclopedic book on hunting. It is "a work offering detailed information on the game birds and animals of this continent, the successful methods of hunting them, and the development of the firearms and equipment required." (Pref) It is the work of fifty contributors. Glossary. Index.

"A complete reference work. I tried it out, via the excellent and comprehensive index, on a few odd items which had been difficult to find in other sources, and here they were."

+ Kirkus 16:421 Ag 15 '48 220w

"In one large quarto volume is packed a wealth of information that should satisfy all but the most meticulous of hunters. . . Above all is a good index. . . No matter what the size of your book fund—Get it!" R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:1275 S 15 '48 220w

"A great many experts have labored long and well to produce this volume. If ever a book belonged in the collection of the outdoor man, 'The Hunter's Encyclopedia' is it." T. S. Sweedy

+ N Y Times p34 N 7 '48 550w

"An inclusive single-volume reference work on North American game that is unique in its field."

+ New Yorker 24:138 N 6 '48 130w

CAMPBELL, AGNES. Tales my father told; il. by Richard Kennedy. (Whittlesey house publication) 144p $2 McGraw

Fairy tales, Irish 48-8763

A collection of Irish realistic and fairy tales. For ages eight to twelve.

"Though these tales are not folklore in the antiquarian sense, they are the 'little stories' told generation after generation to Irish children. . . They are the quiet folklore of the nursery, not the stock-in-trade of the Shanachie or professional story-teller. They are gentle, humorous, often pathetic, suitable for the ears of the very young. Yet never boring for the elders to relate. They link the world of the imagination with the every-day world of common happenings; they are true magic." Margaret Barrington

+ Commonweal 49:236 D 10 '48 550w

"These tales have the affectionate, intimate atmosphere of words from the mouth of an old-time Irish storyteller, as he gathers a circle of children around him. . . They will be welcomed by storytellers." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:35 Ja '49 50w

"Wisely, the dialect is confined chiefly to the dialogue, but the fey quality of the Irish pervades the whole."

+ Kirkus 16:527 O 1 '48 100w

"There is magic and a most engaging old-world flavor in these tales of the Irish countryside which are rich in language and color and full of quiet humor and whimsicality. . . Excellent stories for telling or reading aloud. . . A splendid addition to any library." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 73:1672 N 15 '48 80w

"Despite the author's 'betwixt and between' attitude toward the little people in the realistic stories, it is in the folk literature that she is at her best." A. N. F.

+ N Y Times p59 N 14 '48 120w

CAMPBELL, MRS GRACE MCLENNAN (GRANT). Fresh wind blowing. 233p $2.75 Duell

A48-6379

The scene of this novel is the valley of the Qu'Appelle river in Saskatchewan, and Montreal. It is the study of the growth to emotional maturity of Kari Anderson, whose battle for integrity is hampered by three personal tragedies: the deaths of her twin brother and her husband in the war, and the loss of her child.

Booklist 44:220 F 15 '48

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 24:291 Jl '48 80w

"A bit more than surface storytelling, this gives some picture of the problems and situations in Canada during the war years, adds a touch of spiritual values to its story. Excellent for conservatives."

+ Kirkus 16:34 Ja 15 '48 120w

"In view of the praise given to Miss Campbell's earlier novels, one must take the stand that this third book is a miscalculation. The melodramatic story is undeveloped. Excessive simplification, or a predilection for flat understatement, produces results that are sometimes grotesque. The entire complicated plot is held within 50,000 words. Under such repression the characters are little more than names and the pace is a series of jerks." Robert Molloy

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 F 29 '48 320w

"With an easy, comfortable style and a story packed with the little dramas of everyday living, the author manages to keep the triteness of her plot from mattering too much. It is quite true that her pages are bathed in a kind of misty hopefulness that seems, at times, to drown one's sense of reality; it is equally true that the emotion in Miss Campbell's people, their reaction to that same harsh reality, always rings true. The result is a sincere study of character under stress—a novel that is also a praiseworthy attempt to explain the sacrifices of a generation in the grip of war." Anne Richards

+ — N Y Times p17 Ap 18 '48 270w

Wis Lib Bul 44:133 Je '48

CAMPBELL, MRS PATRICIA. Lush valley. 367p $3 Superior pub.

48-8170

Novel in which Katti Trenholme, on trial for murder, comes to terms with the cowardice that led her to her downfall.

Reviewed by Feike Feikema

Chicago Sun Ja 6 '49 290w

"It's a quiet sympathy that the author has for Katti, who hardly comes to life sufficiently in her own right to be entirely credible or self-supporting. 'Lush Valley' is convincing evidence of Patricia Campbell's considerable talent for constructing an easily-moving story and she writes it unaffectedly and economically throughout. She is at her best in the early chapters devoted to Katti's childhood and life in the Valley; here it is plain enough that her heart is in her work, and there are moments when the effect is as nimble as the flight of a deer bounding into the underbrush. 'Lush Valley' is not at all as phony as its title might set you to suspect." E. F. Meagher

+ — Commonweal 48:576 S 24 '48 420w

"A holding story, with emotional overtones, but without quite the freshness that characterized the earlier book."

+ — Kirkus 16:322 Jl 1 '48 260w

"Author's excessive wordiness will cause many readers' interest to bog down." R. K. Doms

Library J 73:1192 S 1 '48 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 S 26 '48 180w

"Women readers who enjoy the bathos of beauteous, suffering heroines will no doubt become agitated over what happens to Katti." Andrea Parke

N Y Times p32 O 3 '48 140w

CAMPBELL, PATRICIA—Continued

"I am afraid I found the happy ending just a bit on the saccharine side. Miss Campbell's book, however, is written with deep feeling and sincerity, and if it is not quite so profound a study of human frailty as one might wish, it is still a moving and appealing story." S. H. Hay

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:29 O 2 '48 600w

CAMPBELL, SAMUEL ARTHUR. On wings of cheer; a red-winged blackbird shares his happy heart [il. by Bob Kuhn]. 236p $2.50 Bobbs

574 Nature. Animals, Habits and behavior of 48-2430

Another story about the life in and around the author's animal sanctuary in northern Wisconsin. The title comes from the red-winged blackbird called Cheer, but the central character is a small boy with a lisp.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Jl 31 '48 80w

"A tender story which will be most enjoyed if read by mother and child together. Recommended for purchase only by those libraries which do not have to consider budgets." J. M. Smith

+ Library J 73:881 Je 1 '48 70w

CAMPBELL, WALTER STANLEY (STANLEY VESTAL, pseud). Warpath and council fire; the Plains Indians' struggle for survival in war and in diplomacy, 1851-1891. 338p il $3.50 Random house

970.4 Indians of North America—Wars 48-7158

"Walter Stanley Campbell, lifetime student and authority on Indian affairs, writes a narrative of the Plains Indians' struggle for survival in war and in diplomacy, 1851-1891. A phrase from Morisonand Commager aptly describes this book: 'It is a tale of intermittent and barbarous warfare, of broken pacts and broken promises, of greed and selfishness, corruption and maladministration . . . of courageous defense, despair, blind savagery and inevitable defeat for the Indian.' " (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:379 Jl 15 '48

Kirkus 16:99 F 15 '48 170w

"Easy, fascinating, exciting reading, well suited to the average reader, yet scholarly, and authoritative, based on long field research as well as on documentary evidence." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:472 Mr 15 '48 130w

Reviewed by H. N. Smith
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 20 '48 1150w

"Any criticism of 'Warpath and Council Fire' must be of Mr. Vestal's unquestioning acceptance of statements made by Indian informants—notoriously unreliable. . . Those are minor but nevertheless debatable points in a noteworthy contribution to frontier literature. 'Warpath and Council Fire' belongs—with others by the same author—in any library of western Americana." Hoffman Birney

+ — N Y Times p21 Ag 1 '48 450w

New Yorker 24:92 Je 19 '48 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 25 '48 250w

"In this book the well-known writer on Western history, Stanley Vestal, has provided an excellent and fascinating guidebook for a confused, colorful, and politically significant period in the Western expansion of the United States." W. D. Strong

+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 Je 26 '48 750w

CAMUS, ALBERT. Caligula; and, Cross purpose (Le malentendu) tr. by Stuart Gilbert. 168p $3 New directions

842 48-7496

Two plays translated from the French. The first is a four-act tragedy, laid in Rome in the days of Caligula. The second, Cross Purpose, is about a Balkan innkeeper and her daughter who kill a guest for his money, and are in for a terrible surprise when they examine his passport.

"Though Camus is no equal of Sartre, his plays are of value. Recommended for drama, theatre, and French literature collections." George Freedly

Library J 73:1029 Jl '48 50w

Reviewed by Rene Blanc-Roos
Nation 167:404 O 9 '48 550w

"Horrible? Yes, but this is what a whole generation has been forced to feel. . . Because he is a humanist, a 'shameful tenderness' emerges from them. Because he is a Frenchman, 'Caligula' is written with an inflamed rhetoric that reminds one of Racine, and 'Cross Purpose' with the grave intensity of a theatric Pascal. We need hardly ask ourselves for the moment whether these plays are 'good'; it is enough that they are fascinating." Harold Clurman

New Repub 119:25 Ag 16 '48 750w

Reviewed by Anthony Curtis
New Statesman & Nation 36:198 S 4 '48 900w

"Not a happy dramatist to read." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ag 15 '48 350w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley
N Y Times p4 Ag 29 '48 700w

" 'Cross Purpose' may have been somewhat distorted in translation; in any case, it seems to be just a rather talky version of that old barnstormers' favorite, 'The Bells.' "

New Yorker 24:68 Jl 10 '48 200w

"M. Camus has written two interesting plays which mystify more than they entertain. He uses vivid contrast and dramatic irony with no small power. A symbolism seems to lurk round the corner which may not be there at all." John Garrett

Spec 181:188 Ag 6 '48 180w

"For anybody who prides himself on a dramatic library, this volume is as near a 'must' as any which has come along in quite a while."

+ Theatre Arts 32:94 O '48 120w

"Mr Albert Camus has contributed something to the theatre—the drama of thin air. Snatch out of nowhere an idea—that, given unlimited power, one might impose an abstract logic on men and affairs—designate the actor, by say, Caligula, or some other antique tyrant's name, call in an undoubted theatrical talent to provide a dozen telling strokes, and you can have a good deal of fun with readers or spectators too uncertain of their own judgment to treat the incomprehensible with anything but deference. That is what M. Camus has done here very cleverly indeed. But remove that deference, be so discourteous as to poke and prod and ask questions and compare the behaviour of his creatures with the behaviour of men and women, and the joke falls decidedly flat."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p340 Je 19 '48 750w

CAMUS, ALBERT. The plague; tr. from the French by Stuart Gilbert. 278p $3 Knopf 48-7625

A parable for the times, given in the form of a novel depicting the life in a modern city during an epidemic of bubonic plague. The scene is Oran; the central figures are a doctor, a journalist, a criminal, a priest, and a legal official.

Booklist 45:13 S 1 '48

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p8X Ag 1 '48 650w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 48:619 O 8 '48 1350w

"Distinguished by the precision, the purity of its writing, the dignity of its presentation. It may command critical rather than popular attention."

+ Kirkus 16:314 Jl 1 '48 120w

"Excellent, restrained writing." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:1088 Ag '48 100w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 27 '48 150w

Reviewed by Rene Blanc-Roos
Nation 167:404 O 9 '48 550w

"In French or in English this is a first-rate novel. A sober, tautly written account of a raging bubonic plague in the North African city of Oran, it creates a situation of soul-revealing crisis, and peoples that situation with very real and well differentiated characters. . . In telling their story of brave resistance, Albert Camus has accomplished a perfect achievement which, despite the unrelieved grimness of the theme, contains great variety, gay humor and stimulating philosophy." Justine O'Brien
+ New Repub 119:23 Ag 16 '48 1500w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 36:157 Ag 21 '48 2000w

" 'The Plague' is not a tract in disguise or an object lesson enlivened by colored slides. It is an extraordinarily vivid account of a city of men living as intensely and self-consciously as men can live. Camus may or may not have Sartre's eye for the theatrical, but he can create such scenes as the one at the opera performance when the star is stricken in the middle of a note and the elegant audience flees in panic (did Camus recall how Poe did this in 'The Masque of the Red Death' a long time ago?). . . Because 'The Plague' is a novel of man as a member of a group rather than as an individual intent on a private career, it is an unfamiliar literary tradition. But it will, I think, become a marker on the landscape of contemporary fiction." Milton Rugoff
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ag 1 '48 1300w

" 'The Plague' is parable and sermon, and should be considered as such. To criticize it by standards which apply to most fiction would be to risk condemning it for moralizing, which is exactly where it is strongest. 'The Plague' stands or falls by its message. The message is not the highest form of creative art, but it may be of such importance for our time that to dismiss it in the name of artistic criticism would be to blaspheme against the human spirit. What we have to judge is the urgency, for us, of M. Camus' morality. It seems to me to be of so much urgency that we would be wrong to ask how much significance people may attach to it tomorrow." Stephen Spender
+ N Y Times p1 Ag 1 '48 1500w

Reviewed by A. J. Liebling
New Yorker 34:67 Ag 7 '48 1500w

"As somber, as unrelievedly grim as is the general nature of Camus' epical theme . . . the actual writing has grandeur because it is so calm and detached. Occasionally, however, this flatness may make the reader wonder why Mr. Camus went to such bother to choose an unhappy setting for his philosophical discussions. True, the battle against the forces of darkness and ignorance must go on; but it seems to me that the author takes away from the validity and bite of his philosophical argument by shocking us in advance with an unnecessarily gruesome setting." Richard McLaughlin
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:10 Jl 31 '48 1250w

"The Plague is a great deal more than the mere statement of a thesis. It is one of those very rare combinations, an intellectual book that is also a good novel. It can, and should be, read with the attention concentrated solely on the extraordinary events of the book, the fine descriptions of the hot ugly streets, of the horrible manifestations of the disease itself, of the tramcars 'clanking through the warm darkness' with their grisly load of passengers for the crematoria. There are things in this book which no reader will ever forget." Robert Kee
+ Spec 181:314 S 3 '48 650w

Time 52:96 Ag 16 '48 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p497 S 4 '48 750w

"The most admired novel written in France since the late war. M. Camus is a clear thinker and effective writer. There is evidence in this book that he could be a fine novelist if he cared to. . . But instead of writing about particular people he has written about people who are abstract symbols of various political and moral attitudes, never interesting human beings." Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 38:189 autumn '48 230w

CANBY, HENRY SEIDEL. American memoir. 433p $5 Houghton
917.3 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. U.S.—Intellectual life 47-5320
For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"Mr. Canby's approach is frankly personal, but its very personality, together with the urbanity of his style, gives special attractiveness to his American Memoir. It proposes no new or startling ideas, and offers no profound critical insights, but it does give an entertaining and vivid picture of a side of our culture in a critical period of its history. . . Even those who disagree with his critical judgments are likely to find useful the evidence on which he bases them since it is that of an expert witness."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:32 Mr '48 280w
Wis Lib Bul 44:20 Ja '48

" 'American Memoir' is a book of perception and unusual critical insight into the national literature and the national character. If it had been twice as long, it might have been the book one could wish for. But is it not true that the pupil always expects too much from the teacher?" John Farrar
+ Yale R n s 37:365 winter '48 700w

CANBY, HENRY SEIDEL, and BAILEY, ROBESON, eds. Book of the short story. new enl ed 406p $4; text ed $3 Appleton
Short stories—Collections. Short story 48-7436

"This is a revised edition of a standard collection, made some 50 years ago, and now brought up to date with the inclusion of nine additional stories representing the late 19th and 20th centuries. Dr. Canby's introduction, too, has been expanded to represent, historically, the major trends and outstanding figures in the short story field at its peak. There are 27 stories in the collection, ranging from an Egyptian story of about 2500 B.C. to stories of Katherine Mansfield, Sherwood Anderson, Ring Lardner, Hemingway, S. V. Benét, Joyce. Bibliography." Kirkus

Reviewed by Nelson Olmstead
Chicago Sun Ag 30 '48 320w
Kirkus 16:240 My 15 '48 90w

Reviewed by W. R. White
San Francisco Chronicle p11 O 3 '48 350w

CANFIELD, DONALD TREAT, and BOWMAN, JAMES HAROLD. Business, legal, and ethical phases of engineering. 358p $4.50 McGraw 620.07 Engineering 48-4794

"This volume, designed primarily for the student but useful as a reference tool for the businessman and engineer, combines and revises the material of the two volumes Legal and Ethical Phases of Engineering and Business Administration for Engineers, by C. Francis Harding and D. T. Canfield [Book Review Digest 1937]. The combining has forced deletion of some of the material in the above two volumes but the coverage of the selection retained is good." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:106 N 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1279 S 15 '48 40w

CANNING, VICTOR. Panthers' moon. 246p $3 Mill
48-6160

Spy story describing a hunt for two dangerous panthers loose in the Alps after a train

CANNING, VICTOR—Continued
wreck. Further urgency is added to the chase because one of the panthers has two rolls of secret microfilm sewed to his collar.

Booklist 44:313 My 15 '48

"Well-written throughout, exciting and heartily recommended for the jaded palate.
+ Kirkus 16:6 Ja 1 '48 130w

"Capital intrigue-thriller."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:43 Ap 24 '48 40w

CANNON, BLANCHE. Nothing ever happens Sunday morning. 281p $2.75 Putnam 48-1542

Novel of life in a Mormon family. The action all takes place in one day in 1900 but flashbacks fill in the rest of the family history. Eben Benson, for many years a bishop, has the ambition to become one of the twelve apostles of the church. Just about everything happened on the day when he had hoped to realize his ambition.

"On the whole, the narrow life of the Utah village and within the bishop's family is dull and depressing; the presentation of this life in narrative style is less tiresome than the life itself would be but this is slight praise for a story." Ruth Byrns
— + Commonweal 48:82 My 7 '48 190w

"Definitely better than average for sales, quite good for rentals, rather frank for public libraries."
Kirkus 16:94 F 15 '48 170w

"Not recommended." R. P. Tubby
— Library J 73:473 Mr 15 '48 70w

"'Nothing Ever Happens Sunday Morning' is a story with depth, emotional tension, and fine exactitude in its appraisal of the elements of conflict. It is an exceptional work of fiction." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 25 '48 600w

"Had the story been more completely Ellie's story, the novel might have been closed with a feeling of greater elevation; as it is actually written, a reader must leave it with a sense of depression as from a base experience." Lawrence Lee
+ — N Y Times p15 Je 27 '48 360w

CANTWELL, ROBERT. Nathaniel Hawthorne; the American years. 499p il $6 Rinehart
B or 92 Hawthorne, Nathaniel 48-4681

This first volume of a projected two-volume biography deals with Hawthorne's ancestry and life to 1850 and the publication of the Scarlet Letter. The author's purpose is to dispel some of the mystery that has surrounded Hawthorne's early years, to portray him, not as a lonely recluse but as an active politician and journalist as well as student and writer. Bibliography. Index.

Atlantic 182:122 D '48 240w

Reviewed by Marvin Laser
Chicago Sun Ja 13 '49 180w

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 21 '48 550w

Reviewed by Mason Wade
Commonweal 49:380 Ja 21 '49 330w

"A full-length biography which combines literary criticism with personal history, perhaps too monumental in its research save for the student and scholar."
+ Kirkus 16:391 Ag 1 '48 170w

Reviewed by H. W. Hart
Library J 73:1269 S 15 '48 140w

"The amount of laborious research expended on ferreting out details of all kinds concerning everybody and everything Hawthorne knew or might have known is staggering. The story of Hawthorne's life is interrupted continually by the ever-present researcher, and the smaller the detail the better. I have never seen such an aggregation of unconnected, disconnected, supererogatory details, all so badly organized and expressed in so meretricious a style that it must be seen to be believed." H. P. Lazarus
— Nation 167:441 O 16 '48 1300w

"The present reviewer can only record his personal opinion that Mr. Cantwell's thesis is nonsense; but the reader in quest of a mystery story may enjoy what is certainly one of the oddest biographies ever written." Lloyd Morris
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 N 7 '48 280w

Reviewed by Ralph Thompson
N Y Times p41 O 17 '48 330w

New Yorker 24:134 O 16 '48 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p9 D 26 '48 280w

Reviewed by R. E. Spiller
Sat R of Lit 31:14 N 6 '48 480w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley
Springf'd Republican p5C O 31 '48 230w

Time 52:104 O 4 '48 1450w

CAPOTE, TRUMAN. Other voices, other rooms. 231p $2.75 Random house 48-5135

Novel describing the abnormal maturing of a loveless thirteen-year-old boy who goes to live with his father in a run-down Louisiana mansion peopled with eccentric characters.

"Other Voices, Other Rooms is intense, brilliant, and—as a novel—a half failure: too formless and too choked with gaudy blossoms. I hope that Capote's exciting talent will respond to other voices, will explore other rooms. He already has an astonishing command of ways and means, a magic all his own." C. J. Rolo
+ — Atlantic 181:109 Mr '48 390w

Reviewed by Ralph Habas
Chicago Sun p7X F 1 '48 470w

"Much may still be desired in this tale of a pilgrimage through adolescence whose sources appear to be first-hand and autobiographical despite the apparent influences of McCullers, Barnes, Faulkner and Proust. 'Other Voices, Other Rooms' must be reckoned with as a fascinating experiment in symbols and images by this young but mature and skilful writer, notwithstanding the immediate reservations made by those who prefer obscure substance to definite shadow." W. E. Harriss
Commonweal 47:500 F 27 '48 390w

Kirkus 15:629 N 15 '47 150w

"Much lush writing, frequently trailing off into illusory fancies of sick brains, losing its way, yet withal picturesque. Not recommended for libraries." J. E. Cross
— Library J 72:1685 D 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 O 29 '48 210w

"Even if Mr. Capote were ten or twenty years older than he is, his powers of description and evocation, his ability to bend language to his poetic moods, his ear for dialect and for the varied rhythms of speech would be remarkable. In one so young this much writing skill represents a kind of genius. On the other hand, I find myself deeply antipathetic to the whole artistic-moral purpose of Mr. Capote's novel. In Mr. Capote's case, as in the case of so many of the most gifted contemporary artists, I would freely trade 80 per cent of his technical virtuosity for 20 per cent more value in the uses to which it is put." Diana Trilling
+ — Nation 166:133 Ja 31 '48 1350w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 118:31 Ja 26 '48 600w

Reviewed by Walter Allen
New Statesman & Nation 36:445 N 20 '48 240w

"It is knowledge of the human heart which 'Other Voices, Other Rooms' gives us; and this is genuine achievement. It is not only a work of unusual beauty, but a work of unusual intelligence. In it, readers will establish contact with one of the most accomplished American novelists to make his debut in many a season." Lloyd Morris
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ja 18 '48 1300w

"Truman Capote's emergent skills place him within earshot and walking distance of other voices and other rooms than those he records and examines here. From a present, and virtually absolute, dependence upon experimental method and devised language, he can rescue himself by discovering and carefully constructing an adult-level story that really needs telling. The story of Joel Knox did not need to be told, except to get it out of the author's system." Carlos Baker
N Y Times p5 Ja 18 '48 800w

New Yorker 23:80 Ja 24 '48 130w

"What Mr. Capote is after, I think, is the symbolizing of any and all growing boys' inner confusions through the outward nightmare of Skully's Landing. If this is his purpose, as I think it is, he achieves it very well. Further, he knows how to write. In spite of this, however, his novel doesn't quite come off, I believe. Perhaps you don't impose shape on a nightmare successfully, no matter how you try. But a novel must somehow have shape, and this one has very little indeed. Just the same Mr. Capote is a writer; make no mistake about that." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 27 '48 500w

"It would appear that instead of writing a cohesive narrative of people who move in a region where the dream world exists side by side with the familiar and commonplace, Mr. Capote, for all his deftness in creating an image has concocted a witch's brew which boils and boils to no avail. . . This is regrettable since Mr. Capote does have a remarkable facility with words; he can make perfectly normal horrors and shocks appear like enormities upon the senses." Richard McLaughlin
— + Sat R of Lit 31:12 F 14 '48 850w

Reviewed by Robert Kee
Spec 181:674 N 19 '48 550w

"As a novelist, Truman Capote, who was born in New Orleans, owes something to Proust, something to Faulkner. In some ways he gets very close to childhood and to the profoundly sensational values of a child. But for all his novel's gifted invention and imagery, the distasteful trappings of its homosexual theme overhang it like Spanish moss."
+ — Time 51:102 Ja 26 '48 550w

"As a matter of construction, it might be thought that the author would have done better to end his book at the time of the storm in the fun-fair. . . The last chapter is, in its way, something of an anti-climax; and its unpleasant implications are, in any case, more or less implicit in the sense conveyed of the children's inevitable recapture sooner or later. The dialogue is handled with skill and the general atmosphere of the South excellently suggested."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p609 O 30 '48 650w

"Flashily brilliant, tremendously engrossing, uncanny in its suggestive power, but by no means a good novel—this must be the verdict on this precocious and exotic work by a Southerner of twenty-three." Orville Prescott
— + Yale R n s 37:575 spring '48 230w

CARDOZO, BENJAMIN NATHAN. Selected writings; ed. by Margaret E. Hall; with a foreword by Edwin W. Patterson. 456p $5 Fallon law bk. co, inc, 149 Broadway, N.Y. 6

340 Law 47-11282

"Edited by the Reference Law Librarian at Columbia University, this compilation of writings of one of the leading jurists of our time presents the literary and human Cardozo, as well as the legal thinker. There is the sense of perfection, appreciation of philosophy and feeling for style of a widely read man. In addition to the legal 'classics' such as The Nature of the Judicial Process, are Values, a commencement address, Law and Literature, and others of an earlier period." Library J

Reviewed by W. T. Gouch
Cath World 166:565 Mr '48 650w

Reviewed by Samuel Null
Columbia Law R 48:307 Mr '48 800w

"The foreword by Professor Patterson adds a very pleasant and illuminating note to this volume. Recommended." Walter Hausdorfer
+ Library J 72:1190 S 1 '47 90w

"Lawyers long familiar with Cardozo's opinions as Chief Justice of New York's Court of Appeals and as a member of the United States Supreme Court will recognize in his address the same technical craftsmanship, integrity of mind and lucid expression that marked his pronouncements from the bench. Lay readers will delight in the richness of Cardozo's writing which in style reminds one of Matthew Arnold to whom he paid tribute in one of his student essays." H. J. B.
+ N Y Times p14 F 22 '48 650w

"It is impossible, and, in fact, it is unnecessary in a brief review such as this to attempt to summarize and evaluate Judge Cardozo's contribution to jurisprudence. This has been done, and will continue to be done, by judges, lawyers, and scholars. The particular interest at the moment, of this book is that in addition to making conveniently available in one volume Cardozo's views on law and the judicial function, it reveals in his own words a clearer portrait of the great man who was so recently among us." Newman Levy
+ Sat R of Lit 31:15 Ja 3 '48 1100w

CAREN, ELLEN, pseud. See Schoenberner, E.

CARFRAE, ELIZABETH. Good morning, Miss Morrison. 245p $2.50 Putnam

48-2983

Priscilla Morrison, an English school mistress devoted to her chosen profession, astonished herself by falling in love with an American squadron leader, who joined the RAF before America entered the war. On the eve of their marriage the American was killed. From then on Priscilla's one aim in life was to become head-mistress of St Hilary's.

Booklist 45:51 O 1 '48

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 24 '48 90w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p8B O 10 '48 180w

CARLETON, PHILLIPS D. Hawk, the white Indian; the captivity of David Aiken; il. by Paul Laune. 210p $2.50 Bobbs

47-31315

David, an orphan, was captured by Indians and adopted into their tribe. The story is of his courage and his life with the Indians, where he fitted in well because of his love of the outdoors. For ages nine to fourteen.

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

"Skillfully written, suspenseful narrative told in the words of the hero, and the wealth of information on Indian lore would be valuable supplementary reading for students. Recommended for ages 9-14." Judith Stevenson
+ Library J 72:1618 N 15 '47 70w

CARLSON, MRS BERNICE WELLS. Junior party book; il. by Magdalena Tolson. new ed 160p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

793 Entertaining. Games 48-8298

Instructions for giving twenty-four parties, seasonal and other types. For ages four to fourteen. Includes suggestions for invitations, decorations, games and refreshments. For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1940. Index.

Booklist 45:75 O 15 '48

Kirkus 16:480 S 15 '48 110w

Reviewed by Claire Nolte
Library J 73:1525 O 15 '48 70w

CARMER, CARL LAMSON. Eagle in the wind; il. by Elizabeth Black Carmer. [56p] $2.50 Aladdin 48-10020

"Story of an eagle weather vane who takes his one and only flying trip on the wings of a hurricane but in due time is restored to his rightful station." Library J

"A weathervane eagle and his adventurous story told with a most pleasing economy of words and a lovely poetical turn. The pictures are as dramatic as the text." C. H. B.
+ Commonweal 49:146 N 19 '48 50w

+ Kirkus 16:525 O 1 '48 120w

"Attractive book for reading aloud or for a reading level centering around fourth grade. . . A simple story, but an original one with just enough personification of an inanimate object to endear it to a child. Recommended." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 73:1672 N 15 '48 70w

"Carl Carmer's prose is simple and lovely in rhythm. . . Elizabeth Black Carmer's black-and-white illustrations are a charming and integral part of the story." M. C. Ernst
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 21 '48 180w

"Though Elizabeth Carmer's watery black-and-white illustrations in this story for 8-to-12's are weak accompaniment for the cadenced prose of her historian husband, Carl Carmer, the double-page colored pictures and the jacket attract young eyes." S. C. G.
N Y Times p60 N 14 '48 140w

New Yorker 24:126 D 11 '48 80w

"The eagle's story is told in quiet, rhythmic words that have a singing quality. There is dignity and beauty in the soft black and white drawings, but the three double-page spreads in color are disappointing. The heavy, deep color is not in key with the text or with the delicate black and white pictures."
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:27 N 13 '48 230w

Wis Lib Bul 44:214 D '48

CARNEGIE, DALE. How to stop worrying and start living. 306p $2.95 Simon & Schuster
131.337 Worry 48-7185

Suggestions, fortified by explicit rules, on how to overcome the worry habit. The book contains many case histories as illustrations, with a final section entirely devoted to "true stories." Index.

Booklist 44:362 Jl 1 '48

"It is easy to say that he sentimentalizes and generalizes, but he manages to get over effectively some sound home truths, helpful suggestions, intelligent and constructive techniques for the average man and woman."
+ — Kirkus 16:202 Ap 15 '48 190w

"Mr. Carnegie's latest blueprint for a social Garden of Eden is so choked with formula, exhortation and case history that no reader will go entirely unrewarded." Thomas Lask
N Y Times p14 Je 20 '48 400w

"How to Stop Worrying, of which 125,000 advance copies are already in print, is likely to make a bestselling bang that will surprise even its sophisticated publishers."
Time 51:101 Je 14 '48 1200w

CARR, EDWARD HALLETT. International relations between the two World wars (1919-1939). 302p maps $2.25 Macmillan
909.82 International relations. World politics [A48-8249]

"Professor Carr . . . divides his study into the following parts: the period of enforcement and alliances (1920-24); the period of pacification and the League of Nations (1924-30); the period of crisis and the return of power politics (1930-33); and the re-emergence of Germany and the end of the treaties (1933-39). The point of view of the author is primarily European and secondarily British." (Am Pol Sci R) Index. This work is a revision and expansion of the author's International Relations since the Peace Treaties (Book Review Digest 1937).

"As a former member of the British diplomatic service and at present professor of international politics at the University of Wales, the author is exceptionally well qualified to write a distinctive work in this somewhat overcrowded field. . . Carr's work is brief and compact. Like many of the better English writers, moreover, his style is refreshingly uncluttered, and since he is a master of understatement, his generalizations ring true. As a result, Carr has produced a volume of superior craftmanship." W. N. Hadsel
+ Am Pol Sci R 42:826 Ag '48 300w

"American scholars can only say to Professor Carr and to Macmillans of London: We respect you. We admire you. We are sorry and ashamed at this curious and deplorable performance. Please don't do such things. And please, Dr. Carr, when you have time for careful research, for serious thinking, and for the analytical and stylistic accomplishment in which you excel, do write a book on 'International Relations between the Two World Wars.' It will be worth writing and worth reading. This little piece of ersatz is neither." F. L. Schuman
— Ann Am Acad 260:190 N '48 280w

CARR, JOHN DICKSON (CARTER DICKSON, pseud). Skeleton in the clock. 282p $2.50 Morrow 48-8781

Detective story.

Booklist 45:138 D 15 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun O 29 '48 70w

Kirkus 16:380 Ag 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 O 24 '48 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p31 O 31 '48 160w

"The solutions are plausible enough, in view of the material they're based on, but the prevailing tone of this mystery is one of almost complete hysteria."
New Yorker 24:136 O 16 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 7 '48 60w

"Redoubtable H. M. as bluff and perceptive as ever in case which, as usual, involves considerable unscrewing of inscrutable—also much neat comedy. First rate."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:38 O 23 '48 50w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '48 150w

CARR, ROBERT KENNETH. Federal protection of civil rights: quest for a sword. 284p $3 Cornell univ. press
323.4 Civil rights 48-5117

"For more than eight years the Civil Rights Section in the Department of Justice has had as its purpose 'the protection of the people by the Government.' This volume endeavors to tell the story of this unique and little-known agency. The research upon which this book is based was done in 1944 and 1945. . . The data and conclusions in this volume, with few exceptions, do not take into account developments of the last two years." (Pref) Table of cases. Index.

"Professor Carr has given us a timely and effective book, admirably conceived, balanced in organization and presentation—a work that meets the requirements of scholarship as well as literary artistry. In all these respects it may well serve as a model of research and writing in political science." A. T. Mason
+ Am Pol Sci R 42:567 Je '48 1050w

Reviewed by C. B. Swisher
Ann Am Acad 257:208 My '48 280w

Booklist 45:5 S 1 '48

"Professor Carr's book will be found rewarding by every lawyer who is made unhappy by injustice. He will find plenty to be unhappy about, but he will also find a positive remedial program proposed with clarity and confidence." T. H. Eliot

+ Harvard Law R 61:902 My '48 480w

Reviewed by Morroe Berger
N Y Times p14 My 2 '48 490w

"An important and valuable contribution to the literature of liberty in the United States." M. L. Ernst

+ Sat R of Lit 31:24 F 28 '48 700w

"It is encouraging to note that current American thinking about civil rights is being brought up to date. New dangers and threats to civil rights require new weapons and strategies, and, above all, a realistic understanding of the nature of the threats themselves. Mr. Carr is at once a modernist and a realist, a theorist and a technician. He has provided an indispensable handbook for all those who are interested in civil rights in the modern world." Carey McWilliams

+ Survey G 37:222 Ap '48 700w

"Lawyers and constitutional specialists will find valuable the admirable analysis of the constitutional and legal problems in federal protection of civil rights. Professor Carr has succeeded in presenting these inherently complex matters with such clarity that the book will be indispensable also to the citizen seeking to understand these significant problems."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:68 Mr '48 250w

CARR, ROBERT SPENCER. Room beyond. 427p $3 Appleton
48-4616

The tale of Dan Bryce's lifelong search for the inspiration of his life, the woman called Cristina. As a boy he met her in the slum section of an Ohio city, helping the poor. After she disappeared, Dan searched for her everywhere and years later found her in New Orleans. Again she disappeared and Dan struggled on, catching up with her in a Penitente village in New Mexico. A fourth time he met her in his old age, and that time he realized would be the last.

Kirkus 16:378 Ag 1 '48 180w

"This surprisingly unorthodox story grips the reader. . . In his treatment of Cristina the author shows a sympathetic insight into the space-time problem—a problem confessedly beyond the comprehension of man. Recommended." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 73:1272 S 15 '48 100w

"'The Room Beyond' is narrative magic; it has the surface fascination of a mystery thriller, the excitement and heartache of a romance doomed by the gods, and underneath all this a concern for and a penetration into the mysteries of space, time, life and that inward shifting of focus we call death. . . Daniel Bryce's adventure is a superb tale, told by a born story-teller." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 O 17 '48 750w

"Perhaps Mr. Carr has created a new category of book to be placed alongside the popular whodunit, the whatisit. At any rate, it is harder to describe his book than to put it down. . . Mr. Carr touches on beauty now and again in his original but unsuccessful novel. Too often he tarries with the recondite, the freakish and the ridiculous." Charles Lee

N Y Times p47 O 17 '48 750w

CARR, WILLIAM HENRY. Desert parade; a guide to southwestern desert plants and wildlife; phot. by Marvin H. Frost. 96p $2.50 Viking

574.979 Natural history—West. Desert fauna. Desert flora 47-12062

Brief descriptions of the most prominent plants and animals of the desert section of the southwestern United States. The area covered includes western Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California, southern Nevada and Utah. Illustrated with photographs. Map on endpapers. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 44:212 F 15 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '48

"To avoid bulk and cost, [the author] presents only the high spots—the flora and fauna a visitor is most likely to come in contact with; his descriptions are always terse but vividly informative; the many photographs are sharp, clear, revelatory, beautifully reproduced."

Commonweal 48:681 Ap 30 '48 130w

"Well-written book. . . It would be possible to be dull in this field, but Mr. Carr, loving the desert and its forms of life, gets his enthusiasm into his writing." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p3 D 28 '47 100w

"Excellent photographs by Marvin H. Frost depict many of the items which Mr. Carr describes. The volume is done up attractively, and sturdily enough to withstand tourist thumbing." R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 9 '48 340w

CARRINGTON, CHARLES EDMUND. An exposition of empire. (Current problems ser) 140p $1.25 Macmillan (for the Cambridge univ. press)

325.342 Great Britain—Colonies [48-12011]

Brief history of the rise of the British empire, both in its ascendency and its decline. The first chapter attempts to answer the question: What is the British empire? Subsequent chapters describe British expansion in North America, Asia and Africa. A closing chapter takes up the outlook for the future. Index.

Current Hist 14:295 My '48 50w

Foreign Affairs 26:749 Jl '48 10w

"Mr. Carrington traces the growth of the British Empire readably, comprehensively and at times suggestively, but it is not necessary to follow him in all his comments and criticisms. To say of the slave trade that 'it paid the traders best to keep their livestock healthy; a nation of animal lovers could be trusted to see to that' raises doubts as to whether the writer has ever heard of the horrors of the Middle Passage. . . The reference to 'the Little Englanders who gloated indecently over British losses in battle' in the Boer War is itself indecent unless evidence can be adduced to suppport it."

+ — Spec 179:812 D 26 '47 270w

"There is the greatest possible value in a book such as Mr. Carrington's, which embodies in a highly readable form, comprehensible to schoolboys or to adults who feel themselves unequal to works of severe scholarship, the fruits of modern thought and research upon the British Empire. No field of historical inquiry has suffered more from neglect, prejudice and the idée fixe. . . Mr. Carrington has also succeeded in a far more difficult task. Within the confines of 136 pages he has presented a clear and coherent account of the forces which underlay the various phases of Imperial expansion and retreat."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p611 N 29 '47 850w

CARROLL, ALICE, ed. See Good housekeeping (periodical). Needlecraft encyclopedia

CARROLL, WALLACE. Persuade or perish. 392p $4 Houghton

940.5488 Propaganda. U.S.—Foreign policy. International relations. World war, 1939-1945—Propaganda 48-8272

"The story of psychological warfare where the battleground is the mind both of the enemy and of ourselves, by the director of the OWI in London who superintended the operations in the European theatre. A running history . . . it traces the use of psychological warfare from the bungling African campaign and the Darlan affair through the invasion of Germany and the Gotterdammerung of Goebbels. However, primarily, this stresses the pressing necessity of creating a fourth arm to our services with the shadow of Russian expansion." (Kirkus) No index.

CARROLL, WALLACE—Continued
Reviewed by F. L. Hadsel
Am Pol Sci R 42:1250 D '48 330w

Booklist 45:63 O 15 '48

Chicago Sun p7X S 5 '48 110w

Reviewed by Charles Gratke
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 2 '48 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '48

"A lively exciting book. A timely book for today, as well as a dramatic account of this particular branch of warfare as it operated through the war years."
+ Kirkus 16:351 Jl 15 '48 170w

Reviewed by Franz Hoellering
Nation 167:523 N 6 '48 1800w

"A balanced, reflective study of psychological warfare in general and American wartime propaganda in particular. It is a chastening message for US policymakers." Richard Watts
+ New Repub 119:26 S 6 '48 1300w

"The title of Wallace Carroll's new book defines concisely and accurately the alternatives that face us. The cold war is essentially a contest in persuasion. . . If we cannot win the cold war, then we will all very probably perish in the hot war. How good are Americans likely to be in the contest of persuasion? Few people are better equipped than Wallace Carroll to consider this question, and in 'Persuade or Perish' he makes some lucid and penetrating answers. . . If enough people, in the government and in the electorate, will read 'Persuade or Perish,' we will stand a better chance of following the policies which may yet preserve the world from war." A. M. Schlesinger, jr.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ag 15 '48 1200w

"It is unlikely that anyone else could have written 'Persuade or Perish,' because so few other men had the facilities available to Carroll. . . Carroll displays acute perceptions, analytical skill, personal disinterestedness. Add the extraordinary amount and quality of the information he gathered in his daily business of mesmerizing the enemy into defeat, of heartening friends and otherwise helping to pave the road to victory, and the result is richly rewarding to anyone who would evaluate the conduct of the recent war." Morris Gilbert
+ N Y Times p9 S 5 '48 1100w

New Yorker 24:116 S 25 '48 200w

"A wise and profound discussion of the relation between politics and war." Herbert Agar
+ Sat R of Lit 31:10 Ag 14 '48 700w

Survey G 37:433 O '48 1600w

Wis Lib Bul 44:185 N '48

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle
Yale R n s 38:351 winter '49 650w

CARTER, DAGNY (OLSEN) (MRS T. F. CARTER). Four thousand years of China's art. 358p il maps $7.50 Ronald

709.5 Art, Chinese. China—Civilization
48-6410

"The material in this volume has been considerably expanded beyond that of its predecessor, China Magnificent [Book Review Digest 1935], to include a large number of new illustrations, as well as the results of recent extensive discoveries and research. In addition to serving the college student, Four Thousand Years of China's Art is designed for those individuals who desire a sound knowledge of Chinese art but lack the time and the facilities to go to the vast and complex sources for their study." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"Maps, the ever-necessary table of dynasties in Chinese history, and innumerable illustrations with a readable and enthusiastic text, must be highly praised. Chapters on 'Influences in Europe's Industrial Art' and on 'Art Under the Republic' will be widely useful. . . Recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 73:878 Je 1 '48 110w

"The book does correlate the economic, religious, and political factors that have influenced Chinese artistic expression and gives, within the author's self-imposed limitations, a surprisingly comprehensive and coherent account of the flowering of Chinese culture. Well illustrated."
+ New Yorker 24:115 Ap 17 '48 80w

"A sane well-balanced textbook is of course the best substitute for, and the best friend of, an experienced instructor, and 'Four Thousand Years of China's Art,' by Dagny Carter, is a long step in the right direction. Mrs. Carter has been a keen student of Chinese matters for a quarter of a century; she has lived in China, and has known personally, and well, most of the scholars who are responsible for our recent progress in the knowledge of things Chinese. Her book is a mine of information in compact form, though the categorical statement is refreshingly absent." C. F. Kelley
+ Sat R of Lit 31:28 Ag 14 '48 850w

School & Society 68:15 Jl 3 '48 20w

CARTER, GEORGE GOLDSMITH. The smacksmen, a story of the fishermen of the Borough. 297p $2.75 Houghton
48-7856

Novel about the perilous lives of the East Anglian fishermen of the town called the Borough. Two families, the Ropners and the Turnbulls, furnish the central characters. When Sam Turnbull is swept overboard in a storm John Ropner takes a hand in the affairs of Sam's son. Steam trawlers become numerous, but young Roger Turnbull is loyal to the graceful boats of his father's day.

Booklist 45:158 Ja 1 '49

"It is a faithful and stirring picture, by one who knows 'The Borough' and it certainly adds to our understanding of, and admiration for, the men who man England's little ships." E. Forbes-Boyd
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 26 '47 420w

Reviewed by John Bunker
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 S 18 '48 300w

"With all his opportunities for derring-do and disaster, George Carter cannot bring to life his grizzled smacksmen, his violent seascape. Everything just happens with a tailor-made convenience which is too blatantly contrived. People are killed off with an infantile dispatch that is hardly credible to the average adult reader. . . 'The Smacksmen' smacked me much as a languid cod slapped across my face; I could not miss the strong briny aroma, but I was somewhat numbed by the blow. Neither was I able to perceive anything three-dimensional in Mr. Carter's fishermen, even though he has crowded every sea custom and sea tale he knows into the unwieldy necklace of his narrative." Elizabeth Johnson
— Commonweal 48:427 Ag 20 '48 290w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 21 '47 90w

"It is not at all my sort of book: nevertheless it is perhaps some indication of its worth that it held my interest right to the end." John Morris
+ New Statesman & Nation 33:299 Ap 26 '47 150w

"Mr. Carter's zeal for his theme and his authority to treat of it are both very high. He achieves great drama in his accounts of storms, of the hard work of the men and the torment and grief of the women. He keeps his scene lively with the interplay of minor characters and generates warmth and color with great skill. But his work falls short of being a really fine novel because of the lack of compulsion in his father-and-son protagonists. Mr. Carter is, after all, concerned with recording a certain passage of history and such an effort must hang upon a really strong central framework or none at all." C. B. Palmer
+ N Y Times p28 N 28 '48 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 3 '48 170w

"[The author] is a Suffolk man, born in the Borough town of Aldeburgh, and his book is as full of fish and salt water as the sea off Sloughden Quay. It is not, however, bold, artful, surly, or savage. It is written with a rough tenderness, a disarming devotion, and in old-fashioned, strangely anachronistic style. Mr. Carter is plainly in love with his subject, without the illusions of infatuation, and the steady light of his affection shines like a lighthouse throughout the book. . . Actually, 'The Smacksmen,' whether Mr. Carter knows it or not, is a documentary, and quite a good one, which has been given a semblance of form and chronology by the use of a simple plot." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 31:12 Jl 31 '48 650w

"It is worthy of respect if only because of the author's integrity, his obvious reluctance to make any concession to the sentimentality of the reader. Here at least is a narrative that carries conviction. The smell of salt water, the harsh resonance of the Suffolk dialect, the undisciplined recital of the adventures that comprise a fisherman's life may not be especially satisfying as art, but they are quite indisputably life. And it is a life that Mr. Carter describes extremely well."
+ Spec 178:378 Ap 4 '47 410w

"There is old lore in the book, half forgotten now, dialect and a sense of veracity. Perhaps, such is its abundance of episode, difficult to relate to the narrative, the book would have shaped better as history and reminiscence, for Mr Carter is full of his subject. He seems to have demanded of the novel more than that form should be expected to hold."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 29 '47 360w

CARTER, JOHN. Taste and technique in book-collecting. 203p $5 Bowker
025.2 Book collecting 48-7661

The author, who is the managing director of Charles Scribner's Sons, Ltd., of London, here presents "a study of recent developments in [book collecting] in Great Britain and the United States." The work, which is based on his Sandars lectures at Cambridge University, analyzes the main currents in collecting since the Roxburghe sale of 1812. Index.

"A graduate treatise, rather than a primer of collecting, this is not likely to attract the layman; but members of what Carter calls the 'four estates of bibliophily'—collectors, bibliographers, booksellers and librarians—will find it informative, lively, and gracefully written." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 73:1092 Ag '48 140w

"This is a well-rounded consideration of the subject, balanced, sensible and sound. As for Mr. Carter's style . . . its informality, gives the whole book the air of a pleasant, stimulating conversation among friends. It remains only to say that this is not, and Mr. Carter doesn't intend it to be, a manual for the beginner." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 4 '48 600w

"A genial, informative discussion of the interrelationships of taste and technique in the art of book collecting." Donald Wing
+ Yale R n s 38:378 winter '49 650w

CARTER, PHYLLIS ANN, pseud. See Eberle, I.

CARTER, RUSSELL GORDON. Teen-age historical stories; il. by Edgard Cirlin. 251p $2.50 Lantern press (N Y)
48-7081

"A collection of tales built around interesting historical events in the early days of this country. High spots have been played up with fictional episodes true to character." Springf'd Republican

"He has unearthed interesting bits of history in unlikely documents and letters, and built lively stories about unsung heroes. . . The book rates a place not only on the boys' action story shelf, but in school libraries for salutary introduction to history."
+ Kirkus 16:215 My 1 '48 130w

"A very average collection of short stories." C. W. Field
Library J 73:955 Je 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Je 13 '48 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
N Y Times p19 Jl 11 '48 140w

"These individual stories are complete in themselves and afford excellent lessons in character development. . . The author has managed to give his youthful readers stories based on actual history and filled with excitement and thrills, danger and adventure, but packed with stimulating worthwhile physical and mental reactions to situations and with people extraordinary. Never is the criminal element allowed to become impressive or important." S. M. Neal
+ Springf'd Republican p10B Je 20 '48 390w

CARY, JOYCE. Herself surprised. 275p $3 Harper
48-8103

Novel in which Sara Monday tells of the foolish path that led her to prison.

"The life story, in the first person singular, of one of the most engaging and subtly realized heroines of recent fiction. Here is a saga of the downward path which has robust reality and intense feeling, and which is richly humorous in the telling." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 182:109 O '48 470w

"Mr. Cary approaches his material with mature understanding, working entirely from internal evidence. . . It is recommended to all who appreciate exceptionally fine craftsmanship and a picture of plain people facing up to the plain facts of living." John Gross
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 20 '48 300w

Kirkus 16:342 Jl 15 '48 190w

"This is distinctly a superior novel. The finished style and natural prose attest to Mr. Cary's talent and skill. One can hope that more of his novels will be published in America and that he will be more widely read on this side of the ocean." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 73:1272 S 15 '48 100w

"Mr. Joyce Cary's light-hearted yet shrewd story of this buxom daughter out of Moll Flanders by Rubens may not be what is sometimes referred to as 'good clean fun,' but it is fun indeed and subtly, tangily, somewhat more: it is social satire of the sort that Mrs. Gaskell, say, was perfect mistress of a hundred-odd years ago." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 26 '48 900w

"Mr. Cary's prose has a well disciplined quality which has gone somewhat out of fashion. He is writing in the first person about a feminine character, and the spontaneity of the narrative never slips a notch. Sara Monday, the 'I' of the narrative, is a woman, warm and real, and twice as natural as most women in fiction, never mind the gender of the author." H. B. Parker
+ N Y Times p34 O 3 '48 250w

"Pleasantly told, though there are some things about the story—notably, a marked inconclusiveness—that stand out rather starkly against the rows of incandescent adjectives that critics sent up in Mr. Cary's honor last year, when another of his novels, 'The Moonlight,' was published over here."
New Yorker 24:109 S 18 '48 150w

"Joyce Cary has been robustly successful in reducing morality to absurdity. Happy, healthy laughter is the only possible response to sex as he sees it. And don't let anyone, not even Mr. Cary himself, inject the faintest note of derision into this laughter. I for one choose to take Sara Monday straight, and let those who will, seek satire." C. M. Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 31:38 O 9 '48 470w

+ Time 52:106 S 20 '48 550w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 38:384 winter '49 110w

CASE, VICTORIA, and CASE, ROBERT ORMOND. We called it culture; the story of Chautauqua. 272p $3 Doubleday
374.973 Chautauquas 48-5380

A history of the American institution known as Chautauqua, from its early days on the shores of Chautauqua lake, to the days when towns all over the United States had their traveling Chautauquas. This movement reached its peak in 1924 when it is estimated that thirty million people visited the various Chautauquas. Bibliography.

Booklist 44:345 Je 15 '48

Reviewed by Ralph Habas
Chicago Sun p8X F 8 '48 420w

"The Cases, brother and sister, tell the story well, and show much appreciation of American sentiments, aspirations, traditions. They avoid cynicism, eschew pomposity, and show respect for things deserving respect." R. H. M.
Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 2 '48 550w

"For all its information, it is a half-done book. Its facts are surface facts. It makes slight reference only to the permanent Chautauqua. The chapters on Bryan are disquieting for more and graver reasons than Bryan himself. Behind the phenomenon are still the questions: what compels us as a people toward self-improvement; what permits us to be satisfied so cheaply? The quest was not fulfilled by Chautauqua. Chautauqua was over when uplift could be more easily obtained packaged by movies, radio, columnists, and the Reader's Digest. But the Cases are correct in this: we still call it culture." Florence Codman
+ — Commonweal 47:600 Mr 26 '48 500w

Kirkus 15:666 D 1 '47 170w

"The Cases give good measure in their account. They seem to me to wobble often in their point of view to high-hat some of their story, and be less than critical of the horrendous speech, 'Acres of Diamonds,' a speech made to American audiences 6,000 times by Dr. Russell H. Conway, the full text of which appears in an appendix." Ernestine Evans
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 F 22 '48 1150w

Reviewed by M. R. Werner
N Y Times p5 Mr 14 '47 750w

"An amusing but not very solidly written history of the Chautauqua show."
New Yorker 23:85 F 14 '48 140w

"For less than 20 cents a program, audiences heard the best orators of the day, the funniest funnymen, the finest actors. It must have been a lot of fun. And this book about it is a lot of fun too." James Eden
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 F 1 '48 50w

"Here in this fine book is the whole picture of Chautauqua, a thorough, well-written, and competently organized account of an American phenomenon which is without parallel elsewhere in the world. It could be read with profit and enjoyment by every American who is interested in the cultural development of his country, and some twenty million of our citizens could read it with nostalgic affection. . . This book should prove of great value to students of the American scene. It is surprising that it hasn't been written before. But it is fortunate that the task of writing it fell into the Cases' capable hands." Herbert Asbury
+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 F 14 '48 900w
Time 51:100 F 9 '48 650w
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:172 Je '48 240w
Wis Lib Bul 44:78 Ap '48

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH. Mr. Clutch; the story of George William Borg. 258p il $3.50 Bobbs
B or 92 Borg, George William 48-7275

Breezily, informally written biography of a modern American big-business man, who began life as the son of a Swedish immigrant in the middle west, and is now a power in the automotive parts industry and the owner of a fabulous hotel in Arizona.

Booklist 44:381 Jl 15 '48

Reviewed by Edward Kandlik
Chicago Sun Je 22 '48 330w

CASEY, ROBERT JOSEPH, and DOUGLAS, WILLIAM ARCHER SHOLTO. Pioneer railroad; the story of the Chicago and North Western system. 334p il maps $4 McGraw 385 Chicago and North Western railway 48-9580

"Two Chicago newspapermen report the rise and development of the Chicago and North Western Railroad for its centennial year. In those 100 years, the CNW has expanded from a single-track Chicago-Galena line about 40 miles long to a mighty network of nearly 10,000 miles stretching through the Northwest, into the Dakotas, the Nebraska plains, and wooded lands of Wisconsin and Minnesota." Chicago Sun

Booklist 45:171 Ja 15 '49

"This is a natural for every railroad fan from Lucius Beebe to the little man who has always had a secret passion to pilot a sleek locomotive. . . Casey and Douglas, who are good story-tellers, are at their best in relating CNW lore. . . Sixteen pages of excellent photographs—ranging from those of the earliest CNW trains to such historical curiosa as the road's ads for free land for homesteaders in the Dakotas—add to the merit of this interesting volume." Herman Kogan
+ Chicago Sun p18 D 30 '48 400w

"A definitive study for the devotee, with a certain amount of local and regional reference value."
Kirkus 16:585 N 1 '48 160w

"Much of this material—construction tables, lists of stations, lists of directors—will be of interest, it seems to me, only to construction operators, station agents, and directors. Much of the railroad lore will be lost on all but company employees, railroad buffs, and Lucius Beebe. But there is enough of a thread of general interest—for railroads belong to everybody—running the course of this book to provide a nostalgic turn for all but the most impassive."
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:29 D 18 '48 220w

CASTOR, HENRY. The Spanglers. 308p $3 Doubleday
48-8526

Historical novel which tells the story of the Spanglers, a Pennsylvania Dutch family, during Civil war days.

Booklist 45:66 O 15 '48

"A researched, solid novel of time, place and people, whose feeling for the Dutch of Lancaster is as filling as their food."
+ Kirkus 16:346 Jl 15 '48 140w

"The characters live, and if their actions may sometimes seem contrived rather than logically developed, the story holds reader's absorbed attention. Combination of romance and adventure which makes for excellent entertainment." J. L. Ross
+ Library J 73:1273 S 15 '48 70w

"Henry Castor is somewhat in the predicament of a farmer who has plowed up more soil than he can successfully cultivate. A young novelist of abundant energy and imagination, he covers so much ground that he occasionally has the reader wondering just where he is going, and not too certain that Mr. Castor himself has fixed the artistic bounds of his acreage of plot." Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 S 26 '48 420w

"Henry Castor adds the Spanglers to America's fictional list of happy families, with some fine sentiments, solid adventure and a wealth of lusty melodrama." Jane Martin
+ N Y Times p45 N 21 '48 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 11 '48 750w

Wis Lib Bul 44:213 D '48

CATHER, WILLA SIBERT. The old beauty, and others. 166p $2.50 Knopf

48-8145

Three short unrelated stories, the last written by the author. The title story describes the last few weeks in the life of a once-famous beauty. The second: The best years, is the story of a young Nebraska school teacher; and Before breakfast, describes the thoughts of a wealthy man who once a year escapes from his success to stay on a remote Canadian island.

"A nostalgia for the rare literary art that was Willa Cather's grips one with the first page of this exquisite little book, 'the last three stories' of that greatly mourned novelist of our land and time." M. E. Brennan

+ Cath World 168:253 D '48 250w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun p7X S 19 '48 240w

"These stories make two things clear: Firstly, that rarely does the posthumously published work of any writer add materially to his reputation; secondly, that after the vigor of 'My Antonia' and the romantic beauty of 'One of Ours,' Miss Cather's later work fell off in both power and insight. The first two of these stories have a bit of the old gleam, but it is often obscured by vague and tenuous narrative. Individual bits have the old clarity and brightness. . . These first two stories are well worth reading, but they are not Miss Cather at her best." Horace Reynolds

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 S 15 '48 480w

"A conscientious and serious writer, this collection is offered posthumously to old readers, and to a younger market who will be able to get the essence if not the more robust attributes of her art."

+ Kirkus 16:341 Jl 15 '48 210w

"Hardly more than sketches, these three short stories contribute nothing to the stature of Miss Cather as a distinguished artist." H. S. Taylor

Library J 73:1192 S 1 '48 70w

"The familiar visible elements of the Cather atelier are here: the style, the attitudes, the subject matter. But the invisible mysterious element, the creative energy which is necessary to quicken a given set of materials into life and entity, is missing. As a result the materials lie about, inert. And reading these stories is a little like walking among the ruins of a once loved house played upon by a mild sighing wind laden with the fragrance of nostalgia." Margaret Marshall

Nation 167:376 O 2 '48 900w

"The three stories in this posthumous volume are certainly no occasion to revive her name. They are tired pieces, reworking old themes." John Farrelly

New Repub 119:24 S 13 '48 430w

" 'The Old Beauty and Others' makes an appropriate valediction. . . The three tales that make up her final book are not among her best. But in them, as always, she was a skillful craftsman, exercising her finest gift: the power of evocation. If for no other reason than this, 'The Old Beauty and Others' commands respect." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 S 12 '48 1200w

"In the pleasure they give and the mastery they show [these three stories] belong with her finest and most characteristic work, with 'My Antonia,' and 'A Lost Lady,' and 'Death Comes for the Archbishop.' " Charles Poore

+ N Y Times p3 S 12 '48 1900w

"The [story] that gives the book its title is an almost perfect thing of its kind; the others, while not quite so impressive, are good enough to warrant our gratitude; and the book, as a whole, is a sort of brief summing-up of Miss Cather's viewpoint as she came to the close of her long life and career." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 24:108 S 25 '48 1850w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 21 '48 700w

"Admirers of the late Willa Cather will find this volume of three hitherto unpublished pieces of short fiction much to their liking. Two of these stories, 'The Old Beauty' and 'The Best Years,' are among the finer productions of a highly skilled craftsman and deeply perceptive observer of life whose work at its best is a real contribution to the literature of the American short story. . . The third and final story, 'Before Breakfast,' adds little to the value of this volume or to the many studies of the misunderstood man unappreciated by his family." William Peden

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:25 S 18 '48 750w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p10B S 26 '48 420w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 38:384 winter '49 30w

CATTON, BRUCE. War lords of Washington. 313p $3 Harcourt

355.26 U.S. War production board. World war, 1939-1945—U.S. U.S.—Politics and government—1932-1945 48-8743

A documented report of the civil war waged in Washington by the dollar-a-year appointees, from 1940 to V-J day. The author is a newspaperman, who was director of information for the War Production Board until shortly before V-E day. No index.

Booklist 45:115 D 1 '48

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 4 '48 650w

Kirkus 16:550 O 1 '48 130w

"Required reading." J. E. Cross

Library J 73:1506 O 15 '48 140w

"Bruce Catton has produced a clinical study which will be indispensable to anyone interested in the state of health of American society. And he has written it with humor, precision, and polished craftsmanship which ought to be the envy of everyone writing in the field of public affairs." John Fischer

+ Nation 167:437 O 16 '48 1100w

"[The book] suffers a little from overstatement of its point of view and overworking of hortatory phrases—'people's war,' 'world revolution' are used as slogans in a way that may make you wish the author was enough of an economist or political expert to define what he means, instead of a phrase-making journalist with the knack of telling a good story. But even with these qualifications, The War Lords of Washington is one of the most important books to come out of the war, and one of the most readable. It is this because it makes clear so much of what has happened since the war ended, of what is going to become increasingly important next week, next year." Harold Wolff

+ — New Repub 119:23 N 8 '48 550w

"Bruce Catton . . . saw a good deal, peering as Donald Nelson's confidant into many crannies of high-level war-time back-biting and intrigue, and he has thrown the sum of his anger into a book that is in part personal reminiscence, in part a general history of the war agencies, in part an ideological tract and in part a sardonic dusting-off of palace gossip after the style of 'Washington Merry-Go-Round.' So loose a combination is not likely to make for a good book, and much of Catton's is as garish and unfocused as its title. . . Catton's book would have been better had it been soberer. But it makes for provocative reading, nevertheless." W. H. Hale

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p12 O 24 '48 850w

"The story is told brilliantly and with warm human interest and intimate personal detail by Bruce Catton." T. L. Stokes

+ N Y Times p3 O 17 '48 1800w

"Much of what he has to say, which is based largely on information obtained from private sources, is strong stuff and quite thought-provoking, but essentially his book is merely a reiteration of a familiar charge—that American industry determinedly carried on business as usual during the war."

New Yorker 24:134 O 16 '48 140w

CATTON, BRUCE—Continued

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 2 '49 350w

"In 1946 Bruce Catton wrote 'Arsenal of Democracy,' by Donald Nelson. This new book he has written for his own signature is incomparably better. To be sure, it has many faults. Catton's style hashes purple prose and Press Club jargon into a spectacular mess of sloppy shorthand and stilted verbosity. But warmth and sincerity and a zealous involvement with ideals shine through all his overwriting and underediting." Eliot Janeway

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:10 O 23 '48 1550w

CAUDILL, REBECCA (MRS JAMES STERLING AYARS). Happy little family; pictures by Decie Merwin. 116p $2 Winston

47-12310

Stories of family life of years ago. Bonnie, the youngest of the family is the center of these episodes to be read aloud to second and third graders.

Booklist 44:174 Ja 1 '48

"Each chapter is a lively portrait in action full of amusing details and honest-to-goodness child talk. It's worth all the rereadings which you'll be implored to give it." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Ja 17 '48 150w

"An excellent book of read-aloud family stories, with specific appeal for the youngest members."

+ Kirkus 15:647 D 1 '47 100w

"Decie Merwin's appealing black-and-white illustrations are in perfect keeping with the text. Some of the material has appeared in Trails and Child Life. Nice to read aloud to six- to eight-year-olds. Nine-year-olds can master it themselves." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 73:48 Ja 1 '48 70w

Wis Lib Bul 44:42 F '48

CAUGHEY, JOHN WALTON. Gold is the cornerstone; with vignettes by W. R. Cameron. (Chronicles of California) 321p pl $4 Univ. of Calif.

979.4 California—Gold discoveries 48-10984

A history of California gold mining, beginning with the Marshall find at Coloma in 1848. The author then "proceeds to the spread of the gold fever, the various sea and land routes from the East to remote California, the diggings and the rough-and-ready political and social economics of the miners, and to the general significance of California gold to the state, the nation, and the world." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:175 Ja 15 '49

" 'Gold is the Cornerstone' is one of the first units of [an] ambitious program, and if later volumes succeed as well in combining sound scholarship with simple, lucid writing the series will merit—and probably receive—a wide reading in California and elsewhere." Oscar Lewis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 D 26 '48 410w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney

N Y Times p5 N 28 '48 230w

"Dr. Caughey is a solid, practicing historian, and you can be sure when you read anything he writes that you are in good hands. . . His book, moreover, has a central theme, which means more than any mere account of the gold rush could mean. What he realizes, and what he makes the reader see, is that even though in most places a gold rush is by no means the best way to lay a foundation for a stable economy, it worked out all right in California. . . The fact that Dr. Caughey writes from a sound base such as this, and yet maintains in his book the balance of narrative and lively eye for atmosphere that characterize the volume, is what makes this a first-rate piece of work." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 4 '48 450w

CAVANNA, BETTY. A girl can dream; il. by Harold A. Minton. 192p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.

48-1510

Story of a high-school girl and how life changed for her when, as the prize in an essay writing contest, she won a block of flying lessons.

Booklist 44:338 Je 1 '48

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun My 22 '48 190w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p10 S 30 '48 190w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '48

"Simple and sustained, with honest exploration of teen-age girl problems, ranging from brother adoration to high heels."

+ Kirkus 16:112 Mr 1 '48 150w

"Added to the familiar theme of the heroine overcoming her shyness, we find the girls taking flying lessons. It all seems possible and plausible and may start many readers dreaming. Good family feeling with the understanding relationship between Loretta and her grandfather especially commendable. Recommended for ages 11-16." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 73:659 Ap 15 '48 60w

"Betty Cavanna, whose books for growing girls are exactly suiting a great many of them, has put much more than flying into this sound, reasonable flying story." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ap 11 '48 230w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p18 My 2 '48 130w

CAVE, FLOYD AUGUSTINE, and others. Origins and consequences of World war II; with an introd. by Sumner Welles [ed. by Floyd A. Cave]. 820p maps $4.75 Dryden

940.531 World war, 1939-1945—Causes. World war, 1939-1945—Influence and results. International relations 48-7161

"With the assistance of eleven other college faculty members, duly accredited in the volume, this offers an examination of the causes of the First World War and the treaties that followed, as a background for its study of the last war. The book is thus divided into sections covering origins first and consequences second, all done with attention to economic and political affairs rather than military results. A feature is the outline preceding each chapter, and footnotes and bibliography at the end, making each a unit." (Current Hist) Index.

"To the reviewer the best chapters in the book are Glenn S. Dumke's 'The Question of Reparations and Loans to Germany,' Stefan T. Posony's 'The Military Causes of World War II,' and Raymond E. Lindgren's 'Conflicts and Issues between the Super-Powers.' . . Despite these excellent chapters and several others very like them, the volume has certain weaknesses. In the first place, the plan of organization implicit in the title means that there is nowhere any connected account of World War II itself. The events of the years between 1939 and 1945 are told in varying fashion and in frequently repetitious detail in several places throughout the book. In the second place, despite the extensive documentation and footnoting, there are in the bibliographies surprising omissions of excellent works and important sources. . . [It] is a praiseworthy effort to deal with an immensely intricate subject and period. Subsequent editions, however, would be improved by a rewriting along the lines suggested above." J. D. Squires

+ — Am Hist R 54:332 Ja '49 550w

Reviewed by R. A. Norem
Am Pol Sci R 42:1037 O '48 340w
+ Current Hist 15:166 S '48 90w
School & Society 68:159 S 4 '48 10w

CECIL, LORD DAVID. Two quiet lives; Dorothy Osborne, Thomas Gray. 256p il $3 Bobbs

920 Temple, Dorothy (Osborne). Gray, Thomas 48-5299

Studies of two shy, withdrawn people, both English, both of whom are best known thru their writings. They are Dorothy Osborne, wife of Sir William Temple; and Thomas Gray, the poet. No index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 181:102 Mr '48 1200w
Booklist 44:281 Ap 15 '48

"This is the kind of book that the English can do so brilliantly well: literary biography that is factually impeccable . . . and at the same time gracious, warmly and truly illuminating—so that reading is like listening to superb and friendly conversation." Paul Dinkins
+ Cath World 167:279 Je '48 420w

Reviewed by Robert Halsband
Chicago Sun p7X My 30 '48 220w

"Of all the people on whom Lord Cecil could have drawn for these biographies, one could wonder perhaps why he chose these two particular subjects. But, when the last page is done, the reader understands fully. Lord Cecil is bringing to us exactly what the title implies: two quiet lives." R. B.
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 6 '48 550w

"Lord David Cecil is one of those admirable writers, not uncommon in England, who can speak impressively without raising his voice. It is a real pleasure to read him in these days of the radio and loudspeakers, when Wallace tries to outshout Winchell and Winchell tries to outshout Wallace. His prose has a rare distinction in a time when quiet is perhaps our greatest need. The present book, even as his previous books, comes amid the welter of noise like a quiescent isle surrounded by an ocean swept by thundering gales. But the word 'quiet' is a relative term. . . There is a suggestion of disquiet about Gray as about Dorothy Osborne; after all David Cecil may have intended to have his title taken ironically. What quiet there is, is to be found in the author's prose, which is uniformly distinguished, with all the perturbation underneath. His prose is quiet, and telling." John Cournos
+ — Commonweal 48:657 Ap 23 '48 1300w

"Author, known for his works on Hardy, Cowper and the early Victorian novelists is more successful with Gray. . . Should be in all comprehensive collections of English literature." Gerald McDonald
+ Library J 73:331 F 15 '48 130w
Manchester Guardian p3 My 7 '48 240w

"If Cecil is perhaps too charitable in respect to Gray, he is certainly not properly enthusiastic about Dorothy Osborne. His interest is too historical for him to be entirely just. . . All Dorothy's sunny qualities shine through in Cecil's pages, and if he is a little reticent in praising them, it does not spoil his book. For, clearly, it is a good book." Joseph Kraft
+ — Nation 166:282 Mr 6 '48 900w

Reviewed by Peter Quennel
New Statesman & Nation 36:55 Jl 17 '48 1650w

"'Two Quiet Lives' is by intention a book of many facets; it is at once a sympathetic study of two persons well worth knowing, a detailed examination in terms of case histories of lives turned inward in search of fulfillment, and an historical sketch of the contrasting seventeenth and eighteenth century backgrounds that lend the colors of actuality to the principal figures. Few critics combine the powers of biographer, historian, man of letters and man of the world that the writing of psychography demands, but Lord David Cecil possesses the wide knowledge of the past, the nice judgment of men and the esthetic appreciation that ideally equip him for the work. When such a writer appears one can only hope that his books may be multiplied for all men's delight." G. F. Whicher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 F 15 '48 1750w

"It is a perfect subject for clear chamber music, for muted tones and delicate nuances. No great world events pull it accidentally askew; the biographer can concentrate on proportion, on harmonized themes, on fine balances and imperceptible transitions. . . Lord Cecil makes an art of biography. Apart from an awkward repeated use of 'however,' his style is faultless, so lucid that the reader does not know it is there." D. A. Stauffer
+ N Y Times p4 F 15 '48 1300w

"This is the sort of thing Lord David Cecil does extremely well, since he is fortified by a perfect amalgam of talents—for literary criticism, for analytical psychology, and for prose. . . These people, though not totally obscure, did not dominate their worlds but were merely a part of them; consequently, an account of their lives by such a perceptive analyst as Lord David Cecil leads to a greater understanding of their periods than any number of biographies of their more flamboyant contemporaries."
+ New Yorker 23:82 F 14 '48 170w

"Lord Cecil, a master hand at the art of biography, makes the past live vividly by means of these two lives." Violet Janes
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 F 15 '48 550w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Sat R of Lit 31:25 Mr 13 '48 800w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée
Spec 180:592 My 14 '48 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p274 My 15 '48 3200w

"Mr. Cecil's portrait of Dorothy illustrates well a remark of Stevenson about the disadvantages of short studies. The writer, he says, 'like Hales with Pepys, must nearly break his sitter's neck to get the proper shadows on the portrait. . . The chosen expression, continually forced, may degenerate into a grimace; and we have at best something like a caricature.' The faults of the essay on Dorothy are perhaps largely due to its having been composed as a companion piece to the one on Gray, which is a far more substantial piece of work. . . In both these essays Mr. Cecil's style, as usual, is graceful, persuasive, and extremely readable." H. E. Woodbridge
+ — Yale R n s 37:733 summer '48 750w

CEDER, GEORGIANA DORCAS (ANA DOR, pseud). Ethan, the shepherd boy; il. by Helen Torrey. 95p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury 48-5824

Ethan, an orphan boy, was left entirely alone when his grandmother died. His only remaining relative was a shepherd of the Judean hills, and at first he did not welcome the boy when he went to him. But Ethan was determined to learn to be a shepherd, and in time he won his uncle's affection. At the time of Christ's birth Ethan was with the shepherds who went to Bethlehem. For grades four to five.

Booklist 44:269 Ap 1 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Mr 27 '48 130w

"A good story for seven-, eight- and nine-year olds with just the right amount of action." F. C. Darling
+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 27 '48 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:275 Jl '48 80w
Kirkus 16:86 F 15 '48 130w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves
+ Library J 73:560 Ap 1 '48 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 My 9 '48 270w

CEDER, G. D.—Continued
"Very often stories for children which revolve about the birth of Christ are sentimentalized. . . The author of the present story, however, has avoided the pitfalls and has given to children from 7 to 12 a well-written, simple, moving account." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Times p32 Mr 21 '48 180w

"There is a grave beauty in text and pictures. One gets through them a vivid sense of place and time."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:35 Ap 10 '48 30w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 12 '48 120w

Wis Lib Bul 44:64 Mr '48

CERF, BENNETT ALFRED, ed. Shake well before using; il. by Carl Rose. 306p $2.95 Simon & Schuster
817 Humor 48-9486

"A new collection of impressions and anecdotes, mostly humorous." (Subtitle) The book is in twelve sections, headed: The front page; The theatre; The comic supplement; Book review—I, Author, author!; Book review—II, Publishers weakly; Hollywood; The magazine; Railroads and shipping; Sports; Society; Financial; Radio; Travel. Index.

Booklist 45:117 D 1 '48

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun N 18 '48 450w

"Once again, a gold mine for the after dinner speaker, the raconteur."
+ Kirkus 16:494 S 15 '48 130w

"Perhaps the most attractive feature of the volume to many readers will be Bennett Cerf's crisp, discerning, expertly written sketches of men and women he admires for what they are and what they do. Any way you take it, this is quite a book." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 D 5 '48 290w

Reviewed by James MacBride
N Y Times p46 N 21 '48 1100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 23 '48 550w

"As a close student of joke books I discovered that these compendiums have one characteristic in common: they are impossible to read. Everybody loves jokes. . . Yet no man can read through a joke book; that is, no man can read through it and still be laughing on page 50. . . Into this unsatisfactory situation came bouncing Bennett Cerf. . . He combined the quipsters with their quips, introduced a moderating material in the form of amiable chit-chat about the famous persons, and turned it all into a series of short chapters rather like magazine articles of a very nifty caliber. The result: 'Try and Stop Me,' a book of awfully good jokes that could be read, from first page to last, without setting it down." Lee Rogow
+ Sat R of Lit 31:44 D 4 '48 1250w

Springf'd Republican p14A Ja 23 '49 420w

CERWIN, HERBERT. These are the Mexicans. 384p il $5 Reynal
917.2 Mexico 47-12239

Discussion of modern Mexico and the Mexicans of today. The author was born in Guatemala and has lived in Mexico for long periods. During the war he was in charge of United States propaganda in Mexico. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:170 Ja 1 '48

"After striving valiantly to find some common ground of understanding and pivotal point upon which rational distinctions could be made, with a constructive purpose, this reviewer gave up in disgust, with the conclusion that whatever good there is in this volume has been told with equal, if not more competence by others." J. A. Magner
— Commonweal 48:337 Jl 16 '48 400w

Foreign Affairs 26:752 Jl '48 10w

"This is not a travel guide, but a more penetrating analysis of the customs and the reasons behind them, the native crafts as expression of the 'little people.'. . A 'good neighbor' book sympathetically done."
+ Kirkus 15:568 O 1 '47

"Cerwin did not sit at Lincoln Steffens feet, in the old man's last days, without acquiring knowledge. Like Steffens he is thorough before he is a muckraker, so thorough that he manages to say things about subjects as various as the Indian drink of pulque and the oil problem that no one else has said that I know of. Indeed, the chapter on Mexican oil is the most comprehensive piece I know on this widely misunderstood subject. Yet he has an ear for the bitterly funny stories by which the people help make existence bearable. . . The photographs, carefully chosen and most of them taken by the author, complement the book superbly." Harry Sylvester
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 D 21 '47 1300w

"Of the dozen or more books about Mexico that have appeared during the past six months 'These Are the Mexicans' is one of the best. It is easy and enjoyable to read; it covers remarkably well the complex contemporary scene, and it includes a most attractive group of photographs. Few popularly written books offer the reader so much useful knowledge. Of even more importance for a book on Mexico by a 'North American' is the pervading atmosphere of sympathy." H. W. Bentley
+ N Y Times p21 F 29 '48 440w

" 'These Are the Mexicans' is one of the few books on Mexico which neither upholds nor damns any particular socio-economic theory. It is a piece of reporting and analysis by a man who is thoroughly equipped to do the job." Ruth Newhall
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 25 '48 700w

"Anyone planning a trip to Mexico should read this honest book, and anyone interested in Latin American relationship, should certainly read it." Josephina Niggli
+ Sat R of Lit 31:37 F 21 '48 280w

Springf'd Republican p15A F 22 '48 360w

"In 'These Are the Mexicans,' Mr. Herbert Cerwin has written a treatise of such validity and importance that I shall find it difficult not to let my enthusiasm tend towards exaggeration. In this spirit I am tempted to suggest that we could take no more important step towards a better understanding of and better relations with Mexico than promptly to discard a good ninety per cent of all that has been written from and about our interesting neighbor during the last proliferating ten or fifteen years and make this document required reading not only in every class room but also in every professorial study in the land—with the further recommendation that it be dropped now and then into a diplomatic pouch or upon a governmental table." Grace Flandrau
+ Yale R n s 37:526 spring '48 950w

CHAFEE, ZECHARIAH. Government and mass communications. See Commission on freedom of the press

CHALMERS, ALLAN KNIGHT. High wind at noon; a case for a daring Christianity. 208p $2.50 Scribner
261 Christianity. Faith. Perfection 48-6196

"The author of this book is closing a long pastorate at the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, and entering the theological faculty of Boston University. Dr. Chalmers' ministry has been characterized by a great concern for the social issues of the day. He is a pacifist, and a vigorous advocate of a more Christian solution to the social and economic problems of the day. On problems of race, labor, international relations, civil rights, housing and similar issues Dr. Chalmers has been forthright in speech, vigorous in action. All of these interests are reflected in this volume, as is his understanding of the pastoral function of the church. But Dr. Chalmers' interest in theology is also apparent in this volume. In fact, its main purpose is to substantiate the liberal position in theology which he calls perfectionism, and to refute the position of neo-orthodoxy which emphasizes man's helpfulness and his dependence upon a miraculous intervention in his life by God." Kirkus

Reviewed by C. L. Willard
Churchman 162:15 N 15 '48 350w

"When Christian liberalism becomes articulate as positive realism, it is evangelistic in the very best sense of that overworked word. This new book from the facile pen of Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers qualifies on that score." M. C. Westphal
+ Crozer Q 25:377 O '48 200w

"Some Protestants will disagree with Dr. Chalmers on social issues, others on theological questions, but his presentation is ably made, and to many will be entirely convincing."
+ Kirkus 16:84 F 1 '48 180w

CHALMERS, MRS AUDREY. Mr Topple's wish; pictures by [the author]. [34p] $1.50 Viking 48-4519

Story of Mr Topple's search for a four-leaf clover, a horseshoe, a haystack, a white horse, and a polka-dot dress—all necessary properties for the fulfillment of his wish. For ages 5-7.

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p4 N 9 '48 150w

+ Commonweal 49:146 N 19 '48 40w

Kirkus 16:436 S 1 '48 90w

"Gay story for the youngest, with the author's own gently humorous pictures on every page. Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges
+ Library J 73:1672 N 15 '48 100w

"By the time Mr. Topple's story is told, he has tried just about all the legendary recipes for making a wish. These superstitions and Mr. Topple's own adventures should interest the child of 5 to 7. But his wish itself, not revealed or achieved until the very last page, may disappoint young readers or even be missed entirely by them." Marjorie Burger
+ — N Y Times p35 O 31 '48 190w

"A very attractive book, printed in a soft gray, black, and white."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:23 N 13 '48 110w

CHAMBERLAIN, ELINOR. Snare for witches. 240p $2.50 Dodd
48-8216

Mystery story set in the witch hunting days of New England.

Booklist 45:68 O 15 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun S 10 '48 250w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ag 22 '48 190w

"The author gives us a vivid picture of an early New England community obsessed with a belief in witchcraft." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p31 S 26 '48 240w

"Highly recommended."
+ New Yorker 34:72 Ag 28 '48 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 19 '48 90w

Sat R of Lit 31:30 S 4 '48 40w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 14 '48 120w

CHAMBERLAIN, LAWRENCE HENRY, and SNYDER, RICHARD C., eds. American foreign policy. 826p $5 Rinehart

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy 48-1818

A collection of documents, articles, etc. on American foreign policy edited with commentaries and introductory essays by the editors, who have "endeavored to provide the student with sufficient information and with such interpretations as are necessary for an understanding of what the foreign policy (or policies) of the United States is and why, of what agencies and influences shape that policy, of the significance of current trends, and of the nature of the problems which the American people face as they adjust to a new position in the world." (Pref) Index.

"[The authors] have rendered a signal service to the college student and teacher of American foreign policy. . . Generally speaking, the selections are provocative of thinking and are sufficient in length and in number to give a general acquaintance with the subject to which they refer." H. F. Sylvester
+ Am Pol Sci R 42:828 Ag '48 300w

Reviewed by N. D. Palmer
Ann Am Acad 258:139 Jl '48 490w

Reviewed by Dexter Perkins
Yale R n s 37:730 summer '48 950w

CHAMBERLAIN, MARION. The leaf shall be green. 247p $3 Dodd 48-5829

Character study of an intelligent but unstable man. Marvell Coomes came to Boston from a small town in Maine; worked for a conservative old firm, and married the young sister of the head of the firm. Marvell was rebellious of restraint and eventually his brother-in-law's disapproval broke up his marriage. After his wife's death he was put in sole charge of his eight-year-old daughter, and in his struggle to make a good life for her, he found his own salvation.

"Tender, warmly written story, an unpretentious job competently executed."
+ Atlantic 181:120 Ap '48 90w

"Author seems uncertain whether this is to be a period piece or a character study, if the latter, of which character, and it is in this wavering approach that the book's weakness lies. Descriptions of Boston are conventional. However, the country settings and dialogue are well handled. Not as good as it could and should have been." C. W. Roth
+ — Library J 73:335 F 15 '48 80w

"It is a quiet but compelling story that leaves one question unanswered: How did the wife know, on the basis of Marvell's past, that her decision would prove so wise?"
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Mr 28 '48 150w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter
Springf'd Republican p7B S 12 '48 250w

CHAMBERLAIN, NEIL W. Union challenge to management control. (Yale univ. Labor and management center. Studies) 338p $4.50 Harper

331.152 Employees' representation in management. Industrial relations 48-5134

"A research director of Yale University's Labor and Management Center here considers labor-management relations with special emphasis on the constantly increasing intervention of labor in management. Looking toward the necessary and effective integration of unions with the management of private enterprise, author describes the present conflict and its origins, and suggests that governing considerations of the parties concerned ought to stem from their responsibilities to their own constituencies, to each other, and to the public in general. The first of a series of diagnoses of problems in the field of relations among management, union and workers." (Library J) Index.

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 10 '48 210w

Reviewed by B. M. Selekman
Harvard Law R 61:1473 S '48 3050w

"A thoroughly specialized report, comprehensible only to those with a sound knowledge of management principles. Intended for people intimately concerned in labor relations and management, for students of economic and sociological theory."

CHAMBERLAIN, N. W.—Continued
Kirkus 15:617 N 1 '47 250w

"Too special for general interest, but of first importance to special collections." R. E. Kingery
Library J 73:37 Ja 1 '48 140w

"A thorough and thought-provoking analysis of the problem of management prerogatives. This book is a concrete appraisal of one of the most important issues faced by all sectors of the national economy." Ernest Dale
+ Management R 37:52 Ja '48 500w

"I believe there is within the material of the book sound argument against the demands of many unions for the sharing of authority in more areas and in greater degree. Professor Chamberlain has made a forthright, dispassionate and incisive survey of the issue. Unfortunately, a system of shared responsibility and authority such as is suggested by the author is not likely to be advanced in an atmosphere charged with the suspicion and hostility engendered by the Taft-Hartley Act." George Moskowitz
+ — N Y Times p18 Mr 7 '48 800w

Reviewed by H. R. Northrup
Pol Sci Q 63:635 D '48 650w

Reviewed by Francis Goodell
Survey G 37:271 My '48 600w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL. Open house in New England; with 280 phots. by the author. 5th rev ed 252p $5 Hastings house

720.974 New England—Historic houses, etc. 48-8799

A new edition of a book which first appeared eleven years ago (Book Review Digest 1937). It tells the story of New England houses in prose and photograph. The arrangement is chronological. Index.

Kirkus 16:550 O 1 '48 100w
San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 28 '48 250w
Sat R of Lit 32:37 Ja 15 '49 70w
Springf'd Republican p9B O 17 '48 370w

CHAMBERLAIN, SAMUEL. Six New England villages; il. by [the author]. 105p $3.50 Hastings house

917.4 New England—Views 48-7147

The six villages are: Hancock, New Hampshire; Litchfield, Connecticut; Little Compton, Rhode Island; Old Bennington, Vermont; Old Deerfield, Massachusetts; and Wiscasset, Maine. Each is represented by a collection of photographs emphasizing the architectural beauties of the village. Some historical and biographical data are included.

"Although there may be some dispute about his choices, the photographs well support his claims and underline his thesis that to know more of our villages is to understand our country better."
Kirkus 16:277 Je 1 '48 120w
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 18 '48 150w

"For the most part, his informational material is well chosen and adequately expressed, although he is more eminent as a photographer than as a writer. The book is beautifully made —distinctive, and valuable Americana." M. E. Chase
+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 Jl 3 '48 270w
Springf'd Republican p10B Je 27 '48 420w

CHAMBERS, MERRITT MADISON. Youth-serving organizations; national non-governmental associations; prepared for the Committee on youth problems. 3d ed 162p $3 Am. council on educ.

362.7 Youth—Societies and clubs 48-1834

Third edition of a handbook first published in 1937 (Book Review Digest 1937). Organizations are listed alphabetically under the following chapter headings: General character-building organizations for youth; Protestant religious youth-serving organizations; Catholic organizations serving youth; Jewish organizations serving youth; Student associations; Organizations for research and social planning; Political, labor, and veterans' organizations; Agriculture and rural life organizations; Negro and interracial organizations; Service clubs of business and professional men; Women's clubs; Educational associations; Guidance, personnel, and employment organizations; Associations for recreation and conservation; Health and safety organizations; Organizations in the field of social work; Child welfare associations; Organizations serving handicapped youth; Associations advocating consumers' cooperation, temperance, humane education, and international organization. Information given for each association includes membership, purpose, activities, publications, staff and finances. Index.

Booklist 44:316 My 15 '48
School & Society 67:253 Mr 27 '48 20w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 68:461 D 25 '48 90w
Social Studies 39:336 N '48 60w

CHAMBERS'S mineralogical dictionary. [new ed] 47p 40col pl $4.75 Chemical pub. co.

549.03 Mineralogy—Dictionaries 48-2252

"Concise definitions of over 1400 mineralogical terms. The chemical composition, crystal form, physical and chemical properties, occurrences and uses are listed for the minerals. 40 colored plates will be an aid to identification of minerals." Library J

"This mineralogical dictionary may be considered a handy reference to a busy person seeking rapid but brief meanings to mineral names and associated terms." D. F. Taylor
+ Chem & Eng N 26:2919 S 27 '48 220w

"The definitions given are popular and of no value to the serious student of the subject. The only illustrations are very mediocre color plates." D. J. F.
J Geol 57:99 Ja '49 60w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1279 S 15 '48 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:51 Jl '48

CHAMPLIN, JOHN DENISON. Champlin encyclopedia. 12v il pl maps $59.50 Consolidated

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 48-1882

"The set is intended to be a general encyclopedia for quick reference in the home. It consists of two volumes on each of the following: Persons; Places and Events; Literature, Art and Mythology; and Plants and Animals; and four volumes on Science and Invention. Information is treated under many specific topics with few large general headings. In Plants and Animals, for example, there is no general article on Plants; each is listed under its specific name. Headings use popular rather than exact terminology. . . Biographical entries in Persons are frequently nicknames or pseudonyms, as Buffalo Bill for William F. Cody, with a cross reference from Cody." Subscription Bks Bul

"Since separate volumes cannot be purchased by libraries, the set must be considered as a unit. Otherwise, as in the 1936 edition, Plants and Animals and perhaps, Persons could be recommended for individual purchase. Because the set as a whole is not indexed or well integrated, and because it still lacks many classes of topics, as diseases and sports, it does not serve as a satisfactory encyclopedia. In spite of some usable material, the set still merits the 1937 evaluation: as a substitute or equivalent for a standard children's (or family) encyclopedia, it cannot be recommended."
— Subscription Bks Bul 19:41 Jl '48 1800w

CHAPEL, CHARLES EDWARD. Boy's book of rifles; il. with line drawings by Dick Spencer. 274p $3.50 Coward-McCann

799.31 Shooting. Rifles 48-8433

"A recognized authority fills a gap in gun literature with this book on .22 caliber rifle marksmanship especially for boys 12-19. Chapters cover history of firearms, rifles, shooting, ballistics, cartridges, rifle ranges, competitions, junior rifle clubs, and hunting. Author stresses gun care and safety and adult-supervised activities. Army practice and qualifications for Boy Scout Marksmanship Merit Badge discussed, but much space given to National Rifle Association. . . Bibliography and index." Library J

Booklist 45:36 S 15 '48

"Good clear line drawings by Dick Spencer are unobtrusive and helpful. An index adds to its reference value."

+ Kirkus 16:530 O 1 '48 90w

"Excellent, clear, simple handbook for boys from 12 to 19, and their fathers' on the .22 rifle, by an authority. Well illustrated." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:1514 O 15 '48 20w

Reviewed by F. L. Morrison
Library J 73:1522 O 15 '48 100w

Sat R of Lit 31:46 N 13 '48 30w

CHAPIN, FRANCIS STUART. Experimental designs in sociological research. 206p $3 Harper

307.2 Sociology—Methodology 48-5456

"The view that progress in sociology depends upon the successful application of the experimental and quantitative methods of the physical sciences to the study of human relationships has long been held by Professor Chapin. This volume is the culmination of his persistent efforts to resolve the difficulties of such applications. Reported here are nine experimental sociological studies, conducted in the normal community situation, covering the fields of rural hygiene, public housing, social participation and social adjustment, work relief, education, and tuberculosis. These studies of problems are analyzed within the framework of three experimental designs for controlled observation: the cross-sectional, the projected—that is, before and after, and ex post facto designs." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"This volume is both welcome and disappointing: welcome, because it presents full analyses of a number of sociological studies of the experimental type; disappointing, because we might have hoped that a scholar of Dr. Chapin's caliber would discuss these studies in a broader framework than merely methodological competence. . . Many helpful research hints are dropped during the interpretation and criticism of the various studies. The usefulness of null hypotheses is shown and the procedure for employing them outlined. A most important problem is raised when it is pointed out that the matching of persons in an experimental and a control group makes the total sample more homogeneous than the universe from which they were drawn. . . Unfortunately, this volume gives evidence of being a patchwork rather than an integrated effort. . . The most serious weakness, however, is not one of composition or arrangement, but of scientific orientation. . . Not to make clear to our young scholars that a piece of research is valuable to a science only as it adds to the organum of tested theory seems, in a book of this kind, a serious dereliction." R. C. Angell

Am Soc R 13:352 Je '48 700w

Reviewed by T. T. Segerstedt
Ann Am Acad 260:219 N '48 1350w

School & Society 67:286 Ap 10 '48 20w

Reviewed by Hornell Hart
Social Forces 27:96 O '48 1800w

Social Studies 40:48 Ja '49 70w

Reviewed by W. R. Crawford
Survey 84:253 Ag '48 400w

"The discussion fails to come to grips with many of the methodological issues raised by the advocated type of investigation. There is, for example, scant analysis of the extent to which significance of results is sacrificed for presumed exactitude. As the author, himself, says, however, he has provided not a theoretical approach to the fundamental logic of experimental designs, but rather a source book of examples of the specific application of a particular method of study."

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:196 Je '48 320w

CHAPLIN, MRS DORA P. Children and religion; with an introd. by Charles L. Taylor, jr. 230p $2.50 Scribner

268 Religious education 48-7237

"This book is an attempt to outline the potential religious growth of children in a troubled world, and to offer practical suggestions to parents and teachers who can help them to realize the only heritage of which no man can rob them—a glowing faith in God." (Introd) Partial contents: Prayer; Children and death; Should church schools exist?; Ways of approach; Through the Bible; Through pictures, music and poetry; Through books; Disbelief; Index.

Booklist 44:375 Jl 15 '48

"This book will answer your questions, shed light on your doubts and bulwark your beliefs. It charts the course with minute details and, by having something to say, entices you to follow. It uses the old shibboleths sparingly and resorts neither to worn-out creeds nor to 'escape' theologies. The book is short on vagaries and abstractions. It does not plead, but guides; does not argue, but reasons. It will strengthen your faith, broaden your knowledge, and deepen your spiritual understanding." F. E. Luchs

+ Christian Century 65:882 S 1 '48 550w

"This is the kind of book many of us have been waiting for, and it is no surprise that it is a Religious Book Club selection." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 162:17 O 1 '48 170w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:283 Jl '48 170w

"This is a book for religious educators and for parents seriously interested in the religious nurture of their children in this modern era. It embodies the modern and liberal approach to Christian education and while much of the material is drawn from the author's experience in the educational programs of the Episcopal Church it will be almost as helpful to those of other denominations."

Kirkus 16:119 Mr 1 '48 170w

School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 20w

Springf'd Republican p10B Je 27 '48 40w

CHAPLIN, RALPH. Wobbly; the rough-and-tumble story of an American radical [an autobiography]. 435p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Industrial workers of the world 48-8467

The story of the Industrial Workers of the World, called the Wobblies, from 1906 to 1923. It is also the story of the author's own affiliation with the organization, which began in 1912. Index.

Booklist 45:65 O 15 '48

"The book is not too well-written and tries too hard to be thrilling and romantic. Sometimes it is melodramatic. The occasional poetry which Chaplin reproduces is not of the highest order." A. A.

Canadian Forum 28:211 D '48 380w

Reviewed by Irving Stone
Chicago Sun S 15 '48 750w

"It may be the mellowness of years that tones down his narration of a conflict-crowded career. Disdaining the hate-filled language of the Daily Worker, he records with surprising calmness the brutal violence of a period when police violence was the standard specific for labor organization. Withal, he preserved a sense of humor, and has the engaging modesty to confess to a poor speech, a failure to win

CHAPLIN, RALPH—Continued
the day. . . The book's historical value would have been enhanced by more regard for dates and background of the many strikes in which Chaplin took part or reported." N. C. McKenna
+ — Commonweal 49:44 O 22 '48 600w

"A vivid, inside story which reads like Dos Passos; a soul-searing ideological growth of a serious, socially-conscious person. Very good reading in a special field."
+ Kirkus 16:328 Jl 1 '48 210w

"I could wish that several hundreds of quotation marks had been eliminated from good wobbly words that do not need quotes, even in a university press volume. I trust that the author will, in future printings, remove the glorious town of Virginia, Minn., from the Cuyuna Range to the Mesabi, where it belongs. . . And the reader should not put implicit trust in the inadequate index. I can imagine how roughly both author and book will be treated by surviving wobblies, many Socialists and all Communists. But I venture to call his volume an important book and an entertaining one, too." Stewart Holbrook
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 O 3 '48 1000w

"Ralph Chaplin at 62 is a tired man who spends his time in his beautiful garden near Chicago. He is no longer a radical. Confused, groping, bitter at the Communists, he tries earnestly to rationalize his intellectual and emotional impasse after fifty years of activity in the radical movement. If his self-justifications for what many have called his betrayal of a cause don't quite come off, at least he is always sincerely motivated. His life presents an interesting interpretation of our times." H. J. Bresler
N Y Times p30 O 3 '48 500w

"Ralph Chaplin has reached down deeply in this reader. I suspect his book is one with greatness in it. I know it is a mighty story." James Stevens
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 19 '48 1000w

Reviewed by Joseph Rosenfarb
Sat R of Lit 32:48 Ja 22 '49 430w

CHAPMAN, HERMAN HAUPT, and MEYER, WALTER HUBER. Forest valuation; with special emphasis on basic economic principles. 521p $6 McGraw

634.9284 Forests and forestry—Valuation
Agr48-9

" 'This text is the successor to "Forest valuation," 1925, and "Forest finance," 1935.'—Preface. Complete coverage with emphasis on value of standing timber, grade composition, and market values. For student, forester, or those in the lumber industry. Good bibliographies." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:245 Mr 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:44 Ja 1 '48 40w

CHAPMAN, JOHN ARTHUR, ed. Burns Mantle best plays of 1947-1948; and the Year book of the drama in America; with illustrations. (V31) 494p $4 Dodd

808.82 Dramas—Collections

Contents: A streetcar named Desire, by Tennessee Williams; Mister Roberts, by Thomas Heggen and Joshua Logan; Command decision, by W. W. Haines; The Winslow boy, by Terence Rattigan; The heiress, by Ruth and Augustus Goetz; Allegro, by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II; Eastward in Eden, by Dorothy Gardner; Skipper next to God, by Jan de Hartog; An inspector calls, by J. B. Priestley; Me and Molly, by Gertrude Berg.

Booklist 45:117 D 1 '48

"Highly recommended for all theatre and drama collections regardless of the size of library." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:1667 N 15 '48 100w

"Mr. Chapman, like his predecessor, is a loyal lover of the theatre for all its foibles. He cannot forget the excitement and pleasure the theatre can stir in its better moments. He glances back over the 1947-48 campaign with the sound sense of moderation, and notes that 'it is doubtful if there ever has been or will be a completely distinguished theatrical season.' " Lewis Funke
+ N Y Times p12 N 21 '48 550w
Sat R of Lit 31:29 N 27 '48 90w

CHAPMAN, VIRGINIA HATHAWAY. Distant Trojans. 245p $2.75 Random house 48-7830

Character study of an ill-adjusted American doctor, Godfrey Garrick, and of Antonia, the woman he loves, or does not love. The time is August, 1946; the scene, Germany. Most of the story is told as Godfrey thinks back to August, 1945.

"Mrs. Chapman's narrative technique is reminiscent of the oblique approach often used by Thomas Beer. She knows the art of implication: how to put most of her work between the lines, how to make one paragraph do the work of 20. This sort of thing not only requires much skill on the part of the author, but demands extra effort from the reader—which is all in its favor. It is unfortunate that here Mrs. Chapman does not provide extra interest as an inducement, and but little emotional appeal. Godfrey's story 'plays round the head,' as Pope would say, 'but comes not to the heart.' It is, primarily, a dexterous display of literary acrobatics." M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 31 '48 600w

Kirkus 16:266 Je 1 '48 130w

"Elusive stuff for most novel-readers, including this one." F. A. Boyle
Library J 73:944 Je 15 '48 100w

" 'The Distant Trojans' is a novel of delicate fragmentation. It pierces the imagination with slivers of irony, with minute shards of precise observation so lightly phrased that you scarcely realize how deeply they penetrate. This is a story of mood and image, with a plot so elusive that you might as well abandon any idea of pinning it down." George Conrad
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 15 '48 360w

"An example of what happens when a novelist is left standing too long in a solution of T. S. Eliot. One gets, in such a case, a flashy bombardment of modern society, laid on in phrases bearing the Eliot label but lacking that great man's precision."
— New Yorker 34:71 Ag 7 '48 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 8 '48 250w

"The portrait of Garrick is brilliantly done. He is one of the most difficult characters in literature to approximate, and unquestionably Miss Chapman is more than equal to it. Antonia, on the other hand, is totally unreal. She never comes out of the mists of an originally hazy conception. . . Miss Chapman seems to have failed with all of the peripheral figures, all those outside the world of the Garricks." N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 31:12 Jl 31 '48 650w

CHARTERIS, LESLIE. Call for the Saint. 190p $2 Doubleday
48-5300

Two detective stories about the further adventures of Simon Templar, better known as the Saint.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 8 '48 140w

"Leslie Charteris tells both tales in his usual lively manner and embroiders them with a choice collection of far-fetched figures of speech." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 F 29 '48 140w

"Both will probably please Templar admirers, who seem to be an insatiable bunch."
+ New Yorker 23:88 F 7 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 8 '48 70w

"Time-passer."
Sat R of Lit 31:34 F 14 '48 40w

Wis Lib Bul 44:83 Ap '48

CHARTERIS, LESLIE. Saint errant. 192p $2.25 Doubleday
49-7002

Nine short stories in each of which the hero is Simon Templar, otherwise known as the Saint.

Kirkus 16:561 O 15 '48 70w

"This is a treat for the Saint's many admirers in short or long stories, movies, radio, television and, here lately, the comics." Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ja 2 '49 220w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 Ja 9 '49 90w

New Yorker 24:80 Ja 8 '49 130w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 26 '48 80w

"For Saint devotees."
Sat R of Lit 32:32 Ja 22 '49 40w

CHASE, ILKA. Free admission. 319p $3 Doubleday
B or 92 Actors and actresses—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-6020

Continuation of the autobiography which Miss Chase began in Past Imperfect (Book Review Digest 1942). This book is mainly an account of her wartime marriage to a doctor in the Navy. Included are stories of her life in Hollywood and anecdotes of well-known people she has met. The period covered is about five years.

Booklist 44:281 Ap 15 '48

"Engaging somewhat brittle, and like its predecessor Past Imperfect, thoroughly candid. . . Miss Chase is at her funniest and best when she talks about clothes, her mother, shopping, wartime travelling, female stuffed shirts, and Hollywood's wonderland. All but the most uninhibited will, I think, feel much more comfortable with this material than with so many pages of eavesdropping on the author's romance."
+ — Kirkus 16:98 F 15 '48 120w

"Recommended, of course, for theatre collections, for general biography and particularly for rental collections where they exist." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:469 Mr 15 '48 110w

"Many of Miss Chase's characterizations are vivid and perceptive, but whatever the circumstances of her time, it is her business to be toujours gai. And she is." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ap 25 '48 500w

"As one whose smile is not that of Gioconda, Miss Chase has pleased readers most when her conversation has been least discreet. But now Miss Chase is sporting something like a new look. Back in Hollywood (once the target of her most caustic wit), she is the ingratiating visitor, full of generous praise for everyone she meets. . . And she is still one for a good anecdote." Nona Balakian
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 4 '48 500w

"It sounds pretty much like luncheon chatter, although the author does have a few serious things to say—things like 'The price of liberty is still eternal vigilance.' "
New Yorker 24:99 Ap 3 '48 80w

"Miss Chase, she of the Past Imperfect, wittily carries on with the story of her life and loves. She covers the war years here and is as charming and as hilariously funny as readers of her first volume would expect her to be. But unfortunately her delightful gift for being able to laugh at herself fails her when she writes of her wartime romance and the resulting girlish gush just doesn't match up somehow with one of Miss Chase's years and brittle sophistication." Edith James
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '48 100w

CHASE, MARY ELLEN. Jonathan Fisher, Maine parson, 1768-1847. 280p il $4 Macmillan
B or 92 Fisher, Jonathan 48-9014

"Jonathan Fisher was long an estimable citizen of Maine and from 1796-1837 minister in Blue Hill. Mary Ellen Chase, also a state of Mainer, has taken the parson's own words—letters, diaries, sermons, etc.—and from them given us the life of this substantial citizen who had everything but humor." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 45:87 N 1 '48

Kirkus 16:426 Ag 15 '48 130w

"Book will be a historical document rather than delightful reading." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 73:1506 O 15 '48 80w

Nation 167:612 N 27 '48 90w

"In these vivacious pages the whole life of this little community is faithfully re-created. Life was a serious business, and work was incessant, but folks seemed, on the whole, happy and intelligent and virtuous. Notwithstanding the jeremiads in Parson Fisher's diaries it would seem that Satan was not very successful in Bluehill, and there are no records of nervous breakdowns." H. S. Commager
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 O 24 '48 1600w

"Miss Chase and other descendants of Fisher have deciphered his manuscript: out of it Miss Chase has constructed this book, filling in the gaps with a self-effacement that should be a model for biographers. She lets the diary and letters speak for themselves, and the result is not only the revelation of a character but a direct insight into the epoch." Perry Miller
+ N Y Times p4 N 7 '48 750w

"I suppose younger people may be bored with this kind of thing. But the mature reader —the man or woman old enough to have a sense of the past and old enough to have formed a judgment-in-perspective about the enduring values of human life—will find it a heart-warming and delightful book. Miss Chase has rescued from oblivion a human being worth knowing and done it gracefully and with a full measure of the charm you'd expect her to give such a story." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 15 '48 750w

School & Society 68:463 D 25 '48 50w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '48 390w

CHASE, RICHARD, ed. Grandfather tales; American-English folk tales; il. by Berkeley Williams, jr. 239p $2.75 Houghton
398.2 Folklore—South 48-7912

A companion volume to the author's Jack Tales (Book Review Digest 1943). These American-English folk tales, and the music of old songs were collected by the author in North Carolina, Virginia and Kentucky. "Written down only after many tellings, these humorous tales are told in the vernacular of the region with added touches of local color provided by the storytellers as they meet together to keep Old-Christmas Eve. Exact sources and variants are given in an appendix." (Booklist)

Booklist 45:15 S 1 '48

+ Commonweal 49:149 N 19 '48 60w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 24:349 S '48 30w

"The themes of most of the stories are familiar, but all are freshly embroidered by folk groups who have brought a local American humor and flavor to them." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:370 S '48 150w

CHASE, RICHARD—Continued

"The notes on the sources of each story are in themselves fascinating. There are tales of humor and realism." Siri Andrews
+ Horn Bk 24:475 N '48 90w
Kirkus 16:280 Je 15 '48 100w

"Book is well made, with lively drawings by Berkeley Williams, Jr. Recommended for all ages and all collections." Clara Adams
+ Library J 73:1197 S 1 '48 90w

"Here is a real contribution to American folklore, one of many made by Mr. Chase, who has gathered old songs and tunes, rhymes and stories from the mountain people. There is an interesting appendix which gives the source for each story as well as some parallels, types and suggestions for the telling of the tales." Helen Masten
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 26 '48 320w

" 'The Grandfather Tales' is a valuable book for storytellers and for readers of any age of imagination and humor." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p3 N 14 '48 140w

"Even the old ones have freshness, because the author is an experienced storyteller and knows how to write as if he were talking. His use of dialect is never overwhelming."
+ New Yorker 24:136 D 11 '48 120w

"[The tales] have the vitality, the humor, and the flavor of stories that have been told and enjoyed for generations. Mr. Chase has given them an especially happy 'framing story' and a great deal of local color. It is a book that will be read and shared and treasured for many, many years." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 31:37 S 18 '48 430w
Wis Lib Bul 44:167 O '48

CHASE, STUART. Proper study of mankind. 311p $3.50; text ed $3 Harper

301 Social sciences 48-8642

"An inquiry into the science of human relations." (Subtitle) The book covers a wide range of research, study, and history, charting the field and assessing the contributions of scientists, etc. Partial contents: The scientific method in action; Varieties of social science; The culture concept; Common patterns of mankind; Scientists look at race; Some laws of social change; In darkest Middletown; New light on labor management; Why men strike; Measuring public opinion; Lessons in peace and war; Semantics as a tool; Approaches to one world; Toward a science of man. Index.

Booklist 45:130 D 15 '48

"Stuart Chase's long-awaited report on the progress of the social sciences may well prove to be one of the most influential books of the decade. It will be read by many a young college student, seeking, with a special sense of dedication, for a career which might fit the urgent questions of our times. It should also be read by physical scientists, college presidents, research foundations, and the senators who thought that the subject was not well enough developed to be included in a National Science Foundation. . . This is one of those rare books which actually help us to keep up with the world." R. D. MacCann
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 30 '48 1150w

"Here's a book which should provide a springboard for a whole new concept of man's study of his fellow man. Chase has a keen facility in digesting vast amounts of knowledge and presenting the gist of it in a way the average reader can absorb. This is perhaps his most important book."
+ Kirkus 16:351 Jl 15 '48 250w

"This is the most ambitious and the best of Stuart Chase's many useful efforts to spread knowledge of science and technology." C. E. Noyes
+ Nation 167:729 D 25 '48 700w

"This is an honest book, representing the results of much hard and intelligent work." Clyde Kluckhohn
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 O 3 '48 1450w

Reviewed by B. F. Skinner
N Y Times p20 N 14 '48 1350w
San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 28 '48 550w

"Few if any, publicists now writing surpass Mr. Stuart Chase in ability to enter a new intellectual terrain, study its topographical features, and explain them so that the hitherto ignorant will understand. Mr. Chase does his explaining in terse and homely prose which retains the layman's interest even when it deals with matters of exceptional difficulty. Moreover—and this is a triumph—the choice of striking ways of presenting facts never neglects to keep them accurate." Lindsay Rogers
+ Sat R of Lit 31:17 O 23 '48 950w

"Reformers, and people of good will generally, should stop whatever they have in mind and read this book. It will save time in the end, and avoid heartbreak. Here we find good will, and moral ideas of all kinds, put in their right place—in the engine room, not the pilot house." D. C. Doyle
+ Survey G 37:514 D '48 600w

Reviewed by John Storck
Yale R n s 38:379 winter '49 650w

CHASE, VIRGINIA. See Perkins, V. C.

CHAYER, MARY ELLA. Nursing in modern society. 288p $4 Putnam

610.73 Nurses and nursing Med48-280

Textbook on the sociology of nursing, with study questions and reading references. Studies the curriculum of nursing education in the light of social principles and general education. The author is associate professor of nursing education at Teachers College, Columbia university, New York city. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:245 Mr 15 '48
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '48

"Nurses, nursing teachers and supervisors, and others interested in the professions will derive much value from 'Nursing in Modern Society.' " W. W. Brickman
+ School & Society 67:173 F 28 '48 180w

CHAZE, ELLIOTT. Stainless steel kimono. 207p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

818 47-12461

"A few years ago the War Department took over from his wife and two children a young reporter for the Associated Press, editing a night wire out of New Orleans, turned him into a tough paratrooper, and sent him to Japan along with seven of his case-hardened and death-defying sky mates. If Elliott Chaze was as used to brutality and as handy with his fists as the rest of them when he was grounded with his mates in the smells and mud of defeated Japan, at least he had the seeing-eye, a perverse sense of humor, and deep-rooted sympathy for the underdog. . . Most of Mr. Chaze's story is concerned with the astounding ways in which these bored, homesick, and tough young men managed to survive, to keep sane, and to retain their humanity." Sat R of Lit

---

"Chaze and his officer-hating barrack-mates drink, swear, fistfight and pursue the dubious diversions of Japanese romance in a manner which readers are likely to find either humorous or offensive according to their own experiences and content. Similarly portions of the book will likely be received as either hilarious or simply adolescent. The basic soldierly virility that should temper some of the ridiculous goings-on of some of Chaze's characters seems to be lacking." J. G. Dowling
— + Chicago Sun D 23 '47 450w

"Elliott Chaze's first book is a fast-moving, hilarious account of American paratroopers—of whom he was one—on occupation duty in northern Japan. . . This book does not pretend to be the definitive book on the occupation of Japan. But it does show definitively the futility of life in an army of occupation." Frank Kelley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ja 25 '48 650w

"It is paradoxical to say that a book is both hilarious and grim. Yet 'The Stainless Steel Kimono' is just that. . . Raw, perhaps, is the better word. Mr. Chaze spares neither the four-letter words nor quails at relating the most intimate details about life and love among the paratroopers and the Japanese. But it is certainly not done with any pornographic intent nor will it offend any except the most prudish. The book is too honest for that. . . The reader gets the feeling that these are actual soldiers whose lives he is following, that this was the way they thought and talked and acted." Foster Hailey

+ N Y Times p10 D 28 '47 700w

"Even in his bawdiest tales there is some strain of pathos. The savagery, the brutality is one uniformed American against another; if the Japanese were beaten or slain by Americans it does not appear anywhere in this book. . . If [his characters] seem a good deal like Western barbarians playing with half-broken and dirty Oriental dolls the author cannot be blamed for the impression he has created. It is a book to be read for amusement, as he intended, but one in which you will find out something about the lives of Americans abroad and about America's abject and stubborn subjects in Japan." Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 30:66 D 6 '47 700w

CHEAVENS, MARTHA LOUISE (MRS HUGH JOEL SCHUCK). Crosswinds. 278p $2.75 Houghton

48-8413

A fine American minister and his family in a small town on the border between Texas and Mexico work wonders in the drab lives of some of the town's unhappy citizens. In their efforts to help others the Bronsons forget their own troubles and make Donde a better town in which to live.

Booklist 45:158 Ja 1 '49

"The setting is novel, and the author has narrative gifts. It is a relief, too, to find the life of an informal type of church presented without the usual satire or patronizing humor. But the novel is without distinction. . . Some readers may think they derive a moral uplift from the author's moral enthusiasm. But no reader will learn from this book anything about the conflicts of our tormented human nature." Ralph Goodale

— + Christian Century 66:20 Ja 5 '49 270w

"Serious in purpose, the book is gay with young people and local characters, and, with the possible exception of the poor little rich girl Cenci, has an unaffected authenticity." W. K. Rugg

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 14 '48 160w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 25:64 Ja '49 50w

"There is nothing offensive in this book; it can safely be recommended to young people and adults. Good reading. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 73:1273 S 15 '48 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 S 26 '48 180w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke

N Y Times p46 O 17 '48 150w

Wis Lib Bul 44:185 N '48

CHEKHOV, ANTON PAVLOVICH. Personal papers; introd. by Matthew Josephson. 235p $3 Lear

891.78 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-6257

Contents: Notebook, 1892-1904; Selected letters on writing, writers and the theatre, 1882-1904; A Moscow Hamlet, 1891; Diary, 1896-1903.

"Not the least of the pleasures to be had in reading this book is its evidence of how thoroughly Chekhov succeeded in that seemingly most simple, actually most difficult of literary obligations. It is a good, an honest, a fine book—like the man who wrote it." Irving Howe

+ Nation 166:697 Je 19 '48 250w

"The introduction is undistinguished, but the Chekhov materials are revealing and rewarding."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 Ap 25 '48 90w

Reviewed by T. Q. Curtiss

N Y Times p13 My 30 '48 1100w

"As fresh and interesting as ever. The letters are equally fascinating, especially those from Nice to friends in Russia, in which Chekhov discusses the contemporaneous Dreyfus case and Zola's involvement in it with remarkable perspicacity."

+ New Yorker 24:119 My 22 '48 120w

"The collection of letters, a distillation of Constance Garnett's selections from the 1900 letters which Chekhov's family released for publication, is the most satisfying element in this pot-pourri. In spite of severe editing, most of Chekhov's best letters appear. . . The diary entries are so brief and limited in scope that it seems the editors have used them for padding purposes in this small volume. Matthew Josephson contributes a thoughtful introduction." A. B. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 13 '48 420w

"To the admirers of a great writer, even his casual notes and scraps of abandoned work have a fascination; so Chekhov readers will pounce on this new collection . . . with delight. But even those outside the circle of initiates may find much solid pleasure in it."

+ Time 51:108 Ap 19 '48 440w

Die CHEMIE. See Newer methods of preparative organic chemistry

CHERIN, WILLIAM B., ed. See American foundations and their fields

CHERNEV, IRVING, and REINFELD, FRED. Winning chess. 231p il $2.75 Simon & Schuster

794.1 Chess 48-6195

"Analysis and the use of repetition, impress on the chess player the proper use of combination play and enable him to recognize and use the tactical devices that improve his play." Booklist

Booklist 44:348 Je 15 '48

"So comprehensive are the examples that a thorough consideration of this book should enable beginners and persons of considerable experience alike to become increasingly able to recognize the basic patterns of winning tactics."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 8 '48 110w

Reviewed by Dana Brannan

N Y Times p19 Ag 15 '48 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 13 '48 150w

CHEW, ARTHUR PERCY. Plowshares into swords; agriculture in the World war age; foreword by Henry C. Taylor. 227p $3 Harper

338.1 Agriculture—U.S. Agriculture—Economic aspects. War—Economic aspects

48-10433

"In this book Arthur Chew develops the thesis that wars arise as a result of the struggle between industrial nations in their effort to maintain connections with enough farms to provide the food and raw materials

CHEW, A. P.—Continued
essential to the prosperity of the industrial population." (Foreword) Index.

"Mr. Chew's scheme merits immediate and searching consideration in highest official and about-to-be-official circles." E. S. Skillin
+ Commonweal 49:41 O 22 '48 800w

"A valuable book for lecturers, speakers, moderators, and students of world problems with useful source material indicated throughout the text."
+ Kirkus 16:352 Jl 15 '48 160w

"Few books published in the last few years make the need for a One World structure more patent than does this book by Mr. Chew. He describes the economic problem fairly enough, but his failure to consider the possibility of a political resolution of an economic difficulty sharply limits the value of his book." M. R. Konvitz
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:13 Ja 1 '49 700w
Springf'd Republican p7B N 7 '48 330w

CHEYNEY, PETER. Dance without music. 217p $2.50 Dodd 48-6150

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Ap 9 '48 100w

"For fans who like to be kept from knowing what is afoot until it is forced out of the author." Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Ap 11 '48 150w

"All very active, but not up to Mr. Cheyney's high standard."
New Yorker 24:99 Ap 3 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 2 '48 30w
Sat R of Lit 31:32 Ap 3 '48 50w

CHEYNEY, PETER. Try anything twice. 216p $2.50 Dodd 48-7760

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 12 '48 80w

"If you like a mystery that features a suave, tough detective with an urge for fast action, try this one." B. S.
N Y Times p16 Jl 25 '48 180w

"Only so-so."
New Yorker 24:64 Jl 31 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 19 '48 60w
Sat R of Lit 31:36 Ag 7 '48 40w

"Before the end every thread has been remorselessly pulled tight. The plot development is tidy, expert and surprising. If certain of our younger novelists would listen, I would recommend them to take a look at Mr. Cheyney and one or two others in the same line of business. They would learn much about sheer presentation, about suspense and timing. Even on character they would get a terrifying sidelight or two." L. A. G. Strong
+ Spec 180:536 Ap 30 '48 270w

CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Prize homes. See Prize homes

CHICAGO UNIVERSITY. Committee on social thought. Works of the mind. See Heywood, R. B., ed.

CHICAGO. UNIVERSITY. Norman Wait Harris foundation. World community. See Wright, Quincy, ed.

CHIDSEY, DONALD BARR. Stronghold. 343p $3 Doubleday
48-5620

Habakkuk Jones and John Rellison, two Connecticut apprentices, were great friends during years when they were outwitting Jefferson's men, who were trying to enforce the Embargo Act. Even when they both sought wider lives something of their friendship remained and survived war, and love for the same woman, and in the end murder. But it was Hab who remained and married Deliverance.

Booklist 44:248 Mr 15 '48
Kirkus 16:3 Ja 1 '48 150w

"The characters in 'Stronghold' are interesting, and the story—for all its flamboyant action—never gets out of hand." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 F 15 '48 400w

"Expertly blended with your money's worth of adventure, romance, suspense and topped with a startling finish." Catherine Brody
+ N Y Times p24 F 22 '48 360w

CHILDS, HERBERT. Way of a gaucho. 429p $3 Prentice-Hall
48-8361

Long saga of the Argentine pampas at the end of the nineteenth century. The gaucho, Goyo, is the hero, whose life was a kind of Robin Hood existence until a renegade priest deprived him of the woman he loved. Then he became a famous bandit.

Booklist 45:51 O 1 '48

"This is colorful, often fascinating, though some may find that the adventure here dulls with repetition and emphasis."
+ — Kirkus 16:378 Ag 1 '48 140w

"Tender love story is woven into the fabric of this tough, lusty and lengthy novel which concerns important period in South American history. Not too necessary." L. R. Etzkorn
Library J 73:1192 S 1 '48 130w

"This is a good, robust, colorful tale set against an exotic and vividly drawn background. It is also a pleasantly conducted romance, complete with frustrations, suspense and emotion in the proper Latin-American vein." J. H. Jackson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 O 24 '48 800w

"'Way of a Gaucho' could have been a routine South American horse opera built along the lines made familiar by a hundred Hollywood Westerns. Instead it is a genuine, if modest, epic of the clash of two ideals of freedom long ago, in a land that has little freedom today." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p23 O 31 '48 380w

"This is a good, robust, colorful tale, set against an exotic and vivid background." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 13 '48 750w

CHILDS, JAMES RIVES. American foreign service; with a foreword by Joseph C. Grew. 261p $4 Holt

327.73 U.S.—Diplomatic and consular service
48-5092

"Sketches the evolution in State and other departments, considers the profession and practice of diplomacy, then follows the Paris Embassy through its various functions to build a clear picture of diplomacy in action. Appendices of related laws and comparative analyses of the British and French services." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by J. L. McCamy
Am Pol Sci R 42:566 Je '48 450w

Reviewed by W. P. Maddox
Ann Am Acad 258:140 Jl '48 380w
Booklist 44:195 F 1 '48

"Mr. Childs, a career officer who has seen 25 years of foreign service in major and minor capitals of the world, has condensed into 250 pages an accurate and factual account of how America's foreign missions function. The book is especially important for those contemplating Foreign Service—not because it tells all, but because it deals with an almost untouched subject. The last book describing America's Foreign Service came out about the time Mr. Childs' career began." Neal Stanford

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 14 '48 550w

Current Hist 14:234 Ap '48 40w

"A concise, informative primer, factual, neither practical nor interpretative, nor any way a personal record."

Kirkus 15:686 D 15 '47 190w

"Equally valuable as vocational material in a field where there is sustained interest or as a description of the form and operation of our foreign service." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1776 D 15 '47 80w

"The author has had the happy idea of focusing his attention on a single office, the Paris Embassy, and analyzing the operations of its separate sections. As a result, Mr. Childs' account of diplomatic and consular activity is more effective than that of Tracy Hollingsworth Lay, formerly the definitive work on the subject, and—because of the author's shrewd use of anecdote—it is more readable as well." G. A. Craig

+ N Y Times p3 F 1 '48 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 My 2 '48 400w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 70w

CHINA. Ministry of information. China handbook, 1937-1945; with 1946 supplement; a comprehensive survey of major developments in China in eight years of war; ed-in-chief: Hollington K. Tong; advisory eds: H. P. Tseng and Maurice E. Votaw. 844p $6 Macmillan

915.1 China 47-12311

"This work is presented to the public as an English language reference work on China at war. The first edition (1937-1943) was published in India and later printed in the United States. A second edition (1937-1944) appeared in India but never in America. The present volume is made up largely of a third issue compiled from 1937 up to September 1945 but heretofore not printed, a chronology through June 1946, and a 1946 supplement reviewing major developments and reprinting texts of some documents of that year. Since it is compiled by the Chinese Ministry of Information, the opinion of the National Government is presented in political matters; informational and statistical matter usually covers Free China only. . . The contents are presented in twenty-four chapters and a supplement, each chapter describing or giving a summary of events in a broad field such as Government Structure, Foreign Affairs, Sino-Japanese Hostilities, Education and Research, Money and Banking, Price Control, Christian Movement, The Press, and several directories. There are no chapters devoted to the arts and literature." Subscription Bks Bul

Booklist 44:186 Ja 15 '48

"The Chinese Ministry of Information in reissuing its China Handbook has performed a service for those who need quick answers to a variety of questions about that country." E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 15 '48 120w

"The index of the 1937-1945 Handbook is greatly improved over that of the 1937-1943 edition which was partly classified and partly alphabetical. The new one, much more detailed, is an alphabetical arrangement and seems reasonably adequate though more entries would be welcome. A few omissions were noticed; for example, under Education there are entries for higher and secondary but not for primary. . . Examination upholds the publishers' statement that three-fourths of the material in this edition is rewritten. Libraries that have found the earlier edition useful will also want the new one. The China Handbook, 1937-1945 is recommended as a record of Free China during the years covered."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 19:24 Ap '48 850w

CHITTICK, VICTOR LOVITT OAKES, ed. Northwest harvest; a regional stocktaking; contributions by Peter H. Odegard [and others]. 226p $4 Macmillan

979.5 Northwest 48-5145

"This 'regional stock-taking' is the printed record of the Writers' Conference on the Northwest, held in Portland, Ore., Oct. 31-Nov. 2, 1946, under the joint sponsorship of The Library Association of Portland and Reed College. Among the fifteen contributors are Carl Van Doren, who emphasized the dangers as well as the importance of regional self-consciousness; Stewart Holbrook, who asked for one good novel on 'one of America's most exciting and romantic stories, that of cutting the Big Clearing from coast to coast'; and Luther H. Evans, Librarian of Congress, speaking on systematic methods of assembling local records." (Library J) No index.

Reviewed by Howard Woolston

Ann Am Acad 257:229 My '48 360w

Booklist 44:231 Mr 1 '48

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan

Chicago Sun p14 F 3 '48 500w

Current Hist 15:103 Ag '48 50w

"A rather mixed bag. . . On the whole recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:1536 N 1 '47 140w

"Not all the speakers hew quite as close to the original line as Mr. Merriam, and in consequence a good deal gets said about other aspects of regionalism—some of them precisely those aspects which Mr. Merriam feels are beside the point. The result is good however, and provides the reader with several bird's-eye views of this portion of the country." J. H. Jackson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 F 29 '48 1050w

Reviewed by R. G. Lillard

N Y Times p27 Mr 7 '48 750w

"This record of a hard-working three-day session sets up a model for writers' conferences which those who conduct other such meetings would do well to study. Most such discussions boil down to an exchange of mechanical and technical shop-talk, and though there's nothing wrong with that, it is heartening to find as one does here, the evidence that a crowd of writers got together and turned over some ground in a field somewhat broader than the garden patch every writer cultivates anyway." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 13 '48 750w

"It is a book that though focused on one region refuses to be confined there. Many people outside the Northwest, as well as many in it will be interested in the enlightened talk at Portland." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R of Lit 31:16 F 7 '48 700w

CHRIST, KATHERINE D. Willow Brook farm [il. by Hilda Van Stockum]. 246p $1.80 Heath

48-2984

Stories of life in a Pennsylvania Dutch farm family of seventy years ago. Names are fictitious but the stories themselves are true. For young readers.

Booklist 45:36 S 15 '48

"Each member of the family is an individual and younger children will like the characters for themselves as well as for their doings. This honest bit of life makes American history more real for readers in schools and libraries."

+ Horn Bk 24:368 S '48 100w

"The book is based on the childhood experiences of Miss Christ's mother and has the glow of loved reminiscences. It was planned for use as a part of social studies in schools, but can hold its own just for good reading. Hilda Van Stockum's illustrations are attractive and, where it is called for, full of fun." Irmengarde Eberle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 18 '48 270w

CHRIST-JANER, ALBERT WILLIAM. Eliel Saarinen; with a foreword by Alvar Aalto. 154p il $15 Univ. of Chicago press

720.81 Saarinen, Eliel 48-8989

A monograph on the Finnish architect which includes a brief biography and a complete history of his work in both architecture and town planning. In 1923 Mr Saarinen came to the United States and has lived and worked here since. The volume contains a chronology; a chronological catalog; a general bibliography; and an index.

Booklist 45:153 Ja 1 '49

"Though less noisy and verbally flamboyant than his household-word contemporaries, Saarinen's philosophy is backed by honest performance true to his principles. Excellent photographic evidence of this philosophy in three dimensions is provided in Christ-Janer's biography. The serenity, clarity and warmth of his work speaks so well for itself, however, that the text sometimes appears weak and superfluous by comparison." C. K. Agle
+ N Y Times p30 Ja 16 '49 230w

"This handsome book records the work of a most distinguished exponent of the modern school of architecture. . . The excellent illustrations enable the reader to trace the varied phases in the development of his style." L. G. White
+ Sat R of Lit 31:15 D 18 '48 650w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). The rose and the yew tree, by Mary Westmacott [pseud]. 249p $2.50 Rinehart 48-5803

John Gabriel, an English plumber's son, wanted to rise to a position of power and be regarded as a gentleman. In World war I he was awarded the Victoria Cross, and with that as a starter he furthered his own ambition by standing for Parliament from a small Cornish village. But on the eve of his success he went off to Central Europe with the gently bred Isabella. After Isabella's death, years later, the moral courage he had lacked was given John Gabriel to face life squarely.

Booklist 44:249 Mr 15 '48
Kirkus 16:32 Ja 15 '48 180w

"Although this is an able novel, quiet and intelligent, the class distinctions which motivate its characters will seem unreal to many Americans."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ap 18 '48 90w

"Twists are added to the story in desperation, but no satisfactory whole emerges—only a collection of twists. Isabella is an interesting character, and Miss Westmacott may well write a much better book than this one day." Robert Kee
— Spec 182:28 Ja 7 '49 140w

"Miss Westmacott writes crisply and is always lucid. The pattern of the book is too vague at one point—the later stages of the hero's career—but much material has been skilfully compressed within little more than 200 pages."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p621 N 6 '48 190w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). There is a tide. 242p $2.50 Dodd 48-6149

Detective story.

Booklist 44:300 My 1 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Ap 9 '48 50w

"'There Is a Tide' is no 'Roger Ackroyd' when it comes to a final surprise, but its one of the better Christies most of the way. Don't miss." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Mr 28 '48 300w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p30 Mr 21 '48 110w

"A pleasant, workmanlike job."
+ New Yorker 24:91 Mr 27 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 11 '48 20w

"Admirable."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:44 Mr 20 '48 50w

CHRISTIE, AGATHA (MILLER) (MRS M. E. L. MALLOWAN). Witness for the prosecution, and other stories. 272p $2.50 Dodd 48-8394

Contents: The witness for the prosecution; The red signal; The fourth man; S.O.S; Where there's a will; The mystery of the blue jar; Sing a song of sixpence; The mystery of the Spanish shawl; Philomel cottage; Accident; The second gong.

Booklist 45:138 D 15 '48

"Some of the tales are fairish, running largely to mystery psychology, with little or no professional detection, but the volume picks up again with the last three selections." Will Cuppy
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 12 '48 230w
New Yorker 24:111 S 11 '48 120w
Sat R of Lit 31:39 S 18 '48 40w
Wis Lib Bul 44:185 N '48

CHURCH, AUSTIN HARRIS. Elementary mechanical vibrations. 200p $3.25 Pitman

620.1123 Vibration. Mechanics, Applied 48-5586

Brief handbook designed to aid students and engineers to solve common vibrational problems. The text is based on material used in courses at New York university. It assumes a knowledge of mechanics and calculus. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:479 Mr 15 '48 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:31 Ja '48

CHURCHILL, WINSTON LEONARD SPENCER. Second World war. v 1: The gathering storm. 784p maps $6 Houghton

940.53 World war, 1939-1945. World war, 1939-1945—Great Britain (48-2880)

"This is volume 1 of Churchill's projected five-volume work The Second World War, which he calls 'the unnecessary war.' The theme of the volume is 'how the English-speaking peoples through their unwisdom, carelessness and good nature allowed the wicked to rearm.' Divided into two parts, the first covers the period 1919-1939 and includes chapters on the mistakes of the Allies after World War I, the rise and rearmament of the dictators, Spain, and the failure to preserve Austria and uphold Czechoslovakia. The second part covers the twilight war, 1939-1940 and is devoted largely to military matters." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Preston Slosson
Am Hist R 54:102 O '48 1200w

Reviewed by C. S. Forester
Atlantic 182:93 Jl '48 2950w
Booklist 44:365 Jl 1 '48

Reviewed by C. M. Utley
Chicago Sun p8X Je 20 '48 1100w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
+ Christian Century 65:757 Jl 28 '48 1700w

Reviewed by Peter Lyne
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 24 '48 1450w

"Much of this material is intriguing and much is educational, but much of it is dull reading. Not only did Churchill preserve every paper 'for the books he knew he would eventually write,' but he has had the privilege of using official British archives. That is one of the things that will be irritating to Churchill's detractors. One cannot call it smugness; it is a sureness of importance and infallibility that this master showman possesses to the extreme. And, despite, all adulation because of his brilliance with pen and speech, many words might have been omitted in the interest of brevity." Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 15:100 Ag '48 850w

+ Kirkus 16:272 Je 1 '48 340w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson

Library J 73:938 Je 15 '48 200w

Reviewed by Reinhold Niebuhr

Nation 166:720 Je 26 '48 1100w

"This work of history manifests to an unusual degree the traits of its author. . . This work is history seen from the apex of the pyramid, a vast, spacious, magnificent conspectus. . . What takes place immediately below, the base and shape of the pyramid itself, the movement of smaller figures, however numerous, on the surrounding terrain, are either out of sight or can be discerned only dimly. . . Finally the book gives complete, meticulously documented proof of Churchill's prescient and resolute role during the years of the gathering storm. . . The whole of the book is delivered in Churchill's elegant, sonorous, copious and self-revealing style. With all its peculiarities, it is a formidable instrument. Short, strong, uncomplicated declarative sentences are its staple. Qualifying words or phrases are held to a minimum. The polysyllable of Latin or Greek origin is preferred—yet Churchill's prose manages to survive. His descriptive powers, the sensitivity and vividness of his imagery, are notable. . . His humor, malice and irony are delightful." J. R. Neumann

+ New Repub 118:22 Je 21 '48 2150w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 36:307 O 9 '48 1900w

"[The book] is, of course, unique. Mr. Churchill's opportunities for making it so are without an equal in the world just now or perhaps at any other time. He was in supreme command for five years, with a brigade of secretaries to note down and file his every word, message or memorandum; he had had, for all the eleven years before when he was out of office, access to a great deal of the most confidential material; he still has access to whatever he wishes in the government archives with full permission to use it as he will. This is the foundation of an authoritative account, certainly. But when we superimpose upon that basis a commanding intelligence, a profound sense of history and a gift for language never equaled among men of supreme power, the whole composes into one of those solid masterpieces, brilliant but durable, which cannot be surpassed." Vincent Sheean

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Je 20 '48 2450w

"Churchill's story will not be judged by its omissions, its revelations, its personal slants. If the work is completed, and he is reported to be working furiously on the third volume, it will be the war book because it will be the only one in which the grand theme is matched by the grand style. Few books belong in the category of great events, and this is one of them. Few books make history in the sense that the epoch they depict will always live as they saw it. This is such a book." A. O. McCormick

+ N Y Times p1 Je 20 '48 2550w

"One of the most engaging things about 'The Gathering Storm' . . . is that he wrote it himself. . . Another good thing about Churchill's book is that he doesn't mind being himself. He has a fine time being himself, as a matter of fact; his book is as much an expression of his personality as a historical record." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 24:65 Jl 10 '48 950w

"'The Gathering Storm' provides the reader with the opportunity of meeting a genuinely great man, perhaps the greatest man of his time. When such a man can tell his own story and a story of world importance, wrapping both into a natural package and presenting the whole in a noble, rolling, yet shrewdly simple prose style—well, you have the once-in-a-generation kind of book. And this is precisely that." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 20 '48 1900w

"Mr. Churchill's account of the events leading up to the Second World War and its first awful year, which subjected us all to ordeal by stagnancy, is a puzzling book. It is clear as crystal about everything except the man who wrote it. That clarity, so far as it goes, is beyond price, and we must thank Heaven that when it decided to complicate earthly affairs it provided a chronicler with the vitality to cope with that complication. This is not to say that Mr. Churchill's writing always pleases. He is not nearly so good at the style which Sir Walter Scott called 'The big bow-wow' as he thinks he is. His rhetorical passages seem, like the first English automobiles, to be preceded by a man carrying a red flag. But in his less flamboyant moods he is a master. He is without match in his generation for his exquisitely feline portraits of his enemies." Rebecca West

Sat R of Lit 31:7 Je 19 '48 3850w

Reviewed by George Britt

Survey G 37:373 Ag '48 1250w

"This book is a major document of our times."

+ Time 51:90 Je 28 '48 1250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p449 Ag 14 '48 7900w

Wis Lib Bul 44:147 S '48

"Churchill's account of the Second World War will be one of the outstanding documents of our time. . . The history is brilliant and devastating, but it is far from definitive and occasionally biased. The autobiography is the focus of interest, for it shows the growth of a man who played as prominent a part in recent history as any one alive. Only Roosevelt might have written a comparable work. Since he did not, this one will remain unique in the literature of the war." W. B. Willcox

+ Yale R n s 38:140 autumn '48 1100w

CHURCHMAN, CHARLES WEST. Theory of experimental inference. 292p $4.25 Macmillan

501 Science—Methodology. Science—Philosophy 48-7384

"Treats the general problem of inference in experimental sciences. The book considers the contributions made by mathematical statisticians, considers work of Pearson and Neyman and Wald. The problem of inference is considered in relation to the important problems of social science, quality control, and consumer interest. The book is devoted to the problem of methodology in general." (Library J) Chapter references. Index.

"Some will feel that the book illustrates the pitfalls involved in a philosopher's becoming enchanted by the promised land (in this case stochastic limits) of a powerful scientific technique, while others will feel that in spite of its faults the work is interesting as a step in the direction of formulating certain philosophical problems in statistical language and of stating certain statistical problems in a philosophical language." A. R. Turquette

Ethics 59:70 O '48 650w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:1032 Jl '48 70w

CHUTE, VERNE. Wayward angel. 264p $2.50 Knopf

48-5301

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:661 D 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 29 '48 120w

"The author presents a neat case of murder within the first four pages of his book and keeps the interest high throughout by fast switching of scene and action." W. J. G.

N Y Times p33 F 8 '48 180w

CHUTE, VERNE—Continued
Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 1 '48 140w
Sat R of Lit 31:35 F 28 '48 40w

CISSEL, JAMES HARLAN. Stress analysis and design of elementary structures. 2d ed 419p il $5 Wiley

624.1 Structures, Theory of. Strains and stresses 48-5869

"Some material revised to conform with present standards and a chapter added on light-gage steel construction. Part II of the text, on design, has been completely revised and rewritten to bring it up to date." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1941. Index.

Booklist 44:316 My 15 '48
Eng N 141:95 Ag 5 '48 60w
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:479 Mr 15 '48 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:28 Ja '48

CLAFLIN, BERT. Muskie fishing. 219p il $4 Knopf

799.1755 Muskellunge Agr48-225

Chapters on the art of capturing muskellunge, a fresh-water game fish which sometimes exceeds six feet in length. Considers all phases of the subject, including a chapter on women anglers. Index.

Booklist 44:333 Je 1 '48
Kirkus 16:163 Mr 15 '48 130w
Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:710 My 1 '48 40w
New Yorker 24:111 Je 5 '48 90w

CLARK, AUSTIN HOBART. Animals alive. 472p il $4 Van Nostrand

591.5 Zoology. Animals, Habits and behavior of 48-6674

A popularly written book which deals with all members of the animal kingdom particularly in their relationships with each other. Includes chapters on animals as the "friends" of man (dogs, cat, horses, etc) on animal enemies, on animals as food, and on animals of various environments. Index.

Booklist 44:332 Je 1 '48
Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '48
N Y New Tech Bks 33:49 Jl '48
San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 3 '48 320w

CLARK, MRS DOROTHY (PARK). Poison speaks softly. 189p $2 Doubleday 47-12357

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:588 O 15 '47 50w
New Repub 118:30 Ja 19 '48 40w

"If Suzy Smith, narrator, hardly succeeds in conveying her own excitement to the customer, you can see that she has a secret she's not telling us just yet. Harmless puzzle with plenty of sudden death." Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 4 '48 150w
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p26 Ja 11 '48 270w
Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 4 '48 130w

"Plenitude of characters, most of them full of arsenic or barbiturates makes tale rather confusing, but it moves rapidly."
Sat R of Lit 30:25 D 27 '47 40w

CLARK, FRED GEORGE, and RIMANOCZY, RICHARD STANTON. How to be popular though conservative; il. by Rama Braggiotti. 101p $2.50 Van Nostrand

330 Capitalism. Caricatures and cartoons 48-6983

"The book is dedicated to millions of unhappy Americans in all walks of life who have found themselves branded by the nasty name 'conservative,' and it undertakes to provide them with a clear concept and a socio-economic vocabulary designed to help them hold their own in modern ideological controversies. . . [It is a] defense of private ownership and competitive management of the tools of production." Springf'd Republican

School & Society 68:63 Jl 24 '48 10w
Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 15 '48 250w

CLARK, HOWARD. The mill on Mad river. 278p $2.75 Little 48-5966

Waterbury, Connecticut, in 1810 and for a few years thereafter, is the scene of this first novel. The hero is Anson Holt who dreamed of owning his own brass factory, even while he was a little boy. When he grew up Anson realized his dream, and won a beautiful wife besides. The novel contains considerable history about the early brass and clock-making industries.

Booklist 44:336 Je 1 '48

"A story which opens with considerable charm, atmospheric authenticity, and leads to sturdier adventure."
+ Kirkus 16:124 Mr 1 '48 180w

"A lively tale that wears lightly the considerable research and erudition that must have gone into its writing. By that token, it offers not only a good story but also an often surprising picture of meanings of freedom, democracy, and individual enterprise in the early decades of the Republic." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 My 9 '48 600w
Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Times p12 My 23 '48 500w

"More impressive as an example of the lengths to which historical research can be carried than as a novel."
New Yorker 24:107 My 8 '48 120w

" 'The Mill on Mad River' gives the impression of having been written by a man who, after reading a good many historical novels, said to himself, 'By George, I could do as well as that.' And, on average, he has. But the more novels of this sort there are, the harder it becomes to do a good one. That, perhaps, represents the error in his calculations." Bradford Smith
Sat R of Lit 31:26 Je 26 '48 750w
Wis Lib Bul 44:149 S '48

CLARK, JOHN MAURICE. Alternative to serfdom; five lectures delivered . . . at the University of Michigan, March 1947. 153p $3 Knopf

338.01 Economic policy 48-5908

Five lectures outlining the principle that "the price of freedom is its responsible exercise." The author, professor of economics at Columbia university, argues against both excessive individualism and excessive coercion by groups, communities and governments. Contents: Wanted: a balanced society; The human material—biological roots and what grows out of them; Competition and security; Revolution in economics: after Keynes what?; Toward a society of responsible individuals in responsible groups. Index.

Reviewed by Lawrence Pelletier
Am Pol Sci R 42:607 Je '48 300w
Reviewed by Frank Paddock
Ann Am Acad 259:163 S '48 240w
Current Hist 15:39 Jl '48 250w

Kirkus 16:72 F 1 '48 150w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel
Library J 73:469 Mr 15 '48 100w

"Professor Clark understands his theory; he did not stop learning in the ancient days B. K. (Before Keynes); he had made noteworthy contributions of his own. This book, consisting of lectures delivered on the William W. Cook Foundation at the University of Michigan, inquires what Americans can do to manage their economy in view of developments to which classical economics can offer no safe guide." George Soule
+ Nation 166:510 My 8 '48 700w

"A distinguished book for economists and other social scientists. The informed layman, prepared to ponder and sweat over cosmic problems, will find the task rewarding. . . Professor Clark offers general prescriptions, but it is necessary to implement the broad generalizations with specific proposals to deal with everyday issues. He attempts to fill in some of the crevices with concrete proposals. Yet, what wage policy, for example, will yield fair distribution of the national income, and of the gains of progress?" S. E. Harris
+ — N Y Times p5 Mr 28 '48 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 2 '48 450w

Reviewed by R. S. Lynd
Sat R of Lit 31:24 Je 12 '48 1000w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 37:221 Ap '48 850w

CLARK, MARGARET LOGAN, and TEALL, BRISEIS. Executive director on the job in a membership organization, the YWCA. 128p $2.75 Womans press

267.5 Young women's Christian associations
47-6080

A comprehensive analysis of the work of an executive director in the Y.W.C.A. "This book is predicated on the theory that the job of executive director is not simply a sum of the various functions but an interrelated and integrated whole if it is to be effectively performed. . . The case material presented herein gives concrete and refreshing assurance that the tackling of a specific problem in administration can be undertaken by executives with vision, skill and common sense, and a clear understanding of how their responsibilities are related to those of others concerned with the problem. The good executive recognizes that administration is a shared process as well as one which requires an assumption of centered responsibility." (Foreword) Bibliography.

"Worthy of careful study by the executive of any membership organization. . . Through the book the executive director will receive very valuable help in technique and philosophy procedures in her administrative responsibility; and the layman will gain a deeper respect for the Y.W.C.A., an organization which is blazing some new trails among group-working agencies." E. D. Eggleston
+ Crozer Q 25:94 Ja '48 110w

"The YWCA has done it again—added to the field another book of administrative wisdom which, when assimilated by executives, can dispel some of their administrative headaches." L. H. Blumenthal
+ Survey 84:29 Ja '48 500w

CLARK, PEARL (FRANKLIN) (MRS WALLACE CLARK). Challenge of the American know-how. 172p $2.50 Harper

658 Industrial management. Europe—Description and travel
48-9488

The author, wife of an industrial management engineer, writes of her experiences as an interested onlooker during the years her husband spent in Europe as a consultant to European industrialists. Index.

"It is unusual to find a book dealing with the administrative side of industry so rich in vivid incidents, exceptional people, colorful backgrounds, and sympathy and understanding." E. W. Bates
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 17 '49 650w

"Enthusiastically recommended for most collections. A natural for the women's clubs." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:1663 N 15 '48 100w

"Sweetly idealistic, and light both in substance and manner."
Nation 168:137 Ja 29 '49 40w

"Mrs. Clark's book gains added interest from her accounts of discussions with industrialists and statesmen of Europe, and with their wives. Her own evolving philosophy of industrial democracy is, however, constantly beclouded by the conflicting evidences of economic failures and successes in America. In contrast with her husband's engineering reports, her own work lacks organization and continuity." J. M. Juran
+ — N Y Times p17 D 19 '48 650w

CLARK, PHILIP. Flight into darkness. 212p $2 Simon & Schuster 48-5409

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p63 F 13 '48 40w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Mr 7 '48 110w

"This is a closely knit story of treason during the war and of attempts to wreck the peace after it." I. A.
+ N Y Times p27 F 15 '48 190w

"Above-average suspense stuff."
+ New Yorker 23:88 F 14 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 15 '48 100w

"Good grade."
Sat R of Lit 31:35 F 28 '48 40w

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMER. All the best in England. 340p il maps $3.50 Dodd

914.2 England—Description and travel
48-6148

Travel guide to England and Wales. It contains information about airplanes, ships, trains, hotels, eating places, money exchange, and information about places to visit. Takes account of war damage, especially in London. Maps of the center of London and England and Wales on endpapers. Index.

Booklist 44:297 My 1 '48

"It is as good as a soldier's orientation course, full of detail. . . The book is notable for the way he ties in English sources of American institutions. Especially good on Wales."
+ Commonweal 48:682 Ap 30 '48 130w

"Sightseers bound for the British Isles will find that Clark has anticipated their questions on everything from how much to tip the hotel valet to where you can find that silver toast-rack you promised Aunt Ruth. His advice and information are offered in a pleasant, concise fashion." B. D. Colen
+ N Y Times p33 Je 6 '48 270w

"His book can be recommended not only as a supplement to the technicalities of the [Gordon Cooper's Your Holiday in Britain] but as a joy to every class of traveler with the possible exception of the 'holiday campers.'" Pamela Kellino
+ Sat R of Lit 31:57 Ap 17 '48 230w

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMER. All the best in the Caribbean. 251p il maps $3.50 Dodd

917.29 Caribbean sea. West Indies—Description and travel
48-5560

Guide to Cuba, Jamaica, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Trinidad, Venezuela, Curaçao, and Colombia.

CLARK, S. A.—Continued
There are sections on transportation, entry requirements, coinage, the weather, and clothes. Brief histories of the countries are included and about half the book is devoted to telling the tourist what to see in the Caribbean lands. Index.

Booklist 44:215 F 15 '48

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 24 '48 110w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '48

"The book is arranged in a twelve-stop circuit, admirably complete, precise and up-to-date as to information, with capsule histories of the countries visited, and a garnish of the author's own impressions and experiences. Having recently written a whole book about Cuba, Mr. Clark gives it minor space here, but his orbit takes in the South American mainland."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 23 '48 200w

Reviewed by T. R. Ybarra
+ N Y Times p21 F 29 '48 150w

"Gives practical information and guidance to the uninitiated. . . Such information is most helpful to novice and even veteran tourists, and should be read before departing from home. . . It is manifestly impossible to cover in one book all that is of interest and merit in these variegated isles. The author does not attempt to do so. With conscientious effort he has selected that which within his experience and judgment he considers best." O. A. de Lima
+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 Ja 17 '48 330w

CLARK, SYDNEY AYLMER. Today in cathedral France. rev ed 301p il $3.75 Dodd
726.6 Cathedrals—France. France—Description and travel 48-6865

An introduction to the cathedrals of France, their builders, history, and architecture. The book first appeared in 1931 (Book Review Digest 1932). The present edition is brought to date and notes war damage.

Booklist 44:354 Je 15 '48

"A fascinating volume. It is the sort of book that will be equally appreciated by both armchair travelers and those who are fortunate enough to wander across France's countryside, stopping off for a day or two at her cathedral towns." B. D. Colen
+ N Y Times p33 Je 6 '48 60w

"The author's prose style is not the happiest feature of the book, filled as it is with numerous expressions which he feels necessary to place inside quotation marks to indicate their slang character. However, the illustrations and the wealth of information about these churches and the history that has grown up about them more than make up for such shortcomings." C. W. W.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 18 '48 200w

"It would be difficult to imagine a more interesting or rewarding 'travel book' than 'Today in Cathedral France.'" R. S. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p10A Jl 4 '48 380w

CLARK, THOMAS CURTIS, and CLARK, ROBERT EARLE, comps. Poems for the great days. 245p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury
808.81 Holidays—Poetry. Poetry—Collections 48-2262

An anthology composed of about 350 poems to be used on religious or patriotic days from New Year's to Christmas. Contents: New Year's day; Lincoln's birthday; Washington's birthday; Lent and Easter; Arbor day; Mother's day; Flag day; Independence day; Labor day; Columbus day; Armistice-World order day; Thanksgiving day; Christmas. Indexes.

Booklist 44:349 Je 15 '48

"Such a book belongs in the first-aid kit of every preacher or other speaker who may need, often on short notice, to quote appropriate verse." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 65:418 My 5 '48 140w

Reviewed by M. L. Eglinton
Churchman 162:15 My 15 '48 50w

"The material is relatively fresh and unhackneyed, but its use will be largely dependent upon the responsiveness of the user to his immediate needs and his level of appreciation." R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 25:378 O '48 100w

CLARK, THOMAS DIONYSIUS. Southern country editor. 365p $3.50 Bobbs
071.5 Newspapers—South 48-8524

"Exhaustive study of files of many regional newspapers south of the Mason and Dixon line has resulted in a lively collection of material showing the part played by the press in social and economic life. Sympathetic portrayal of the problems involved in maintaining financial support, building on human interest and, as circumstance permitted, fosterinz progress." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:82 N 1 '48

"Interesting and comprehensive supplement to social history." M. C. Manley
+ Library J 73:1269 S 15 '48 70w

"Mr. Clark is a sort of literary Margaret Mead. . . Four years ago he worked on the country store of a generation ago in a book called 'Pills, Petticoats and Plows.' Now he has done an anthropological survey of the country newspaper of the same period with equally fruitful results. . . Mr. Clark has chosen a vivid and colorful subject for his study, one too much neglected by historians." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 O 3 '48 950w

"Mr. Clark might have written a book about the country editor in general instead of singling out one region. But because he has limited himself to the South from the end of the Civil War almost to the present, he has made a far more valuable contribution to an understanding of a troubled past, and, especially, to an understanding of how far the South has come in eighty years." Hodding Carter
+ N Y Times p16 N 21 '48 850w

"Local customs and folklore, medical advertising, legends and anecdotes, flowery tributes in the formal manner, or thundering denunciations such as a frock-coated statesman might utter are all part of the country editor's bill of fare. Mr. Clark serves them all. The student of journalism and the historian will find varied and interesting information in this volume, which in dealing so plentifully with small matters gives a broad picture of local opinion in the changing South over four generations." C. M. Puckette
+ Sat R of Lit 31:27 D 11 '48 650w

CLAUDEL, PAUL. Lord, teach us to pray; tr. by Ruth Bethell. Am ed 95p il $2 Longmans
264.1 Prayer 48-2915

Essays on the need and dispositions for prayer, by a Catholic poet. Masterpieces of paintings are used to illustrate the points made. Alexis Carrel's Reader's Digest article, Prayer is power, is included in an appendix.

"This little volume is one of the creative books of the year—precious to own and to return to again and again." Katherine Brégy
+ Cath World 168:172 N '48 320w

Reviewed by J. S. Kennedy
Cath World 168:216 D '48 50w

"While the presuppositions are those of a believing Catholic, in all but one of the chapters the appeal to cultivate the life of the Spirit is one which would strike a responsive chord in the hearts of wistful Protestants as well as Catholics. The method of presentation is such as would interest those conversant with the esoteric, and the mystical."

+ Kirkus 16:286 Je 15 '48 140w
San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 5 '48 160w

CLAXTON, ERNEST EDWARD. Child's grace; pref. and verses by [the author] phot. by Constance Bannister. new Am ed 62p $2 Dutton
264.1 Children's prayers 48-4602

Verses of a prayer of thanks, illustrated with photographs of childhood activities by Constance Bannister. An earlier edition containing the same text, but with photographs by Harold Burdekin is entered in the 1938 Book Review Digest under the name of the photographer.

Booklist 45:75 O 15 '48
Kirkus 16:477 S 15 '48 60w

"Exceedingly appealing photographs of children busy with their everyday experiences. . . A good introduction to prayer for the picture-book age." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 73:1392 O 1 '48 70w

"A choice book for young children—and parents." E. A. F.
+ Springf'd Republican p7B O 3 '48 170w

CLEMENS, SAMUEL LANGHORNE (MARK TWAIN, pseud). Mark Twain at your fingertips, ed. by Caroline Thomas Harnsberger. 559p $5 Beechhurst press 817 48-5681

A concordance to Mark Twain's works made up of excerpts from his books, and some of his speeches. Arrangement is alphabetical by subject, with frequent cross references. Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 44:296 My 1 '48

"'Mark Twain at your Fingertips' has made me wish that somebody would do a more compact collection of Mark Twain's really witty and humorous sayings. There are enough for a small volume of notable quality, but not really enough for these 500-odd closely printed pages, which are crammed with witty sayings and humorous observations, but also of purple passages, sentimental musings, heavy-handed satire, really pungent remarks, and occasional lumbering second-rate disquisitions."
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 21 '48 200w

"If you are a speaker, say, or a student, perhaps this will be a useful book to you. This depends, though, on how well you are able to use the curious index, in which, for example, the famous remark about the weather is not indexed under 'Weather' in the 'Subjects Index,' but under 'Nature,' though if you want to look it up twice, there is something called a 'Topical Index,' in which the word 'weather' does appear. . . As for how complete a job the book may be—well, you can't get everything in, short of reprinting Mark Twain's works." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 9 '48 550w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 31:24 Ap 24 '48 50w
School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 20w

"This is obviously a tremendous labor in the field of research, but while the end result is something of great potential value, its current worth is in doubt. For some reason or other, probably because he is still so close to us, it is saddening to see Huck Finn's creator so thoroughly dissected, but it must be added that he bears up under it very well. With sentiment aside, it is recognized that a complete dictionary of Mark Twainisms, each traced to one of a hundred sources, is worthy of respect even from those who recognize most of the quotations as old friends. It is lovingly, if somewhat confusingly, divided into 'topics' with various cross-references designed to make easy the location of the desired quotation. This is possibly the only way the rambling Mark could be corralled into anything remotely resembling a formal schedule." R.F.H.
+ — Springf'd Republican p12B Mr 12 '48 700w

CLEMENTS, MRS EDITH GERTRUDE (SCHWARTZ). Flowers of prairie and woodland; with 24 plates in color. 83p $2.25 Wilson, H. W.
581.973 Flowers 48-219

"Flowers of the middle west, grouped by families, are pictured in color, with brief descriptions. Numerous references are made to a number of other books written or illustrated by the author and to articles in the National Geographic Magazine, in which these plates originally appeared. Intended to 'enable the nature-lover to learn the names of familiar or beautiful wild flowers, as well as interesting facts about them, without recourse to technical keys or dry description.' (Preface) No index." Booklist

Booklist 44:346 Je 15 '48

"Rocky Mountain Flowers, Flowers of Mountain and Plain, Wild Flowers of the West have been so popular that the success of this new volume is assured."
+ Wis Lib Bul 44:130 Je '48

CLEMO, JACK R. Wilding graft. 284p $3 Macmillan
48-9032

Meledor, a remote village in the china-clay area of Cornwall is the scene of this first novel. It is a story of the clash of wills and temperaments among the inhabitants, but also the personal battle between Garth, a young clay-worker, and an older Welshman, Griffiths. Garth believes in a young evacuee, Irma, and even tho she is driven from the village by malice, Garth's faith in her is justified.

"The descriptions of the countryside, the feeling of the remoteness of the region, the temper and quality of the people are vivid, but for all its spiritual values, the story is bogged down by its theme."
+ — Kirkus 16:376 Ag 1 '48 160w

Reviewed by P. H. Newby
New Statesman & Nation 35:298 Ap 10 '48 500w

"Mr. Clemo writes in the mood of Thomas Hardy, somberly and with deep introspection. But he lacks the intellectual conception of character which would give his book power, and his crudity is not the crudity of force, but of ineptness."
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 N 21 '48 140w

"This book, the first novel of Jack Clemo, a Cornish writer, should attract deserved attention both from those who like an excellent story and from those who are interested in the novel as a form of art, its technique and ever-changing forms, its material and its purpose." M. E. Chase
+ N Y Times p24 N 7 '48 1000w

"Although they talk in dialect, his surprisingly articulate characters are sometimes reminiscent of the mouthpieces employed with such hilarious effect by Max Beerbohm in 'Savonarola Brown' to inform the audience, under the thin guise of onstage conversation, of what happened before the curtain rose. Whether the author is still essentially more of a provincial or more of a misfit it would be hard to say. Certainly he is as stubborn as his Cornish cast, and in time his persistence forces the apparent contradictions of his style and his story into a texture so thickly woven as to blot out temporarily the rest of the world." Harry Bull
Sat R of Lit 31:31 N 6 '48 500w

"Mr. Clemo has read Hardy. . . He has, too, some of Hardy's occasional awkwardness, but differs from the master in his proclamation of a positive faith, supported by quotation

CLEMO, J. R.—Continued
from Browning, and leaving us in no doubt where he stands. With a good ear, a sense of place, a power to suggest atmosphere, he is an impressive newcomer." L. A. G. Strong
+ Spec 180:386 Mr 26 '48 280w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p6B D 26 '48 250w

"Mr. Clemo is a promising young Cornish writer. In Wilding Graft, his first novel, he succeeds in evoking a vivid impression of the china-clay country with its strange landscape dotted with sharp white cones and pits, and the oddly stratified Cornish society, where religion is still a force and where patches of struggling industry exist in a deep rural setting. . . His publishers compare Mr. Clemo with Hardy. It is not an altogether ludicrous comparison, for Mr. Clemo has a really deep feeling for his scene; but if he is to progress he will need to shed a lot of mental fuzz and develop some old-fashioned humanism and objectivity."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p173 Mr 27 '48 180w

CLEWES, DOROTHY. Wild wood; il. by Irene Hawkins. 128p $2.50 Coward-McCann

Animals, Legends and stories of 48-5767

"The united action of little creatures of wood and stream to drive undesirable humans away will make children laugh loud and long. Everything happens to the humans. There are spider webs everywhere; mice eat their clothes; ants get in their beds; moles ruin their lawns; rabbits eat their lettuce; and finally, enraged by rubbish which the humans throw in it, the stream goes on a rampage and floods the humans out. . . A second story concerns 'Quiet Pool.' " N Y Times

Commonweal 49:149 N 19 '48 50w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:195 My '48 120w

Kirkus 16:46 F 1 '48 120w

"There is a forced quality in the adventures of Woodfolk and Waterfolk in the Wild Wood . . . that will keep this story off most must lists. The delicate illustrations and 12-point print will, to the eight-to ten-year-olds, be definite points in its favor." Elizabeth Sussdorff
— + Library J 73:560 Ap 1 '48 70w

"There are beauty and humor here without wordiness. The fantastic characters seem real and right. Although the setting is England, one feels these events might happen in any wood, in any quiet pool. A thoroughly charming story, good for family reading." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times p33 Mr 28 '48 180w

CLEWES, HOWARD. "Thus am I slayn" [Eng title: The unforgiven.] 255p $3 Dutton 48-904

A little band of "partisans" encircled by the enemy, but not much bothered by them, are living rather a contented life when an Allied officer parachutes into their midst with plans for escape. After him comes the press. The rest is tragedy.

Reviewed by Louis Zara
Chicago Sun Je 23 '48 700w

"Mature, well written, displaying considerable talent. For a select market."
+ Kirkus 16:33 Ja 15 '48 170w

"Rather confused, tragi-comic burlesque vehicle for not too subtle ironic criticism of civilized society. For the occasional sophisticated reader." J. E. Cross
Library J 73:336 F 15 '48 110w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p3 F 20 '48 120w

"In this book, Howard Clewes was apparently forced to camouflage his own uncertainty. The result demonstrates that mere vagueness isn't suggestive and a hidden meaning can't be deduced from the lack of an apparent one." John Farrelly
New Repub 118:27 Mr 29 '48 250w

Reviewed by P. H. Newby
New Statesman & Nation 35:197 Mr 6 '48 270w

"Howard Clewes, author of 'Dead Ground,' is a versatile, thoroughly accomplished craftsman, capable of subtly ironic effects and prose passages of real beauty. In this new novel, published in England as 'The Unforgiven' he has perhaps allowed his virtuosity too free a rein." Richard Match
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ap 4 '48 850w

"As Hemingway read Donne, so Howard Clewes read Chaucer ('Thus am I slayn sith that Pité is dead'). In addition, Clewes' elegant vocabulary and impeccable syntax vouch for his literacy. But his novel belongs in the drawing room with all those fine old books converted into cigarette boxes—each nicely constructed and hollow inside." Patricia Blake
— + N Y Times p14 Je 27 '48 410w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 8 '48 900w

"Howard Clewes . . . has cast his story into a mingling of realistic and allegorical forms with, however, not always the most happy results. . . The characters, a large cast of them, seem to have been drawn with the aid of some sort of literary slide rule. All supposedly represent universal types. . . Unfortunately, they seldom spring to life, for all the 'fine' writing, the knowledge of technique. In 'Thus Am I Slayn' the method, all too often soundly defeats the material." Hollis Alport
— Sat R of Lit 31:30 Jl 31 '48 550w

"With the arrival of Bullivant and Slater, a journalist, everything breaks up into a farce on the lines of Robertson Hare and Ralph Lynn. As this is the brightest part of the novel, it gives the whole first section, with its clumsy retrospects, a certain falsity, and makes the final impression one of confusion and puzzlement. However, despite this unfortunate cleavage, 'The Unforgiven' has something of interest to say, and many of the descriptions are excellent." Robin King
— + Spec 180:326 Mr 12 '48 310w

"Here is a novel that is all skill and brilliance on the outside . . . but morally sick at the core. As such, it seems symptomatic of much current writing."
— + Time 51:108 Ap 5 '48 480w

"Mr. Clewes's habit of interspersing the future between the past and the present imposes rather a strain on the reader, and his characterizations are not quite strong enough to emerge sharply from such a confusing setting. Nevertheless, 'The Unforgiven' is one of the most interesting novels the war has yet produced."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p133 Mr 6 '48 420w

CLINARD, OUTTEN JONES. Japan's influence on American naval power, 1897-1917. 235p $3.75; pa $3 Univ. of Calif.

359.0973 U.S.—History, Naval. U.S.—Foreign relations—Japan. Japan—Foreign relations—U.S. A48-3

"An analysis of the national strategy of the United States in the Pacific and of the development of American naval policy under that influence." (Social Studies) Bibliography. Index.

"An extraordinarily well-documented study. . . There are supplied ample references, valuable footnotes, a comprehensive bibliography, and a good index." S. K. Hornbeck
+ Am Hist R 53:822 Jl '48 480w

Reviewed by A. H. Taylor
Pacific Affairs 21:425 D '48 500w

"An important and useful book that will serve both as corrective and complement to A. Whitney Griswold's classic." H. F. Graff
+ Pol Sci Q 63:634 D '48 700w

Social Studies 39:144 Mr '48 30w

"This book throws considerable light on a much wider range of events than the title indicates. It unfolds clearly and logically the foreign policy of the United States in the Pacific area, and shows an awareness of how events in Europe and Africa, as well as in Asia, affected that policy. This is a scholarly work in which less widely known events are given careful attention and are skillfully woven into the picture. Every challenging statement is carefully documented from primary sources." W. R. Klinger

+ Social Studies 39:279 O '48 650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:52 Mr '48 280w

CLOUD of unknowing; a version in modern English of a fourteenth century classic; pub. in assn. with Pendle Hill [abr, arr, and interpreted by a student member of the community at Pendle Hill]. 146p $1.50 Harper

149.3 Mysticism 48-5987

"A guide to devotion...[written by an] anonymous 14th century English monk." San Francisco Chronicle

"This is a delightful little edition, that asks to be slipped into every coat-pocket, of one of the best of all books. An anonymous Quaker has written a preface, and, seemingly unaware of his spiritual cheek, has made an 'interpretation' which includes substituting 'selfness' for sin, in many places, and cutting down to 52, the 75 chapters of the original... Alas, that anonymity is not enough, and that the twentieth century amender is so much less inspiring than his fourteeth century model!" Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 47:571 Mr 19 '48 200w

"The real significance of this little book lies in its challenge and direction to the highest levels of Christian prayer and love. Its real rewards are reserved for the reader who will follow the general pattern here outlined of self-knowledge, self-denial, and self-restoration-in-the-pure-love-of-God which is here set forth with eloquence, personal verity, and moving power." A. C. Outler

+ Crozer Q 26:80 Ja '49 500w

Reviewed by E. M. Tainton

San Francisco Chronicle p11 My 30 '48 250w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 31:17 D 18 '48 90w

CLYDE, PAUL HIBBERT. The Far East; a history of the impact of the West on eastern Asia. 862p maps $7.65; to schools $5.77 Prentice-Hall

950 East (Far East)—History 48-5784

"This book contains no extended account of the early history of the Chinese, the Japanese, or of other East Asiatic peoples. Rather, the stress so far as Asia's history is concerned is on the modern institutional life of the Far East, where such knowledge is essential to an understanding of modern contacts. The approach to the subject is derived from more than twenty years of classroom discussion with American university students seeking their first intellectual contacts with Asia." Pref

Reviewed by J. K. Fairbank

Am Hist R 53:889 Jl '48 240w

"The historian will find the work comprehensive and scholarly; the specialist in international relations will find it valuable in giving perspective on the difficult problem of the contemporary Far East." R. H. Fifield

+ Am Pol Sci R 42:1036 O '48 170w

"The account is well organized, well written, and thoroughly objective; it is abundantly illustrated with new maps and charts, many of which are products of wartime research in the Office of Strategic Services. . . Professor Clyde's book will doubtless stand for a decade as one of the most convenient texts on the subject of eastern Asiatic history viewed as a problem of Western impact. Yet it presents a challenge. We need much more extensive research and penetrating analysis of the counterdevelopment within the eastern Asiatic civilizations so that Americans may more clearly appreciate the profound historical process now in train." C. M. Wilbur

+ Ann Am Acad 258:136 Jl '48 550w

"This will be most useful as a textbook, or as a student's guide to a broad and connected view of the subject and to further reading as suggested in the copious bibliographies. It is rather arid and austere for general reading. Yet the theme is so intrinsically exciting and desperately important that it is worth the effort to digest the political and diplomatic details." W. E. G.

+ — Christian Century 65:449 My 12 '48 60w

CLYMER, ELEANOR LOWENTON (JANET BELL, pseud). Country kittens; with pictures by Jeanne Bendick. 108p $2 McBride

47-12464

Two country kittens brought to live in a city apartment escaped and went wandering in New York. They spent a night in the Museum of Natural History, went to the zoo, and finally ended their adventures in the zoo cafeteria. There they were found by their young mistress and taken back to the country.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p5 Ag 31 '48 150w

"While this is somewhat manufactured, it may interest children from 8-10 who like cats." E. W. Turpin

Library J 73:125 Ja 15 '48 70w

"This cat's tour of New York is artfully scaled to a kitten's viewpoint, spontaneous and funny. It carries, too, a very unobtrusive parable of tolerance and openmindedness." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p30 F 8 '48 180w

Wis Lib Bul 44:23 Ja '48

COATES, ROBERT MYRON. Wisteria cottage. 212p $2.50 Harcourt

48-8041

Psychological novel presenting in fictional form the case history of a young man being held under psychiatric observation after a series of brutal murders.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun S 17 '48 340w

"Where Mr. Coates has been particularly successful is in the ordinariness of his story. No tiled asylums, no mental bedlams are employed to wring the reader's emotions. 'Wisteria Cottage' is simplicity itself, as direct and frightening as the uncoiling of a serpent." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Commonweal 48:624 O 8 '48 500w

Kirkus 16:407 Ag 15 '48 180w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 119:26 S 13 '48 140w

"A brilliant tour de force, Robert M. Coates' 'Wisteria Cottage' is as frightening a literary item as you are at all likely to encounter. It is in no sense a murder mystery, although from the beginning it is clear that a murder is to be committed. It is not, thank goodness, a psychological thriller, with half-baked references to psychology and a mish-mash of moods and happenings never adequately accounted for. Although Mr. Coates' knowledge of psychology and of psychiatry is obvious, he has kept the terminology largely to himself and produced not a case history but a superb imaginative excursion into the mind of a reluctant murderer." Lorine Pruette

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S 12 '48 750w

"Very occasionally a new novel comes along whose author so obviously knows exactly what he is doing and who does it with such skill and intelligence that the reader can enter into its enjoyment with the thankful relaxation of absolute confidence. Such a novel is Robert M. Coates' 'Wisteria Cottage.'" Marc Brandel

+ N Y Times p4 S 12 '48 550w

"In 'Wisteria Cottage' Robert M. Coates has written what is, on the face of it, a first-rate thriller, and I recommend it without delay as a scary addition to that particular subspecies,

COATES, R. M.—Continued
surely the rarest and most satisfying of all, in which the mystification is nothing and the accumulation of horror is everything." Brendan Gill
+ New Yorker 24:100 S 11 '48 800w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 9 '48 650w

"Grade-A psycho-thriller."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:39 S 18 '48 40w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '48 120w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). House of the Swan; il. by Kathleen Voute. 165p $2.50 Macmillan 48-2030

Mystery story for ages 8-12. The setting is a French village near Tours in the year 1912.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ag 21 '48 90w

"I am so enthusiastic about Elizabeth Coatsworth's sparkling imagery of her story's people and secrets, that I am sorry the publishers felt it necessary to include the uninspired illustrations by Kathleen Voute." H. F. Griswold
+ — Christian Science Monitor p4 Jl 29 '48 240w

"The mystery is puzzling and plausible and the French life holds interest and charm." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:277 Jl '48 80w

"Well-written, sustained mystery story."
+ Kirkus 16:48 F 1 '48 130w

"Should be in a large collection." K. H. McAlarney
Library J 73:824 My 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 9 '48 290w

"The style is superb as befits an author who is also a poet and the characterization of all the characters is superior to that in most juveniles." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times p27 My 16 '48 130w

"One of the most convincing characters . . . is the dog Tais-toi, who was 'a curious looking but engaging creature with a sober, intelligent expression.' Younger boys and girls will like the book for him and for the mystery. Older ones will recognize the skill and beauty of the writing and of the creation of atmosphere." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 31:28 Jl 10 '48 230w

Springf'd Republican p10B My 30 '48 110w

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). South Shore town. 201p $3.50 Macmillan

917.448 Hingham, Massachusetts. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-10806

Short essays making up a picture of Hingham, Massachusetts. They are reminiscences, anecdotes and descriptions of the town, its people, both living and dead. The author lived in Hingham for some years. Bibliography.

Booklist 45:102 N 15 '48

"The whole is pleasant reading for the author's own following and those who know the area."
+ Kirkus 16:464 S 1 '48 120w

"Miss Coatsworth's book will be welcomed by her many devoted readers and it is worthy of Hingham." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 73:1506 O 15 '48 70w

"Whether Gothic tales or placid romance, Miss Coatsworth clothes her short chapters with singular charm. Not satisfied with prose, she celebrates Hingham's worthies in verse—the smooth and delicately perceived verse—for which she is well known." Richardson Wright
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 2 '49 800w

"It has the flavor of the conversation at an afternoon tea and adds up to a highly personal book, a wallpaper-and-miniatures book lived and written indoors." Hal Borland
+ N Y Times p30 D 5 '48 200w

Reviewed by Pamela Taylor
Sat R of Lit 32:28 Ja 8 '48 550w

Reviewed by E. H. Dexter
Springf'd Republican p18A Ja 16 '49 300w

Wis Lib Bul 45:12 Ja '49

COATSWORTH, ELIZABETH JANE (MRS HENRY BESTON). Summer green; il. by Nora S. Unwin. 86p $2 Macmillan 811 48-9085

Poems of summer outdoors.

Booklist 45:123 D 1 '48

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p9 D 21 '48 270w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
+ Commonweal 49:213 D 3 '48 60w

"A rewarding collection to be added to the poetry bookshelf is to be found in this delightful book of verses by a poet who knows how to catch a child's interest and who is always musical." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:35 Ja '49 80w

"Another of Miss Coatsworth's fine books of verse for children. She writes with ease and imagination and as usual manages to convey in these poems that fresh, simple country flavor. Recommended." Lillian Morrison
+ Library J 73:1672 N 15 '48 30w

"Poetry flows from the pen of Elizabeth Coatsworth more easily and with more felicity than does prose from the pens of most authors. Her delight in nature is shared with children in this little volume." H. A. Masten
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 28 '48 170w

Reviewed by Phyllis Fenner
N Y Times p22 Ja 9 '49 120w

"This new collection of fresh and imaginative poems by Elizabeth Coatsworth is illustrated with black and white drawings that are as imaginative and as lovely as the poems themselves."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:34 N 13 '48 150w

COBB, JOHN, pseud. See Cooper, J. C.

COBBAN, ALFRED. National self-determination; issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs. rev ed 186p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

323.1 Self determination, National 48-6147

"Originally published in England in 1944, [Book Review Digest 1945] this is a study of the operation of the theory of national self-determination made by Professor Cobban (University College, University of London). The principle as applied to the British Commonwealth, the United States, and Soviet Russia is thoroughly discussed." (Current Hist) Index.

Current Hist 14:296 My '48 40w

"The author . . . deals without bias or prejudice with all the ramifications of his subject, but he is bound to neglect the aspect of practical politics. In spite of his apposite discussion of the Indian or the Palestinian situation, the fundamental problem remains entangled in the unholy trinity of nationalism, self-determination, and sovereignty. These are the ghosts that still haunt the daily life and the future of mankind." Rustem Vambery
+ — Nation 167:295 S 11 '48 700w

Reviewed by Asher Brynes
Sat R of Lit 31:24 Je 5 '48 700w

COCHRAN, MRS BESS (WHITE). Without halos [il. by Jane Castle]. 172p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.

B or 92 47-5984

Humorous reminiscences of the childhood of the daughter of an American minister. She learned gradually that a minister's child was expected to be different from other people, and sometimes the experiences were painful. She is tolerant and understanding in her outlook and in her writing.

Christian Century 65:513 My 26 '48 70w

"A pleasant addition to this growing collection of biographies." M. A. Johnson
+ Library J 72:1370 O 1 '47 110w

"Mrs. Cochran has always considered happiness a birthright, which explains perhaps the buoyancy of her writing and the piquancy of her style. As a penetrating critic of the church who is not in sympathy with its 'popular hallelujah conception,' she offers here much food for thought." R. D. Dinsmore
+ N Y Times p20 F 8 '48 270w

Reviewed by Winifred Snedden
San Francisco Chronicle p21 F 29 '48 110w

COCKCROFT, JOHN DOUGLAS, and others. Atomic energy, its international implications. See Royal institute of international affairs

COCTEAU, JEAN. Eagle has two heads [a play] adapted by Ronald Duncan. 141p $3 Funk

842 48-8798

An English adaptation of the French play, based in part on the life of Queen Elizabeth of Austria. The play had a brief run on Broadway.

"Frankly [it] is not a good adaptation into English and the student is directed to the original. If he lacks French, this will have to do." George Freedley
Library J 73:1820 D 15 '48 60w

"Mr. Ronald Duncan must be praised for his sensitive adaptation of this play. His rendering, in English, of much of the original French prose, as verse, has on the whole justified itself. There are exceptions, however." Anthony Curtis
+ — New Statesman & Nation 36:198 S 4 '48 250w

"Cocteau's 'The Eagle Has Two Heads' was a failure in our theater. It seemed murky, often undramatic, and at times downright ridiculous. Now that it is available in print—at least, the English adaptation is—it is seen to be none of these things. The story is clear . . . the play has passion and many opportunities for eloquent acting, the kind the French stage once knew so well. It affords an astonishing illustration of how wrong a play can go with the wrong players and improper direction." W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 N 28 '48 110w

COFFIN, HENRY SLOANE. God confronts man in history. 154p $2.50 Scribner

230 Christianity 47-11683

"The president emeritus of Union Theological Seminary presents his lectures given a year ago through the Orient. His topics are the familiar ones: God in history, Jesus Christ as revelation of God, salvation, the church, the kingdom of God. Lecturing to audiences made up in good part of non-Christians he had to take nothing for granted, yet to deal with the 'general revelation of God' as well as with the 'special revelation' in Christ. The opening chapter will give Americans something to think about as it reports Orientals' critical attitudes toward us and our policies." (Crozer Q) Index.

"[The chapters] reveal a scholarly and well ordered mind; they flash with the fervor and fire of a prophet. . . Readers of Dr. Coffin's book will be grateful that his 'retirement' from the presidency of Union Theological Seminary has liberated him for such a significant mission of Christian interpretation as this. They will also be grateful that the church in this country can profit by a message which has had so wide and appreciative a hearing in the Orient." H. L. Bowman
+ Christian Century 65:14 Ja 7 '48 550w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 162:18 F 1 '48 200w

"Here is a good book to put in the hands of a layman. It gives a summary of Christian faith with admirable clarity, simplicity, and conciseness. . . The tone of the volume is irenic but forceful; and, as always, Dr. Coffin keeps his message firmly anchored in the historical Jesus." E. E. Aubrey
+ Crozer Q 25:93 Ja '48 150w

COHANE, TIMOTHY. Gridiron grenadiers; the story of West Point football [drawings by Willard Mullin]. 320p pl $3.50 Putnam

796.33 Football. U.S. Military academy, West Point 48-8898

The story of West Point football from the first Army-Navy game in 1890 to the final one in 1947. Contains many anecdotes of individual players and coaches. Illustrated with photographs. No index.

Booklist 45:153 Ja 1 '49

"Careful research evident, considerable detail, yet entertainingly written, lots of anecdotes. Well illustrated. Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:64 Ja 1 '49 40w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner
+ N Y Times p36 N 21 '48 140w

COHEN, I. BERNARD. Science, servant of man; a layman's primer for the age of science. 362p il $4 Little

500 Science 48-3708

"Dr. Cohen, historian of science at Harvard is interested primarily in showing how scientific discoveries are made and how their practical application affects every phase of modern life. As illustrative material he has chosen case histories which tell of the experiments and fundamental research which led up to such discoveries as synthetic rubber and nylon, blood groups and hybrid corn." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:60 O 15 '48

Reviewed by H. B. Nichols
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 18 '48 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '48

"Fascinating reading even for those lacking a scientific background. . . Recommended." J. E. Brown
+ Library J 73:1083 Ag '48 150w

"Didactic and condescending to the reader, confused in conception, trite and conventional in its interpretations. As writing, it is painfully deferential to all established authority and personages, and embroidered with enough clichés and solecisms to arouse the professional envy of Frank Sullivan." J. R. Newman
— New Repub 119:20 S 20 '48 1900w

"Because getting the most out of science is a major responsibility at a time when the nation's research expenditure exceeds a billion dollars a year—and most of the results are public property—a popular understanding of how science actually works is essential to American culture. Because Mr. Cohen has made this quite clear in a fascinating narrative, this is a wholly new kind of book and a very important one." Gerald Wendt
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 29 '48 750w

"For the intelligent reader who wants to know how scientists of the past carried on research, how they reasoned and how they made important discoveries in the past, Dr. Cohen is a good teacher. But if that same reader has a critical mind he will wonder if laissez-faire research which Dr. Cohen ably expounds is the only type that can give us a doctrine of natural selection, a theory of relativity, the principles of genetics." Waldemar Kaempffert

COHEN, I. B.—Continued
+ — N Y Times p6 Ag 22 '48 1000w

Reviewed by Louis Ridenour
Sat R of Lit 31:30 O 16 '48 1000w

Reviewed by H. M. Davis
Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '48 130w

Wis Lib Bul 44:211 D '48

COHEN, MORRIS RAPHAEL. Meaning of human history. 304p $4 Open court pub. co, La Salle, Ill.

901 History—Philosophy 48-13027

Study of the philosophy of history, published posthumously. "The incisiveness of Morris Cohen's analysis is illustrated in this volume by his devastating criticism of all monistic theories of historical change. With the exception of the theological view, he readily admits that they illuminate some aspects of our historical experience. But he has no difficulty in showing that they ignore what they cannot explain and oversimplify what they can. . . At the same time Morris Cohen repudiates sharply the skeptical view that because no historical account can be complete, scientific history is impossible. . . The most moving portion of the book is the final chapter 'The Tragic View of History' in which Professor Cohen discusses the relation between history and ethics." (N Y Times)

Reviewed by Alan Gewirth
Ethics 59:66 O '48 2850w

"To the analysis of meaning in history Cohen brought a superb mastery of logic and a profound understanding of science." Perry Miller
+ Nation 166:553 My 15 '48 1450w

"Although he preferred to call himself a logician, Morris R. Cohen was primarily a critic and moralist. The qualities of intellectual penetration and practical wisdom which made him a unique figure in contemporary American philosophy, are very much in evidence in this posthumous work on the philosophy of history. . . It is a better integrated book than any of his previous publications. It can be unreservedly recommended as a scientific 'specific' for the metaphysical extravaganzas about history with which we have recently been regaled." Sidney Hook
+ N Y Times p4 F 22 '48 1300w

School & Society 67:62 Ja 24 '48 10w

Reviewed by L. O. Kattsoff
Social Forces 27:177 D '48 330w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:173 Je '48 400w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. More beautiful than murder. 208p $2.50 Macmillan 48-9304

Detective story.

"Begins with a bang but thereafter slithers down to the level of mechanical production, slick and metallic, that has dogged its predecessors." James Sandoe
Chicago Sun N 19 '48 70w

"Smoothness of mechanics and montage give this its customary competence."
+ Kirkus 16:457 S 1 '48 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 D 19 '48 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p48 N 21 '48 170w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 16 '49 90w

Sat R of Lit 31:30 D 18 '48 40w

Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '48 90w

COHEN, OCTAVUS ROY. My love wears black. 205p $2.50 Macmillan

Detective story.

Kirkus 16:7 Ja 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 My 9 '48 110w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p21 Mr 14 '48 170w

"One of the lighter, faster, breezier, and better Hollywood yarns." E. D Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 21 '48 100w

"Movie background and gaudy Calif. characters sleekly drawn. Amateur detecting adequate. Action and romance palpitate pleasantly. But it's all rather static."
Sat R of Lit 31:52 Ap 17 '48 50w

Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 4 '48 210w

COHN, ALFRED EINSTEIN. No retreat from reason, and other essays. 279p $3.50 Harcourt

610.4 Medicine. Science 48-6467

Collection of essays which range in subject matter from art and aesthetics to science and medicine, with the final chapter devoted to a spiritual autobiography. Partial contents: Psychoanalysis in medicine; On retiring; The influence of modern science on painting and sculpture; John Wyckoff: 1881-1937; The difference between art and science in their relation to nature; On Simon Flexner: 1863-1946. The author was born and educated in New York city and is a doctor noted for his original investigations in physiology, pharmacology, and diseases of the heart and circulation.

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '48

"Of interest to the serious-minded, though parts are too technical for the layman."
Kirkus 16:211 Ap 15 '48 160w

"A quiet, rewarding book which most libraries can use to advantage." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 73:647 Ap 15 '48 90w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard, Sr.
Nation 167:106 Jl 24 '48 850w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman
New Repub 119:22 Jl 12 '48 800w

"It is hardly necessary to point out that 'No Retreat From Reason' should be recommended with circumspection. It is not for everybody. It is really tough, not in the figurative sense of being loud-mouthed and bullying, but in the literal sense of being exceptionally refractory material. But with the exception of a few short passages it is within the grasp of any reasonably literate person, and it will give the average reader a clearer understanding and a higher appreciation of science and scientists." G. W. Johnson
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 13 '48 700w

"As a collection of essays upon widely varying subjects this is a leisurely, fascinating, valuable dissertation upon many things." F. G. Slaughter
+ N Y Times p21 My 16 '48 550w

" 'No Retreat from Reason' may have two wholly admirable results. It may give both pleasure and instruction to the lay reader, since Dr. Cohn writes with style and bears lightly a weight of learning, and it may even prick his fellow-scientists into the realization that there is still an important truth in that classic but half-forgotten dictum of T. H. Huxley's that science is organized common sense. . . What I have found superbly interesting in this book is Dr. Cohn's attempt to paint a picture of the influences that have shaped the mind of a man who could achieve the position of a very eminent specialist in diseases of the heart without ever ceasing to be a humanist." H. J. Laski
+ New Yorker 24:99 Ap 24 '48 1600w

"Dr. Cohn writes with as much leisure and perambulation as if he were having a conversation with a learned crony in his study; and it is those readers who like to listen in on such conversations who will like this book." M. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 5 '48 220w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 31:16 Jl 17 '48 850w

School & Society 68:15 Jl 3 '48 10w

Reviewed by Edward Stainbrook
Survey G 37:324 Je '48 360w

COHN, DAVID LEWIS. Where I was born and raised. 380p $4 Houghton

917.62 Negroes—Mississippi. Negroes—Tennessee. Mississippi—Social life and customs 48-6877

An analysis of the Mississippi Delta region and the Negroes and whites who live there, especially the Negro. The author was born and brought up in this section and knows well the country of which he writes. Part I of this book was published in 1935 under the title: God Shakes Creation (Book Review Digest 1935). The second part of the book is a study of the situation based on a visit made in 1947, during which he talked with all the types of people living in the Delta. Index.

"Whatever the point, there hangs a human tale to it, and Mr. Cohn really knows how to tell a story. His writing has the flavor of civilized conversation. His book is witty and mellow, pointed and informed."

+ Atlantic 182:107 Jl '48 120w

Booklist 44:354 Je 15 '48

"This is an affectionate and in the main candid account of the ten Delta counties in Mississippi. Only a native son could have written it. Dialect is a delight if flawless, but the least lapse makes the whole a botch. There are no mistakes in Mr. Cohn's reproduction of the Delta dialect—social as well as linguistic—but, on the contrary, he moves with freedom, eloquence, and pathos in a totally familiar environment. . . The concluding pages of Mr. Cohn's book, describing the changes in Delta culture through cotton picker, chopper, flame thrower for weed killing, and the substantial thinning of the Negro population through emigration, make this reviewer hope that the author will revisit Greenville when another decade has passed. The reforms in Delta society necessary to hold the Negro on the cotton lands and keep him from the cities in the South, or outside it, open the prospect of more progressive views on the part of Mr. Cohn." Broadus Mitchell

+ — Commonweal 48:286 Jl 2 '48 750w

"The combination, and contrast, make for interesting, personal reporting."

+ Kirkus 16:160 Mr 15 '48 140w

"This is a useful book, for it presents what is, in the essentials, the view on race relations which is held by the politically dominant group in the South, and presents it in more readable form than it is ordinarily found. Mr. Cohn has a lively style, if at times a flamboyant one, an eye for effective detail in reportage, and considerable persuasiveness in argument." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 30 '48 1150w

"The record of 'Where I was Born and Raised' gains more value if we consider that it was made by one who was neither of the plantation white minority, nor linked from the outside to the Negro majority. Mr. Cohn is a Delta Jew—a fact which, taken along with this immensely instructive and honest book, provides ample testimony to the interesting fact that nowhere in the United States is there at this moment so little anti-Semitic feeling as in the states of the South." J. G. Fletcher

+ N Y Times p6 My 16 '48 850w

"You may not agree with the author—certainly his thoughts on intermarriage seem a bit of hyperbole—but this book packs a wallop. It is good reading and is something we should all study before stepping into the realm of so-called righteous criticism." W. K. Coblentz

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 1 '48 700w

"The new part of the book does not have the unity of the earlier section, but its separate chapters are excellent, and none any better than the very last, called 'Black Troubadour,' which is about Joe Moss, a genius at the mouth-organ, which made this reviewer, an ex-Deltan himself, feel like fleeing his Connecticut hillside, daffodils and all, in search of Joe and his lonesome, soul-shaking music. . . In spite of omissions, Mr. Cohn has written a highly readable, entertaining book." Herschel Brickell

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:15 My 22 '48 700w

Springf'd Republican p11B Je 6 '48 360w

"This book is like an evening of mellow talk over bourbon and water. . . Instead of a serious study of the cotton economy and the problem of race relations, he has reported loquaciously, and with the leisurely humor of an old-school Mississippian."

+ Time 51:114 My 17 '48 550w

Wis Lib Bul 44:132 Je '48

COHN, WILLIAM. Chinese painting. 111p il pl $7.50 Oxford

759.951 Painting, Chinese 48-8657

Contents: Our knowledge of Chinese painting; Technique and form; Painting and calligraphy; What painting means to the Chinese; The subjects; Formative period: From the earliest times to the end of the Han Dynasty A.D. 220; First developments: The six dynasties A.D. 220-589; Religious and court painting: The Sui and T'ang dynasties A.D. 581-906; Maturity and balance: The five dynasties and the Sung dynasty A.D. 907-1279; Transition period: The Yüan dynasty A.D. 1279-1368; Predominance of the literati: The Ming dynasty A.D. 1368-1644; The Western impact: The Ch'ing dynasty A.D. 1644-1912; Bibliography. Index. Table of dynasties. The plates. List of plates and index of collections.

Booklist 45:46 O 1 '48

"The Chinese volume is considerably enhanced for the non-specialist reader by an elaborate preliminary study rich with fascinating detail which offers a generous glimpse into Chinese life as well as its culture." John Cournos

+ Commonweal 49:233 D 10 '48 390w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 3 '48 270w

Reviewed by W. W. Winkworth
New Statesman & Nation 36:402 N 6 '48 420w

"Competent in several fields of art history, the German critic, William Cohn, now an Oxford don, offers an introduction to Chinese painting following the familiar Phaidon formula. The authoritative text is clear and interesting. The book is handsomely bound and has adequate reproductions of many well-known and some relatively unfamiliar masterpieces of Chinese painting. With many important works on this subject either out of print or hard to come by, Mr. Cohn's work will be appreciated by the increasing public which evinces an interest in art in general and particularly by those fascinated by one of the most varied, subtle, and sophisticated of the arts developed by man, Chinese painting." L. J. W.

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 8 '48 310w

Reviewed by C. M. Fleischner
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 18 '48 750w

COIT, LOTTIE ELLSWORTH, and BAMPTON, RUTH. Follow the music; a collection of easy musical games including new and original finger games and rhythmic activities for children in home and school; il. by Martha Powell Setchell. [53p] $2 Birchard

796.13 Singing games 48-1663

Games, for the individual child or groups, designed to help children learn music thru play. For ages 4-9.

Booklist 44:370 Jl 1 '48

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:198 My '48 80w

School & Society 67:447 Je 12 '48

COLBY, MRS JEAN (POINDEXTER). Peter paints the U.S.A; pictures by Arnold Edwin Bare; text by Jean Poindexter Colby and the Junior reviewers. 47p $2.50 Houghton
48-6206

A picture-story book for boys and girls who like to draw and paint. Peter and his family travel by car from Maine to California and back again to Connecticut. Peter has his paint-box with him and paints many of the interesting places they see—a Maine lighthouse, a Pennsylvania barn, boats on the Soo canal, the Grand Canyon and redwood trees, and many more.

Booklist 44:320 My 15 '48

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Je 26 '48 140w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:199 My '48 90w

+ Kirkus 16:108 Mr 1 '48 150w

"A refreshing book created with imagination. Text is simply and interestingly written, suitable for the comprehension of children 5-9. Arnold E. Bare's illustrations are superbly done." E. F. Clift
+ Library J 73:656 Ap 15 '48 80w

"It would make a good present for a child who doesn't know what a grand country this is." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 9 '48 230w

"Full-page pictures and marginal designs in brilliant color and in sepia are handsome to look at and give one a sense of the magnitude and variety of our country. The text is not exactly distinguished as to style, but since it was written in collaboration with a group of children it contains, like the illustrations, those details which catch a child's imagination. Indeed the combination should be conducive to developing an observant eye for the picturesque in young travelers and stay-at-homes." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p29 Ap 18 '48 170w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 31:32 My 8 '48 70w

Wis Lib Bul 44:84 Ap '48

COLE, ALLAN BURNETT, ed. Yankee surveyors in the Shogun's seas; records of the United States surveying expedition to the north Pacific ocean, 1853-1856. 161p il maps $2.50 Princeton univ. press

915 Pacific ocean—Surveys. Japan—Description and travel 47-11678

"The initial twenty pages of this volume present background material on the United States Surveying Expedition to the North Pacific Ocean, 1853-1856. This preface provides a satisfactory backdrop against which to contemplate the correspondence which follows it, now printed for the first time. Most of the letters are by Lieutenant John Rodgers, who became commander of the expedition following the retirement, for medical reasons, of Commander Cadwalader Ringgold. For the most part reports addressed to the Secretary of the Navy, Rodgers' letters are frequently enlivened by accounts of his handling of the numerous problems that arose. . . Of the other correspondence included, the major portion originated with Lieutenants Henry K. Stevens, William Gibson, and John M. Brooke, who reported more generally on the scientific aspects of the expedition." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by P. J. Treat
Am Hist R 53:543 Ap '48 400w

Current Hist 14:296 My '48 30w

"The letters written by Lieutenant Rodgers depict some amusing scenes of early American intercourse with the Far East and afford revealing glimpses of the Oriental and the American mind at work, sometimes at cross-purposes. They show that naval officers had to be diplomats as well as sailors, navigators, cartographers, and leaders of men; and they also show that some of the American officers' most serious problems were encountered in attempts to deal with their own countrymen." George Kish
Geog R 38:691 O '48 600w

"The report of the expedition was never made available although one was in preparation when the Civil War broke upon the nation. This little book contains a fair substitute—the letters of the commanders of the individual ships to Rodgers and of the latter to the Secretary of the Navy. Scholars will be disappointed at the failure to include portions of the journals kept aboard the vessels." H. F. Graff
N Y Times p4 Ap 11 '48 800w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser
San Francisco Chronicle p21 F 8 '48 470w

"Particularly interesting are accounts of surveys made under the direction of Stevens between Hongkong and Hakodate and in the vicinity of the Siberian coast, those under Gibson in the Aleutians, and those under Rodgers in the Arctic Ocean. Inclusion of a more adequate map would have facilitated following the events recorded."
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:53 Mr '48 260w

COLE, GEORGE DOUGLAS HOWARD. Samuel Butler and The way of all flesh. (English novelists ser) 118p $2 Swallow, A.

B or 92 Butler, Samuel

Brief study of Samuel Butler, including both biographical and critical material.

Kirkus 16:616 N 15 '48 30w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 73:1742 D 1 '48 20w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 120:27 Ja 3 '49 240w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
New Statesman & Nation 34:416 N 22 '47 900w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 D 19 '48 200w

"Mr. Cole, an Oxford professor and critic, is thoroughly at home in this Victorian world, where the emphasis is upon ideas, problems, values. He reveals the impact upon Butler's mind of religious doubts, of his father's domineering personality, of the theory of evolution, of imperfect societies, of mistress and friend." Abbott Martin
N Y Times p24 Ja 9 '49 230w

"Generally speaking, it is hard to see how Mr. Cole could have done a better job, in so few pages, of analyzing Butler's difficult character, explaining the interrelationship of his life and work. Mr. Cole's book is a guide that can be trusted by any reader." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 32:31 Ja 29 '49 230w

"Mr. Cole's book is slovenly and repetitive but stimulating." Lettice Fowler
— + Spec 179:688 N 28 '47 270w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley
Springf'd Republican p6B D 26 '48 130w

Time 52:113 D 6 '48 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p495 S 27 '48 550w

COLE, TOBY, comp. Acting; a handbook of the Stanislavski method; introd. by Lee Strasberg. 223p il $3 Lear; distributed by Crown

792 Acting. Alekseev, Konstantin Sergeevich (Constantin Stanislavski, pseud)
A48-85

Anthology of excerpts from the writings of the actor and director of the Moscow Art theater, who is generally considered the finest teacher in the modern theater. The book also contains essays by other directors who have continued Stanislavski's ideas. Illustrated with photographs of Stanislavski in many of his roles. No index.

"Highly recommended for all theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1779 D 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs

N Y Times p12 Ja 4 '48 300w

School & Society 67:205 Mr 13 '48 20w

COLEBROOK, JOAN. The northerner. 540p $3.50 Scribner

48-10947

Novel dealing with two generations of a pioneer land-owning family in northern Queensland, Australia.

Reviewed by J. O. Frederick

Commonweal 49:261 D 17 '48 380w

"Phases [of the novel] may prove a hurdle to conservative public library standards."

Kirkus 16:316 Jl 1 '48 120w

"Excellent characterization. Extremely intimate sexual relationships in and out of marriage may arouse objection." R. W. Henderson

+ — Library J 73:1273 S 15 '48 100w

"This is a substantial novel, both as a picture of a time and place and as the record of a family and the varied individuals they counted among their relatives and friends and neighbors. Miss Colebrook has a gift for making both the place and the people real, and there is an added interest in following, in a strange and exotic setting, a period in a nation's development that some parts of our own country went through not many years earlier." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 N 28 '48 500w

"'The Northerner' opens with a page of prose which is beautifully evocative—which haunts but never quite possesses the remainder of this essentially episodic novel. In sum, this will be read more for its incidental values than for a complete esthetic identity which it never quite achieves." L. L.

+ — N Y Times p46 N 14 '48 400w

"A little of the flavor of the pioneer days in the American West is discernible. Miss Colebrook tends to be somewhat over-clinical about the love life of her characters, but otherwise she deals with them understandingly."

New Yorker 24:164 N 20 '48 80w

"Miss Colebrook has written out of an older tradition—even to the wryly ironic final page in which all the loose threads are primly fastened. Her work is broad in its flow, full of insights, rich in its evocation of scenes and persons. It deserves to be read slowly and with love, as it was written. Unfortunately neither publisher nor author read it slowly enough in proof to catch its larger than average crop of typographical errors." Bradford Smith

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:18 D 18 '48 600w

COLEMAN, ROY V. First frontier. 458p il maps $3.75 Scribner

973.1 U.S.—History—Colonial period. America—Discovery and exploration 48-5200

A chronicle of the explorations and settlement of the area which is now the United States, from the first voyage of Columbus in 1492 to the completion of English control of the Atlantic seaboard from Maine to Virginia in 1664. The author's intention was to popularize his material for the "busy" reader. Bibliography. Index.

"Although there is little here that is new to the scholar, there is much that may be new, and probably startling, to the layman for whom the book was written. . . The two chapters, The Tobacco Colonies and The Puritan Colonies, devoted largely to the social scene, are particularly to be commended." A. H. Basye

Am Hist R 53:827 Jl '48 550w

"It is a readable book but some of the stories, and many of the assumptions need to be savored with a grain of salt." R. M. Saunders

+ — Canadian Forum 28:143 S '48 170w

Reviewed by R. A. Preston

Canadian Hist R 29:413 D '48 180w

Kirkus 16:37 Ja 15 '48 170w

"It is clearly and simply told, and except for several passages deliberately introduced for their shock value could be recommended unreservedly for school libraries. The Our Lusty Forefathers style seems particularly out of place in this soberly written book, with its excellent illustrations. According to the preface, it was written originally for the benefit of a 40-year-old-judge." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 73:195 F 1 '48 100w

"For the reader who wants facts on early American history conveniently assembled, without too much theoretical interpretation, 'The First Frontier' will prove to be a useful text. [It is] pleasantly written, and enlivened by some entertaining details of personal behavior drawn from the court records." W. M. Whitehill

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 29 '48 950w

Reviewed by H. D. Cater

N Y Times p16 Ag 29 '48 460w

"The documentation, for all its thoroughness, is not intrusive."

New Yorker 23:99 F 21 '48 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 20 '48 550w

"For his source material, Mr. Coleman resorted mostly to the standard printed collections of official records and old chronicles, using them with the care and discrimination of the true scholar. He wrote his book in a spirited if somewhat awkward style. . . 'The First Frontier' is profusely illustrated with a fine selection of especially prepared maps and reproductions of old prints and paintings. Together with Mr. Coleman's text they form an engrossing book for adults whose interest in history remains primarily in the stories told and the scenes painted." Raymond Walters

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:31 F 21 '48 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p472 Ag 21 '48 700w

COLES, MANNING, pseud. of ADELAIDE FRANCES OKE MANNING and CYRIL HENRY COLES. Among those absent. 191p $2 Doubleday

48-7571

Mystery story.

Booklist 45:52 O 1 '48

Kirkus 16:224 My 1 '48 80w

"We found Tommy Hambledon, of Foreign Office Intelligence, much more entertaining in this light comedy of gangsterdom than in any of the international adventures on which his considerable reputation rests." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Jl 11 '48 180w

"Knowing Tommy, as no doubt you do, you will expect to read of perilous adventures and hairbreadth escapes. You will find plenty of them but they do not seem as convincing as did similar episodes when Tommy was operating in Germany during the war." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p18 Jl 11 '48 190w

"A flimsy variation on a formula that has, over the years, proved surefire with Hambledon fans."

New Yorker 24:72 Jl 10 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 25 '48 50w

Sat R of Lit 31:24 Jl 24 '48 40w

COLLEGE reading and religion; a survey of college reading materials sponsored by the Edward W. Hazen foundation and the Committee on religion and education of the American council on education. 345p $5 Yale univ. press

207 Students—Religious life. Education, Higher 48-6563

A collection of reports by various hands, discussing college textbooks and other reading materials in respect to their treatment of religious topics and their attitude towards religion or religious sentiment. Contents: History of philosophy, by R. L. Calhoun; Problems of philosophy, by P. A. Bertocci; Psychology, by G. W. Allport; Psychiatry, by Goodwin Watson; History and philosophy of education, by J. S. Brubacher; English literature, by Theodore Spencer; Music, by P. H. Lang; European history, by L. H. Carlson; Economics, by W. A. Orton; Sociology, by R. L. Sutherland; Cultural anthropology, by Margaret Mead and Jean Rhys; Physical sciences, by Henry Margenau; Biological sciences, by F. S. C. Northrop. Index.

COLLEGE reading and religion—Continued

Reviewed by Hugh Hartshorne
J Religion 28:295 O '48 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 8 '48 650w

Reviewed by Ordway Tead
Sat R of Lit 31:36 Je 5 '48 700w

School & Society 67:286 Ap 10 '48 30w

"A perusal of the book 'College Reading and Religion' compiled so carefully, and with such meticulous justice by the eminent authors from the lists of required reading at the various colleges, cannot fail to hold the attention and to startle and warn the reader as to the imminent dangers confronting the modern college student when he submits himself to the necessities of his required college reading." Gulielma Alsop
+ Survey G 37:354 Jl '48 1100w

COLLIER, RICHARD. Solitary witness. 208p $3 Pellegrini & Cudahy
48-6177

"Calcutta shooting of government official seen by AWOL British soldier, who, with magnate's runaway daughter, traces killer through riots to doom." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Ap 9 '48 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 30 '48 70w

"In spite of the action, a confused continuity and an amateurish conception generally make for an apathetic novel." W. J. G.
N Y Times p25 My 16 '48 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 11 '48 60w

"Admirable."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:43 Ap 24 '48 40w

"Mr. Collier doesn't help too much in keeping things clear because of a passion for local color and Indian words, but it all makes good lively reading if you don't hesitate too long over such words as parawallah, thana, acha, charpey and ehupra he." R. F. H.
+ — Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 4 '48 210w

COLLINS, NORMAN. Black ivory; being the story of Ralph Rudd, his early adventures, perils and misfortunes on land and sea. 305p $2.50 Duell
48-8432

A sea-story of the last days of the slave trade. The hero is a young farm lad, shanghaied into service on board the Nero. When he discovers the evil deeds being done he helps bring the malefactors to final judgment.

Booklist 45:32 S 15 '48

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p6X Ag 29 '48 320w

Kirkus 16:454 S 1 '48 100w

"A 'thrilling-adventure-sea' story which might appeal to unsophisticated adolescent, not too fussy about anachronisms, absurdly impossible details and too convenient plot." R. W. Henderson
— Library J 73:1026 Jl '48 110w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 5 '48 180w

"You'll find no cannibal princess in 'Black Ivory,' but you will find just about everything else. This is the kind of story a man ought to read with the salt spray in his nostrils and full spread of canvas over his head. However, a deck-chair or porch-swing will do nicely." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p10 S 19 '48 550w

Reviewed by Larry Laughlin
San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 12 '48 150w

"This yarn of the last days of the illicit slave trade follows the classic pattern established with a kind of lumbering greatness in 'Robinson Crusoe' and refined to its artificial but irresistible essentials in 'Treasure Island.'. . But anyone who is not bothered by the tag ends of other remembered tales will find that Mr. Collins has produced a rapid yarn with a good deal of vigor and validity. If the characters all are Rowlandson caricatures, the story is set in the times of Rowlandson and holds true to its own raffish premises." Alexander Laing
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:19 S 11 '48 600w

COLLINS, TOM, pseud. See Furphy, J.

COLLIS, MAURICE. First holy one. 280p il maps $3.75 Knopf
299.51 Confucius. China—Religion 48-8874

"This book does two things. First, as an account of Confucius' life it helps rectify the apparent popular vulgarization of the great teacher by the West. Second, it shows the importance of Confucianism in China's past, which is essential to an understanding of China's present. . . Events of 'The First Holy One' range over much of Chinese history, but the chief focus is on the era of Confucius and the early Han Dynasty of 2,000 years ago." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 45:130 D 15 '48

"The American is so accustomed to his cultural prerogatives that the retarding influence of an old tradition is easily overlooked. Mr. Collis' book fulfills here a valuable service for a better appraisal of present-day conditions in China." H. W. Steiger
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 24 '48 750w

"The whole is very well written, in a style that is good enough to be unobtrusive. The impartiality of the author, the fact that so much ground is covered in a personal but charming way, is apt to leave the reader with a rather generalized—dare I say vague?—impression. Yet this drawback is small compared to the reward of the book and the interludes on the way. To see China through the eyes of this man is, no doubt, to come close to the real thing. And there is a good word to be said for its pleasing design and the photographs which illustrate it." Ann Hunter
+ Commonweal 49:204 D 3 '48 390w

"It is the easiest and most delightful reading imaginable. The talk we hear of the 'new education,' the new ways of teaching history, are admirably illustrated here. The dull stuff we used to avoid,—the dates, the maps, the notes on authorities, all are made secondary to the story, and the tale of the founding of the great House of Han is as good reading as the best in fiction."
+ Kirkus 16:496 S 15 '48 160w

Reviewed by Philip Yampolsky
Library J 73:1506 O 15 '48 130w

Nation 168:80 Ja 15 '49 50w

"This book is intended to give pleasure rather than to instruct. It is evidently addressed to the widest possible public; but there is much in it which should serve as a useful stimulus to the specialist. Mr. Collis, who does not read Chinese, has had to rely on the work of sinologues, and in as far as his book shows inadequacies and misapprehensions, the blame falls as much on us (the specialists) as on Mr. Collis himself. Even so, I think it may be justly said that he has not availed himself to the full of the sources which European learning provides. . . How delightful that a short volume of this kind should be provided with four maps! The illustrations are excellent and in the notes to them at the end of the book the author shows himself very much at home in Asiatic art-history. His spelling, however, does not improve. . . I must end by saying that I am sure my view of this book is not at all a representative one and am confident that it will do exactly what it set out to do—give pleasure to a very wide public." Arthur Waley

+ — New Statesman & Nation 34:140 Ag 14 '48 750w

"In the retelling of Oriental history, in the business of making long-dead potentates, cranks and criminals, walk the boards before us in what seems to be flesh and blood, Mr. Collis is a gifted literary necromancer. In the China field, which is still a little new to him, he still has nothing like the sureness of touch with which he dealt with the high romance of the Portuguese in Burma in his 'Great Image.' But despite his imaginary obligation to make Confucius a vehicle for Chinese high romance, he's getting there." Rodney Gilbert

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 7 '48 1250w

"The style and the vitality of the subject-matter combine to make it all so surprisingly fresh that it will have interest not alone for the general reader, but quite possibly for those who heretofore have been wary of entering the maze of China's four thousand years of history. . . Although Confucius was 'not a god, or God or a Prophet of God,' his moral stature entitles him to be ranked with the great spiritual leaders of history. Collis' lucid book is noteworthy in making this incontestably clear to his readers." M. J. Tweedy

+ N Y Times p4 O 17 '48 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 28 '48 220w

"It is altogether impossible to convey the extraordinary quality of this book. It is written in a style that is at once so learned and so lucid, so graceful and yet instructive, that Confucius himself would surely have approved of it." Robert Bierstedt

+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 D 4 '48 550w

School & Society 68:375 N 27 '48 40w

"Pleasantly, learnedly and with many divagations into interesting and amusing sidepaths Mr. Collis completes his story. . . His use of authorities is free and masterly; his conclusions carry conviction."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p557 O 2 '48 1000w

COLLOID science; a symposium; contributors: E. K. Rideal [and others]. 208p $6 Chemical pub. co.

541.3452 Colloids 47-5826

"Series of technical lectures given under the auspices of the Royal Institute of Chemistry, sponsored by the Department of Colloid Science, Cambridge University. Deals with disperse systems including emulsions, foams, colloidal electrolytes and polymers or macromolecules." Library J

"The book will be of great use to teachers in the advanced fields, and though it may demand much of the students who use it, this is a stimulus to thought and to work." Jerome Alexander

+ Chem Eng 54:276 D '47 600w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1614 N 15 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:72 O '47

COLMAN, MARGERY, pseud. See McCarthy, M. S.

COLUM, PADRAIC, ed. Anthology of Irish verse; the poetry of Ireland from mythological times to the present; with an introduction. (Black and gold lib) de luxe ed 425p $2.49 Liveright

821.08 Irish poetry—Collections 48-6297

"Mr. Colum has now added to his well-ranged collection, first published in 1922 [Book Review Digest 1922] a selection of work by poets both of Eire and of Northern Ireland who began to appear in print after 1920. Both the native Gaelic and the later Anglo-Irish traditions are represented and the editor's introduction and biographical notes point up the historical background." New Yorker

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

Christian Science Monitor p13 My 15 '48 700w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald

Library J 73:948 Je 15 '48 30w

"Mr. Colum, fortunately, had not been influenced by modern Irish literary piety to leave out heretical figures like James Joyce and Frank O'Connor."

+ New Yorker 24:110 Ap 24 '48 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 23 '48 120w

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY. Statistical research group. Sampling inspection [prepared for the] Applied mathematics panel, Office of science research and development; ed. by H. A. Freeman [and others]. 395p il $5.25 McGraw

658.562 Sampling (statistics) 48-2366

"Principles, procedures, and tables for single, double, and sequential sampling in acceptance inspection and quality control based on percent defective." (Subtitle) Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:479 Mr 15 '48 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:40 My '48

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY. Statistical research group. Selected techniques of statistical analysis for scientific and industrial research and production and management engineering [prepared for] Applied mathematics panel, Office of scientific research and development; ed. by Churchill Eisenhart [and others]. 473p $6 McGraw

311.2 Industrial statistics. Industrial research. Scientific research 47-7271

"[This book] is designed primarily for industrialists, engineers and scientists who have need for statistical methods but no time for a thorough study of statistical theory. In Part I are six papers on statistical problems that occur in industry, particularly in connection with inspection and quality control; in Part II are seven papers on the statistical planning of experiments and the interpretation of experimental data; and in Part III are discussions of special problems and techniques, for example the probability that in a given case sample means are in opposite order to population means. Although intended for non-specialists in statistics, the presentation is far from a popularization." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1614 N 15 '47 70w

"Here is a book that should have considerable utility in many fields. Written and edited by top-rank authorities."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:83 O '47

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:224 Je '48 240w

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS). Joan, free lance writer. 181p $2.50 Messner

48-1980

Story of Joan's experiences trying to establish herself as a writer during her first year out of college.

Booklist 44:318 My 15 '48

Kirkus 16:54 F 1 '48 90w

"The plot holds the interest, and the characters have variety and good standards." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 73:562 Ap 1 '48 50w

COLVER, MRS ALICE MARY (ROSS). Uncertain heart. 238p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.
48-5909

Linda Hadley wanted neither a husband nor a career—just fun with luxuries; but she met and married Steven Douglas who promised her they would "go and see and do" together. However the purchase of a small house and the birth of little Stevie tied Linda down to a life of unwanted domesticity. She finally escaped to New York and a job there; but discovered, before it was too late, that she wanted her own family and home.

Booklist 44:368 Jl 1 '48

"A competent combination of rental recreation and moral rearmament."
Kirkus 15:679 D 15 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 44:133 Je '48

COLVIN, FRED HERBERT. Starting a small machine shop. 212p il $2.50 McGraw

621.75 Machine shop practice 48-5410

Written for the ex GI or any mechanic who wants to start a small machine shop of his own. Discusses such problems as location of the shop; selection of machines and equipment; shop layout; managing work and employees; etc. Index.

Booklist 44:308 My 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:530 Ap 1 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:15 Ja '48

COLVIN, FRED HERBERT, and STANLEY, FRANK ARTHUR. Running a machine shop. 2d ed 521p il $4.25 McGraw

621.75 Machine shop practice. Factory management 48-5392

"A well-known, standard work on the organization and management of machine shops. The new material in this edition is all in the 67-page section entitled 'Postwar supplement.' Here many subjects are touched upon, but the emphasis is on job evaluation and time and motion studies." (N Y New Tech Bks) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1941.

Booklist 44:316 My 15 '48

N Y New Tech Bks 33:56 Jl '48

COMBE, JACQUES. Hieronimus Bosch [tr. by Ethel Duncan]. (Prometheus coll) 178p 142il $12.50 Continental bk. center, 110 E. 42d st, N.Y. 17

759.9492 Bosch, Hieronymus (Hieronymus van Aeken)

"[The book] was published in Paris a year ago and has now been translated into English by Ethel Duncan. . . The author rightly acknowledges his debt to Charles de Tolnay's published studies on Bosch's art. He carries them farther, especially in his attempts to elucidate Bosch's baffling symbolism. The hundred and forty plates, many of which are in colour, include all the major paintings, a host of enlarged details without which some of the pictures would hardly be intelligible, and a quantity of Bosch's drawings." Manchester Guardian

"It has lost something at the hands both of the translator and of a compositor evidently unfamiliar with the English language. But it is an important book. . . The book will be particularly valuable to students in this country, since Bosch is quite inadequately represented in our public galleries and private collections." E. N.
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 D 30 '47 180w

"A distinctly commendable piece of bookmaking, which will further the reputation of a man who broke open the path for Peter Breughel and some of the men of today." Jerome Mellquist
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 21 '48 300w

Reviewed by Lawrence Gowing
Spec 180:356 Mr 19 '48 130w

"We must be grateful for a book illustrating the fascinating but impenetrable art of Jheronimus Bosch. . . The usefulness of M. Combe's text as providing historical and iconographical information and the quality of his enthusiasm for the painter have been obscured by the weakness of the translation."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p235 Ap 24 '48 600w

COMMAGER, HENRY STEELE, ed. St Nicholas anthology. See St Nicholas (periodical)

COMMISSION ON FREEDOM OF THE PRESS. Government and mass communications, by Zechariah Chafee, jr; a report. 2v $7.50 Univ. of Chicago press

323.445 Liberty. Liberty of the press. Communication and traffic 47-11314

"A survey of the relations between government and mass communications systems by Professor Chafee (Harvard), who is vice-chairman of the Commission. It is not a mere report but a live discussion of the topic, including motion pictures and radio, as well as newspapers, the attitude of the post office, and the governmental machinery appertaining to communications." (Current Hist) Index.

"Dr. Chafee's analysis is painstaking and his arguments approach difficult problems from all sides. He is fair, objective, and balanced. He has put the American public greatly in his debt, for no one can deal with the problems of the press without beginning with this analysis." R. H. Gabriel
+ Ann Am Acad 258:160 Jl '48 850w

Booklist 44:100 N 15 '47

Reviewed by J. H. Spingarn
Columbia Law R 48:309 Mr '48 400w

"While it goes into details of cases and laws, it is written for general readers interested in this cardinal requirement for freedom."
+ Current Hist 13:356 D '47 70w

Foreign Affairs 26:739 Jl '48 20w

"The reviewer has attempted to whet the reader's interest by pointing out some of the more significant problems with which Professor Chafee's book is concerned. His discussion of them always manifest keen and critical intelligence, sensitivity to nuances and subtleties, and awareness of the complex social facts out of which the problems have arisen. When he does not know the answer, he says so. If there are things to be said on the other side, he says them. It is obvious that there may be differences of opinion over many of the matters discussed, but the intellectually honest reader, even when he disagrees with the author, will be grateful for his fair statement of the case." M. R. Konvitz
+ Harvard Law R 61:907 My '48 2150w

Reviewed by Reuben Frodin
+ Library Q 18:220 Jl '48 2450w

"This is, so far, the most fruitful section of the report of the Commission on Freedom of the Press, the most interesting, and occasionally the most exasperating. . . The report requires a patient reader—which it has not always had among newspaper critics." C. M. Puckette
+ — N Y Times p6 O 26 '47 1800w

School & Society 66:303 O 18 '47 10w

"Penetrating study of the relationship between government and newspapers, radio, and motion pictures."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:69 Mr '48 440w

COMMISSION ON HOSPITAL CARE. Hospital care in the United States; a study of the function of the general hospital, its role in the care of all types of illness, and the conduct of activities related to patient service, with recommendations for its extension and integration for more adequate care of the American public. 631p $4.50 Commonwealth fund

362 Hospitals—U.S.

"Since its establishment in 1942 by the American Hospital Association, the Commission on Hospital Care has conducted a study of all aspects of the subject in cooperation with the U. S. Public Health Service. The present report is organized under eight general headings as follows: I. The Organization, Objectives, Purpose, and Method of Study of the Commission on Hospital Care; II. Summary of Conclusions and Recommendations; III. Influences and Trends in Administrative Relationships and Organizational Patterns that Underlie the Future Development of Hospital Service; IV. Factors Affecting the Size, Use, and Need for Hospital Facilities; V. An Analysis of the Physical, Service, and Financial Aspects of Existing Hospitals; VI. Suggestions for the Integration of Hospital Service and an Estimate of Additional Facilities Necessary to Serve the Public Needs Adequately, Illustrated by the Planning Program of One State; VII. The History of Hospitals in the United States; VIII. Methods of Financing Hospital Care, Legal Status, and Interrelationships of Hospitals with Governmental and Voluntary Health Agencies. The report contains ninety-four tables, fifty-eight charts, and is carefully indexed." U S Quarterly Bkl

"It is difficult to find fault with the commission's conclusions or recommendations, or the methods or data used in their development. The material, however, might have been better organized. There is little doubt of the great value of this study. As a text to serve as a guide for state hospital planning programs, it should be invaluable, particularly for its description and analysis of the Michigan Hospital Plan, and also for the insight it provides into so many facets of our hospital care problem." R. C. Buerki
+ — Ann Am Acad 255:216 Ja '48 320w

"This book is probably one of the most significant and generally useful contributions that have been made in recent years to the rapidly growing accumulation of American studies in the field of medical care. . . It is an excellent handbook of reference material of value to sociologists and to community leaders, as well as those professionally concerned with health services." C. G. Sheps
+ Social Forces 26:355 Mr '48 900w

"As a whole, the report is an excellent source book on hospitals and medical care."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:394 D '47 320w

COMMITTEE TO FRAME A WORLD CONSTITUTION. Preliminary draft of a world constitution; as proposed and signed by Robert M. Hutchins, G. A. Borgese [and others]. 92p $2 Univ. of Chicago press
341.1 International federation 48-4277

"Concrete proposals by the University of Chicago committee of scholars in law and political science, headed by Robert M. Hutchins, who have been working as a body for nearly three years in an effort to find 'the minimum common denominator over which all peoples can meet.' This denominator, they say flatly, is not suppression of war but something that can be recognized as universal justice." New Yorker

Reviewed by J. W. Masland
Am Pol Sci R 42:1248 D '48 380w
Booklist 45:44 O 1 '48
Canadian Forum 28:212 D '48 180w

"Remarkable for its brevity—the preamble and forty-seven articles can be read in an hour or less—this constitution goes far beyond the simple goal of maintaining peace. . . [It] is an eloquent—sometimes touching—document of human rights." G. A. Bernstein
+ Nation 168:20 Ja 1 '49 1500w

"The Draft itself, presented here with comments and criticisms by various experts to whom it has already been submitted, is clear, concise, and capable of being understood by anyone with even a fleeting acquaintance with a set of bylaws. Recommended to people who still have a serious interest in staying alive."
+ New Yorker 24:104 S 11 '48 140w

COMPTON-BURNETT, IVY. Bullivant and the Lambs [Eng title: Manservant and maidservant]. 299p $3 Knopf 48-7241

An ironical novel of family life in England in the 1890's. Horace Lamb married his wife for her money and decided to keep as much of it as possible. His rule of harshness and stinginess extended to his five children and his servants, and the servants repeated his small tyrannies to their subordinates. Three times Horace nearly lost his life, but always made a comeback—even after what purported to be a deathbed softening.

Booklist 44:352 Je 15 '48

"A more authentic than attractive satire of county life two generations ago, of unlikely popularity."
Kirkus 16:200 Ap 15 '48 160w

"Miss Compton-Burnett's children always suggest those of Jane Austen, Samuel Butler and Charlotte Yonge, though they are not like them. Recommended for those who enjoy the subtle and brilliant and are not irritated by an occasional fault in construction." K. T. Willis
+ — Library J 73:944 Je 15 '48 160w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones
Nation 167:238 Ag 28 '48 1000w

"Miss Compton-Burnett combines all the elements of her story at the one accessible level of dialogue: narrative, motivation, conflict, judgment. Although for the most part nothing happens, at this pitch of lucidity all possibilities are mutually recognized, even murder, so that to all intents they do happen. . . Of all contemporary writers, Miss Compton-Burnett most explicitly recognizes evil, but as everyone in her book recognizes it too, a potential melodrama is undermined by irony." John Farrelly
+ New Repub 118:26 Je 14 '48 1150w

Reviewed by P. H. Newby
New Statesman & Nation 33:182 Mr 15 '47 360w

"Nothing can be compared to Miss Compton-Burnett's work because there is nothing like it. The nearest reference would be that of the late E. V. Lucas to another female writer likewise admired belatedly for her 'irony and fidelity to the fact alone,' whose 'gaze was steadily ironical.' Pope at his keenest, Elizabeth Bowen in her most reticent obliquity are not more trenchant. This extraordinary writer depicts the unmentionable and uncovers the indescribable, and does both with absolute authority." Iris Barry
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 13 '48 650w

"Miss Compton-Burnett is immensely unfair to most other contemporary British novelists. Using the same traditional material that so many of them use (hearts of oak and heads to match) she turns out a notably superior work of art for export. Her apparently effortless skill shows them up. They seem to be breathing too hard by comparison. The unfairness of it all is apparent in this sparkling novel about a seedy little coterie of county gentry living in the numbing, secure twilight of Queen Victoria's reign." Charles Poore
+ N Y Times p5 Je 20 '48 700w

"Miss Compton-Burnett's characters are, whatever their age, whatever their sex, distinguished by the most astonishing gift of gab in English letters. Even the servants are made to ruminate like Hamlets. . . Nobody can touch that household for talk, talk, talk, but it is not, it turns out, talk without a purpose; not a word has been wasted, for sooner or later, almost without being aware of it, one catches sight of the horror that, for Miss Compton-Burnett (still quietly and firmly), waits just behind the mounting pressure of their daily exchange of trivialities." Brendan Gill
New Yorker 24:84 Je 19 '48 1700w

"Our English cousins across the sea have every reason to be proud of the writing talents of Ivy Compton-Burnett. Certainly the publication of her novel here will give cause for endless chuckles to those of us somewhat starved for original wit in our reading today. And to an even greater number Miss Compton-

COMPTON-BURNETT, IVY—Continued
Burnett's conversation piece will come as a refresher in an era of stale and labored prose." Richard McLaughlin
+ Sat R of Lit 31:10 Je 26 '48 900w

"Miss Compton-Burnett's strength is her keen, merciless eye for human relations (subhuman relations?); her weakness, apart from her limitations of scope, is lack of a definite viewpoint towards the reality she presents." D. S. Savage
+ — Spec 178:250 Mr 7 '47 360w
Time 52:112 Jl 19 '48 1100w

"The unique quality of Miss Compton-Burnett's wit is worth analysing. It lies partly, perhaps chiefly, in her own vision of humanity, her peculiar individual slant, which turns on all creatures, in varying proportions, dissecting analysis, appreciation and ironic derision. . . The second element in the wit is the phrasing and content of the conversation, the neat, apposite logic of comment and repartee. The third is more implicit and lies in the presentment of the characters and in the clash of each on each. These various qualities combine to produce continuous appreciation and entertainment in the connoisseur; they atone with their incandescent sparkle for the limitations of the field and for the lack of distinction, the near clumsiness, of the narrative style, and set the writer apart in her unchallenged place."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p126 Mr 22 '47 3300w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 38:191 autumn '48 180w

COMPTON'S pictured encyclopedia and fact-index. 1947 ed 15v maps col maps $89.50 Compton

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 47-1819

"This review is based on an examination of the second 1947 printing in comparison with the 1943 printing which was reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin, October 1943 [Book Review Digest 1943]. That review was the last published evaluation of this encyclopedia by the Subscription Books Committee. . . The present revision is comprehensive in scope and continues the well-known features of the work: large-subject articles, unsigned; the fact index which also gives dictionary-type information on topics not treated in the main text; separately paged complete-letter volumes, each including the corresponding alphabetic section of the fact index; extensive illustrations and pictorially presented information supplementing the text; bibliographies and other devices to stimulate further reading." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"Only actual handling of the volumes can give any idea of the increased richness of the art work. New pages in color appear in every volume, but it takes comparison with one of the old plates, the iris and the moth perhaps, to reveal the full improvement wrought by the new deep-tone process. Particularly interesting among the completely new materials are plates of tropical fruits and animals made from the drawings of a G-I artist in the South Seas for the article on the Pacific Ocean. . . This new edition keeps the traditional Compton's emphasis on child interests and child life, but seems to have achieved a new maturity in its approach to many topics, a maturity desirable even in an encyclopedia designed for the use of elementary children." E. I. Hill
+ Horn Bk 23:348 S '47 1450w

"It might be well to find some other term for the heading 'Rambles Through Factland.' 'Factland' is a word that never should have been contrived. But this is a slight flaw in an encyclopedia which continues to grow in concept and accomplishment. It is based on the highest respect for the mentality and capabilities of children and young people. Its accurate text is everywhere informed by the immediacy and stimulation which match the intensity of children when they seek to know." F. C. Sayers
+ Library J 72:628 Ap 15 '47 1500w

"Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia has undergone extensive revision since 1943. Particularly important is the increase in material for readers more advanced than those at whom the set was formerly aimed, and the new illustrations. Compton's is recommended for school libraries, for public libraries and for home use. Libraries having the printings of 1943 or earlier will want this printing as a replacement."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:49 O '47 1250w

CONANT, JAMES BRYANT. Education in a divided world; the function of the public schools in our unique society. 249p $3 Harvard univ. press

370.973 Education—U.S. Education—Aims and objectives 48-8522

"The author, scholar, scientist, educator, is eager to introduce laymen to the fruits of learning and, in particular, to the goals of American education which, always lying ahead. are to produce free human beings in a free society. He believes that an understanding of these goals will destroy the hostility frequently directed toward our system of public education, and that through universal education, equality of opportunity, development of leadership and ability wherever they exist and a liberal yet practical kind of teaching, a unique type of education is being developed." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:98 N 15 '48

Reviewed by Tully Nettleton
Christian Science Monitor p18 O 14 '48 600w

"Recommended for all libraries." G. O. Kelley
+ Library J 73:1186 S 1 '48 150w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster
New Repub 120:26 Ja 31 '49 950w

"One welcomes President Conant's candid expression of his views. . . This book is so far-reaching in its implications and so intelligent in its reasoning that it will suggest many another. For my part, I am led by it once more to the conviction that one ought cheerfully to concede the grave limitations of education." G. N. Shuster
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 D 12 '48 1400w

"In most respects Mr. Conant's analysis is both sound and heartening— although it may be questioned whether the fruits of his program can be harvested in time to accomplish what he hopes. Particularly encouraging as a sign of possible change in educational thinking is the book's realism." Sidney Hook
+ N Y Times p5 O 24 '48 1250w

"President Conant of Harvard has, in this small volume, written one of the sanest, best-reasoned, most logical, tolerant and wisest expositions of the crisis now faced by America that has appeared in this or any other year." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 24 '48 1400w

"President Conant . . . brings to the discussion of themes which might in less capable hands seem threadbare and platitudinous a toughness and freshness of outlook which are gratifying and illuminating." Ordway Tead
+ Sat R of Lit 31:24 N 6 '48 550w
School & Society 68:286 O 23 '48 50w

"A wise, tightly-reasoned little book; without being an alarmist's trumpet call, it is nevertheless a call to arms." Farnsworth Crowder
+ Survey G 37:512 D '48 1850w

CONANT, JAMES BRYANT, and BLATT, ALBERT HAROLD. Chemistry of organic compounds; a year's course in organic chemistry. 3d ed 665p $5 Macmillan

547 Chemistry, Organic 47-6058

"Third edition of one of the best textbooks for first college courses in organic chemistry. It is extensively rewritten with much new material on latest developments in the field. Chapter on biochemical processes, new material on the energy relations of organic reactions, and all the newer ideas about electron-valence, 'resonance,' and the use of physical methods in determining structure and recent developments in drugs and industrial chemistry. Illustrated." (Library J) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Reviewed by A. J. Hill
+ Am Chem Soc J 70:4271 D '48 160w
Booklist 44:153 D 15 '47

"In general arrangement and content it is similar to the preceding well-known second edition, but teachers will welcome the considerable rewriting and modernization that has been affected. The style is pleasing, for facts are presented not in a dry way, but in a fashion tending to induce the student to read and to think about what he is reading. The book deserves to be, and undoubtedly will be, widely adopted. . . Some few isolated omissions and errors are regrettable." C. F. Koelsch + — Chem & Eng N 26:482 F 16 '48 450w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:44 Ja 1 '48 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:71 O '47

CONFERENCE ON SCIENCE, PHILOSOPHY AND RELIGION IN THEIR RELATION TO THE DEMOCRATIC WAY OF LIFE, 8th Philadelphia, 1947. Learning and world peace; eighth symposium; ed. by Lyman Bryson [and others] 694p $6.50 Harper

172.4 Learning and scholarship. Peace

"Eighth symposium, similar in format to the previous ones, and this time concerned with 'How can scholarship contribute to the relief of international tensions?' The problem is approached by sixty leaders in science, philosophy and religion from different perspectives, and of course with varying degrees of fruitfulness." (Library J) Index.

"This is an encouraging book—encouraging in that it is tangible evidence, on the part of contemporary scholars in a variety of fields, of their concern for the state of tension in our contemporary world and of their acceptance of the responsibility of scholarship to make its maximum contribution to world peace. It will go far to dispel the fairy tale of the ivory tower and scholarly indifference to the use made of the theories and discoveries which learning offers. The volume stands as companion testimony to the anxious witness of the atomic scientists that their brain-child shall bring peace and not destruction to the earth." K. I. Brown
+ Christian Century 65:1302 D 1 '48 420w
Current Hist 16:35 Ja '49 30w

"Important on the scholarly level and essential in related special collections." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:1591 N 1 '48 70w
School & Society 68:285 O 23 '48 60w

Reviewed by H. W. Hintz
Survey 85:51 Ja '49 500w

CONGER, MRS MARION. Rosie the rhino; pictures by Kurt Wiese. [30p] $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

48-5823

Rosie, a well-behaved rhinoceros, went for an outing one spring day when her keeper forgot to lock her cage door. All day long the keeper looked for Rosie, but she was always just one lap ahead of him. When he got home that night he found that Rosie had been the life of his little son's birthday party, and was safely sleeping off the excitements of the day in the keeper's own garage. Ages three to seven.

Booklist 44:253 Mr 15 '48

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Je 5 '48 100w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 13 '48 240w
Kirkus 16:85 F 15 '48 70w

"In spite of Kurt Wiese's many pictures which catch the spirit of the tale, the book will add little to a child's library and the cardboard binding is unsuited to our use." Gertrude Andrus
— + Library J 73:563 Ap 1 '48 70w

"Not a must but will be a refreshing addition to many picture-book tables. Will have to be prebound for library use." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 73:563 Ap 1 '48 60w

"Funny from the first page, it gets quietly funnier as it goes on, with a curiously realistic touch. The pictures are just right, pink hat and all." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 30 '48 200w

"Mrs. Conger and Mr. Wiese have portrayed this genial rhinoceros so delightfully in prose and pictures that we hope she will have other days out very soon, so that 3 to 7 year olds can meet her again." R. A. Gordon
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 14 '48 140w

"This reviewer wishes that the pink ink had been omitted. Otherwise, Rosie's adventures make a satisfying book." M. G. Davis
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:31 My 8 '48 50w
Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 11 '48 110w
Wis Lib Bul 44:65 Mr '48

CONKLE, ELLSWORTH PROUTY. Five plays. 363p $3 French

812 48-6694

"Five royalty plays based on American folklore and frontier life." (Booklist) Contents: Paul and the blue ox; The delectable judge; Bill and the widowmaker; 49 dogs in the meathouse; Johnny Appleseed.

Booklist 44:349 Je 15 '48

"Recommended for folk as well as for drama collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:475 Mr 15 '48 40w

CONKLIN, GROFF, ed. Treasury of science fiction. 517p $3 Crown

Short stories—Collections 48-6267

An anthology of science fiction supplementing the author's "Best of Science Fiction." (Book Review Digest 1946).

Booklist 44:313 My 15 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun My 14 '48 90w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:292 Jl '48 20w

"Among the better items are H. F. Heard's well-known and truly hair-raising piece 'The Great Fog' and William Tenn's 'Child's Play,' the latter notable chiefly because it's quite funny, a rare quality in this field. Otherwise, the contents are almost indistinguishable from those of 'The Best of Science Fiction,' the predecessor to this volume, even though the stories are, of course, different ones."
New Yorker 24:111 Ap 24 '48 110w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 25 '48 350w

CONNELL, VIVIAN. Golden sleep. 314p $3 Dial press

48-5146

"A novel about an unfulfilled love affair between an Irish writer and a young Englishwoman. The Irishman recovers from the experience with urbane ease, but the heroine, who breaks off the relationship at the insistence of her parents, rewards them for their interference by seducing her brother-in-law and going off to Paris, where her increasingly casual way of life comes to an end when her favorite of the moment, a musician, pushes her into the Seine." New Yorker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 30 '48 70w

CONNELL, VIVIAN—Continued

— N Y Times p16 Ja 25 '48 330w

"Trivial."

New Yorker 23:66 Ja 31 '48 90w

"Mr. Connell falls far short of understanding . . . his hero. . . It is said to be Spring's particular gift as a novelist that he understands women, and because Mr. Connell does have a gift for unraveling hidden feminine motivations, he has passed it on to his hero and surrounded him with women who have more reality than most of their sisters in current fiction. In unfolding the characters of the four most important women who are in love with him, the author shows unusual gifts. He knows how to make the reader share the tension of his characters. He has poetry, an acute perception of the hostility half hidden in many conventional situations, and a passionate preference for truth above salability. These qualities make 'The Golden Sleep' a more engrossing and stimulating tale than most of the latest fiction." Harry Bull

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:11 F 7 '48 750w

Reviewed by Robert Kee

Spec 181:218 Ag 13 '48 180w

"The novel has some vivid moments, but the fusion of realism and mysticism is imperfectly achieved; Calvin himself appears a ridiculous and conceited character, although he is not intended to be this, and the solemn, self-conscious eroticism of Mr. Connell's style acts on the reader as an irritant rather than a stimulant."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p441 Ag 7 '48 220w

CONNETT, EUGENE VIRGINIUS, ed. American sporting dogs; chapters by Gerald M. Livingston [and others] il. from paintings by Edwin Megargee and from photographs. 549p $7.50 Van Nostrand

636.75 Dogs Agr48-531

Twenty-four nationally known authorities on dogs have written these studies on the sporting dogs of America. Chapters are on breeds, scent, field trials, heredity, training, etc. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

"The illustrations—paintings by Edwin Megargee and photographs and engravings will add eye appeal for anyone who likes dogs. But the text is only for the special fanciers."

+ Kirkus 16:545 O 1 '48 120w

"A handsome volume, excellently illustrated. . . Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 74:64 Ja 1 '49 30w

"A roll of 25 thoroughly informed authors plus some beautiful photographs and an excellent job of makeup combine to make this book one to be cherished."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 28 '48 80w

"If you are a sportsman, a handler and trainer, or just interested in owning a good sporting dog, . . . in this book you will find each of them treated by a recognized expert. . .If you wish to breed the dog you now own, or buy a puppy, this book gives the outstanding blood lines in every breed which enables you to choose the best, and official standards of the sporting breeds are also given. 'American Sporting Dogs' has 105 photos." L. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C N 14 '48 390w

CONNETT, EUGENE VIRGINIUS, ed. Yachting in North America; along the Atlantic and Pacific and Gulf coasts and on the Great Lakes and on the western and Canadian lakes and rivers; introd. by DeCoursey Fales. 750p $15 Van Nostrand

797.14 Yachts and yachting. Waterways—North America 48-9534

A survey of "all phases of yachting, by a panel of writers, each of whom is a specialist on his locality. The book is a cruising guide to every navigable body of water of any interest in the upper half of the Western Hemisphere, as well as a practical encyclopedia (it is too unwieldy to be a handbook) on seamanship and the handling of boats. A third of it is devoted to boating on inland waters, and it will probably be a surprise to the coastal yachtsman to find out how many places in the hinterland he can reach by boat." (New Yorker) Index.

"This is a goldmine of information for the yachtsman, whether he is the owner of a 14 foot outboard motor boat on fresh water inland waterways, or of a 64 foot ketch on blue water."

+ Kirkus 16:540 O 1 '48 160w

"Here is a book full of the stuff on which cruisers' bigger and better dreams are made. It is a magnificent package of cruising practically everywhere except in the ol' swimming hole. If at first it serves to anchor the seasonal sailor in his winter armchair it might also catapult him directly to the boatyard." Austin Stevens

+ N Y Times p12 D 19 '48 380w

"An excellent survey."

+ New Yorker 24:117 D 18 '48 100w

"'Yachting in North America' is without question the definitive yachtsman's handbook. It is handsomely printed and illustrated, many of the charts are detailed enough to pilot by and it is well written. Any yachtsman, whether he sails a dinghy or a huge auxiliary schooner, is going to want it." S. N.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 19 '48 220w

CONRAD, BARNABY. Innocent villa. 246p $2.75 Random house

48-1823

The hero, a young American attached to the consul's office in Córdoba, finds that diplomatic life there is rather dull, but there are compensations in the love of a beautiful Spanish girl and in bullfights.

Kirkus 16:91 F 15 '48 110w

"Readable, without much plot, but emphasizes some stuffed-shirt aspects of our diplomatic corps. Author's description of a bull fight alone makes the book worthwhile." Anne Whitmore

Library J 73:473 Mr 15 '48 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ag 1 '48 150w

New Yorker 24:108 Je 5 '48 140w

"Mr. Conrad has told this story with considerable humor, and with occasional flashes of style. His chapters on the bull fights are graphic and exciting; sort of a cinematized version of 'Death in the Afternoon.' But for the rest, the book is filled with flashbacks that slow the action, with conversations that seem highly improbable, with characters that fail to come off." W. R. W.

— + San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 27 '48 420w

CONSIDINE, DOUGLAS MAXWELL. Industrial weighing. 553p il $10 Reinhold

389 Scales (weighing instruments) 48-6228

"A much needed book in the field and first up-to-date book on scales. Part I is devoted to basic scale mechanics, scale operation, scales for basic weighing, printing and counting scales and automatic weighers, followed by design consideration and selection, installation, and maintenance of scales. Part II covers scales in the various industries. Glossary. Tables." Library J

"A timely book. It fills a gap in technical literature by providing in one volume the basic principles involved in weighing mechanisms, the applications of the various types of scales, and information of recently developed industrial weighing equipment. . . A complete glossary of 'Scale Terms' is included, giving not only definition of terms used in this field, but of terms which engineers frequently employ, sometimes without too accurate an understanding of their exact meaning." W. G. Hudson

+ Chem Eng 55:311 My '48 800w
Library J 73:655 Ap 15 '48 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:24 Ja '48

COOK, ARTHUR LEROY. Elements of electrical engineering; a textbook of principles and practice. 5th ed 662p il $5 Wiley

621.3 Electric engineering 47-5629

"Entire work revised and many chapters rewritten and brought up to date. Fifty new illustrations and new problems. Appendix revised to conform with 1947 National electrical code." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:112 N 15 '47
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:891 Je 1 '47 30w

"This work is thoroughly established as a textbook for use in short and not-too-rigorous courses, such as are offered to students who are not planning to specialize in electrical engineering. It is suitable for use also as a self-instruction text. It has undergone extensive rewriting and revision for this edition, but the scope and manner of presentation of the earlier editions have been retained."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:9 Ja '48

COOK, CANFIELD. From the ground up. 266p $2.75 Crowell

48-4521

Story of a young ex-army-flyer and his fight to make his small home town air-conscious enough to back up his plan to establish an airpark. For older boys.

"Flying enthusiasts will find this informative as well as thrilling. The author is a lecturer on aviation." E. R. J.
+ Churchman 162:29 N 15 '48 20w

"Good flying episodes for air-conscious young adults, but paper characterizations and lack of central plot will disappoint readers in the between-flight sections."
+ — Kirkus 16:403 Ag 15 '48 80w

"I'm afraid this falls between two stools: too many stock situations . . . to hold veteran pilots who might profit by the data on how to persuade a town to finance a landing field; too much detail about club talks, political campaigns and cost estimates to hold boys who like their aviation stories with emphasis upon adventure." M. C. S.
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 N 14 '48 180w

"In spite of undramatic writing and somewhat formless characters, the story with its authentic, rich details of flying and of small town life will be delicious fare for any boy or girl who ever leaned wishfully on the airport fence on Saturday." F. C. Smith
+ — N Y Times p20 S 26 '48 200w

"This is a story with emphasis on aviation and the activities and interests of a group of active, enthusiastic young Americans. Less noticeable, but extremely important, is its quiet emphasis on the ways of democracy." R. A. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 N 13 '48 140w

COOK, MRS FANNIE (FRANK). Storm against the wall. 270p $3 Doubleday

48-5839

This novel of Jewish life in America—and of the varied aspects of anti-Semitism both here and in Europe—covers the period from the St Louis Exposition (1904) to the end of the second World war. The principal characters are the members of a St Louis German-Jewish family, their relatives and friends, portrayed chiefly thru the eyes of Marc Kleinman, a twelve-year old boy when the story opens.

Booklist 44:248 Mr 15 '48
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '48

"Through the wide reaches of the family, you see almost every type of Jew—and Jewishness. Fannie Cook takes lance in hand, wields it against various types of discrimination, Negro as well as Jew, social, economic, within the ranks of Jews and Gentiles alike. Better written than Mrs. Palmer's Honey, but with less impact."
+ Kirkus 16:28 Ja 15 '48 170w

"Neatly done and wholesomely presented." C. W. Roth
+ Library J 73:395 Mr 1 '48 110w

" 'Storm Against the Wall' is the product of knowledge, experience and memories whose roots reach back into the distant past. . . Mrs. Cook delineates the Jew as an individual, an American, rather than a member of a religious or racial minority. Implicit in her many faceted story is her contention, ably demonstrated, that the nomenclature 'Jew' like that of 'Gentile' does not define an invariable, unchanging type distinguishable from other members of a community. . . While this richly peopled book progressed to the third generation, it is Hans and Marc who dominate its pages, giving the chronicle its depth and its significance." Rose Feld
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Mr 14 '48 480w

"America's melting-pot ideal has been having a workout in the harsh air of the literary laboratories. Racial ingredients of the national brew are isolated, analyzed and found suffering from ill-treatment; the result is a spate of angry, well-written diagnoses. . . Against the mounting despair over America's failure as an alchemist, Fannie Cook's warm understanding story of an American-German-Jewish family stands out like a healthy thumb. . . It is the Kleinmans' positive faith, their enduring appreciation of freedom from an older tyranny, which gives this history its unexpected fillip of hope and vitality. It is also their author's easy vivid style of presentation which keeps her people out of the Problem Department." Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p19 Mr 21 '48 500w
Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ap 4 '48 120w

COOKE, DAVID COXE, ed. Best detective stories of the year, 1948. (V3) 251p $2.50 Dutton

Short stories—Collections (46-5872)

Twelve short detective stories, selected from those published in American magazines during the last year. The authors include: C. B. Child, Q. Patrick, John and Ward Hawkins, Anthony Boucher, L. G. Blochman, Margaret Manners, Ellery Queen, Harold Goldman, Samuel Blas, A. R. Anderson, Hugh Pentecost, J. A. Kirch.

Kirkus 16:323 Jl 1 '48 90w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 O 24 '48 120w
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 Ag 29 '48 140w
Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 12 '48 300w

"Good bedsider."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:39 S 11 '48 40w
Springf'd Republican p7B S 12 '48 320w
Wis Lib Bul 44:166 O '48

COOMBS, CHARLES I. Teen-age treasure chest of sports stories. 250p il $2.50 Lantern press (N Y)

48-7628

Nineteen short sport stories for teen-age boys and girls. They cover track, baseball, football, basket-ball, swimming and tennis.

Booklist 45:36 S 15 '48

"Ninth in the series. . . The level isn't quite so high, though it's an excellent group of yarns on sports."
Kirkus 16:281 Je 15 '48 120w

COOMBS, C. I.—Continued

"Characters are appealing and the whole book should delight the sports soul of any boy. Highly recommended for all children's rooms and young people's collections." M. D. Read

+ Library J 73:1101 Ag '48 60w

"The action is fast, the sport lingo good and the lessons implied rather than underlined. Good addition to the Teen-Age Library series and appealing to eleven-to-fourteen-year-old boys who are not yet critical of plot similarities." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 10 '48 100w

Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 22 '48 120w

COOMBS, MURDO, pseud. See Davis, F. C.

COON, CARLETON STEVENS, ed. Reader in general anthropology. 624p maps $3.90 Holt

572.08 Anthropology 48-6348

A reader designed to be used for outside reading in beginning college courses in anthropology. Writings are by professional anthropologists and "good observers" of all times and places. Material is divided into seven levels of increasing cultural complexity: Subhuman society; Simple family bands; The band contains several families; The rise of specialists and multiple institutions; The number of institutions per individual increases, and hierarchies begin; Hierarchies and compound institutions; One complex political institution. Index.

Booklist 45:173 Ja 15 '49

"This is quite frankly a collection of collateral readings for students in anthropology courses at Harvard. It will have other uses, for such a quantity (624 pages) of carefully chosen selections from great writers who have studied and described aspects of the human adventure cannot fail to contain much that will interest non-academic readers. Professor Coon's most valuable contribution, aside from a judicious choice of the materials, is the classification of them into seven categories." P. H.

+ Christian Century 65:1145 O 27 '48 170w

"This is that extraordinary phenomenon, a book designed for classroom use which is at the same time an anthology of real literary as well as scientific merit." Ralph Linton

+ Nation 167:554 N 13 '48 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 24 '48 100w

Reviewed by John Gillin

Social Forces 27:173 D '48 350w

COOPER, JOHN COBB (JOHN COBB, pseud). The gesture. 245p $2.75 Harper

48-5368

"First novel by a former Air Corps officer. At a bomber station in England the C.O., conscientious but inflexible, causes ill-will and eventually a near-riot in trying to enforce his own standards—which include racial equality. In this conflict, the narrator chooses to be one of the boys." Library J

Booklist 44:382 Jl 15 '48

Kirkus 16:27 Ja 15 '48 130w

"His analysis of the personalities involved is shrewd and lucid, the narrative, which seems uneventful in its opening pages rises to a climax of considerable dramatic force and moral point." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 73:122 Ja 15 '48 80w

"A first novel, Mr. Cobb's story of an American airfield in England is very modest in intention and, technically, just about adequate to its purpose. But certainly if any post-war novel I have so far seen can be described as expressing, or at least working toward, a new point of view, it is Mr. Cobb's. . . I can scarcely be optimistic that a manner as quiet and unstylish as Mr. Cobb's and a literary tone pitched so low will be very attractive to the contemporary taste. Nevertheless, 'The Gesture' points a really fresh and rewarding literary direction." Diana Trilling

Nation 166:218 F 21 '48 450w

"Probably there never was an 8th Air Force field in England commanded by a major with a burning desire to put into practice the ideals he thought the war was being fought for, but John Cobb has written a forceful and thoughtful novel about such a field and such a major. . . It would be unfair to call 'The Gesture' a cynical book, for Mr. Cobb avoids making judgments. But it is a probing book, and if it solves no problems it at least lays them open." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 8 '48 500w

"It is difficult to say just what makes this such an impressive first novel. It is simply and lightly—at times almost flippantly—written. And yet it is so subtle in its characterization and so well constructed, each development adding to one's understanding of the theme, that its total effect is almost completely satisfying." Marc Brandel

+ N Y Times p5 F 8 '48 600w

New Yorker 23:82 F 14 '48 160w

Reviewed by Oliver Harrison

Sat R of Lit 31:28 Mr 13 '48 550w

Time 51:98 F 9 '48 950w

COOPER, LETTICE ULPHA. Robert Louis Stevenson. (English novelists ser) 110p $2 Swallow, A.

B or 92 Stevenson, Robert Louis [48-22497]

A brief biography of Stevenson, which is also a critical study of his writings. Bibliography. Index.

"The format is delightful. . . Good for student market and for libraries, large and small."

+ Kirkus 16:616 N 15 '48 30w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 73:1742 D 1 '48 20w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 6 '48 60w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 120:27 Ja 3 '49 240w

"Miss Lettice Cooper in her short biography has followed conventionally the well-worn tracks which James noticed had been laid carefully by the hero himself. . . As an interpreter of his work she is incomparably less sensitive than Miss Janet Adam Smith who has already written to my mind the best possible book on Stevenson of this length. . . However here for those who want it (though insufficiently charted with dates) is the obvious trail: we can watch Stevenson scatter his scraps of paper across the clearings for his pursuers to spy." Graham Greene

New Statesman & Nation 34:14 Ja 3 '48 950w

"Miss Cooper's treatment of Stevenson in eighteen brief chapters, has no appreciable element of novelty." G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 D 19 '48 200w

Reviewed by Abbott Martin

N Y Times p24 Ja 9 '49 230w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 32:17 Ja 29 '49 170w

"In spite of his good writing Stevenson is not a very interesting man. But Miss Cooper has done such an excellent piece of work; has judged the limitations of her subject so nicely, that her book is a pleasure to read. Her style is simple. She has all the important facts, but they are not crowded. She estimates Stevenson's position as a novelist with precision, but without grandeur or partiality. Anyone who wants to know about Stevenson can do so with enjoyment in two hours." Philip Trower

+ Spec 180:28 Ja 2 '48 350w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley

Springf'd Republican p6B D 26 '48 190w

COOPER, MAE KLEIN. Lily Henry. 224p $2.50 Dutton
48-467

A successful business woman, supposedly happily married, Lily Henry is really bored with life. For one day she decides to live dangerously, and succeeds almost too well, for one of the men she encourages gets murdered.

"May intrigue the rental addicts."
Kirkus 15:678 D 15 '47 110w

"Gay, amusing, racy, this portrayal of feminine psychology has its serious implications and is too well done to be shocking. Recommended." E. H. Kennedy
+ Library J 73:38 Ja 1 '48 80w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 29 '48 100w

COOPER, PAGE. Bellevue story. 277p $3 Crowell

362.11 New York (city). Bellevue hospital
48-8687

A history of Bellevue hospital "told in terms of its great doctors and supporters, from its pre-Revolutionary beginnings as an almshouse to its present importance to New York and the medical field. . . Here is its development from its haphazard start, the 'doctors mobs', the interruptions brought about by each war, the opening of new horizons in medicine, the pioneering work in anesthesia, surgery, psychiatry, the Medical School and its merger with New York University, and each new physical addition to the institution." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 45:130 D 15 '48

+ Kirkus 16:389 Ag 1 '48 160w

"The 'battered old hospital' has had a picturesque and varied history which in the hands of the author, an experienced writer, makes not only good reading but excellent publicity material for the new New York University-Bellevue Medical Center now under construction. Recommended for general purchase." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 73:1381 O 1 '48 130w

"Page Cooper tells Bellevue's story simply and effectively. She gives a wealth of picturesque historical detail and enlivens the record with sidelights on the many kinds of people who have helped to make Bellevue." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 D 19 '48 700w

"A spirited and human account of a truly outstanding place of healing." A. H. Weiler
+ N Y Times p43 O 24 '48 400w

"In a book of this sort, it is easy for the author to fall into the anecdotal and stay there. Miss Cooper tells plenty of stories, and good ones, but her chief concern is the main story, and she tells it interestingly and informatively. Her account is consecutive and well-knit, and comprehensive for all its brevity." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 32:23 Ja 22 '49 500w

COOPER, PAGE. Sambumbia; a discovery of the Dominican Republic, the modern Hispañola [il. by Irena Lorentowicz]. 203p $2.75 Caribbean lib.

917.293 Dominican Republic—Description and travel
47-30592

Observations on a visit to the Dominican Republic by a war correspondent. "She culls stories from Columbus's time, dramas of old Spanish families; she visits ruins, museums and homes; architects and artisans who work for love of art for art's sake. She finds charm in leisurely living and courtly manners of the old civilization, in love of music and the dance. In contrast is an active program of modernization—public buildings, roads, sanitation, electrification and better housing." (Springf'd Republican)

Foreign Affairs 26:582 Ap '48 10w

Reviewed by G. E. Lyon
Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 4 '48 180w

COOPERATIVE STUDY IN GENERAL EDUCATION. Cooperation in general education; a final report of the Executive committee. 240p $3 Am. council on educ.

378 Education, Higher
47-31439

"In this book the executive committee of the Cooperative Study in General Education reports the five-year program of more than a score of colleges which combined to study aims, structure, and content of an ideal two-year curriculum. . . Purposes, methods, and findings are explicitly stated. Summaries are given of the major projects in the humanities, the social studies, student personnel work and in the sciences, which are reported more fully in separate volumes. General questions involved are considered from both a philosophic and practical viewpoint." Publisher's note

Reviewed by R. H. Heindel
Ann Am Acad 255:217 Ja '48 360w

Booklist 44:177 Ja 15 '48

Reviewed by David Davies
Library Q 18:146 Ap '48 1150w

"This volume serves as a good handbook of the background of the general education movement and of its underlying philosophy, and of the progress that has been made in formulating a new program for the first two college years." Arthur Dondineau
+ Social Studies 39:39 Ja '48 1750w

"Conservative educators may find this report a somewhat elementary analysis of the obvious. That this group of colleges undertook and supported the investigation is, however, a commentary on the importance of general education. For those who wish to follow the projects in detail an additional volume in the series, General Education in the Humanities, is available."
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:357 D '47 400w

COPELAND, MELVIN THOMAS, and TOWL, ANDREW RENWICK. Board of directors and business management. 202p $3.25 Harvard univ. Division of research

658.1145 Directors of corporations. Business management
47-11299

Study of the responsibilities of directors in the administration of American business corporations. Specific problems of administering a company in the different stages of its development are outlined. Index.

"This is the type of book that perplexes a reviewer. The research has been admirably executed by scholars of highest competence under the auspices of an outstanding school of business administration. . . Perplexity arises from a repeated sub-conscious questioning: Is the game worth the candle? The book gives an impression of a research elaboration of what is fairly obvious to matured students and business and of management. . . One is unable to see wherein it makes that addition to the fund of knowledge which is expected of research; or to treatises, too few in number, which instruct how this or that responsibility in enterprise should be organized and executed, the petty miscellany of background data being spared the reader." H. S. Person
— + Ann Am Acad 259:191 S '48 400w

"The reviewer approached the actual text with some misgivings, for the 'Foreword' acknowledged that the study had been largely financed by one of the country's gigantic corporations. It is gratifying therefore to be able to report that the authors, Professors Copeland and Towl, appear to have been fair so far as they go. The volume is definitely not a technical manual. It is written so simply that directors without formal education will have no difficulty in understanding it. . . Regrettably, the volume has some serious errors of omission. The authors, assuming the integrity of the reader-director and his co-directors, have not touched on a number of problems which may arise when fellow-directors are not upright. . . If the volume is read by all for whom it was written, if those invited to manage a corporation first test themselves by the suggested questions a director should ask himself before accepting appointment, if those who are directors similarly test themselves with the list designed for one serving as a director and if they thereafter decline to act as directors when they cannot meet the standards suggested, we will have taken one step toward achieving a corporate Utopia." G. D. Hornstein

COPELAND, M. T.—Continued
+ — Columbia Law R 48:164 Ja '48 1050w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1614 N 15 '47 30w

"The Board of Directors and Business Management challenges any incumbent director to examine his conscience; it is a book which a prospective director cannot afford to overlook." J. F. Bell
+ Management R 37:54 Ja '48 270w

"This is no abstract study. It is founded on careful observation of many boards of directors, and the form of presentation consists largely of case examples of the successful use of the course recommended or of unfortunate results when directors did not perform properly. This concreteness will appeal to the 'practical man of affairs' as well as to the student of social organization, and no doubt will increase the influence of the book."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:43 Mr '48 260w

COPELOF, MAXWELL. Management-union arbitration; a record of cases, methods, and decisions; foreword by John R. Steelman. 345p $5 Harper
331.154 Arbitration, Industrial 48-9090

"With broad range experience as impartial arbitrator, author presents a discussion of factors to be considered in choosing arbitration through voluntary agreement of management and organized labor and preparing cases. Numerous examples." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1823 D 15 '48 40w

"Over 99 per cent of all labor matters that go to arbitration boards involve disputes covering the interpretation of contracts, covering controversies not dealt with in the contract, or disputes over the formation of a new contract. This book gives many illustrative cases, drawn from the author's wide experience in arbitrating, from all three of these common categories. Furthermore, the book is particularly valuable for the information it gives concerning the preparation and presentation of arbitration cases." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 14 '48 220w

COPPARD, ALFRED EDGAR. Collected tales. 532p $5 Knopf 48-5302

Thirty-eight tales, realistic and fantastic, written by this English author between 1921 and 1938.

Booklist 44:248 Mr 15 '48

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 10 '48 170w

Kirkus 15:657 D 1 '47 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 Mr 7 '48 290w

"If a confirmed Coppardian were to go through all the volumes, checking to the number of thirty-eight the stories that he could not possibly spare, I expect he would find a coincidence of 75 per cent or better between his own nominations and these. It is, by this test or any, a volume for the permanent library —the best of one of the best of the writers between the two wars." Wilson Follett
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 4 '48 750w

"The quality of the stories is unusually high, and three of them—'The Man from Kilsheelan,' 'The Higgler,' and 'Judith,' all written in the early nineteen-twenties—are of the very first order. 'Judith,' a heart-searing tragedy of a physical love so powerful that it could rise above everything but English class relations, is kept from being one of the most magnificent stories of our time only by Mr. Coppard's besetting vice, a too easy ironic ending."
+ — New Yorker 24:114 Mr 20 '48 170w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '48 200w

"An important contribution to the literature of short fiction . . . If he is first of all a teller of tales, Coppard is next a poet and an artist. Passages of real lyric beauty appear and reappear in his stories, the final effect of much of his work is closer to that evoked by poetry than by prose. Many of these stories deserve to be read and remembered long after many of Coppard's more publicized contemporaries are forgotten." William Peden
+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 Mr 27 '48 850w

"Witty, flavorsome, often beautiful, usually written in a minor key, Mr. Coppard's stories have never been popular. However, they are certain to be read when most best-sellers have been long forgotten." Orville Prescott
+ Yale R n s 37:768 summer '48 180w

CORBETT, ELIZABETH FRANCES. Immortal Helen. 253p $2.50 Doubleday
48-5041

A story of life in a small Wisconsin town in the 1870's. The story centers in the relationship between Christopher Hastings, the foremost citizen of the town, and his daughter Eve.

"A not too strong story interest but sufficient decorative detail for a feminine market."
Kirkus 15:628 N 15 '47 170w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ag 8 '48 40w

"The family photographs involved are too faded to achieve flesh and blood interest. . . Perhaps this seems unfair to an author who has after all made a fair bargain with the reader: in exchange for a little interest and a little more credulity, she offers conscientious entertainment, pleasantly written and easy on the nerve centers." Isabelle Mallet
— + N Y Times p23 F 15 '48 500w

"In 'Immortal Helen' Mrs. Corbett has lost none of the facility and easy charm that have made her a favorite among the so-called popular novelists." J. V.
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 18 '48 150w

Wis Lib Bul 44:40 F '48

CORBETT, JAMES EDWARD. Man-eating leopard of Rudraprayag. 185p il $2.50 Oxford
799.2 Leopards. Hunting—India Agr 48-223

The man-eating leopard of Rudraprayag was officially credited with more than one hundred human kills between 1918 and 1926. In this book the author tells the story of the animal's career and of how it was finally killed.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 182:102 Jl '48 480w

Booklist 44:295 My 1 '48

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:292 Jl '48 20w

Kirkus 16:184 Ap 1 '48 130w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 73:647 Ap 15 '48 100w

"Jim Corbett tells his story in a simple, direct style and with most explicit detail. The result is striking vignettes of the primitive life led in those high altitudes and, when it comes to the descriptions of kills and hunts, an on-the-spot effectiveness. The author's lifelong knowledge of India's wilder regions, and his unforced liking for the people of the villages, jungle and hills, make this narrative more than a simple story of hair-raising adventures, though it is all of that." M. C. Hubbard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 My 2 '48 850w

"Readers who fancy feeling their scalps crawl will enjoy this short but exciting book and will forgive the divagations on fishing, boar and stag hunts which look suspiciously like padding. They will find in it the same remarkable knowledge of jungle creatures and the ability to convey with immediacy what it is like to hunt them—qualities which were so praised in Jim Corbett's best-seller, 'Man-Eaters of Kumaon.' " Edgar Brooke

+ N Y Times p10 My 23 '48 500w

"An exciting and informative tale."

+ New Yorker 24:118 My 22 '48 80w

"Corbett's narrative is a fascinating one." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 20 '48 550w

CORBETT, LUCY (MRS SIDNEY CORBETT), and CORBETT, SIDNEY. Long windows; being more Pot shots from a Grosse Ile kitchen; il. by William Thomas Woodward. 208p $3 Harper

641.5 Cookery. Country life 48-8686

Essays on cooking and living in the house with long front windows at Grosse Ile, Michigan, by the authors of Pot Shots From a Grosse Ile Kitchen (Book Review Digest 1947). Index.

Booklist 45:83 N 1 '48

"There are many recipes of unusual distinction which have made their kitchen famous as well as the scene of many light-hearted, high-humored personal incidents."

+ Kirkus 16:353 Jl 15 '48 100w

"Every descriptive word in this book comes out of experience, every recipe is tried and true, and tryable by you and me, and if you believe as I do that there is some basic insurance against pessimism, meanness, and loneliness in well prepared foods, fasts and fiestas rhythmically spaced, and good yarns told over victuals—for you 'Long Windows' will be the right book." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 D 5 '48 550w

CORDER, WILLIAM, defendant. Murder of Maria Marten. See Curtis, J., ed.

COREY, PAUL. Corn gold farm. 223p $2.50 Morrow

48-7831

Story of young Earl Blake's project of reclaiming the soil on his family's newly inherited farm.

Kirkus 16:310 Jl 1 '48 120w

"Recommended for ages 10-15." Helen Swartz

+ Library J 73:1523 O 15 '48 70w

"There is a good plot, with ample suspense. The writing is vigorous and straightforward. An interesting and even an exciting story, especially for boys and girls of farm regions, and those who would like to live on farms." I. E.

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 N 14 '48 200w

"A satisfying story and one that will interest young people in modern farming."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:31 N 13 '48 90w

CORLE, EDWIN. John Studebaker; an American dream. 316p il $4.50 Dutton

B or 92 Studebaker, John Mohler 48-8921

A history of the rise of the modern Studebaker car, and of the members of the Studebaker family responsible for it. The story goes back to 1736, when the five Studebaker brothers arrived in Germantown, Pennsylvania. The family got its start as wagon makers, and thousands of the vehicles which took pioneers to the west were made by them. The most famous of the brothers was John Mohler Studebaker, 1833 to 1917, whose story is told most fully. Index.

Booklist 45:102 N 15 '48

"Highly readable as the history of a few, colorful decades, this biography traces Studebaker's rag-to-riches accomplishments and favors a swift and light pace over accuracy of detail."

+ — Kirkus 16:391 Ag 1 '48 140w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 73:1381 O 1 '48 130w

"To inflate his account the author has inserted a great mass of nineteenth-century American history, imaginary conversations among his characters, and speculation as to what they were thinking at various times. As usual, the 'fictionalized biography' combines the faults of the novel and the straight biography without the virtues of either, and the result is pretty dull reading." L. S. De Camp

N Y Times p36 N 14 '48 210w

"The treatment is fully adequate. Mr. Corle is a professional writer, and his book is professionally written. Looking at it another way—from the viewpoint of the reader who knows Mr. Corle's novels and has perhaps followed him from the beginning—the reaction may be somewhat different. From this view, it would be more to the point to say that Corle has written better than this, and will write better, and that even though this project may have interested him temporarily, the sooner he gets back to his genuinely creative work—to wit, his novels—the better off both he and his readers will be." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 20 '48 700w

Wis Lib Bul 45:13 Ja '49

CORMACK, MARIBELLE, and BYTOVETZSKI, PAVEL L. Swamp boy; a story of the Okefinokee swamp in Georgia; with il. by Winfield Hoskins. 290p $2.50 McKay

48-8860

Clint Sheppard spent much of his boyhood hunting and exploring in the Okefinokee swamp of Georgia, with Tom, a Seminole Indian as companion. This story for grades seven to nine describes Clint's efforts to gain an education so that he could improve the condition of his family.

Booklist 45:161 Ja 1 '49

"Richness of background nature detail will interest some readers, and bore others. This just misses being a grand tale because Clint is just a wee bit too much the perfect gentle knight for credibility."

+ — Kirkus 16:557 O 15 '48 130w

"While the picture of the swamp is quite well drawn, and the reader feels its mystery and fascination, the characters in the story are disappointing. The Horatio Alger pattern of the plot seems unreal in this setting. Conversations are trite and uninteresting. However, because of the paucity of books with this setting, Swamp Boy is recommended." M. F. Cox

+ — Library J 73:1828 D 15 '48 80w

CORRY, JAMES ALEXANDER. Elements of democratic government. 1st Am ed rev & enl 507p $3.75 Oxford

320 Political science 47-30802

"This book, by the Hardy Professor of Political Science in Queen's University, was prepared originally with the special needs of Canadian students in mind. It has now been adapted for use in American colleges. . . Professor Corry deals with institutions, trends and problems in the United States, Great Britain and Canada. He is concerned less with elaborate description of machinery than with the analysis of general tendencies, illustrated by specific examples. The topics covered include those usually found in such treatises—constitutions, executive, legislature, parties and pressure groups, judiciary, civil service and local government—as well as chapters on the expansion of government activities, the relationship of the executive to the legislature, the administrative process, federalism and the contrasts between democracy and dictatorship." (Pol Sci Q) Selected references at the end of each chapter. Index.

CORRY, J. A.—Continued

"It is unfortunate that Mr. Corry's excellent descriptions of the fundamentals of British and Canadian government are not matched by his generalizations concerning the United States. . . Some of the generalizations on federalism are dogmatic and show rather too much preference for the status quo. . . [However] the author's style is excellent—clear, concise, and sparingly enlivened with touches of dry humor. Mr. Corry has made a valuable addition to the list of texts for the introductory course. The instructor's appraisal of the book will depend upon the type of course that he is actually offering under the label of the introductory course." C. C. Rodee
+ — Am Pol Sci R 42:146 F '48 750w

"Professor Corry's book is interesting, clearly written, and free from the inconsequential details which encumber too many introductory texts in government. The author's emphasis on fundamentals and his willingness to take a stand on controversial matters, without ever becoming dogmatic, make this book a stimulating introduction to the study of government." E. D. Graper
+ Ann Am Acad 255:198 Ja '48 650w

"Students find Professor Corry's book clear, readable and stimulating. Its author deserves the warm thanks of teachers." T. P. Peardon
+ Pol Sci Q 63:153 Mr '48 800w

COSGRAVE, JOHN O'HARA. Man: a citizen of the universe. 144p $2.75 Farrar, Straus
191.9 Philosophy, Modern. Science—Philosophy 48-973

"Cosgrave, an able newspaper and magazine editor in his heyday, looks on science as the cause of our spiritual distress and casts about for salvation in terms of Emersonian transcendentalism and a kind of cosmic Thoreauism. Science has cut man off from the universe, Mr. Cosgrave finds. Man does not realize 'that he is alive on earth,' so that his condition is about as lamentable as if he were unaware of the country of which he is a citizen. There is no doubt about what Mr. Cosgrave means by the 'universe.' It is to him a synonym of 'nature,' the 'cosmos,' 'God'—a looseness of terminology that he shares with Jeans and Eddington, who were better on mathematical physics than on semantics." N Y Times

"A rambling collection of ideas, offering no remedy for the problems stated. Limited."
Kirkus 15:641 N 15 '47 100w

"Mr. Cosgrave here presents circuitous and largely negative discussion that nowhere approaches solution to problems he states. . . Mr. Cosgrave seems to underestimate the achievements of sciences in describing man as man. This probably has very limited use outside of special collections on philosophy." R. E. Kingery
Library J 72:1776 D 15 '47 80w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ag 29 '48 250w

"In Cosgrave there is no catechism, nothing like the Ten Commandments, no code of personal conduct to follow. Can man live on a philosophic transcendentalism alone? This reviewer doubts it." Waldemar Kaempffert
N Y Times p4 Ja 25 '48 600w
San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 23 '48 300w
Reviewed by T. V. Smith
Sat R of Lit 31:26 F 7 '48 500w

COTT, TED, and others. Isn't it a crime? il. by Leo Garel. 160p $2.25 Arco
364.2 Crime and criminals. Puzzles 47-12256

An anthology of cartoons, quizzes and anecdotes concerned with crime and detection.

"The quizzes are excellent brain teasers. . . As party games these quizzes will go a long way toward making a social evening a success. It is not necessary that the participants be inveterate readers of detective stories but it will help." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 F 29 '48 140w

"Good stunt-book."
Sat R of Lit 31:26 Ja 17 '48 50w

COTTRELL, LEONARD SLATER, and EBERHART, SYLVIA. American opinion on world affairs in the atomic age; with a foreword by Frederick Osborn. 152p $2.50 Princeton univ. press
327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. Public opinion—U.S. Atomic bomb 48-7629

"A study of American attitudes toward foreign affairs in this atomic age. The authors base this survey on the report of the Committee on Social and Economic Aspects of Atomic Energy of the Social Science Research Council. The appendices are particularly useful, giving illustrative and tabulated material showing results of specimen surveys." Current Hist

Reviewed by R. H. Heindel
Am Hist R 54:444 Ja '49 350w

"In the matter of methodology in the social sciences, the book does not develop any new points, although it does reinforce some points which seem to have escaped many political scientists. . . The usefulness of the book would have been increased by an index." H. F. Gosnell
Am Pol Sci R 42:1246 D '48 380w
Reviewed by H. L. Childs
Ann Am Acad 260:208 N '48 600w
Booklist 45:5 S 1 '48
Current Hist 15:166 S '48 50w
Reviewed by Daniel Schwarz
N Y Times p4 Jl 25 '48 380w
School & Society 68:63 Jl 24 '48 50w

COULTER, ELLIS MERTON. The South during reconstruction, 1865-1877 [sponsored by the trustees of the Littlefield fund for southern history at the Univ. of Texas]. (History of the South, v8) 426p il $5 La. state univ. press
975 South—History. Reconstruction 48-5161

This book is volume VIII of a projected ten-volume history of the South from 1607 to the present. The author is professor of history at the University of Georgia. Bibliography. Index.

"This study sets a high standard for the forthcoming volumes in the series which, happily, will deal with less controversial periods and subjects. Though sometimes drawn too exclusively from Southern sources, the documentation is accurate and it is unlikely that future historians will materially alter the author's basic conclusions." W. A. Cate
+ Am Hist R 53:565 Ap '48 850w
Reviewed by W. H. Bennett
Am Pol Sci R 42:378 Ap '48 380w
Reviewed by F. L. Owsley
Ann Am Acad 258:153 Jl '48 750w
Booklist 44:200 F 1 '48

"This is not the first time that the history of the reconstruction period has been written. Yet rarely has the story been told with more wealth of incident and historical integrity. . . Not all the book is up to the high standard set in the sections that treat the south's postwar economy. The chapter on Freedman's Aid, for example, is pretty one-sided. There were shortcomings and scandals enough connected with that bureau, as we all know, but these did not comprise as nearly the whole story as Dr. Coulter's account suggests. . . These, however, are minor criticisms. On the whole, this is a grand piece of work." Paul Hutchinson
+ — Christian Century 65:110 Ja 28 '48 550w

"It presents the South's viewpoint on problems: the K.K.K., agriculture, labor. It is valuable as contributing information from that angle. Professor Coulter has had the vision to make it a very readable story in terms of people."
+ Current Hist 14:296 My '48 50w

Reviewed by W. J. Gold
Nation 166:51 Ja 10 '48 150w

"Some things about the series are already apparent from the announcements and this one-volume sample. . . Besides being Southern, the writers are academic. They are not politicians or even newspaper men; they are professional scholars and nearly all professors. From the list of names, and from this first volume, it may be assumed that the work will be technically competent, that it will be based on a fresh and careful study of the sources, and that it will have full bibliographies. . . As a guide to the long history of a great region it will be dependable and invaluable." Dumas Malone
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ja 4 '48 1250w

"Taking a difficult subject, one of the South's most distinguished historians has subjected it to fresh investigation and has come through with a competent, well-documented and readable treatment. Mr. Coulter's book with its excellent format and illustrations, is one to own, keep and reread. The new ten-volume series is well launched." J. G. Randall
+ N Y Times p1 D 21 '47 1350w

"We became aware in reading this book of some of the limitations of a purely sectional treatment; no doubt in subsequent volumes these limitations will be still more evident. At points it is hard to see the South clearly without seeing the North as well. . . These limitations are unescapable, and it is a tribute to the author that we do not often feel them. Professor Coulter's volume worthily inaugurates an important historical series, in which the general public, as well as the student, should take a keen interest." Allan Nevins
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:19 F 14 '48 3150w

School & Society 67:62 Ja 24 '48 20w

Reviewed by L. P. Stavisky
Social Educ 12:378 D '48 900w

Reviewed by M. B. Lissfelt
Social Studies 39:133 Mr '48 400w

Springf'd Republican p13B Ja 18 '48 950w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:173 Je '48 320w

"It is to be hoped that the remaining volumes of this series will revitalize the history of the South as much as this one does. If they do, we shall presently have a better understanding of the development of the region, and consequently of the nation, than we have had heretofore." T. P. Abernethy
Yale R n s 37:559 spring '48 750w

COUNT, EARL WENDEL. 4000 years of Christmas. 95p $2 Schuman

394.268 Christmas 48-9627

A professor of anthropology at Hamilton college has written a study of the origins of the Christmas celebration. Many of the Christmas traditions have grown out of pagan celebrations: the Roman Saturnalia; the festival of the Babylonian Marduk; and the ancient customs about the observance of the winter solstice and the birth of the solar year. Includes some Christmas carols. Index.

"The author is a professor of anthropology, qualified to write about these things accurately, even though he touches them lightly and with imagination. . . It is a very unusual little book, charming as well as informative. Many of the historical items about Christmas customs, and several of the Christmas carols that are included are not commonly known. One excellent quality of the book is that it exhibits these varied contributions not for the deflation of Christmas but for its enrichment." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 65:1368 D 15 '48 280w

"Reference library value chiefly."
+ Kirkus 16:547 O 1 '48 100w

"A fascinating study." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p5 D 5 '48 180w

Wis Lib Bul 45:10 Ja '49

COUSINS, MARGARET. Uncle Edgar and the reluctant saint; il. by Edgard Cirlin. 49p $1.50 Farrar, Straus

48-9033

Story of a six-year-old girl who had to spend Christmas on a snowbound Texas train, where her shy, black sheep uncle saved the day for her.

Kirkus 16:379 Ag 1 '48 120w

"Read this instead of A Christmas Carol, for a change." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 73:1510 O 15 '48 100w

"How Santa Claus found Sissy on the Brazos Valley and Central Railroad is told delightfully in the first person. The story will amuse older boys and girls and their elders, especially their elders. The author writes humorously and presents amazingly well the feelings of a child." H. A. Masten
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 19 '48 230w

"It is not to be read aloud to children until that time when they have given up protecting their parents against the knowledge that there is no Santa Claus. Then the story . . . will waken a deeper realization of St. Nick's real significance." E. L. Buell
N Y Times p5 D 5 '48 100w

COVE, JOSEPH WALTER (LEWIS GIBBS, pseud). Sheridan; his life and his theatre; il. with 16 pages of half-tones. 280p $4 Morrow

B or 92 Sheridan, Richard Brinsley Butler 48-8326

"A sympathetic study of the eighteenth-century playwright who, for the greater part of his life, managed to bring off the apparently irreconcilable roles of theatre manager and active Parliamentarian. The emphasis is laid on Sheridan's long, strenuous, and financially, disastrous political career, which reflects his complex personality just as accurately as his plays do his era. Sheridan's private life, which was unkempt, is treated with commendable restraint." (New Yorker) Index.

"Lewis Gibbs tells 'poor dear Sherry's' story with scholarship and spirit, humor and discrimination, and a lively feeling for the period."
+ Atlantic 182:111 O '48 250w

Booklist 45:49 O 1 '48

"Mr. Gibbs is a sympathetic biographer, urbane and polished, with flashes of wit that would have delighted 'poor dear Sherry.'" Eric Forbes-Boyd
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 O 3 '47 600w

Reviewed by Leila Flower
Christian Science Monitor p15 O 28 '48 550w

Kirkus 16:354 Jl 15 '48 140w

"Sheridan is eminently good copy, and Mr. Lewis Gibbs takes full advantage of his opportunity without departing from the respectable canons of traditional biography by resort to the flashy lures of the scoop journalist." H. B. C.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 11 '47 180w

Reviewed by John Waller
New Statesman & Nation 34:457 D 6 '47 600w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 14 '48 900w

"Mr. Gibbs has managed the difficult and complex biography extraordinarily well, catching the charm and recklessness of the Sheridan personality and the spirit of his age admirably.

COVE, J. W.—Continued
It is a full and complete book, a sturdy work, but never, happily, heavy reading." T. Q. Curtiss

+ N Y Times p4 D 19 '48 1350w

"A well-balanced piece of work."

+ New Yorker 24:102 O 2 '48 100w

Reviewed by Francis Mason

Sat R of Lit 31:15 S 25 '48 650w

"This analysis is probably as good as any that will be made of Sheridan's life. It is made clearly, pleasantly and unostentatiously, in a style that is sometimes trite but often has a well directed force that suits the period Mr. Gibbs is writing about." Philip Trower

+ Spec 179:534 O 24 '47 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p476 S 20 '47 900w

COWARD, NOEL PIERCE. Peace in our time; a play in two acts and eight scenes. 221p $2.75 Doubleday

822 48-9360

A dramatization of what might have happened in Great Britain if the Germans had succeeded in the invasion and occupation of England.

Booklist 45:117 D 1 '48

Kirkus 16:500 S 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by Lewis Funke

N Y Times p20 Ja 16 '49 180w

"Except for some heavy-breathing passages of patriotic fervor and some gunplay at the end, the play makes tame reading. Mr. Coward is more at home in the shallower waters of artificial comedy."

— New Yorker 24:166 N 20 '48 80w

Wis Lib Bul 45:11 Ja '49

COWELL, FRANK RICHARD. Cicero and the Roman republic; with a foreword by Allan Nevins; 56 il. in photogravure and 15 isotype charts in colour. 306p $5 Chanticleer

B or 92 Cicero, Marcus Tullius. Rome—History 48-9161

A combined biography of Cicero and an attempt to evaluate the Roman Republic in the light of modern social and economic studies. Illustrated with photographs and maps. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:86 N 1 '48

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 30 '48 390w

Reviewed by M. I. Finley

N Y Times p3 D 19 '48 900w

"The author has really written three books in one—a rise, decline, and fall of the Roman republic; a biography of Cicero; and a cultural anthropology, in which he throws as much light as possible on every aspect of Roman life, from shipbuilding to municipal politics and public health. An excellent work, copiously illustrated."

+ New Yorker 24:131 O 23 '48 120w

"Mr. Cowell writes with authority and distinction. His 'Cicero and the Roman Republic' is sumptuously illustrated and includes colored diagrams and maps showing the structure of the government and the growth of the Roman power. As the title suggests, the book is not primarily a biography of Cicero. It is rather a study of the development of Rome and the government of the Republic, with Cicero eventually emerging as the central figure, although hardly coming alive. . . The conclusion is a stimulating essay on the decay of the Republic and the rise of Caesar's autocracy." H. J. Haskell

+ Sat R of Lit 31:11 D 18 '48 1400w

School & Society 68:272 O 16 '48 20w

"This is intended as a popular book; there is not a sentence of Latin, still less of Greek, from beginning to end, and not a word about 'sources.' But it is popular in the best sense of the word. . . It is unfortunate, therefore, that its faults are a lack of freshness, a somewhat stodgy orthodoxy and an unfamiliarity with important recent work on the last century of the Republic. To tell the whole story from 510 B.C., with military, constitutional and economic history, Geist and all, in 300 pages, is hardly feasible anyhow, and Mr. Cowell would have been wiser to narrow his period, and instead of this in places inevitably text-bookish gallop through five centuries, to concentrate on the vital Ciceronian age. . . All this sounds harsh; it must not be taken to detract from the great merits of the book as an honest, orthodox, well-produced and beautifully illustrated piece of work, containing many good things, such as a comparison of the Roman and British constitutions and a discussion of income-scales and costs of living." J. A. Crook

+ — Spec 181:248 Ag 20 '48 650w

"This book is a well-informed, thoughtful and powerful essay on the development of Rome as a world Power and the disintegration of its traditional constitution."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p501 S 4 '48 650w

COWIE, ALEXANDER. Rise of the American novel. 877p $5 Am. bk.

813.09 American fiction—History and criticism 48-2260

"This volume presents materials for a critical history of the American novel from the beginning to the latter part of the nineteenth century, together with a concluding chapter intended as a rough indication of developments to the present time. It is not a complete and exhaustive study of all writers who have employed the novel form: such a work would require far more space. Rather, this book attempts to indicate the evolution of the American novel by means of comparatively full treatments of representative writers: all the major novelists, most of the secondary figures, and a considerable sprinkling of writers whose absolute value is very slight." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Chicago Sun p7X Ag 22 '48 90w

Reviewed by T. E. Kalem

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 22 '48 1500w

"This solid, informative and very readable history of the American novel is an excellent contribution to modern scholarship." Maxwell Geismar

+ N Y Times p6 Je 27 '48 1100w

"The temptation to write an unfavorable review of this book is great, but fortunately it is offset by the impulse to be enthusiastic about its author's enthusiasms. . . The result is an informed and discriminating account of American novels and novelists by a reader who enjoys a good story at the same time that he is critical of its shortcomings, and who is able to communicate both his enjoyment and his criticism. Because he is interested mainly in the gift of story-telling, Mr. Cowie is best when his author is most highly endowed with that gift. . . There are few literary histories that give pleasure in the reading, and this is one of the few. Mr. Cowie's lack of dogmatism and his faith in his own responses make his book an invitation to learning, even though it is neither the first nor the last word on the subject." R. E. Spiller

+ Sat R of Lit 31:19 Je 26 '48 650w

"This is no ordinary textbook; for though it is written with full apparatus of bibliography and notes and the text is as balanced and exhaustive as a good scholar's work should be, it is also an extremely readable book." H. L. Varley

+ Springf'd Republican p10B Je 20 '48 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p17 Ja 8 '49 2600w

"Six major authors—Cooper, Hawthorne, Melville, Mark Twain, Howells, and James—are treated in separate chapters that fill about half this volume; the rest is devoted to lesser writers, who are studied with a thoroughnss greater than they always deserve. It is a pity that so much of Mr. Cowie's valuable scholarship is buried in the hundred pages of notes at the end of the book, numbered by chapters but with no running head to guide the reader—an indefensible publishing practice. The revisions of critical reputation seem not particularly startling." G. S. Haight

Yale R n s 37:760 summer '48 900w

COWLING, DONALD JOHN, and DAVIDSON, CARTER. Colleges for freedom; a study of purposes, practices and needs. 180p $3 Harper

378 Colleges and universities. Education, Higher 47-11832

Study of the four-year liberal arts college, which takes into consideration the plant, faculty and students, curricula, and ideals. There are suggestions as to a satisfactory college, with its finances, staff, courses, and activities. Index.

Booklist 44:227 Mr 1 '48

Current Hist 14:37 Ja '48 40w

Kirkus 15:592 O 15 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 9 '48 200w

"It would be obvious to any reader that the book, 'Colleges for Freedom,' is the product of experienced men. Not in recent years has the subject, the liberal-arts college, been treated with such clarity and conciseness. It is refreshing to read in this era the forthright statements made in 'Colleges for Freedom' on the place of religion in a modern age." D. A. Weaver

+ School & Society 67:270 Ap 3 '48 900w

"Primarily for those seriously interested in the purposes, practices and needs of institutions for higher learning. Some readers may here find the standards by which to judge the college or university which they seek to enter, while others reading as college alumni may find understanding of many of the policies of college administrators experienced as undergraduates." S. B. Shear

+ Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 70w

"'Colleges for Freedom' is published at a time when democracy, as Americans interpret it, is being challenged as never before and, bv implication, our system of education. Yet I find in this book little criticism of the pattern which has been followed with scant change for the past twenty-five years. There is no discussion of more effective ways of developing creative scholarship, social responsibility, breadth of knowledge to meet newly discovered needs. The standard practices in teaching methods go almost unquestioned." Constance Warren

Survey G 37:266 My '48 650w

COX, OLIVER CROMWELL. Caste, class and race; a study in social dynamics; introd. by Joseph S. Roucek. 624p $7.50 Doubleday

323.3 Caste. Class distinction. Race problems 48-338

Study of social, class, and racial friction in the present day. The author is professor of sociology and economics at Tuskegee Institute. The book won the George Washington Carver award. Bibliography. Index.

"There may be those who will disagree with Professor Cox's allusion to assimilation as a solution of the race problem but there will probably be wide agreement that he has produced a stimulating work. He has amassed a wealth of material and assimilated it into a logical whole. It will undoubtedly be received as one of the most scholarly and comprehensive approaches to race relations that is now available." S. W. Blizzard

+ Am Soc R 13:357 Je '48 1050w

"This is an ambitious and imposing work, heavily documented and voluminous. In the hands of a scholar whose critical faculties are on the alert it can be very useful in providing pertinent facts, wise observations, and stimulating suggestions. Its point of view, as might be expected, is liberal and humanitarian. But tested by the canons of pure scholarship, it presents certain serious defects." H. P. Fairchild

— + Ann Am Acad 256:248 Mr '48 450w

Booklist 44:243 Mr 15 '48

"To one who approaches this book, as did this reviewer, with the assumption that here he will find an objective, scholarly examination of these three social phenomena, as seen from the other side of the 'color line,' the experience of reading it is likely to be both surprising and disappointing. For although the work is scholarly in its comprehensive drawing upon the literature of the subject, and in the author's capable handling of his material, it is far from being either objective or restrained. . . That this work makes contributions of real value to the understanding of class, caste, and race there is no doubt. But this reviewer fears Dr. Cox has harmed much more than he has helped the cause of those, both Negro and white, who are plodding patiently toward solution of the American race problem." E. B. Orr

— + Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 6 '48 450w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

— Current Hist 14:172 Mr '48 850w

"The publication of this work . . . must be regarded as a major event in the American social sciences, for it develops a bold, convincing, and usable theory of race relations. [It] must be appraised on the merits of its theoretical analyses and formulations rather than upon its readability as a book. The argument is elaborate, detailed, closely documented, based upon a merciless logic and a profound analysis. Naturally such an approach to the problem of race relations does not make for easy reading. Furthermore, the race problem is deeply incrusted with layers of false assumptions and shabby rationalizations." Carey McWilliams

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ja 25 '48 1250w

"The last section of the book is chiefly about the race problem in this country. These chapters offer useful fact and judgment, although the good is obscured by combat dust. The author argues bitterly with W. Lloyd Warner, Gunnar Myrdal and others who propose a caste theory explanation for the position of the American Negro. Professor Cox may be right, but the reader is left bewildered by his display of anger, sarcasm and sophistry. The chief value of 'Caste, Class and Race' will be as a compendium of conflicting obiter dicta about grave social problems. There are more than a thousand quotations drawn from a wide variety of sources. Unfortunately, the defects of the study outweigh its merits." G. L. Joughin

— + N Y Times p6 Ja 18 '48 700w

Reviewed by M. C. Hill

Social Forces 27:168 D '48 1250w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Hollow needle. 242p $2.50 Knopf 48-8142

Detective story.

Kirkus 16:348 Jl 15 '48 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 S 19 '48 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p41 N 28 '48 220w

"A workmanlike job of the medium-hard-bitten sort."

New Yorker 24:120 S 25 '48 100w

"No alert reader will register the least surprise when the old boy gets himself done in but it will take a really alert reader to spot the murderer before Kent does. Alert no end is Kent." E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 17 '48 140w

Sat R of Lit 31:36 N 20 '48 40w

COXE, GEORGE HARMON. Venturous lady. 245p $2.50 Knopf 48-6066

Detective story.

Kirkus 16:76 F 15 '48 70w

COXE, G. H.—Continued

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Mr 21 '48 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p30 Mr 21 '48 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 11 '48 30w

"Top-notcher."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:35 Mr 27 '48 40w

COYLE, GRACE LONGWELL. Group experience and democratic values. 185p $2.75 Womans press

374.2 Group work 48-5427

"This book is essentially a collection of addresses and articles on the general theme of group work in recreation-education agencies. The author's purpose is to provide 'a stimulus to improve our common social skills and some encouragement to struggle for the democratizing of every corner of our Great Society.'" (El School J) Bibliography.

"The subject is so timely and the need so urgent that the reviewer is disappointed in the author's apparent disinclination to reorganize her previously prepared material and to weld it into a unified treatment that would go beyond the possibilities of a conference platform or magazine article. Despite this shortcoming, however, the book is a good introduction to the practical applications of democracy in recreation-education social agencies." F. J. Estvan
+ — El School J 48:519 My '48 700w

School & Society 67:111 F 7 '48 10w

"'Group Experience and Democratic Values' is written with sensitivity, simplicity and humility by a practitioner and teacher who possesses profound knowledge, rich experience, and great skill in groupwork." H. D. Green
+ Survey 84:237 Jl '48 440w

COZZENS, JAMES GOULD. Guard of honor. 631p $3.50 Harcourt

48-8544

A story of three days in 1943 in a huge air training camp in Florida. The events of those days—a near-race riot, the deaths of a group of paratroopers, a visitor from Washington, etc.—are summed up when the commanding officer remarks "Our publicity hasn't been too good this week."

"The novel holds some of the very best writing James Gould Cozzens has given us. Yet I am obliged to add that as a narrative it runs all the risks which have tormented other writers when they have attempted to bring such vast and diffuse activities within the unity and focus of a book." Edward Weeks
+ — Atlantic 182:108 D '48 300w

Booklist 45:51 O 1 '48

Reviewed by Serrell Hillman
Chicago Sun p59 N 3 '48 320w

Reviewed by Ralph Goodale
Christian Century 66:20 Ja 5 '49 350w

Reviewed by Melvin Maddocks
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 30 '48 850w

Reviewed by E. F. Meagher
Commonweal 49:72 O 29 '48 700w

"A long book—not always easy reading, with minor incident piled on minor incident, but the whole building up to an unforgettable pattern. Cozzens writes with a taut violence at times; and at other times with an expansive warmth—an unusual combination which makes for roundness of impression."
+ Kirkus 16:405 Ag 15 '48 340w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson
Library J 73:1192 S 1 '48 100w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 167:501 O 30 '48 90w

"His writing has always been traditional and as it has proceeded it has become more rather than less traditional and each novel has been better than its predecessor. 'Guard of Honor', his longest and his fullest book, is also his best." Mark Schorer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 10 '48 1000w

"As is his custom, Mr. Cozzens looks at his characters with warm understanding, with humor and with tolerance for their failings. Several passages of 'Guard of Honor' are exciting as a story and—again this is usual—the author's style is easy and flowing, with the underemphasis that makes for drama. It is necessary to say, however, that 'Guard of Honor' is long and that it not infrequently drags." Lewis Nichols
+ — N Y Times p5 O 3 '48 950w

"Despite its size, 'Guard of Honor' is compact and stringently disciplined. . . Cozzens, by throwing a light on his characters that is brighter, perhaps, than he is aware, establishes between himself and his readers an unmistakable kinship. It is toward an unselfconscious acceptance of this kinship that Cozzens moves in the best pages of 'Guard of Honor,' and it is these pages that give a guarantee of richer work to come." Brendan Gill
+ New Yorker 24:126 O 9 '48 1500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 25 '48 900w

"The emotion and impact of this book, which are very great, come out of the tangencies and conflicts, the interplay of personalities made vivid, immediate, and memorable by Mr. Cozzens's complete, continuous command of his material. 'Guard of Honor,' it seems to me, is the finest work so far of an absolutely first-rate American writer." John Woodburn
+ Sat R of Lit 31:15 O 2 '48 900w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p7C N 14 '48 360w

Time 52:110 O 25 '48 900w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 38:382 winter '49 270w

CRABB, ALEXANDER RICHARD. Hybrid-corn makers: prophets of plenty. 331p il $3 Rutgers univ. press

633.15 Corn (maize) 47-7265

Discussion of the development and production of the hybrid corn which has materially increased the corn crop of this country. Many of the men who did the experimental work have helped the author in the preparation of this book. Index.

Booklist 44:179 Ja 15 '48

"The story which Richard Crabb has related in 'The Hybrid-Corn Makers' badly needed telling. It is an exciting tale, and fortunately it fell into the hands of a man who saw its drama. Moreover, he saw its importance in time to acquire the facts and piece together the threads of the story from the men who figured in it from the beginning." P. A. Waring
+ Nation 166:218 F 21 '48 500w

"It was not many years ago that Richard Crabb began his writing career as a correspondent for the Peoria Star. Now his book establishes him in the front ranks of agricultural writers. He has done a solid job on a solid topic and his literary performance is more than a cut or two above the usual disgraceful level of American farm journalism. However, in a future edition I would like to see him refer to a certain well-known historian as Francis Parkman rather than 'the historian, Parker.'" W. M. Teller
+ Sat R of Lit 31:26 Mr 27 '48 650w

"A complicated and important chapter in the history of genetics and agriculture is presented here accurately and in a popular manner."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:85 Mr '48 240w

CRABB, ALFRED LELAND. Home to the Hermitage; a novel of Andrew and Rachel Jackson. 318p $2.75 Bobbs

Jackson, Andrew—Fiction 48-1555

Historical novel made up of episodes in the lives of Andrew Jackson and his beloved wife, Rachel. The first episode is about their arrival at The Hermitage, nearly bankrupt; the last is about Rachel's death, just before Jackson's accession to the presidency.

Booklist 44:282 Ap 15 '48

"The profuse dialogue, assorted dialects—Negro, Scotch, French, rustic—and political shouts and murmurs sometimes give the novel the semblance of an earnest and high minded radio serial. Pleasant outdoor descriptions, careful details of the period, and a certain inherent pathos are decidedly to its credit, however. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ — Library J 73:395 Mr 1 '48 110w

"With his usual feeling for background and rich detail Mr. Crabb has made a romance of the story of two good and simple people, beleaguered by the world." Lorine Pruette

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 4 '48 400w

"Instead of undertaking a cycloramic canvas on a colossal scale Mr. Crabbe has chosen to do a genre painting with the Hermitage as its focus of interest. . . As for the love story of Jackson and his Rachel it cannot be said that he adds anything to what is already familiar, nor are his characterizations of the principals in the romance either original or three-dimensional. His efforts in this direction demonstrate again that writers of fiction—this side of genius, of course—are usually more successful with the characters of their own creation than with those they take directly from life. The real success of the novel is with such figures as Flag, the colored coachman, and his songs." Herschel Brickell

+ — N Y Times p21 Ap 4 '48 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 20 '48 160w

Wis Lib Bul 44:185 N '48

CRAF, JOHN RILEY. Survey of the American economy, 1940-1946. 217p $3.75 North River press, 311-319 W. 43d st, N.Y. 18

330.973 World war, 1939-1945—Economic aspects. U.S.—Economic conditions 48-339

"This book is a summary of the American economy from 1940 to 1946. It is arranged topically and takes up: National Defense, Conversion to War, Priorities and Allocations, Rationing, Raw materials, Agriculture, War Finance, Wages, Manpower, and Reconversion to Peace. . . It has a good index but lacks a bibliography." Social Studies

"The style of the book is journalistic, with a minimum of indication of sources. Virtually no analysis is attempted of the policies followed by the agencies discussed, and there is little indication of the controversies, public and private, that accompanied the actions of the agencies. The book would have been improved by the use of graphs and charts, of which there are none. This book will be useful to teachers of courses in elementary economic history and courses in the economics of war and peace, if such be still offered, as an account of the major wartime events on the economic front. Undoubtedly, as the years go by, its usefulness will grow, and economists with short memories will be grateful to Professor Craf for having written down and assembled so much data in such a short compass." F. S. Doody

+ — Am Econ R 38:450 Je '48 300w

"While it is designed to provide 'college students with a background of fact which is realistically sound and logically developed,' it should be of value to the general reader. . . An outstanding merit of the book is its lucidity." A. C. Bining

+ Social Studies 39:236 My '48 140w

CRAIG, HARDIN. Interpretation of Shakespeare. 400p $5 Citadel; text ed $3.75 Dryden

822.33 Shakespeare, William 48-6999

Analyses and discusses all of Shakespeare's thirty-two plays, the sonnets, and the long poems. The author is a professor at the University of North Carolina. Index.

Booklist 45:10 S 1 '48

"This volume will be of considerable interest to the average student of Shakespeare who has scholarly inclinations but who is impatient of the minor exactitudes and detail references which make such books so hard either to read or to consult. It very readily may become 'parallel reading' in most college Shakespeare courses. Recommended for college libraries and those public libraries which have a large student clientele." George Freedley

+ Library J 73:948 Je 15 '48 80w

"Long familiarity and meditation have not tarnished Shakespeare for Mr. Craig, largely, one suspects, because he is teacher as well as scholar. His comprehensive view is well-balanced, modest, informal, without pedantry; it is pervaded by an intimate affection, which, while not blind to flaws, usually shows Shakespeare's plays in the most favorable light. Any special pleading is always above board. If Mr. Craig is never brilliant in interpretation, he never strains for effect, and in an unassuming way he can be most penetrating. Especially fine is his discussion of the early histories and tragedies. . . The bitter plays, which have become a touchstone of modern criticism, Mr. Craig cannot stomach. . . These difficult plays make Mr. Craig so uncomfortable that he refuses to come to grips with the text." W. B. C. Watkins

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 1 '48 500w

"Unlike many scholars, Professor Craig considers 'King John' and 'Henry VIII' to have been written by Shakespeare; he even thinks 'King John' is a good play. His study is thoroughgoing, and without any of the obscurantism and crankiness of so many latter-day critics of Shakespeare, and by concentrating on the less well-known works he revives one's interest in the infrequently or never produced plays."

+ New Yorker 24:70 Jl 10 '48 100w

CRANE, MRS FRANCES (KIRKWOOD). Black Cypress. 212p $2.50 Random house

48-8969

Detective story.

"Having fought my way dutifully through two-thirds of Mrs. Crane's endeavor, I find nothing resembling elementary life about it."

— Chicago Sun D 3 '48 120w

"Skilled and sometimes scary."

+ Kirkus 16:457 S 1 '48 100w

"Miss Crane keeps it smooth as silk, whether she's guiding you through the more expensive Hollywood spots, giving you the creeps in the house of horror, or adding up fatalities at the end." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 N 7 '48 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p52 D 5 '48 190w

"Very glossy."

New Yorker 24:140 N 6 '48 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 21 '48 50w

Sat R of Lit 31:30 D 18 '48 60w

CRANE, MILTON, ed. Roosevelt era; with a foreword by Jonathan Daniels. standard ed 626p $4.75 Boni & Gaer

973.917 U.S.—History—1932-1945 47-12013

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"In total these excerpts are exceedingly well written. Except for the jarring inclusion of Mencken's memoirs of Bryan and Smith, they

CRANE, MILTON—Continued
well present the spirit as well as the ideology of the era. They are smoothly and fairly logically arranged in coherent fashion to provide an entertaining and valuable picture of the mind of the New Dealer." Frank Freidel
+ — Am Hist R 53:637 Ap '48 400w

Booklist 44:246 Mr 15 '48

"The reviewer has suggested that Mr. Crane fails to achieve his stated objective in this work. . . Of the 65 selections 18 are excerpts from the New Yorker. This is a fair indication of the editor's philosophy. A member of the English department at the University of Chicago, he apparently believes in the 'cult of fashionable sophistication.' Those who subscribe to this cult invariably exaggerate the insight of the New Yorker. Such is their privilege as persons, but not when compiling an anthology of writings on American life from 'every conceivable angle.' In Mr. Crane's book there is not a single quotation, except the one from Harper's, from any of our great American weeklies, monthlies or quarterlies. Quantitatively by sources, the editor's failure is even worse." J. D. Squires
— Christian Century 65:417 My 5 '48 1050w

"It would be foolish, of course, to quarrel too seriously with the editor (or with any other anthologist, for that matter) about his basis of selection. As a Roosevelt fan, however, perhaps the reviewer can gracefully suggest that Mr. Crane is the partisan rather than the historian of an era when he sets out to rationalize the obvious one-sidedness of his sixty-nine selections. . . While we are on the subject of selection, how does it happen that the religious life of the Roosevelt era is hardly so much as mentioned? Was the Roosevelt era a religious vacuum? . . Lest I forget, 'The Roosevelt Era' is fascinating reading and was responsible for my losing a lot of sleep." G. G. Higgins
+ — Commonweal 47:425 F 6 '48 850w

New Eng Q 21:287 Je '48 20w

"Mr. Crane explains that his purpose has not been 'to excerpt the finest literary works published while Mr. Roosevelt was President, but rather to assemble a coherent and connected group of materials for a social history of the age.' That this is a laudable and ambitious goal, few would deny. The resulting volume is an uneven, though generally engaging, anthology." J. W. Chase
+ — N Y Times p7 Ja 18 '48 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 29 '48 320w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith
Sat R of Lit 31:17 Ja 31 '48 200w

CRANE, THEODORE. Architectural construction; the choice of structural design. 414p il $6 Wiley

690 Building 47-12180

"This book will aid the designer in choosing the appropriate structural system and secondary structural elements on the basis of geographical location, site conditions, type of occupancy, equipment and architectural design." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:212 F 15 '48

"Presenting a resume of structural types now available in the United States, this book fills the void between a descriptive study of materials and types of construction and the final design of structural members."
+ Eng N 140:111 Ja 8 '48 60w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1376 O 1 '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:70 O '47

"The author of this volume has done an excellent job of selecting, assembling, and coordinating material for review and comparison. To the engineer the book is a guide to present architectural needs, and to the architect it brings into focus engineering data not readily available in compact form."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:228 Je '48 280w

CRANKSHAW, EDWARD. Russia and the Russians. 223p $3 Viking

914.7 Russia—Politics and government. National characteristics, Russian 48-5568

An English journalist and historian describes Soviet behavior in the light of Russian history and geography. "He takes the Russian system, police state and all, for granted, since the Russian people themselves do not question it. In the end, he counsels the Western democracies to stop making foolish laments about Russia and start thinking constructively, because that is what they are eventually going to have to do anyway." (New Yorker) No index.

Reviewed by Charles Prince
Ann Am Acad 260:184 N '48 800w

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 181:116 Ap '48 850w

Booklist 44:266 Ap 1 '48

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman
Chicago Sun Mr 11 '48 550w

Foreign Affairs 26:747 Jl '48 20w

+ Kirkus 15:687 D 15 '47 250w

"This book is an important contribution to the study of the Russian problem in Europe." M. P. Price
+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 2 '47 950w

Reviewed by Bernard Pares
Nation 166:506 My 8 '48 1500w

Reviewed by Richard Lauterbach
New Repub 118:22 Mr 8 '48 1700w

Reviewed by John Lawrence
New Statesman & Nation 34:54 Jl 19 '47 450w

"This is an impressionistic, unorthodox, highly civilized book. . . This is on the whole, however, a hopeful book." Joseph Barnes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 F 29 '48 800w

"Here is work so extraordniary in its penetration, so philosophical in its approach and so poetic in its execution that no review can even hope tc do more than suggest its remarkable qualities and homely merits. Crankshaw has not written just another book on Russia. . . Here is advanced a coherent and intellectual doctrine which explains not only the enigma of Russia, but the greater enigma which that involves—why we react to Russia as we do and why Russia reacts as she does to us." H. E. Salisbury
+ N Y Times p3 F 15 '48 1300w

"A thoughtful and, for a change, admirably impersonal study of the U.S.S.R.—one of the best since the war. The author, an Englishman, adds the analytic objectivity of a historian to the factual objectivity of a fine reporter."
+ New Yorker 23:99 F 21 '48 100w

Reviewed by R. G. Colodny
San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 29 '48 950w

"Mr. Crankshaw, a British journalist and historian, who had wartime service in Moscow, has not only read widely about the Russian past but has dispassionately observed the Russian present. He has written a brilliant essay." R. L. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 Ap 3 '48 1150w

"Mr. Edward Crankshaw . . . is vivid, emotional, impressionistic. He paints the historical background, stresses the importance of geography and climate, brilliantly analyses the Russian temperament. . . I suppose the real answer to Mr. Crankshaw is that in practice all efforts at understanding are repulsed with dogmatic rigidity and cold hostility by the rulers of the Kremlin. His own advances, I imagine, will meet a similar fate. Perhaps it is the knowledge of this fact which leads him to close his book with a chapter which is vague, contradictory and deeply disappointing." Paul Winterton
+ — Spec 179:114 Jl 25 '47 270w

"This is an honest work on a problematical country, and it should inject a healthy amount of good sense and plain facts into discussions about Russian affairs, if those who discuss them will take the time to read the author's pages."

+ Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 11 '48 600w

"In spite of its loquacious, meandering, impressionistic style, this is a fascinating book; it is difficult to put down, and it leaves on the reader's mind a confused but satisfying feeling of what the Russian is like."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p375 Jl 26 '47 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 44:184 N '48

CRAVEN, WESLEY FRANK, ed. See United States. Air force, Department of. Office of air force history. Army air forces in World war II.

CRAWFORD, JOHN EDMUND, and WOODWARD, LUTHER ELLIS. Better ways of growing up; psychology and mental hygiene for youth. 270p il $3 Muhlenberg press

150.13 Adolescence. Psychology, Applied
48-5709

"Written for the teen-ager to help him examine carefully his personality, find his good and bad points, and improve those which need changing. A child's development is reviewed and explained; considerable space is devoted to the early teens; and the choice of vocation, love, and marriage are also included. The authors have emphasized the importance of religions in the lives of young people." (Booklist) Bibliography.

Reviewed by F. E. Merrill
Am Soc R 13:786 D '48 100w

Booklist 44:318 My 15 '48

"The authors have expert knowledge in their field and a wholesomely religious point of view." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 65:631 Je 23 '48 70w

"It is written simply and frankly, but is never 'preachy.'" W. L. C.
+ Churchman 162:3 Je 1 '48 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '48

"Though this reviewer does not agree with all the assumptions and conclusions, here is good advice, comments on religion, and a good bibliography. Recommended for young people 12-19." G. E. Cartmell
Library J 73:486 Mr 15 '48 90w

CREDLE, ELLIS. My pet, Peepelo; phot. by Charles Townsend. 62p $2 Oxford 48-7289

In order to earn money to buy clothes and toys at the market stalls, little Tivo, a Mexican boy, raised a turkey. After seeing all the wonderful things in the market place Tivo refused to sell his pet, as he realized that he was bringing back from the market what he wanted most in all the world—his pet Peepelo. For grades 3-5.

Booklist 44:358 Je 15 '48

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 168:221 D '48 70w

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Jl 24 '48 60w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 27 '48 190w

"Ellis Credle displays here, as in other books, a sensitive understanding of a child's feelings, whether he is a Mexican or a North American or a child of any other country." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:275 Jl '48 80w

"Small listeners will like the pictures as illustrating a might-be-true story. . . Older children will find the documentary photographs informative and entertaining, with detail which gives them more than usual appeal."
+ Kirkus 16:234 My 15 '48 100w

"Photographs by Charles Townsend add a real and sensitive quality, completely authentic. If scenes seem theatrical, it is only because Taxco itself and its landscape are really that beautiful. Recommended." E. J. Anttonen
+ Library J 73:954 Je 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by Irmengarde Eberle
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Jl 4 '48 190w

"The good taste, humor and skill with which Charles Townsend's excellent photographs and Ellis Credle's text present Tivo's story make this book a genuine contribution to understanding between Mexico and the States." S. C. Gross
+ N Y Times p20 Je 27 '48 170w

CREED, WILL. Sword of Il Grande. 404p $3 Little 48-2609

Fifteenth century Italy is the background for this novel of life in Vincenda, a democratic city. Gano Grande, swordsman from the North, hired by the Gonfalonier to head the police, is the hero. With the return of Uriel, adopted son of the Gonfalonier, a note of discord is struck, which is not conquered until Uriel's attempt to unseat his father has been overcome by Il Grande.

"This is more definitely in the Costain—rather than the Shellabarger vein, and will appeal to people who like tremendous detail and a rather slow pace of story. And in retrospect, The Sword of Il Grande has potentials of dramatic action which only come off here and there."
Kirkus 16:151 Mr 15 '48 200w

"This is the first novel of a young Pennsylvanian who writes with considerable ease and draws his characters with clearness. . .Recommended." Katherine Shorey
+ Library J 73:944 Je 15 '48 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Jl 18 '48 110w

"In this story, Mr. Creed makes out a good case for fifteenth-century Florence as the City of Opportunity of its day. . . [It] has something in common with a Western too, in the forthright way that it makes its points." Catharine Brody
N Y Times p5 Jl 4 '48 360w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p10A Jl 18 '48 310w

Wis Lib Bul 44:149 S '48

CREEKMORE, HUBERT. The welcome. 307p $3 Appleton
48-9034

A novel of marriage and friendship. When Don returns to Mississippi after working in New York, he finds himself the center of an emotional whirlpool. Jim, his unhappily married friend, now wants his undivided friendship; his neurotic mother whines for his complete attention; and Isabel desires him as a husband. It is Isabel who succeeds in showing him how to live successfully.

"A well integrated novel of character as well as of emotion."
+ Kirkus 16:452 S 1 '48 210w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 167:610 N 27 '48 800w

"The novel is neatly written. . . But the 'problem' isn't kept sufficiently within the characters; the boredom and disgust seem to affect the author as well." John Farrelly
— + New Repub 119:27 N 15 '48 230w

"Mr. Creekmore's second novel is most rewarding in those passages, almost incidental to his main theme, in which he probes searchingly into the pervading sterility of life in a small Southern town. . . Mr. Creekmore writes well, with sensitivity and with a craftsman's respect for words, but as an exploration of human relationships 'The Welcome' is somewhat less than profound." Coleman Rosenberger

CREEKMORE, HUBERT—Continued
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N 21 '48 450w

"From beginning to end the story moves logically toward its inevitable, though unsatisfying, climax. Generally speaking, the characters are clearly developed, and if they do not seem to be altered by the crises of the plot, they do at least seem to be involved in them. Most fault might be found with Jim, who remains unbelievable throughout. As an examination of modern marriage 'The Welcome' fails because Mr. Creekmore has too obviously arranged his facts to prove his conclusion." W. E. Preece
— + N Y Times p42 N 21 '48 400w

"The author's probing into what's wrong with matrimony, or with this particular example, is intelligent and earnest but, by and large, exhausting."
— + New Yorker 24:129 O 23 '48 160w

Reviewed by John Woodburn
Sat R of Lit 31:16 N 13 '48 750w

CREIGHTON, THOMAS HAWK, ed. See Progressive architecture (periodical). Homes

CRISPIN, EDMUND, pseud. See Montgomery, R. B.

CRISS, MILDRED (MRS G. L. CATLIN). Jefferson's daughter. 278p il $3 Dodd
B or 92 Randolph, Martha (Jefferson) 48-5840

A fictionized biography of Martha Jefferson, the oldest daughter of Thomas Jefferson. It begins shortly after her mother's death, before Martha was in her teens, and takes her thru her days at Monticello, in France with her father, and back again to Virginia where she married Thomas Randolph. Bibliography.

Booklist 44:339 Je 1 '48

"The incidents of the French Revolution, especially the first days during which Jefferson and Martha were trapped in Paris, are dramatically told and historically good. Writing is uneven at times, but older girls will enjoy this colorful account of a very charming girl. Recommended." H. M. Brogan
+ — Library J 73:562 Ap 1 '48 70w

"Sixteen pages of portraits and well chosen contemporary pictures heighten family feeling in this the best of Mildred Criss's historical biographies for the teens." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 9 '48 270w

"Older girls will like this story and will gain from it an authentic picture of eighteenth-century Virginia life and of the many great political figures which it produced." Elizabeth Hodges
+ N Y Times p12 Ag 15 '48 180w
Wis Lib Bul 44:107 My '48

CRITE, ALLAN ROHAN, il. Three spirituals from earth to heaven. [163p] $3.95 Harvard univ. press
741 Negro spirituals. Drawings 48-8719

The three spirituals are: Nobody knows the trouble I see; Swing low, sweet chariot; and Heaven (Everybody's talking about heaven, aren't you going there?). Each phrase is illustrated with large brush-and-ink drawings by this American Negro artist.

"Moving and magnificent. Crite evidently draws his inspiration from many historic sources. There are echoes of Byzantine splendor, of William Blake's graphic mysticism, of contemporary Roman Catholic ritual, and of the cottonfield experiences of the American Negro, all well synthesized in the artist's creative imagination. These strong drawings form an eloquent commentary on and elaboration of the familiar spirituals which furnish their text." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 66:48 Ja 12 '49 180w

"An exceedingly moving interpretation of the Negro's dejection, aspiration, and exaltation. Riffling the pages, one hears the harmonies, studying the careful symbolism one tries to understand. An interesting conception, admirably executed. Should take its place with books on Negro art as well as with books on spirituals." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 74:61 Ja 1 '49 70w
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ja 16 '49 300w

CROCKER, WILLIAM. Growth of plants; twenty year's research at Boyce Thompson institute. 459p il col pl $10 Reinhold
581.134 Growth (plants) 48-2197

"The Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research was founded in 1924 for the purpose of conducting basic research on various aspects of plant growth. This volume, prepared by the Director of the Institute, gives a summarized, critical account of the research work carried on at the Institute since its inception. The book is well illustrated with photographs which depict the results of experimentation on plant development, and each chapter concludes with a two-to four-page bibliography." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:819 My 15 '48 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:44 My '48

"Dr. Crocker has written a book of interest to laymen and of great value to scientists and practical workers. Many laymen will be surprised to discover how much is still unknown about fundamental processes of growth. They will find this an unvarnished history with none of the frills of popular science literature. Dr. Crocker is a fine scientist, as well as a fine administrator, but a plain writer." Robert Simpson
+ N Y Times p26 S 12 '48 360w

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLS. Silence for the murderer. 245p $2.50 Dodd 48-8696

Detective story.

"A disappointingly scrappy tale from the usually careful Freeman Wills Crofts." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun O 8 '48 110w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 S 19 '48 140w

"As a crime puzzle, cleverly solved, this story would be hard to beat, but the author has chosen to give it an ending which can best be described as corny."
+ — N Y Times p40 N 7 '48 140w

"The treatment is pedestrian throughout, but the problem is competently presented when the author finally gets to it."
New Yorker 24:110 S 11 '48 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 3 '48 100w

"Good grade British."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:39 S 18 '48 40w

CROFTS, FREEMAN WILLS. Young Robin Brand, detective. 208p $2.50 Dodd 48-5567

Detective story for boys by a well-known British writer of detective fiction.

"'Young Robin Brand' is a plain, able and happily uncondescending tale, one that belongs high in the very small list of detective stories for the young which are worth the attention of the young." James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun p63 F 13 '48 230w

"Though the plot, which includes a kidnapping and capture of thieves with the boys as detectives, is very exciting, the English settings, terms, and slang may make the book less appealing to American boys. Recommended with these reservations for ages 10-14." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 73:562 Ap 1 '48 70w

"Inspector French himself comes into the case. The only concession to age is that there is no actual murder: there is plenty of danger, but the prime interest, as in all detective novels of the solid school is in detection rather than in crime." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 22 '48 240w

"The story is worked out plausibly, but except for a suspenseful climax American boys will likely find Mr. Crofts' English pace a little too leisurely." E. L. B.

N Y Times p34 F 29 '48 140w

"The characters, including the two boys, are types rather than people, and there is not one ray of humor. If Mr. Crofts wants to build up readers among young people, he will have to do quite a bit better."

— Sat R of Lit 31:35 Ap 10 '48 180w

CROMIE, ROBERT ALLEN. Chicago. See Haug, A. E.

CROMWELL, OLIVER. Writings and speeches; with an introduction, notes and a sketch of his life by Wilbur Cortez Abbott [and others]. v4 1085p $7.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 (37-11692)

"The publication of Volume 4 of Wilbur Cortez Abbott's 'Writings and Speeches of Cromwell' marks the completion of an impressive historical undertaking, long under way: Volume 1 appeared in 1937. Prof. Abbott did not live long enough to see the final volume come off the press but he did live long enough to put the finishing touches on it. Taken together this set of four massive volumes on Oliver Cromwell is a formidable and permanent monument to the author's patience and erudition." (Springf'd Republican) For volumes 1 to 3 see Book Review Digest 1937, 1939, 1945.

Reviewed by Ernest Barker

Am Hist R 53:530 Ap '48 800w

Reviewed by M. M. Knappan

Christian Century 64:1333 N 5 '47 420w

Reviewed by H. R. Trevor-Roper

New Statesman & Nation 35:440 My 29 '48 1100w

"Every one interested in the golden age of military adventurers, in problems of revolutionary and totalitarian government, in the character and career of one of the most discussed and enigmatic of dictators, will be glad that Professor Abbott was able to complete his collection of Cromwelliana. His death last spring robs the English-speaking world of a great scholar and a kind gentleman. His reputation rests firmly on the achievement of this immense work and is enhanced by the grateful recollections of generations of students and friends." Caroline Robbins

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p40 D 7 '47 850w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 390w

Times [London] Lit Sup p158 Mr 20 '48 1500w

"Accurate, dispassionate, and impartial history built on the finest of literary traditions. Although essentially history for historians, the narrative can well be read with enjoyment by others."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:150 Je '48 650w

"Towards the end of this magnum opus a few signs of haste can be detected. The account of Oliver's lying in state is more hesitant than any other passage in the whole work. Perhaps Dr. Abbott felt that soon the night would come when no man can work. Maybe for this reason he did not attempt any general appreciation of the Puritan leader to whose life he had devoted so many years. Instead, he substituted the essay on 'The Fame of Cromwell' which first appeared in this Review in 1913, and which he brought up to date. He shows how Cromwell's reputation has varied from age to age according to the prevalent political philosophy. The only safe prophecy about future interpretations is that they are likely to be of little worth unless they are based upon the massive scholarship of Wilbur Cortez Abbott." Godfrey Davies (Review of v3-4)

+ Yale R n s 37:375 winter '48 1250w

CRONE, ANNE. Bridie Steen; with an introd by Lord Dunsany. 304p $3 Scribner

48-8073

Bridie was a gentle child living in a poor section of Ireland. Because she was an orphan, she was being brought up by her mother's austere, devout Catholic sister, who could not forget that Bridie's father was a Protestant. In her teens Bridie went to live with her wealthy Protestant grandmother, who felt as strongly about Catholics as the aunt did about Protestants. The battle for Bridie's soul ends in tragedy.

"Unquestionably a fine, beautifully written book."

+ Atlantic 182:110 O '48 210w

Booklist 45:32 S 15 '48

"Lord Dunsany makes the comment that 'there is no clear indication in the book as to whether Miss Anne Crone is a Protestant or a Catholic.' Yet it must be said that, whatever her religious affiliation, she seems to favor opinions quite unacceptable to well instructed Catholics. Moreover, although both her Catholics and her Protestants are odious, narrow-minded persons, there is a subtle difference in her treatment of the two groups. Protestant beliefs, as compared with Catholic, appear to be much less objectionable; and the priest, a shadowy figure in the background, is much more harmful than the minister in the influence he exercises upon his flock." Joseph McSorley

Cath World 168:168 N '48 400w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 9 '48 550w

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 48:553 S 17 '48 240w

Kirkus 16:269 Je 1 '48 140w

"The charm of this simple tale lies in its unaffected style and in the author's sympathetic handling of her characters. Highly recommended." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 73:1088 Ag '48 110w

"It is a first novel, and surer of its separate parts than of their fusion as a whole. The dialogue is stilted, too argumentative, and misses the cadences of speech. Motivation occasionally depends exclusively on the general conflict instead of the character's individuality. But it is a large, rich subject and the author has exploited it to arrange the setting for tragedy." John Farrelly

New Repub 119:24 S 20 '48 1100w

"One can imagine the sensation such a story would have made in any literary period from Charles Lever to Mrs. Humphrey Ward. Our current appraisal of 'Bridie Steen' will more probably be based on its capacity to warm our hearts rather than afflict our consciences. . . But its real strength is in its characterizations; not since Jane Eyre has there been a keener portrayal of the simple, courageous girl beset by strong attachments both sacred and profane." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ag 29 '48 700w

"Open 'Bridie Steen' anywhere and you realize in a few pages that you are in the presence of an artist who writes English prose in the great tradition, who can create character, atmosphere, tension, and above all tell

CRONE, ANNE—Continued
a story—as stories were told by England's master-novelists a hundred years ago. Indeed, on laying down 'Bridie Steen' you are left with the impression that its author has not read a work of fiction written in this century." James Stern

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 22 '48 850w

"Miss Crone's style bears a disconcerting resemblance to that of 'Little Lord Fauntleroy,' and in it she makes use of certain Anglo-Saxon four-letter words scarcely to be found anywhere else in contemporary writing, among them 'fain' and 'loth.' Lord Dunsany, who provides an introduction, has found it in his heart to affirm that this is 'one of the great novels of our time, not quite to be forgotten in a hundred years.' The key word here is 'quite.' "

New Yorker 24:102 S 11 '48 250w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 O 3 '48 170w

"I find it a novel that is significant and well-conceived with characters that live in the reader's mind after he has finished it and a landscape that is rendered with affectionate familiarity. Still, Anne Crone is a young woman and it has been given to only one or two in literary history to achieve a great novel in their thirties and a first novel at that. But one is glad that Lord Dunsany came out with that statement; it is over-enthusiastic, but in these days of cost calculation it has helped to get a fine novel published." Padraic Colum

+ Sat R of Lit 31:8 S 4 '48 1100w

"Told in a graceful, leisurely prose which gives Bridie Steen an old-fashioned, 19th Century quality found in few recent novels. But even on so quaint a dish, novelists today would not dare to serve up so cloying a mixture of Irish whimsy, gooey romance and tear-jerking melodrama."

Time 52:78 Ag 30 '48 500w

Wis Lib Bul 44:185 N '48

Reviewed by Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 38:383 winter '49 230w

CRONIN, ARCHIBALD JOSEPH. Shannon's way. 313p $3 Little

48-7356

A sequel to the Green Years (Book Review Digest 1944), this novel describes Robert Shannon's experiences as a medical research worker and his love affair with a girl of different religious faith.

Booklist 44:382 Jl 15 '48

Reviewed by M. P. Corcoran
Cath World 167:474 Ag '48 400w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p8X Jl 18 '48 360w

Christian Century 65:1177 N 3 '48 380w

Reviewed by George Miles
— Commonweal 48:479 Ag 27 '48 290w

"Dr. Shannon is an oddly prickly individual; he tells his own story, and neither in his own telling nor in the reactions of others in his story does one feel any warmth of affection, scarcely even liking for him. . . I felt it one of Cronin's lesser efforts."

Kirkus 16:239 My 15 '48 350w

"This new work does not advance Cronin's literary stature, but it does maintain the status quo. Recommended." C. W. Roth

+ — Library J 73:1026 Jl '48 120w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 O 15 '48 240w

" 'Shannon's Way' is a gentle book, sweetly conceived and written, designed to give a special abiding joy to the pure in heart. To them I unreservedly commend it." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 18 '48 700w

"As a sequel, it seems a pale coda to the first volume—or, should we say, a tenuous suspension-bridge to other episodes in Robie's glum saga." C. W. Terry

— N Y Times p12 Jl 18 '48 450w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
New Yorker 24:61 Jl 31 '48 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 18 '48 500w

"Dr. Cronin remains the pale but legitimate inheritor of the Victorian storytellers, and his honest hero and heroine genuine if somewhat quaint—and rather late—children of Victorian times. If his story line and characterization go back to the horse-and-buggy days, it must be admitted that old Dobbin and the one-horse shay still get there in their own good time." Edwin Seaver

Sat R of Lit 31:13 Jl 24 '48 430w

Reviewed by Olivia Manning
Spec 181:506 O 15 '48 270w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p15A Jl 25 '48 550w

"Shannon's Way touches again upon Dr. Cronin's favourite theme of medical ambition thwarted, on this occasion by bureaucratic bigotry and lack of money; but the novel has little of the fresh, if limited, realism of his earlier work."

Times [London] Lit Sup p593 O 23 '48 270w

Wis Lib Bul 44:149 S '48

CROSS, GENEVIEVE. Little heroes of Hartford; il. by William C. Brigham. [79p] $2.50 Cross publications

47-12360

"Expands for eight- or nine-year-olds an incident which occurred when General Washington came to Hartford, in 1780, to meet Count de Rochambeau. Betsy, a patriotic white child, and Rama, grandson of Chief Skenando, act together to bring about a friendly attitude among the Oneidas toward the Americans." (Horn Bk) Includes music popular in Revolutionary days.

"Connecticut history was most carefully studied for this book and sources are given for essential details. There are many drawings of actual buildings, as well as pictures in bright color; so children can gain a true feeling for the period from reading the book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:192 My '48 130w

"The 'little heroes' themselves are almost the only inventions in this pretty book, taking place in 1780, and so careful in facts that if a pear tree comes into the story a footnote aids that it 'still stands today and bears fruit.' " M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 22 '48 230w

CROSS, SAMUEL HAZZARD. Slavic civilization through the ages; ed. with a foreword by Leonid I. Strakhovsky. 195p $3.50 Harvard univ. press

947 Slavs 48-6889

"This book consists of eight lectures which the late Samuel Cross, Professor of Slavic Languages and Literatures at Harvard, delivered before the Lowell Institute of Boston in the autumn of 1939. Perfectly at home in the field from years of study and teaching, Professor Cross achieves an excellent synthesis in depicting the origins and full emergence of the Eastern, Western and Southern branches of the Slavs. The struggle between German and Pole, Pole and Russian, Poland's quest for lands to the Elbe, Russia's desire to control the eastern coasts of the Baltic, the conflict of German and Czech over the Sudeten, the lack of centralization and statesmanship among the Southern Slavs—all are brought out and discussed." Library J

Reviewed by C. E. Black
Am Hist R 54:139 O '48 480w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Ann Am Acad 258:126 Jl '48 280w

"Excellent tool for the reference library." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 73:814 My 15 '48 170w

Reviewed by H. E. Salisbury
N Y Times p24 O 17 '48 600w
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 4 '48 250w

"A small but excellent volume. . . Professor Cross was one of the most important students of Slavistics in the Western world. His is an uncommonly well-written book providing, with brevity and clarity, the best introduction to the study of Slavic cultures this writer has ever read." D. F. White
+ Sat R of Lit 31:22 Je 5 '48 190w
School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 10w

CROSTEN, WILLIAM LORAN. French grand opera; an art and a business. 162p $2.75 King's crown press

782.4 Opera. Paris. Opéra 48-7413

"The author has selected for close scrutiny only those works which appeared on the boards of the Paris Opéra, the state-subsidized Académie Royale de Musique, from 1828 through 1836. His thesis is that five works presented during the above years defined grand opera as a genre. . . According to the author the five definitive works which transformed the lyrical stage into the grand opera house were: Auber's La Muette de Portici (1828) and Gustave III (1833), Rossini's Guillaume Tell (1829) and Meyerbeer's Robert le Diable (1831) and Les Huguenots (1836)." (Music Lib Assn Notes) Index.

Booklist 45:46 O 1 '48

"There are only two serious defects which I find in this book. In his limited consideration of the period of true 'grand opera' the author almost entirely excludes the influence of Berlioz, whose operas Benvenuto Cellini and Les Troyannes are certainly written in the grand style, and which have had a far more lasting influence on musicians than anything Meyerbeer ever wrote. Secondly, the author's consideration of opera as a business far outweighs his discussion of the art, notwithstanding an excellent chapter on the development of the mise en scène, and another concerning the libretto." T. V. Enslin
+ — Crozer Q 25:377 O '48 400w

"The book should be of interest to many readers because of its subject and its nontechnical style, and also because it is provocative in calling to mind so many parallel situations between spectacular entertainment in the bourgeois society of the Paris of Louis Philipe and our American middle-class society of today." R. S. Tangeman
Music Lib Assn Notes 5:573 S '48 1050w
Times [London] Lit Sup p552 O 2 '48 900w

CROUSE, NELLIS MAYNARD. Search for the North pole. 376p map $4.50 Smith, Richard R.

919.8 North pole 47-30763

This is the third volume in a series of three, the first two of which were In Quest of the Western Ocean and The Search for the Northwest Passage (Book Review Digest 1928 and 1935). The present volume treats of Arctic expeditions from the time when the search for the North Pole became the paramount issue of Arctic trips, about the middle of the nineteenth century. It is told in a series of brief biographies of some of the explorers: the Americans Kane, Hayes, Hall, and Greely; the Scandinavians Nansen and Andrée; the English Nares; and the Italian Abruzzi. The expeditions of Peary are described in three chapters. Bibliography. Index.

"Unlike some historians of northern exploration, Mr. Crouse has not fallen into the error of perverting history with biased criticism. He has for the most part stuck to firsthand journals. This book adds little to our storehouse of knowledge about the search for the North Pole. But if it stimulates the reader to seek more thorough and authoritative information about the Arctic, which is constantly in our thoughts these days, so much the better." W. S. Carlson
+ Am Hist R 53:585 Ap '48 400w

"Both scholarly and authoritative. . . Although critical in tone the narrative is fascinating. Errors are minor and chiefly typographical." W. H. Hobbs
+ Geog R 38:174 Ja '48 290w

CROUSE, WILLIAM HARRY. Home guide to repair, upkeep and remodeling. 358p il $3.75; text ed $3 McGraw

643.7 Building—Repair and reconstruction. Repairing 47-12312

Practical manual for the householder who wants to do some of his own repair and maintenance work on house or garage. Partial contents: Carpentry; Wallpaper hanging; Brick and stone masonry; The electrical system; Plumbing—water, gas, sewerage; care and repair of floors; Inside walls and ceilings; Doors and windows; Building a garage; Adding a wing; Care and repair of furniture; Features of prefabricated houses. Index.

"The book is well indexed and a size convenient for study and shop use. It is written in simple and nontechnical language suited to the needs of amateur craftsmen. Knowledge acquired from this book would help the householder to be his own repair and maintenance man and to develop some ability in building." E. L. Bond
+ J Home Econ 40:468 O '48 200w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1376 O 1 '47 70w

"As in all books of this kind, the information included must be selected, since all the instructions that a householder might require in maintaining his house would fill a bulky encyclopedia. Much of the information here should be useful to a fair number of people. On the other hand, the field has not been so well covered that older books on the same subject should be overlooked either by individuals or libraries."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:82 O '47

CROUSE, WILLIAM HARRY. Understanding science; il. by Jeanne Bendick. (Whittlesey house publication) 190p $2.75; text ed to schools & colleges only $2.20 McGraw

600 Science—Juvenile literature. Technology—Juvenile literature 48-7780

General information on science for older boys and girls or the adult layman. Explains the historical development and modern use of electricity, engines, the telephone, the phonograph, radio, motion pictures, airplanes, and atomic energy. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:15 S 1 '48

"The book is a stimulant and eye-opener largely because of the lucid, light-hearted, free-hand drawings of Jeanne Bendick. Science books sorely need good imaginative drawings and this reviewer hopes that Mrs. Bendick's style will start a vogue in textbooks." Gerald Wendt
+ Chem & Eng N 26:3516 N 22 '48 220w

"The perfect book to keep non-scientific people from being outsiders when there is talk of television or jet planes. . . This scientifically accurate book has great value for all teenagers and, indeed, all Americans and is a must for the forward-looking people who want to be up to date on matters of such paramount importance as atomic energy and its peacetime uses." H. F. Griswold
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 26 '48 240w
Churchman 162:17 N 15 '48 20w

"Others besides high school students will be enlightened by this informative book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:378 S '48 110w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:449 N '48 40w
Kirkus 16:215 My 1 '48 90w

CROUSE, W. H.—Continued
Reviewed by F. L. Morrison
Library J 73:1284 S 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1516 O 15 '48 70w

"Youngsters who do not know enough about science to have formed an experimental interest in any particular branch such as chemistry or electricity, will find plenty of basic information here. . . Illustrations and diagrams make everything easier to understand." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ag 8 '48 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:60 Jl '48

"So far as most adults brought up in the innocence of the 1920's are concerned, much of 'Understanding Science' offers a strangely new account of our physical world. However, for boys and girls who must become familiar with our fantastic new scientific understanding this book is valuable and important." Creighton Peet
+ N Y Times p19 Ag 29 '48 150w

"A very readable and interesting book. . . Its effectiveness is brought about by its use of simple comparisons, as when it compares fire with atomic energy. Illustrated with lively sketches and diagrams."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:46 N 13 '48 50w

"All in all, this is quite a book for the 'teen-ager, vividly illustrated by Jeanne Bendick." D. F. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 29 '48 180w

CROWELL, PERS. First horseman; il. by [the author]. (Whittlesey house publication) 95p $2.50 McGraw 48-10424

In this tale of prehistoric men, Vuldar, the orphan boy, urged on by the commands of a dying chieftain, seeks out a herd of wild horses, the Fleet Ones, captures a stallion and tames it, and thereby becomes king of the tribe.

Booklist 45:144 D 15 '48

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p13 N 18 '48 190w

"The treatment of the subject shows much knowledge and understanding of horses and a careful handling of the prehistoric background. The story moves swiftly in a succession of dramatic suspenses which will delight not only those who love horses but all children keen about a brave boy's deed." L. S. B.
+ Commonweal 49:158 N 19 '48 50w

Kirkus 16:555 O 15 '48 170w

"Very well written and beautifully illustrated. . . Highly recommended." A. B. Weber
+ Library J 73:1745 D 1 '48 80w

"Here is a book which offers more than excitement and breathtaking adventure. The author has a real feeling for horses and is able to make both setting and period convincing." H. A. M.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 N 14 '48 180w

"For the horse lover it offers thrilling sensations of wild, free rides, and, without sentimentality, the love of a boy and his horse. It provides suspense without sensationalism for almost any boy or girl of 8 to 12, who should not be deceived by the book's unusual format—short and wide—into thinking it is for younger children." F. C. Smith
+ N Y Times p14 D 19 '48 180w

"A long book with exceptionally good drawings well reproduced."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:42 N 13 '48 40w

CROWLEY, MAUDE. Azor; pictures by Helen Sewell. 54p $2 Oxford
48-8030

Azor Peach was a six-year-old boy who lived in Marblehead. Except for one characteristic Azor was like other small boys: animals talked to him. Azor's skeptical family tried to shame him out of his habit of believing that he understood animals until the day he learned from a seagull where a little lost child was. After that even the chief of police believed him.

"This is a variation on a popular theme—the little boy who can talk to animals—and we found it both superior to the general run and unusual. It is written in an intimate, rhythmic style exactly suited to its subject matter." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 182:119 N '48 120w

Booklist 45:36 S 15 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun S 11 '48 130w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 25 '49 120w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:457 N '48 60w

Kirkus 16:398 Ag 15 '48 120w

Reviewed by J. E. Lynch
Library J 73:1519 O 15 '48 110w

New Repub 119:33 D 6 '48 50w

"The whimsey of the names may bother the adults, but children will find it delightfully hilarious and the black-and-white drawings are just right for the book." Rosejeanne Slifer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 22 '48 130w

"A blandly matter-of-fact touch in dealing with such miracles, an understanding of small boys and an easy-flowing style combine to make a particularly engaging story for 5 to 8 year olds—one whch parents will enjoy reading aloud. And for a bonus there are Helen Sewell's crisp, amusing illustrations." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p11 S 5 '48 140w

"A combination of fact and fantasy that will almost surely appeal to many boys and girls."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:25 N 13 '48 50w

Wis Lib Bul 44:167 O '48

CROWTHER, GEOFFREY. Economic reconstruction of Europe; foreword by Homer D. Crotty. 79p $2.75 Claremont colleges
330.94 Reconstruction (1939-)—Europe. Europe—Economic conditions 48-3539

"This is the printed version of three public lectures delivered by the editor of the London Economist at Claremont in February 1948. . . The three essays are entitled, respectively, 'The Vitality of Europe,' 'Freedom and Order in Europe,' and 'America and Europe.' The first is a plea for patience and a reaffirmation of faith: patience as to the speed with which economic recovery can be achieved and faith in the proposition that present difficulties will inevitably be overcome. The essay on 'America and Europe' . . . chiefly stresses the necessity for close mutual co-operation and understanding between the United States and western Europe both currently and over the long run. The second essay, 'Freedom and Order in Europe,' is at once the most substantive and the least touched by developments since it was written." Ann Am Acad

"This volume suffers from the natural limitations of the lecture as a medium of mature discussion. The conclusions reached are plausible, and one appreciates their optimism; yet they are based upon some questionable assumptions. They assume, without examining the difficulties, a satisfactory solution of the German problem. They accept a divided Europe—the whole discussion deals almost exclusively with Western Europe. They assume that the problems of Europe stem from the war rather than from the basic forces which were responsible for the armed conflict. Mr. Crowther has necessarily left much unsaid or half-said, and one might take issue with these fundamental omissions or undeveloped assumptions." Lawrence Pelletier
Am Pol Sci R 42:1038 O '48 250w

"This is a useful book. It is written with grace and ease. It covers many important problems in a few pages without being superficial. It should command a wide audience." N. S. Buchanan
+ Ann Am Acad 260:179 N '48 400w

"Much has happened since these lectures were delivered, but so much of the basic situation remains unchanged that this expert's keen analysis and his suave presentation of the case from the British point of view are still timely." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 66:112 Ja 26 '49 370w
School & Society 68:47 Jl 17 '48 30w
Times [London] Lit Sup p551 O 2 '48 1200w

CROY, HOMER. What grandpa laughed at. 255p $2.75 Duell
817.08 Humor 48-8841

Collection of specimens of American humor, showing the various trends of humor from the time of the World's Fair of 1893 to the first World War.

"An interesting collection that is more than just a joke book and that has its place in Americana sections."
+ Kirkus 16:430 Ag 15 '48 130w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 O 31 '48 270w

"Not since Bill Nye wrote his comic 'History of the United States' has there been a book remotely similar to this. . . There is enough Croy in it to season this corn dish, enough critical comment and factual material to give it a place on the Americana shelf." E. F. Allen
+ N Y Times p50 D 5 '48 380w

CRUICKSHANK, MRS HELEN GERE. Flight into sunshine; bird experiences in Florida; phot. by Allan D. Cruickshank. 132p $5 Macmillan
598.2 Birds—Florida. Photography of birds 48-8875

Over one hundred photographs of birds illustrate this narrative account of a trip to Florida taken by the author and her photographer husband under assignment from the National Audubon Society.

Booklist 45:83 N 1 '48
Kirkus 16:386 Ag 1 '48 130w

"'Flight Into Sunshine' is smoothly written. It has charm and accuracy. There is a quiet sense of integrity about the book that grows as the reader advances. Here is a wealth of interesting information, interestingly told, about the large and colorful birds of our American tropics." E. W. Teale
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 N 21 '48 550w

"Excitement and beauty crowd the pages of [this volume] . . . Following the Suwanee from source to mouth, the author and her husband found near the settlement of Horseshoe a tiny tropical island where Louisiana herons nested, and the careful description of the delicate coloring of these timid birds is only one of many touches of beauty which add charm to the factual information in the book." R. T. Bond
+ N Y Times p8 D 19 '48 500w

Reviewed by L. J. Halle
Sat R of Lit 31:18 D 11 '48 140w

CRUICKSHANK, N. K. In the tower's shadow; poems. 55p $1.75 Oxford
821 48-25675

"A first collection of poems by a writer whose work [has been] published in wartime anthologies. . . The subject of many of them is the human situation and the inherent bias there towards catastrophe." Publisher's note

"Miss Cruickshank allows fitful glimpses of a masculine intellect to be eclipsed by what one can only call female modesty and a girlish gush; this alternation produces a most uncomfortable displaced effect, like one of Steig's cartoons. . . Reading her better poems—'The Great Frost,' 'Snowy Morning, 1940,' 'The Poor at War' . . . I felt that, if she could only forget altogether about 'flower hues and the milk of stars,' she might emerge into a fair poet of limited range." Giles Romilly
— + New Statesman & Nation 36:221 S 11 '48 370w

"The publishers commend these poems for 'their strength, economy and directness, their concentration of thought and feeling,' I admire their 'directness' and 'concentration of feeling' (especially in the sincere and interesting poem 'The Talent'). But I looked in vain for 'strength,' in vain for 'concentration of thought.'" Peter Viereck
— N Y Times p12 Ag 8 '48 450w

"This poet has her own moments of illumination and, by the sincerity and intelligence with which she seizes upon them, she succeeds in communicating nothing less than experience. Lines that stand out possess their own authority; and I admire such complete poems as 'Death-History.' This is poetry for, and by, the mature." G. P. Meyer
+ Sat R of Lit 32:19 Ja 1 '49 80w

CRUMBINE, SAMUEL JAY. Frontier doctor; the autobiography of a pioneer on the frontier of public health. 284p $3 Dorrance
B or 92 48-4882

"Dr. Crumbine, one of the nation's pioneers in public health, tells of his rough-and-tumble fight for sanitation in Kansas in the years previous to his national service as an executive of the American Child Health Association. In Dodge City of the 1890's, which at its mildest was known as 'Wild and Woolly Dodge,' Dr. Crumbine did everything from pull teeth to serve as county coroner. Jumping from general practice to the Kansas State Board of Health in 1904, Dr. Crumbine soon evolved his most spectacular crusade—a one-man war against the house fly—which he made world-wide in scope with the slogan 'Swat the Fly' and with promotion of a new invention, the fly swatter. With many anecdotes, he reports his other victories—over the common drinking cup and the sale of fantastic patent medicines." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Booklist 45:119 D 1 '48

Reviewed by R. K. Winslow
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 31 '48 180w

Reviewed by Edwin Seaver
Sat R of Lit 32:23 Ja 22 '49 550w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p9B O 17 '48 240w

CRUMP, IRVING. Our oil hunters. 210p il $2.50 Dodd
622.338 Petroleum—Geology 48-8104

Vocational guidance material for junior and senior high school boys. The book contains accounts of the work of oil men in various parts of the world, and shows the work of the oil hunter from the beginning of the search to the bringing in of the well.

Booklist 45:72 O 15 '48

"Like other Crump books, this combines accurate, often quite technical information with exciting narrative based on actual experiences. . . Recommended for high schools." F. L. Morrison
+ Library J 73:1523 O 15 '48 100w
Sat R of Lit 31:46 N 13 '48 30w

CUBER, JOHN FRANK. Marriage counseling practice; foreword by Roland Leslie. 175p $2.25 Appleton
392.5 Marriage. Counseling 48-5982

"It has been almost twenty years since the first professional marriage counseling facility was established in the United States. . . Dr. Cuber has attempted in this volume to define this 'emerging profession,' to map its field at present, and to offer what might be a preliminary text for use in courses which would give professional training and subsequent authoritative standing to marriage counselors in the future." (Social Forces) Bibliography. Index.

CUBER, J. F.—Continued

"This survey with interpretation is a pioneer effort and as such makes a contribution to the field; however, the brevity of the discussion will not prove satisfying to all readers. . . It is hoped that the book finds its way into the hands of persons engaged in marriage counseling, students enrolled in marriage and family counseling courses, and the educated public." Virginia Messenger
Am Soc R 13:787 D '48 300w

"Dr. Cuber emphasizes that marriage counseling is 'an emerging profession.' As such it has its growing pains. . . He goes into excellent detail to present a program of professional training for marriage counselors. He points also to the limitations of marriage counseling. . . An excellent bibliography for students and teachers is the final section of the book, a very helpful one. I like particularly Dr. Cuber's assumption that at the present stage of our knowledge of human behavior a 'healthy eclecticism' is to be preferred to any steadfast allegiance to any one school of thought." J. F. Bender
+ N Y Times p12 Je 20 '48 250w

"The book contains a valuable bibliography on marriage counseling practice, which should be completed if possible and kept up to date annually. The author has done a good job in the assembly of such elusive material. He also deserves credit for putting into print a beginning book on marriage counseling practice as a profession." R. W. Kernodle
+ Social Forces 27:105 O '48 750w

"With the same light but sure touch that enables him to treat constructively so many facts of the marriage counseling process in so brief a space, Mr. Cuber outlines current thinking and needs in regard to the training of marriage counselors, extension of research, education, and professional organization in this area." G. H. Groves
+ Survey 84:348 N '48 700w

CUBER, JOHN FRANK, and HARPER, ROBERT ALLAN. Problems of American society; values in conflict. 394p $3.25 Holt
309.173 Social problems 48-2121

"A brief analytical treatment of selected social problems existing in the United States. The problems chosen are analyzed in terms of a values-in-conflict perspective which the authors call the Fuller-Frank-Waller frame of reference. . . [The] book consists of 18 chapters grouped under three major headings. Part one is designed to orient the reader to the general nature of social problems in a dynamic society; part two analyzes specific social problems; and part three examines major conflicting ideologies and points the way toward a rational approach to social pathologies." (Am Soc R) Suggested readings at end of each chapter Indexes.

"For several reasons this is a significant book in the field of social problems. The values-in-conflict frame of reference will be found useful. The authors treat a limited number of social problems adequately and make no attempt to run the gamut of social malfunctionings. The brevity of this book, in a field notorious for its behemoths, is praiseworthy. Of course the book does have limitations. . . Although the authors had the prerogative of selecting social problems to be discussed, some examiners will probably be disappointed to find that their favorite topics—war, religion, suicide, conservation of natural resources, etc.—have been omitted, but the authors have presented a sound frame of reference against which numerous issues not incorporated in the book can easily be discussed." J. E. Montgomery
+ — Am Soc R 13:643 O '48 500w
School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 20w
Reviewed by F. D. Freeman
Social Forces 27:172 D '48 600w

CULBERTSON, ELY. Contract bridge for everyone; ed. by Josephine Culbertson and Albert H. Morehead. 118p $2 Winston 795.41 Contract bridge 48-8665

Short instruction book for all types of players. Contains the new official rules for contract bridge. Glossary.

Booklist 45:61 O 15 '48
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '48

CUMBERLAND, MARTEN. And then came fear. 191p $2 Doubleday 48-7935

Detective story.

Kirkus 16:293 Je 15 '48 80w
Reviewed by E. F. Allen
N Y Times p15 Ag 22 '48 260w

"The solution is one that the reader will find extremely difficult to arrive at on his own."
New Yorker 34:72 Ag 7 '48 110w
Sat R of Lit 32:32 Ja 1 '49 50w

CUMMINGS, PARKE. Whimsey report; or, Sex isn't everything; il. by Al Piane. 150p $2 Crowell 817 48-8172

"Mr. Parke Cummings is a dangerous man with a statistic. . . Setting up his office in the rear of a poolroom, and engaging as his staff a cynical hippophile named Al and an erudite ex-wrestler named Tewksbury, Cummings sets about interviewing a representative segment of the American population. Categorizing broadly (he breaks people down into 'alive,' 'dead,' or '50-50'), the agile Mr. Cummings asserts in 'The Whimsey Report' that one out of two families keeps a dog, that one out of six dogs is a police dog, and that dogs cannot climb trees. Further, bus travelers are more musical than train travelers; the common cold is contagious; commuters are tricky. For the skeptical he has graphs, figures, and pies to substantiate all this." (N Y Times) Index.

Kirkus 16:328 Jl 1 '48 100w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S 12 '48 150w

"While it is not inconceivable that the fruits of the research done by Cummings, Tewksbury et Al. will prove of little value to society from a scientific standpoint, the report, with the exception of a few passages, is a happy bit of parody." Rex Lardner
+ N Y Times p13 S 5 '48 270w

"This is pretty frothy stuff, of course, but it is very amusing and a fine antidote for K-ns-y." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p7B O 3 '48 220w

CUMMINS, P. D. Defeated. 64p $1.75 Macmillan
821

"These poems deal with the more complex experiences of the human soul which must acknowledge its defeats before going on to its victories." Library J.

"A distinguished collection of lyrics which commands our respect and gratitude. . . The language is clear, and sharp, and simple, the verse expert, the figures interesting. Each page is as traditional as a sunset—and as excitingly new." Shirley Barker
+ Library J 73:474 Mr 15 '48 80w

"The long poem, 'Fantasia in Cell X,' exhibits Mr. Cummins's talent in a freedom that is not observed in the self-conscious poems which dominate the rest of the book." A. M. Sullivan
Sat R of Lit 31:26 Jl 10 '48 110w
Times [London] Lit Sup p39 Ja 17 '48 550w

CUNINGGIM, MERRIMON. The college seeks religion. 319p $4 Yale univ. press

377.1 Colleges and universities—Religion

47-12248

"Based on a Yale doctoral dissertation, this volume describes and analyzes religious-education programs at nine liberal-arts colleges. Dr. Cuninggim advances his own program, but his book remains essentially a source of classified opinions on what is going on in religious education at selected institutions." (School & Society) Index.

"The author, who heads the department of religion at Pomona College, states that his purpose is 'to analyze the association of religion and higher education since 1900.' What he actually does is to analyze the association of the forms of religion, its tools and media, and higher education. That is worth while, and the volume is wonderfully full of important data and pertinent suggestions, but it is not what the colleges most need. . . Nevertheless, the book is a careful study and an enormous compendium of facts." R. F. McLain

+ — Christian Century 65:447 My 12 '48 1200w

"It seems to the reviewer that Dr. Cuninggim has done a much better job at the writing of philosophy of religious education at the college level than he has of making a description of what the colleges of various types are trying to do to work out an 'adequate program' in the light of their own situations. . . There is here some excellent analysis and clear insight into the nature of religion and its significance for education." C. M. Bond

+ — Crozer Q 25:178 Ap '48 900w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 67:250 Mr 27 '48 270w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:27 Mr '48 280w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN (GARTH HALE, pseud). Death haunts the dark lane. 224p $2.50 Dutton

48-10423

Detective story.

"A mite more interesting than usual, but not much."

Kirkus 16:457 S 1 '48 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30 N 14 '48 180w

"The case has its puzzling aspects, it is true, but less hesitation to take decisive action might well have brought matters to a quicker and more satisfactory conclusion. Mr. Cunningham will have to do better than this if Jess Roden is to be seriously regarded as a detective." Isaac Anderson

— + N Y Times p40 N 7 '48 110w

"A good addition to this sound, unspectacular series."

+ New Yorker 24:139 N 6 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 12 '48 50w

"Good grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 N 20 '48 40w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN (GARTH HALE, pseud). Death of a worldly woman. 220p $2.50 Dutton

48-2089

Detective story.

Kirkus 16:130 Mr 1 '48 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 My 16 '48 140w

"Although Roden does a fairly good job of detecting in the city, one misses his Deer Lick background. It was there that he made his reputation, and it is there that his methods are most in keeping with his surroundings." I. A.

N Y Times p18 My 9 '48 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Je 6 '48 100w

"Plentiful supply of unpleasant people, characteristically good Roden detecting, some careless writing (for A.B.C.), and bitter pictures of boom-town life. No masterpiece."

Sat R of Lit 31:32 My 15 '48 40w

CUNNINGHAM, ALBERT BENJAMIN (GARTH HALE, pseud). The victory of Paul Kent. 317p $3 Dutton

48-7536

Paul Kent, a young graduate of a Methodist seminary, is deservedly appointed to the best pastorate open. All is going well with him and his family, when a parishioner chooses to make Paul her confidant. When a crime is committed Paul's knowledge of the facts solves the mystery, but Paul loses his position in the church.

Kirkus 16:223 My 1 '48 140w

"Not an important book, but with appeal for many readers." L. R. Miller

Library J 73:945 Je 15 '48 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 O 3 '48 140w

"It's a kindly, gentle, innocent book and, as such, something of a rarity in modern fiction." H. P.

+ N Y Times p15 Jl 25 '48 150w

Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 8 '48 180w

CURRAN, DALE. Dupree blues. 228p $2.75 Knopf

48-5943

An expansion of a blues ballad about one Dupree. Dupree was a trombone player in a small jazzy band, and was in love with the band's girl singer, Betty. When Betty wanted a diamond ring Dupree killed a jeweler to get it for her. And that was the end of Dupree.

Kirkus 16:58 F 1 '48 180w

"Author communicates the rewards and difficulties of the jazz musician's job; he sustains well the atmosphere of a narrow and intense world; and his story is taut and credible." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 73:473 Mr 15 '48 60w

"Now we have a book about a ballad about a man in this 'Dupree Blues.' . . The most important addition the author makes is when he lets go his strong feeling for jazz—that's good and keen writing and makes you hope that next time Dale Curran wouldn't get caught in a story that is already told." Virginia Dale

N Y Times p23 Mr 21 '48 230w

CURRAN, MRS MARY DOYLE. Parish and the Hill. 221p $3 Houghton

48-8086

Portrays the difference between shanty Irish and "lace curtain Irish" in a story of life among the Irish immigrants living in a New England mill town.

Booklist 45:32 S 15 '48

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg

Christian Science Monitor p15 S 23 '48 130w

"A brilliant first novel." David Marshall

+ Commonweal 48:575 S 24 '48 1100w

Kirkus 16:315 Jl 1 '48 170w

"Not a happy story but an absorbing one." M. H. Zipprich

Library J 73:1089 Ag '48 80w

Reviewed by Margaret Evans

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 O 17 '48 550w

"It is not supposed to be autobiographical, but it is written in a vehement, highly partisan tone which bespeaks the author's close acquaintance with the scenes she describes so

CURRAN, M. D.—Continued
vividly. And the setting is a Massachusetts mill town which might well be her own native Holyoke. . . Mrs. Curran has not put her impressions into any chronological order or embellished them with any nostalgia, conclusions or suggestions for remedy. To genteel Irish palates her broad, colorful, unrelieved descriptions may seem as strong and fiery as undiluted Irish whisky. Some will claim that her picture is overdrawn and exaggerated, while admitting the sad basic truth of many of her observations." Mary McGrory
N Y Times p21 S 12 '48 650w

"Sometimes with nostalgia, sometimes with dramatic impact, Mrs. Curran's story tells of Grandfather O'Sullivan's migration from Kerry and of the two succeeding generations that tried to make their way in a New England mill town. Mrs. Curran, now an English teacher at Wellesley, supplies all the signposts, but unless we are content merely to enjoy the rich flow of emotional scenery, to identify ourselves with figures presented poetically against a landscape, we shall have to find our own way through the parish and the hill." Harry Bull
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:24 S 4 '48 750w
Springf'd Republican p8B O 10 '48 90w

CURRIER, ARNOLD JOHN, and ROSE, ARTHUR. General and applied chemistry. 275p il $3 McGraw
540 Chemistry 48-7336

"Designed for a brief, one-year college course for those who want a knowledge of basic chemistry but who do not intend to follow chemistry as a profession. Well presented. Suggested reading lists and appendix of tables." Booklist

Booklist 45:7 S 1 '48

"The authors have succeeded admirably, and the book gives a readable and generally easily understandable discussion covering chemical principles, the non-metallic elements, and the industrially important metallic elements. The average student should have little difficulty in following most of the material and in understanding the applications, both scientific and technical which are presented." Therald Moeller
+ Chem & Eng N 26:3152 O 18 '48 370w

CURTIS, GEORGE DE CLYVER (GREGORY MARWOOD, pseud). Bees' ways; decorations by Edwin Earle. 240p $2.75 Houghton
595.799 Bees Agr48-43

Useful information for people who "might like to find out in a casual and painless sort of way the main facts in the life of the bee." Explains something of bee psychology and the law of the hive, and relates some legends and superstitions about bees.

Booklist 44:308 My 15 '48

"Most readable of bee books." E. H.
+ — Commonweal 48:482 Ag 27 '48 100w

"I happen to be fascinated by bees and their ways and found this particularly appealing."
+ Kirkus 16:16 Ja 1 '48 150w
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 8 '48 100w
Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 18 '48 240w
Wis Lib Bul 44:102 My '48

CURTIS, JAMES, comp. Murder of Maria Marten; being an authentic and faithful history; with a full development of the most extraordinary circumstances which led to the discovery of her body in the Red barn to which is added the trial of William Corder, with anecdotes of his life; the whole ed. and arr. with an epilogue by Jeanne and Norman Mackenzie. 256p il $3.75 Pellegrini & Cudahy
343.1 Marten, Maria 48-6183

"A retelling of the story of a murder that is said to have enthralled the whole of the British public back in 1828, based on running accounts of the crime carried in the London Times." New Yorker

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Ap 9 '48 120w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Je 20 '48 140w

"Fundamentally, the case is simple and not very mysterious, since it is concerned with the plight of a young man who plants the remains of his mistress under a barn instead of marrying her. By dint of a good deal of embroidery, however, the journalist assigned to the story managed to build it up into a cause célèbre. Quaint and soporific."
+ New Yorker 24:100 Ap 3 '48 120w

"The editors here have done their job well." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 17 '48 900w

"Good editing job. Attractive format."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:32 Ap 3 '48 40w
Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p12B My 16 '48 200w

CURTISS, MRS URSULA (REILLY). Voice out of darkness. 216p $2.50 Dodd 48-10246

Detective story.

Booklist 45:138 D 15 '48
Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p48 N 5 '48 70w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 O 10 '48 220w

"Ursula Curtiss is, so far as we know, a newcomer to the mystery field. In this novel she shows that she has mastered the art of plot construction and of keeping her readers and her heroine in suspense." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p54 N 14 '48 230w

"A pleasantly written but not exactly spectacular choice for the annual Red Badge mystery award."
New Yorker 24:135 O 16 '48 100w
Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 24 '48 150w

"Suspenseful, credible, slightly over-emotional, and competently plotted tale of long-range and on-the-spot villainy—worth its 'Red Badge' prize. Good."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:56 O 9 '48 40w

CUSHMAN, FRANK, and CUSHMAN, ROBERT WOOD. Improving supervision; a discussion of human relations problems for supervisors in industrial and business organizations. 232p $2.50 Wiley
658.3124 Foremen. Employment management
48-526

"Especially designed for 'follow-up reading' in connection with foremen and supervisory training programs, this text emphasizes human relations problems. It is built around a 'boiled down,' composite analysis of the responsibilities of supervisors in a diversity of industrial and business organizations." Management R

"The discussion of the practical psychology and common sense of being a foreman is given in simple, readable English, the ideas expressed are reasonable and the development logical. The book can be read in two or three hours without too much effort or hurry. In spite of these favorable items, the review is inclined to question the value of the work. It is addressed to a class of men who rarely read books on how to improve themselves in their jobs. The volume might be useful to someone whose duty it is to train foremen, but the suspicion may arise that such a person would know intuitively much of what is said. In any case, the book can be recommended to anyone who wants to learn what makes a good foreman." W. A. Gruse
Chem & Eng N 26:2518 Ag 23 '48 200w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:44 Ja 1 '48 20w
Management R 37:382 Jl '48 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:71 S '48

CUTLER, LIN, pseud. See Linwood, J.

D

DAHL, ROALD. Some time never; a fable for supermen. 244p $2.75 Scribner

48-1374

Fantasy about the Gremlins and Fifinellas and their war against the humans. The gremlins were the original rulers of the earth in ages past, and when their activities were unmasked in World war II they went underground to bide their time. Their role in World war III and IV is told, but even tho they come into possession of the earth after World war IV their fate overtakes them.

"An ably handled piece of imaginative writing, this does not however sustain the level of his earlier book of short stories—Over To You—but gives in exchange some interesting satire."
+ Kirkus 16:63 F 1 '48 130w

"There is a light, humorous satirical touch to Roald Dahl's bitter fable, and it has a delightful surprise ending. It makes its points with laughter, with understatement, and with implication. He assumes that from the standpoint of reason what he describes is inevitable; it will come to pass and, in a way, it will be amusing. But whether in the long run it is better to be a human or a Gremlin is open to argument. Mr. Dahl is a little bit of both." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ap 11 '48 330w

"Two years ago Dahl established himself as an exceptionally promising short story writer with 'Over To You.' . . 'Some Time Never' might have been more effective in short story length; it says important things, but they could have been said with less repetition, less preliminary build-up and fewer words." Joe McCarthy
+ — N Y Times p22 Je 20 '48 380w
San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 9 '48 170w

"The weakness of Mr. Dahl's book lies in the cumbrousness of his supernatural machinery—with its Gremlins, Fifinellas, Widgets, Spandules, Dingbats, Snogs, Bogglers, Sunts, and so on—creatures whose very names (and their dreadful habit of 'chortling') betray the forced unreality of their conception. . . The best part of the book lies in the unquaint realism of little descriptive touches. There is a very fine glimpse of Air Marshals in conference. There are intense appreciations of the glory and freshness of summer mornings, such as, one suspects, were bittersweet to the young pilots climbing into their planes. . . The fantasy of the book invites comparison,—with Wells, Butler, Huxley, and Swift—from which Mr. Dahl must suffer. The nonfantasy parts can stand securely on their own high merits." Bergen Evans
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:20 Ap 3 '48 650w

DAICHES, DAVID. Study of literature, for readers and critics. 240p $2.75 Cornell univ. press

804 Literature 48-7813

"The subjects Professor Daiches discusses in his book are problems of the modern critic, the literary use of language, the nature of fiction, the difference between art and craft, and other themes which throw a light on the modern attitude to the written word. The author points to the difficulties of the authentic literary critic in having to judge books in a world, deprived of authority and standards." (Commonweal) Index.

Reviewed by John Cournos
Commonweal 48:599 O 1 '48 800w

"A clearer and sounder view is what Mr. Daiches has notably succeeded in giving us. His book may be recommended to the common reader as a trustworthy guide to a higher literacy than is generally attained in schools and colleges. To critics it offers a blessed and timely relief from the limited or perverted literacy of currently fashionable cliques." G. F. Whicher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 S 26 '48 750w
School & Society 68:127 Ag 21 '48 20w

DAKERS, ELAINE (KIDNER) (JANE LANE, pseud). Parcel of rogues. 444p $3.50 Rinehart

Mary Stuart, queen of Scots—Fiction
48-3678

Historical novel based on the life of Mary, Queen of Scots, from the time she arrived in Scotland to take over her kingdom to the death of Morton, the last of the "parcel of rogues" with whom Mary had been surrounded during her reign.

Booklist 45:51 O 1 '48

"Lengthy, discursive, but presenting a mass of material, competently marshalled, skilfully woven into an integrated plot. For those who like substantial historical novels."
Kirkus 16:267 Je 1 '48 100w

"History, excellently brought to life. There are too many protagonists of equal importance, however, for this to be satisfying as fiction." J. W. Rogers
+ — Library J 73:1090 Ag '48 100w

"The tale is partisan and now and then does a bit of history twisting, but it is written with skill and fidelity to the times."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 29 '48 170w

"A solid, competent historical narrative." Catharine Brody
+ N Y Times p47 N 14 '48 380w
San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 19 '48 110w

"Miss Lane presents lucidly and skillfully this melodramatic story of double and treble dealing, of plots and counter-plots and cold-blooded murder. . . She has written a rousing good crime story, full of suspense and excitement, and the more gripping because it is true. Her theory concerning the famous Casket Letters, on whose damning evidence the unfortunate Queen suffered so much, is a new and interesting one, and in light of the proofs which she offers, extremely plausible. 'Parcel of Rogues' is a fine piece of work, as engrossing a book as I have read in many a day." S. H. Hay
+ Sat R of Lit 31:31 Ag 28 '48 600w

"A book which is fascinatingly skilful in detail and so realistic in atmosphere that it seems told by a woman of the period. The style, often bordering on slang and spiced with the Scottish tongue, is fluent and appropriate."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p481 Ag 28 '48 180w

DALBERG-ACTON, JOHN EMERICH EDWARD, 1st baron ACTON. See Acton, J. E. E. D.-A.

DALE, ANTONY. Fashionable Brighton, 1820-1860. 192p il $12.50 Scribner

942.25 Brighton, England [48-10141]

"An account of the architectural history of the three main sections (or 'estates') of Brighton, the first and greatest of the English seaside watering places, together with a discussion of the social life of this noted beach. . . While Mr. Dale's book is mainly a history of the leading buildings and developments in the city, it also connects in most interesting fashion the prominent residents and visitors (who in themselves constitute a list of all the great literary and political figures of the day) with the houses, squares, crescents and terraces in which they lived during the Brighton season." San Francisco Chronicle

DALE, ANTONY—Continued

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 9 '48 180w
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 15 '48 290w

"There is much solid and interesting information in Mr. Dale's work, and it should prove a valuable book of reference for Brighton in that period. There is, however, some unnecessary repetition about the activities of well-known people, and in some cases their connections with Brighton were so slender that it would have been an economy in space not to have mentioned them at all. Although there are some ninety illustrations, some of singular interest, the photographs of contemporary Brighton and Hove are almost without exception disappointing."
+ — Spec 180:322 Mr 12 '48 800w

"The whole story is instructive for all interested in nineteenth-century urban development. Mr. Dale's account is enlivened by much good material about the world of fashion which the buildings were designed to attract."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p343 Je 19 '48 180w

DALE, NORMAN. Exciting journey; il. by Ley Kenyon. 153p $2 Macmillan (for Lane)

When Tim Forrest's uncle and guardian found he could not get away for a vacation trip with Tim, he sent the boy off on his bicycle to make the journey from London to Devon "on his own." This story, for young readers, recounts the tale of Tim's adventures during the next three weeks.

"The sense of suspense and adventure in the story has genuine appeal. Even if the locale and a few expressions are unfamiliar because they are British, boys will not care or notice because they will be too busy reading to find out what happens next." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 15 '48 280w

"Tim's adventures are not wildly exciting, but they are interesting—and so are the people whom he meets. That his trip comes to a successful conclusion is largely due to a series of happy coincidences that at times are too happy to be convincing. But it is a pleasant tale."
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:37 Ag 14 '48 130w

DALGLIESH, ALICE. Davenports are at dinner; il. by Flavia Gág. 182p $2.50 Scribner 48-9491

When the four young Davenports heard that their father was to marry Emily they were worried, but when their stepmother arrived with a very difficult little daughter, they were genuinely perturbed. However the Davenports did not stay perturbed. In the most natural way in the world they made the small stepsister one of them; they overcame the difficulty of having to live in a barn-studio; and established a radio program called The Davenports are at dinner. For ages eight to twelve.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 25 '49 70w

"Flavia Gág's pictures of the children, the mysterious white horse and the flowers, so important to the Davenports, as well as the good printing and paper, help to make this a distinguished book." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 25:38 Ja '49 80w

"There's a thin wedge of mystery but not enough. Sorry—we just didn't think much of it."
— Kirkus 16:438 S 1 '48 100w

"Recommended for ages 8-12." Judith Stevenson
+ Library J 74:132 Ja 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 12 '48 300w

"The Davenports are modern, personable, human and their enthusiasm is contagious. Miss Dalgliesh has expressed well the shrewd ability of children to size up people and situations, and this understanding as well as the lively, unusual story of a likable, convincing family will please 8 to 12-year-olds, particularly little girls." Virginia Mathews
+ N Y Times p43 N 28 '48 180w

"There isn't a selfish or lazy bone in them. They are plucky and funny and extraordinarily real. This is an honest picture of an American family in the complicated world of today. It is a book to read more than once. When you know them, the Davenports are not easy to forget."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:38 D 11 '48 140w

DALI, SALVADOR. Fifty secrets of magic craftsmanship; tr. by Haakon M. Chevalier. 192p il $7.50 Dial press

751 Painting. Drawing—Instruction 48-8697

"Not a primer for the novice in knowledge or execution of art. Difficult to classify; not hearty fare, rather perhaps caviar for the amateur. Personal anecdotes, lively marginal drawings, an extraordinary mixture of mathematics and fantasy." Library J

"Art students will find much to encourage them but little to justify anything less than perfection. Should be placed alongside other books by the master of clear color and complicated line, of weird invention and exquisite sky." A. S. Plaut
Library J 73:1596 N 1 '48 80w

"Dali, behind his rather absurd attitudinizing, conceals a real respect for the craft of painting, and if he had wanted it so, his book might have been extremely informative. The trouble is that he can't avoid posturing, and the result is a hodgepodge, in which the items of sound painterly advice (and there are a good many) are mingled almost inextricably, and a bit annoyingly, with nonsense. The illustrations, scattered through the text and along the margins, are additional evidence of his own technical virtuosity."
— + New Yorker 24:132 O 23 '48 100w

"In lay-out and clarity of design the book is a remarkable work of art in itself. The information it contains is, as one might expect, a fantastic melange of sound sense and literary attitudinizing. Whatever one may think of his esthetics, one cannot deny Dali's sound academic craftsmanship, and he provides some excellent advice about such technical matters as pigments, brushes, color-contrasts, the use of the 'golden section,' and so on. All of this would pass without a murmur in the classrooms of the most conventional academy in the world, but the book also contains some 'secrets of magic craftsmanship' which the academies know nothing about." Alfred Frankenstein
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 28 '48 310w

DALLA VALLE, JOSEPH MARIUS. Industrial environment and its control. 225p $4.50 Pitman

628.5 Hygiene, Industrial 48-5303

"Compact volume on the control of health hazards in factories by engineering methods. Factors of industrial environment considered, physiological reactions to noise vibration and fatigue. Details regarding dusts, fumes, vapors, and gases, and their physiological effects. It discusses illumination and radiant heating. Author covers principles of industrial sanitation, a discussion of exhaust ventilation, design of ventilation systems and industrial dust control." (Library J) Suggested readings at end of each chapter. Index.

"An authoritative work. . . This book should be read not only by industrial hygiene engineers but also by industrial physicians who need to know the engineering phases of industrial health service and the extent to which the medical service must be backed up by competent engineering if satisfactory results are to be obtained. . . The author is to be commended on a most worth while book." A. J. Lanza

+ Am J Pub Health 38:732 My '48 260w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:479 Mr 15 '48 70w

"It is important to note that this work is intended chiefly for engineers who may be called upon to design ventilating systems and other devices that may affect the health of workers in factories. . . The material that is included is authoritative and well presented, but the range of topics seems unnecessarily limited. Respirators and protective clothing are among the topics that appear to have been omitted."

+ — N Y New Tech Bks 33:14 Ja '48

"The book is too short and specialized for use as a text, but should be valuable for reference purposes."

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:205 Je '48 240w

DALLA VALLE, JOSEPH MARIUS. Micromeritics; the technology of fine particles. 2nd ed 555p il $8.50 Pitman

620.19 Particles 48-5304

"Second edition of a standard technical text in the field of fine particle technology is a contribution to the problem of industrial dust control in engineering. Particle measurement, size distributions, packing arrangements, physical properties and industrial applications are discussed. New chapters include behavior of particles under pressure, surface phenomena, smoke and dust clouds, and the theory of sampling. Chapters greatly revised include the ones on dynamics and behavior of particles in an electric field." (Library J) Bibliography. Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1943.

"The college professor, seeking an excellent text book with which his students may study and review fundamentals of this art, will find it here. To every chapter, he will find appended thought provoking problems. Many educators will revel in the profuse recourse to mathematical exposition and approve the space used in expanding thereof. . . Printing is good, the editing excellent. No excuse is given by the publishers for the paper used. Such a splendid text deserves the best paper now available." A. R. Lukens

+ Chem Eng 55:290 Je '48 650w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:479 Mr 15 '48 70w

"When the first edition of this book was published in 1943, it constituted the first important treatise on the behavior and physical properties of small particles larger than colloids. With the publication of a second edition, and a continuing lack of similar works, this text may be recognized as the standard work on the subject."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:19 Ja '48
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:229 Je '48 240w

DALLIN, DAVID JULIEVICH. Soviet Russia and the Far East. 398p maps $5 Yale univ. press

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations—East (Far East) 48-9035

"Survey of Soviet policy in China, Japan and Korea, 1931-1947 as Mr. Dallin sees it—the pattern of communist expansionism, with its long-range planning, fifth-column infiltration, verbal chicanery and ruthless suppression of opposition in its march toward world domination. Mr. Dallin covers pre-war Russian-Japanese struggle for control of China and Mongolia, conversion of indigenous Chinese communist movement to what he believes to be a Russian controlled army, in spite of treaty obligations; how opportunity of war for unlimited expansion was skillfully exploited; callous double-crossing of Japanese, German and Russian diplomats by each other and of the U. S. by Russia; lack of comprehension, variable, inconsistent policies of U. S.; ineptitude of journalists; struggle for Korea—all abundantly documented." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:115 D 1 '48

"Mr. Dallin's latest book, a model of pedagogical method, covers the subject adequately, wastes no words in rhetoric and speculation. Keeping close to his purpose, the author guides us through a vast mass of detail, so skillfully arranged that we are given an opportunity to become familiar with a highly complicated story at the least possible cost." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 168:249 D '48 600w

"Russian exile and associate editor of the anti-Communist New Leader, David J. Dallin has written widely on Soviet politics, notably as co-author of a study of forced labor in the U.S.S.R. So his slant is well known. However, this new 384-page work is marked by objectivity, heavy documentation and a scholarly style verging on the pedantic. This is especially true of the first half, dealing with Far Eastern history after 1930. The latter half, covering the more recent, post-Yalta period, is more personal, less historical, will perhaps stand up less well after ten years, but is more readable." Robert Root

Christian Century 65:1402 D 22 '48 900w

Reviewed by Robert Peel
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 24 '48 1400w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 49:179 N 26 '48 450w
Current Hist 15:350 D '48 150w

"Clear and scholarly volume for students of Asiatic as well as Russian history."

+ Kirkus 16:426 Ag 15 '48 180w

"Exceedingly important, splendidly organized." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:1506 O 15 '48 210w

"Mr. Dallin was exceptionally well equipped for part of his research. . . He apparently lacked an intimate familiarity with political, social and economic conditions in East Asia, which have created conditions favorable to Russian aggression. As a result of this lack he may have been too much inclined to trust the accuracy of extreme conservatives in Asia —but his virtues in research certainly far outweigh his faults." Floyd Taylor

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 7 '48 700w

"A cool and factual book which marshals the facts, from Russian and American sources, into an intelligent and intelligible pattern. It is probably the best brief exposition of the complex situation; it should help many readers to understand what has happened in the Far East in the last years. The book does not report on the internal conditions and conflicts of China or Japan. Instead, it confines itself to an informed and penetrating analysis of Soviet foreign policy in the Far East, its methods, achievements and long-range plans." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p4 O 24 '48 900w

"A thorough and convincing job, although not a particularly graceful one."

+ New Yorker 24:132 N 6 '48 200w

"This book is timely and useful and will sustain the author's reputation as a well-trained, careful, and hostile student of Soviet affairs." Sidney Harcave

+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 N 27 '48 700w

DALY, ELIZABETH. Book of the lion. 218p $2 Rinehart

48-6875

Detective story.

Booklist 44:383 Jl 15 '48

"A tale shrewd, deft and satisfying." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Je 4 '48 270w
Kirkus 16:157 Mr 15 '48 80w
New Repub 118:26 Je 21 '48 30w

DALY, ELIZABETH—Continued

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 My 30 '48 230w

"Top-flight Elizabeth Daly." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p15 Je 20 '48 170w

"A very satisfactory piece of work, in both planning and execution."
+ New Yorker 24:100 Je 12 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 13 '48 50w

"Deft understatement of immaculately tailored yarn makes it doubly effective. Some may find it rather precious, but it packs indubitable wallop. Very good."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:28 My 29 '48 50w

DALY, MAUREEN, ed. My favorite stories. 241p $2.75 Dodd

Short stories—Collections 48-9226

A collection of the editor's favorite stories of young people. Contents: A start in life, by Ruth Suckow; The boy who loved Bergman, by Virginia Oakey; The open window, by Saki; Young man Axelbrod, by Sinclair Lewis; The answer, by W. E. Wilson; To remember these things, by Milton White; Lessons from a pony, by Lincoln Steffens; Advice to the little Peyton girl, by Dorothy Parker; Shago, by James Pooler; They called it swing, by Dorothy Baker; Operation orchid, by Brooke Hanlon; After the dance, by Sally Benson; Prelude, by Albert Halper; Won by a knock-out, by Graeme and Sarah Lorimer; Time to say good-bye, by Maureen Daly; Road to the isles, by Jessamyn West.

Booklist 45:143 D 15 '48

"Several of the stories are rather brittle and ephemeral, but all are eminently readable and will appeal to both girls and boys." B. J. Thompson
+ — Cath World 168:219 D '48 90w

"Recommended for teen-age collections." G. E. Cartmell
+ Library J 73:1828 D 15 '48 20w

DALY, SHEILA JOHN. Party fun; il. by Selma Burgess. 244p $2 Dodd

793 Entertaining 48-5910

A book on party planning for teen-agers.

Booklist 44:286 Ap 15 '48
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '48

"Useful title in any high school library." Nelle McCalla
+ Library J 73:717 My 1 '48 70w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 14 '48 40w

"A book chock full of lively interesting ways to entertain friends. . . Her directions for decoration and food are elaborate and detailed, but they involve plenty of hard work and ingenuity, rather than actual expense." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Times p21 Je 13 '48 150w

DALY, SHEILA JOHN. Pretty, please [il. by Selma Burgess]. 139p $2 Dodd

646.7 Beauty, Personal 48-8105

A book on good grooming for the adolescent girl.

Booklist 45:90 N 1 '48
Cath World 168:256 D '48 100w

"Recommended." R. M. McEvoy
+ Library J 73:1284 S 15 '48 70w

DANIEL, HAWTHORNE. For want of a nail; the influence of logistics on war; foreword by Brehon Somervell. (Whittlesey house publication) 296p maps $5 McGraw

355.41 Logistics 48-7383

"In his studies of a half dozen wars and campaigns, from Washington's surprise attack at Trenton to the Allied invasion of France in 1944, Mr. Daniel offers proof of the controlling influence of logistics on the outcome of war. His emphasis is usually on the reasons for failure rather than the grounds for success." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by J. D. Hill
Am Hist R 54:403 Ja '49 180w
Kirkus 16:185 Ap 1 '48 130w

"Mr. Daniel knows what he is writing about, emphasizes salient points and presents his topic with knowledge and illumination. It is helpful to have it brought home that the man behind the man behind the gun is also needed to win wars, and to know the reason why." P. J. Searles
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 O 24 '48 550w

"The historian will not find the relation between the arsenal and the military decision easy to determine, and some of the judgments of Daniel will be challenged by historians of the traditional schools. . . There will be considerable disagreement on the proposition that General Burgoyne's failure to solve the logistical problems involved in the Saratoga campaign in 1777 spelled the difference between the success or failure of the American Revolution. . . However, Daniel's volume is an excellent introduction to the study of logistics in the development of the theory and practice of war." R. G. C.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 5 '48 450w

Reviewed by Donald Armstrong
Sat R of Lit 31:12 Ag 14 '48 600w

DANIELS, FARRINGTON. Outlines of physical chemistry. 713p $5 Wiley

541 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 48-4795

"Based on Outlines of Physical Chemistry, by Getman and Daniels, which was last revised in 1943 [Book Review Digest 1943]. Largely rewritten and brought up to date." (Booklist) Indexes.

Booklist 45:106 N 15 '48

"With rearrangement and much new material it becomes a new book with the aim to make it a clear and interesting presentation of physical chemistry." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 73:1668 N 15 '48 60w

"Compared to the seventh edition the present version—which is regarded by the author as the first edition of a new work—shows a considerable amount of re-arranging and rewriting; but the purpose and scope of the book have not been fundamentally changed. It remains a clearly written and rather comprehensive introduction, designed for college use but of some value for self-instruction also."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:68 S '48

DANNIEL, BENJAMIN. Jesus, Jews and gentiles; the true story of their relationship as recorded in the Bible. 239p $3 Arco

296 Christianity and other religions—Judaism. Jews—Religion. Jesus Christ 48-5703

"Analyzes the ancient indictment against the Jewish people, which, based on New Testament authority, states that the Jews have rejected and still refuse to accept the gospel of Jesus Christ, that they crucified the Saviour, and therefore are cursed and condemned until they 'accept Jesus' and by baptism are converted. Mr. Danniel believes that this teaching regarding the Jew has been and still is responsible for most of the anti-Semitism. . . In these pages, based on careful reading of the King James version of the New Testament, the author seeks to prove that Christian anti-Semitic teaching is based fundamentally on misquotations, misinterpretations and fabrications which in the course of centuries and under the influence of semi-pagan rationalizations have been incorporated into traditional church doctrine." Churchman

"Without discussing the history or theology of Danniel's revision, it may be observed that it is bad strategy to make the abandonment of Christianity a prior condition of the abandonment of anti-Semitism."

Christian Century 65:302 Mr 31 '48 100w

"A highly controversial volume and one that should prove stimulating to all friends of truth. . . An effective 'eye-opener.'" K. M. Chworowsky

Churchman 162:17 Ap 15 '48 240w

Reviewed by H. H. Wagner

— Springf'd Republican p14A Je 11 '48 90w

DANZIG, ALLISON, and BRANDWEIN, PETER, eds. Sport's golden age; a close-up of the fabulous twenties; foreword by John Kieran. 296p pl $3.95 Harper

796 Sports 48-8403

A symposium on the sports events and personalities of the 1920s, relating the great deeds of such heroes as Babe Ruth, Bobby Jones, Jack Dempsey, Bill Tilden, Paavo Nurmi, etc. Contributors include such sports reporters as Grantland Rice, John Kieran, Stanley Woodward, Arch Ward and J. Roy Stockton.

Kirkus 16:353 Jl 15 '48 120w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:1514 O 15 '48 20w

Reviewed by John Hutchens

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 N 21 '48 140w

"The sports' specialists who have contributed to 'Sport's Golden Age' have not confined themselves to canonizing their heroes. In their respective fields they have fully covered the muscular manifestations of the ten years assigned them with the result that the book is an accurate and comprehensive history of that span in fifteen sports, written with a minimum of delayed hysterics." Richard Maney

+ N Y Times p34 O 3 '48 650w

Reviewed by Ranson Howe

San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 19 '48 450w

"For a wealth of information, records and the best in good feeling 'Sport's Golden Age' is a must in every sport follower's collection. For writers it is invaluable." L. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p17B S 19 '48 650w

DARINGER, HELEN FERN. Mary Montgomery, rebel; il. by Kate Seredy. 222p $2.50 Harcourt

48-6025

A true story about a Georgia girl who was fourteen when the Civil war began. She "grew to young womanhood, learning, through the hard years, that some Union men were decent. Love, the acceptance of her first literary work, the period of reconstruction following the war —all find Mary facing issues squarely." (Kirkus)

Booklist 44:288 Ap 15 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Ag 14 '48 90w

"Beautifully and sensitively written, 'Mary Montgomery, Rebel' is a convincing portrait of a girl growing up, and a true glimpse of what the war meant to those behind the lines. There are spirited drawings by Kate Seredy." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 8 '48 340w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:196 My '48 100w

"In format the book looks distinctly younger than its text would indicate. The Kate Seredy illustrations lack the imaginative quality of most of her work."

Kirkus 16:111 Mr 1 '48 130w

"A pervading sense of reality bears out the statement that this is a true story of a girl forced by circumstances to take heavy responsibilities. . . Recommended for fifth to seventh grades." Anne Izard

+ Library J 73:657 Ap 15 '48 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 9 '48 340w

"A well-told story, with warmly human characters and authentic background, by the author of the popular 'Adopted Jane.'" Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p29 Ap 18 '48 500w

"As in 'Adopted Jane' [Book Review Digest 1947] the outstanding qualities in this book are understanding, honesty, and the power to create a character who lives and a scene that is convincing. As the younger girls welcomed 'Adopted Jane' last fall so the older ones will welcome this fine story of a girl who met sorrow and hardship with her head high and her faith in life unshaken."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:35 Ap 10 '48 200w

Wis Lib Bul 44:85 Ap '48

DARROW, KARL KELCHNER. Atomic energy. 80p il $2 Wiley

541.2 Atomic energy 48-8465

Four lectures delivered at Northwestern University. Covers the essentials of nuclear theory; the steps which led to the discovery of nuclear fission; the nature of Uranium 235; the principles underlying the atomic bomb; etc. The author is a physicist, at present associated with the Bell telephone laboratories. Index.

"A primer vastly more substantial than the many recent popularizations. . . Dr. Darrow addresses himself to the non-scientist (in fact, his eagerness to find simple analogies produces some ghastly professorial coyness). Even so, the text needs to be studied rather than just read. Anyone interested in the subject will find the effort thoroughly worth while."

+ Atlantic 182:15 N '48 180w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:949 Je 15 '48 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:66 S '48

School & Society 68:176 S 11 '48 10w

DAUGHERTY, JAMES HENRY. Wild wild West. [34p] il $2.50 McKay

811 48-8470

In pictures and verse this tells the story of the westward migration of the American pioneers and of life in the "roaring forties."

Booklist 45:182 Ja 15 '49

"There is action and sweep in the work of this artist. . . His verse rolls better at the start than when he tries to jam in the Atlantic Charter and a verbal one world . . . and where rhyme is mostly so rolling and full of words to remember it is painful to find the artist who draws such red and yellow stampedes and hard-sitting cattle men rhyming grass with cowboys singing bass. Sinful!" E. E.

+ — Commonweal 49:147 N 19 '48 130w

"Adventures, told in rushing verse with dramatic colorful pictures, make up unforgettable pages in the vital growth of America. For readers of any age." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:465 N '48 80w

Kirkus 16:478 S 15 '48 120w

"It's not great poetry but it will sound mighty good to young ears, and the intricately designed pictures, some in sepia and some in brilliant color, will bear looking at again and again." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p14 Ja 2 '49 130w

"The book would be fun to read aloud to a young student of American history, since Daugherty's trappers, plainsmen, settlers, forty-niners, and cattlemen are a colorful procession."

+ New Yorker 24:142 D 11 '48 80w

Sat R of Lit 31:36 N 13 '48 70w

Wis Lib Bul 44:215 D '48

DAVENPORT, WILLIAM WYATT, ed. Pacific era; a collection of speeches and other discourses in conjunction with the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the Univ. of Hawaii; foreword by Gregg M. Sinclair. 286p $3.75 Univ. of Hawaii

990 Pacific ocean. Hawaiian Islands. Education 48-7978

"This volume is a collection of speeches, a debate and a pageant, presented in connection with the celebration of the University of Hawaii's fortieth anniversary, March 17 to 25, 1947. The presidents of three leading American universities are among the contributors. President Charles Seymour of Yale University made four of the speeches, as did President Karl T. Compton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, while President Howard L. Bevis of Ohio State University delivered two. . . Included also in the volume is a debate on statehood for Hawaii between teams from Stanford and the University of Hawaii." N Y Times

"Apart from an able study of the progress of native races of the Pacific by Dr. Steiner . . . and an interesting discourse on the educational needs of China by Dr. Hung . . . the addresses of the eminent savants evince a broad catholicity of interest regarding the relation of education to the world and its problems, rather than anything of special import to the Pacific." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 23 '48 650w

Reviewed by N. B. Beck

N Y Times p27 S 12 '48 700w

DAVIDSON, DONALD. Tennessee; v2 The new river, Civil war to TVA; il. by Theresa Sherrer Davidson. (Rivers of America) 377p $3.50 Rinehart

917.68 Tennessee river. Tennessee valley (46-11901)

A second volume about the Tennessee river, of which the first was subtitled The Old River (Book Review Digest 1946). This volume takes up the story from 1861 to the installation of the Tennessee Valley Authority. Bibliography. Index.

"Opens with the Civil War campaign of the Union forces to secure control of the river. About a third of the book pertains to this story. This part is brilliantly written and makes exciting reading. . . A 'Miniver Cheevy,' scorning the new, the author finds it hard to admit much good in this instrument of progress. But the main facts are given, and, overlooking the personal bias, the part on the TVA is readable and instructive, thus completing the first good history of the Tennessee River and its valley." C. H. Smith

+ — Am Hist R 54:449 Ja '49 440w

Reviewed by H. C. Nixon

Am Pol Sci R 42:596 Je '48 300w

Booklist 44:200 F 1 '48

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 15 '48 750w

Current Hist 15:40 Jl '48 60w

Kirkus 15:639 N 15 '47 120w

"This addition to the Rivers of America series can be considered as a complete work, but its companion v. I, The Old River, should be available to readers. Both are by Davidson and both are recommended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:1776 D 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by Ernest Kirschten

Nation 166:421 Ap 17 '48 320w

"However one may disagree with Mr. Davidson's political and sociological theories, there is no denying that he is a competent craftsman. He is a professor of English who respects his own subject. His prose is not merely correct, it is lucid, smooth, supple; few Americans have a more carefully chiseled style, agreeable to the eye and ear without trumpery ornamentation, clear to the understanding without falling into puerility. In addition to that, his training as a scholar carries over from his own field into that of history, at least to the extent of making him careful about statements of fact. . . Such volumes are rarities—so rare that when one appears with the qualities of 'The Tennessee' even a reviewer who disagrees with its tenor in many respects must describe it as distinguished." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ja 25 '48 1900w

"Mr. Davidson's second volume on the Tennessee [is] more than a clear and well-expressed account of the later life of the Ohio's largest tributary. It engrosses anyone interested in the tensions of the Southern mind." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p24 Ja 25 '48 550w

"Mr. Davidson has done a fine job of presenting the whole troubled story."

+ New Yorker 23:86 Ja 24 '48 130w

"It would be unfair to overlook the vast amount of information that Mr. Davidson has gathered and presents, even when it is against his side. He knows and loves the river. Writing without regional curlicues, with the precision of a professor anywhere, he tells you about the past and present of Shoals mussels and notes that Pickwick Landing was named by a reader of Dickens. That 'The Tennessee' ends with a steamer trip instead of a discussion of the river as a provider of atomic power is to be expected. North or South, many people, like the author, prefer travel to change." Willson Whitman

Sat R of Lit 31:17 Ja 31 '48 650w

DAVIDSON, MORRIS. Approach to modern painting. 155p il $5 Coward-McCann

759 Painting 48-6902

"The first part of this book deals with some elementary considerations of esthetics. The major portion is a review of the various sources of modern painting and an exposition of the work of outstanding exponents of them. American modern painters are not discussed because they have been, however capable in some instances, followers of philosophies originated in Europe." (Introd) Index.

Booklist 44:333 Je 1 '48

"Aesthetic definition and consideration, that is sane rather than faddish in its treatment, this should prove a worthwhile addition to the art book shelves."

+ Kirkus 15:616 N 1 '47 140w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 73:879 Je 1 '48 130w

"Like all painters, Davidson is at his best when analyzing actual works of art; about them he has interesting, felicitous things to say; his judgment is of value. But a book of this capsular information sort is better left to the historian. Or else the bewildered layman will dig a Philistine trench and forget the whole thing." Stuart Preston

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:32 Ag 7 '48 650w

DAVIES, DAVID RICHARD. Reinhold Niebuhr: prophet from America. (Modern Christian revolutionaries) 102p $2 Macmillan

B or 92 Niebuhr, Reinhold 48-2696

An interpretation of Niebuhr's life and work, written by an Englishman, who is a friend of his subject.

Booklist 45:12 S 1 '48

"The book is not unmixed laudation, but an intelligent exposition and a sympathetic appraisal." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 65:631 Je 23 '48 130w

"Within the limits of a small volume the author is unexpectedly successful. If his praise is overdrawn and his interpretation oversimplified, his solid appreciation of Professor Niebuhr's influence and insight will lead many thoughtful people on both sides of the Atlantic to read the books of this 'Prophet from America'—and that is the sole purpose of this volume." C. L. Willard

+ Churchman 162:16 S 1 '48 290w

Reviewed by A. G. Widgery

Crozer Q 26:58 Ja '49 1600w

"A very readable and interesting interpretation. . . This is a book which should have a wide reading in America, for Reinhold Niebuhr is a much discussed religious leader and his neo-orthodoxy is hotly debated."
+ Kirkus 16:118 Mr 1 '48 220w

"Recommended to those who have read Niebuhr's books or expect to read them." O. G. Lawson
+ Library J 73:876 Je 1 '48 130w

"It is the merit of this small book, the work of one Dr. Niebuhr's English admirers, that it draws the separate strands of his thought together showing lucidly and perceptively the unity of his writings. . . The danger of a book about a man who is still very much in the thick of the fight is that it will say less well what the man has said for himself. Mr. Davies avoids this pitfall. He illumines Niebuhr's teaching without distorting it, and explains without entering into controversy. As an introduction to Dr. Niebuhr's own writings his book is admirable." August Heckscher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 11 '48 550w

"Mr. Davies, in this aid to the understanding of Dr. Niebuhr's writings, is not at all interested in adding his bit to the froth of shallow admiration for one of the most influential thinkers of our day. He would rather have people read Niebuhr; indeed, that is the chief purpose of this little book, first published in England in 1945. The other reason for the book is to pay grateful tribute to a man who helped resolve a deep inner crisis in his (Mr. Davies') life." G. R. Stephenson
+ N Y Times p8 Jl 4 '48 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 15 '48 400w

School & Society 68:63 Jl 24 '48 10w

DAVIES, DAVID RICHARD. The sin of our age. 147p $2 Macmillan
261 Civilization, Christian 47-11121

An examination of the principles underlying modern civilization—the striving for material gain at the expense of spiritual values. The author concludes with a plea for a return to the Christian faith.

"Mr. Davies' book is small indeed, but every page is electric with feeling and sharply clear insight. His concise argument annihilates the glories of technology, which has, so far, produced only Mass-Man for his own ultimate destruction." M. L. Eglinton
+ Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by O. G. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p11C D 7 '47 60w

DAVIES, RHYS. Dark daughters. 279p $3 Doubleday
48-5144

A somber novel of the life of a Welshman who establishes himself in a chemist's shop in London in 1895. He is a grasping man, with a love for money, and he prospers by sundry foul dealings. Both his wives are killed by his unkindness, and his one daughter by his second marriage escapes and goes on the stage. But his three spinster daughters by his first marriage turn on their father and inch by inch they drive him to despair and death.

— Kirkus 15:630 N 15 '47 180w

"Transitions are abrupt, characters unpleasant and scattered descriptive passages the only redeeming feature of this morbid account. . . Not recommended as a period piece or a psychological study." R. P. Tubby
— Library J 73:38 Ja 1 '48 70w

"It is a grim tale, such as, perhaps, only a Celt could write, but there is more here than grimness and more than writing of distinction. These caught in their web, are persons of a human tragedy." Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '47 120w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 118:25 F 23 '48 330w

"This is—not a study in hatred, for it is not a realistic book—but a revel in hatred, of the kind where the protagonists run mad in silver brocade, and where sometimes 'the flesh of their faces seems burned away and their heads are living skulls.' . . A rich tale this, told with a thunderous gusto and a flourish unimaginable." Julia Strachey
New Statesman & Nation 34:396 N 15 '47 550w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 30 '48 100w

"The author has a special touch with the dark unease of the Welsh temperament. Even in his most sedate vein of story-telling there is a trace of inner disorder, a faint stirring of horror which often leads the reader to the thin edge of fear. No matter where you start with Rhys Davies, you are apt to end up on intimate terms with the macabre." Jane Martin
N Y Times p20 Ja 25 '48 550w

"In The Dark Daughters Mr. Rhys Davies plunges the reader into a Victorian world of passionate hates; like Mr. Sadleir before him, he has a weakness for melodrama (visible at times through the rich exterior) and the ability to evoke a sickly miasma. . . All this is luridly described, but the story is so excellently contrived that it has a fascination of its own."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p561 N 1 '47 200w

DAVIS, CLYDE BRION. Temper the wind. 251p $2.75 Lippincott
48-5267

"A lusty, frolicsome story set in Wyoming and involving a pugilist; a morose taxi-driver; the boxer's manager, who is the town paper's sports columnist; and the inevitable light lady, now turned rooming-house operator and completely reformed. There is an exciting match between the pugilist and a sailor who once withstood Joe Louis for three rounds, which leads to a more or less telegraphed ending." New Yorker

Booklist 44:233 Mr 1 '48

"It is a lively, flavorsome story, full of the good sense and good writing that Clyde Brion Davis puts into his books." Herbert Kupferberg
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 F 29 '48 600w

"It's pretty lean material—and Shandy himself is a peculiarly listless character. He probably represents—in a dim and undirected way—the forces of confused, unsophisticated, unenlightened and generous integrity. . . The result is an indifferent novel." MacLennan Farrell
N Y Times p21 Mr 7 '48 280w

"Through the novel runs a thin vein of satire that is chiefly evident in a number of poker sessions, at which the amusing, broad chatter often turns to morality and ethics."
New Yorker 23:97 F 21 '48 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 1 '48 550w

"This novel is frankly for entertainment, and for entertainment—we assume—of masculine readers, at least of readers who are devotees of poker and pugilism. It reveals a deal of shrewd observation about our native scene and is narrated with breeziness and a flavorful feeling for colloquial speech. It does not fail to strew over its pages the half dozen slum words so fashionable with writers today." J. W. Rogers
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:28 F 21 '48 400w

DAVIS, EUGENE C., ed. 8 popular plays for amateurs in prompt book style; a practical production anthology. 258p il $4 Greenberg
812.08 Amateur theatricals. American drama—Collections. English drama—Collections 48-1958

Contents: A young man's fancy, a comedy by Hilda Manning; The dear departed, a farce

DAVIS, EUGENE C.—Continued
by Stanley Houghton; When Shakespeare's ladies meet, a burlesque by Charles George; The flattering word, a satire by George Kelly; Ile, a tragedy, by Eugene O'Neill; The crows-nest, a melodrama by W. F. Manley; The lovely miracle, a fantasy by Philip Johnson; The last of the Lowries, a folk play by Paul Green.

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '48

"This book should prove a godsend to any teacher who has the responsibility of putting on a play without the drama school 'know-how.' Highly recommended for all high school libraries as well as theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:475 Mr 15 '48 40w

"It should be an invaluable aid to the amateur director." L. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p10B Mr 28 '48 170w

DAVIS, FRANK GARFIELD, ed. Pupil personnel service. 638p $3.75 Int. textbook 371.42 Personnel service in education
48-5793

Textbook on pupil personnel work for the college or university student, as well as for counselors, school administrators, and teachers. The various phases of the subject are written by specialists. Partial contents: Pupil personnel service as a school function, by F. G. Davis; Mental and educational measurements in pupil personnel work, by W. H. Sauvain; Pupil personnel service and physical well-being, by J. W. Rice; Vocational guidance, by Joseph Miller; The place of the home in the pupil personnel program, by F. B. Parker; Pupil personnel program and the use of leisure time, by W. H. Sauvain; Personnel workers, by F. G. Davis; Post-school counseling, by F. G. Davis. Index.

Booklist 44:293 My 1 '48
School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 20w
Wis Lib Bul 44:78 Ap '48

DAVIS, FREDERICK CLYDE (MURDO COOMBS, STEPHEN RANSOME, pseuds). False bounty. 187p $2 Doubleday 48-6123

Detective story.

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun Ap 2 '48 70w

"Neat table turning, well sustained."
+ Kirkus 16:65 F 1 '48 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p25 Ap 4 '48 130w

"Good bucolic atmosphere, but not much else."
— + New Yorker 24:100 Ap 3 '48 80w

"Full marks."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:32 Je 12 '48 50w

DAVIS, FREDERICK CLYDE (MURDO COOMBS, STEPHEN RANSOME, pseuds). Gone tomorrow. 191p $2.25 Doubleday 48-9611

Detective story

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun D 17 '48 270w

Kirkus 16:561 O 15 '48 60w

"Recent developments in science come into the picture. Fast action, surprise finish, plenty of fatalities and peculiar college atmosphere." Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 D 19 '48 180w

"It is a terrifying story if one can believe that such crimes as those reported here are within the realm of possibility." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p11 D 26 '48 200w

"Rather confusing, in both plot and motivation."
New Yorker 24:120 D 18 '48 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 19 '48 120w

Sat R of Lit 32:32 Ja 1 '49 40w

DAVIS, FREDERICK CLYDE (MURDO COOMBS, STEPHEN RANSOME, pseuds). Moment of need. 214p $2.50 Dutton 48-5457

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:559 O 1 '47 90w

"Persons with queasy stomachs are advised not to read this book." I. A.
N Y Times p56 D 7 '47 110w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 1 '48 20w

"Has its moments."
Sat R of Lit 31:24 Ja 3 '48 40w

DAVIS, HALLOWELL, ed. Hearing and deafness; a guide for laymen. 496p il $5 Rinehart
617.8 Hearing. Deafness Med47-2478

Chapters on various aspects of the problems of deafness, contributed by specialists. Partial contents: Physics and psychology of hearing, by H. Davis; Medical aspects of hearing loss, by E. P. Fowler; Surgical treatment of hearing loss, by T. E. Walsh; The choice and use of hearing aids, by S. R. Silverman; Speech reading, by M. D. Pauls; Military aural rehabilitation, by N. Canfield, and L. E. Morrissett; From Aristotle to Bell, by S. R. Silverman; Hard-of-hearing children, by S. R. Silverman; The psychology of the hard-of-hearing and the deafened adult, by D. A. Ramsdell. Index.

"Dr. Davis and his thirteen contributors have written an admirable book which should be on the shelves of public health workers whose programs include, or should include, programs of hearing conservation." W. R. Willard
+ Am J Pub Health 38:881 Je '48 360w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:201 F 1 '48 40w

"The physician, nurse, teacher, psychologist, and sociologist should find this volume useful as a source of information which will provide proper and accurate answers to questions frequently asked them."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:90 Mr '48 260w

"Worth the price to any library." R. P.
+ Wis Lib Bul 44:18 Ja '48

DAVIS, HALLOWELL, and others. Hearing aids; an experimental study of design objectives. 197p il pa $2 Harvard univ. press
617.8 Hearing aids, Mechanical Med47-61

"Harvard University research workers have devised a heading aid which will work for all deaf or hard-of-hearing people. This study was an outgrowth of a study of noise made during the war and later. The result is that most patients hear best with an instrument which amplifies all frequencies uniformly or with moderate emphasis of the higher frequencies. Dr. S. S. Stevens, one of the authors, predicts that hearing aids will come with midget batteries and will be minute in size." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1614 N 15 '48 70w

"It is regrettable that the authors did not check their laboratory measurements with clinical tests. Nevertheless, the book is an important contribution to the technology of hearing aid design."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:413 D '47 240w

DAVIS, HARRY MEYER. Energy unlimited; the electron and atom in everyday life. 273p il $4 Rinehart

541.2 Atomic energy. Electronics 48-5011

"With technicalities reduced to a minimum, the Science Editor of Newsweek presents for the layman an explanation of various scientific facts which occur in everyday life. Supplemented by 100 illustrations is his story of atomic energy, the electron microscope, radar, electronic navigation, television, very brief outline of the radioisotopes and their use in search for cancer control. Parts of book formerly appeared in the magazine section of the N Y Times." (Library J) Indexes.

"This book, which shows the working of the electron and the atom in everyday life, is the clearest, most accurate and interesting treatment of the subject that has come to the reviewer's attention." Joseph Mayer

+ Ann Am Acad 258:143 Jl '48 410w

Reviewed by T. L. Rettger
Chem & Eng N 26:1247 Ap 26 '48 200w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:201 F 1 '48 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:75 O '47

"Written with almost unlimited energy and vivacity. . . First to last the volume is written clearly and cheerfully. It is up-to-date—indeed, almost ahead of the times—and it is accurate. It represents the highest development of the technique of explanation and reporting as evolved by our weekly news journals. For the reader who wants to know the quickly learned facts, for the man who wants to get from a book far more than he must bring to it, it is a good and skillful job although what physics here becomes is somehow not what physics means to the physicist, nor, I hope, to anyone who will stop to reflect." Philip Morrison

+ — N Y Times p6 F 8 '48 950w

School & Society 67:126 F 14 '48 20w

DAVIS, HENRY P. Training your own bird dog. 175p il $3.50 Putnam

636.75 Dogs—Training. Bird dogs 48-10585

"For the sportsman 'who has had no previous experience . . . who is interested in the practical rather than the theoretical side of training, and who desires to secure the greatest amount of pleasure from working his own dog.' " Library J

Kirkus 16:360 Jl 15 '48 100w

"An excellent job." R. H. Henderson

+ Library J 74:64 Ja 1 '49 40w

"A near must for those who have a dog and don't know quite how to turn him from a slap-happy companion into a working partner."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 28 '48 80w

DAVIS, KENNETH SYDNEY. Years of the pilgrimage. 372p $3 Doubleday

48-5050

"Story of a small town in which 'nothing ever happens'—Beecher, in central Kansas—the time 1946, when the story opens—but the greater part of the text looking backward to the internal turmoil of personalities at odds with themselves and each other. There's Joshua Greenwood, editor, who sits at the center of the web, but proves a reasonably kindly spider; there's Mrs. Greenwood with whom he has a truce; there's Harcourt Stevens, at war with the world, and a sadist, a dictator of his daughter Kathryn's checkered fate; there is Ferris Morehead, minister of the Congregational Church, a non-conformist on all counts, save in his love for his wife; and there's Carling, who comes in from outside and disrupts the thinly veiled pattern of living." Kirkus

Booklist 44:202 F 1 '48

"The Years of the Pilgrimage has sound and rich texture. Not a few readers will be deeply interested in its philosophical consideration of what the author calls 'Neo-religious' ideas. It is well worth reading. It is not, I think, so fine a novel as In the Forests of the Night." J. T. Frederick

+ — Chicago Sun Ja 14 '48 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja 1 '48

"Well done—one of the best . . . cross-sectionings of a community's life."

+ Kirkus 15:628 N 15 '47 150w

"Heavily naturalistic and often overwritten novel. . . A better novel than King's Row but rather reminiscent of it. Powerful and attention-holding, but of dubious value to smaller libraries." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 72:1778 D 15 '47 50w

"Prefaced by quotations from Kierkegaard and Bertrand Russell, 'The Years of the Pilgrimage' is stiff going at some points. As a whole, however, the novel has force and richness that fully engage one's interest both in the people of the story and in the ideas of which their lives are an inseparable part. It is an unusual and a spacious book." Mary Ross

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ja 18 '48 800w

"Mr. Davis' story is sprinkled with metaphysical arguments which may give pause to easily dismayed readers. (There is even a twelve-page section which he advises such readers to skip entirely.) But for those who, as he puts it, 'regard thought as the most intense form of action,' this book will be an unusual and stimulating reading experience." Richard Match

N Y Times p5 Ja 11 '48 750w

"It is a teeming novel, teeming with ideas and with experience. There are memorable passages. . . There is clear, revealing analysis of the minds of Stevens and Morehead. There is a sweeping sense of the Kansas country and of its vibrant past. Yet 'The Years of the Pilgrimage' is not fully satisfactory as a novel. Its central characters are embodiments of human attributes and attitudes, and they seem too deliberately counterpoised to give the illusion of life. In retrospect it seems less a novel than a fable, written with learning, urgency, and conviction, in sound and solid structure." Walter Havighurst

— + Sat R of Lit 31:15 Ja 17 '48 490w

DAVIS, MRS LAVINIA (RIKER). Threat of dragons. 192p $2 Doubleday

48-8414

Mystery story.

Kirkus 16:349 Jl 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p33 O 10 '48 240w

"Commendably plausible atmosphere. . . Above average."

+ New Yorker 24:120 S 25 '48 80w

"Here's the California scene again and refreshingly for a change, in what we'd call a darned good story." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 17 '48 90w

"Art-colony background suspensefully exotic, engaging heroine gets into exciting tight fixes, killer's identity ably concealed, and amateur detective convincing."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:34 S 25 '48 40w

DAVIS, MILDRED B. The room upstairs. 245p $2 Simon & Schuster

48-2986

Mystery story.

Booklist 45:52 O 1 '48

" 'The Room Upstairs' is an exercise in suspense which is managed with exceptional skill and endowed with a compulsion that will make you more comfortable if you can arrange to read it without intermission. The motive for murder here has the peculiar advantage of being at once familiar and uncommon. Readers who can shake themselves free of the compelling atmosphere may reasonably complain that the consequences of murder are extreme or

DAVIS, MILDRED B.—Continued
foolish; but Mrs. Davis' spell is sound in spite of this excess." James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun Ag 13 '48 380w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ag 29 '48 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p15 Ag 22 '48 180w

"Most of the characters are nerve-racking and a little improbable, and the crime they're worried about doesn't seem worth all their trouble."
New Yorker 24:84 S 4 '48 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 5 '48 70w

Sat R of Lit 31:30 S 4 '48 40w

DAVIS, ROBERT. France; il. by Rafaello Busoni. 24p $1.25 Holiday

914.4 France—Juvenile literature A48-6346

Very brief introduction to French history and political and economic life. For grades seven to nine.

Booklist 44:189 Ja 15 '48

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:124 Mr '48 50w

"Maps on the end papers are excellent. Informal style of the writer appeals to all ages. Would have interest for the junior high grades and up. It is so slight a book and not too well made that I would question its purchase for school libraries." Nelle McCalla
Library J 73:127 Ja 15 '48 70w

Wis Lib Bul 44:24 Ja '48

DAVIS, ROBERT. Padre Porko, the gentlemanly pig; il. by Fritz Eichenberg. 197p $2.50 Holiday

Folklore—Spain 48-8251

A revised edition of the chivalrous Spanish pig who brings help and wisdom to those calling for his aid. Two new stories have been added. For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Booklist 45:17 S 1 '48

"Robert Davis has kept the fluency of the voices which told him these stories. He has kept the humor, the emotion of despair, the elation of those who work together, the spiritual and earthy qualities of everyday life. Each of the Padre's rescues is so quietly thrilling that you long for a Spanish grandmother who knows more and more of his tales." M. B. King
+ Chicago Sun Jl 31 '48 120w

"The new stories are imbued with the same delicious humor and kindliness as the earlier ones, and Fritz Eichenberg's pictures are as funny as ever." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:379 S '48 70w

Kirkus 16:307 Jl 1 '48 80w

"Recommended." Harriet Morrison
+ Library J 74:134 Ja 15 '49 80w

"The happy marriage of text and illustration is even more evident than in the first edition. Here is a book to read, to share, and to remember."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 Ag 14 '48 110w

Wis Lib Bul 44:152 S '48

DAVIS, ROBERT. That girl of Pierre's; il. by Lloyd Lózes Goff. 230p $2.50 Holiday 48-8876

Story of 17-year-old Danielle's return to her village in southwestern France after the war. Her main problems were how to get her parents home, how to reclaim the family vineyard and how to obtain food and money owed her from an avaricious grocer. This story for young people ends with the announcement of Danielle's engagement after the successful community vintage.

Booklist 45:122 D 1 '48

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 168:218 D '48 100w

+ Commonweal 49:157 N 19 '48 200w

"An interesting and well-written story." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 24:462 N '48 50w

Kirkus 16:403 Ag 15 '48 130w

"An absorbing and well-written tale." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 73:1675 N 15 '48 80w

"As a story this would be more convincing if less happened. However, the author's knowledge of France and its young people as well as the picture of vineyard farming and cooperatives make this valuable and interesting for our American young people." M. C. Scoggin
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 17 '48 270w

"If at first the story seems to be too full of incident to be believable, readers will realize as they read on that it is just this rush of climaxes and important happenings in this short segment of Danielle's life that heightens the sense of warm reality. She is young and eager, she wants to attract incidents and opportunities, and she does." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Times p35 O 31 '48 250w

"Armand Guichard is a bit overdrawn, perhaps, and the story is carelessly written. The people use American idiom and even American slang—which does not harmonize with them or their background. Still, it is an absorbing story."
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:32 N 13 '48 230w

Wis Lib Bul 45:16 Ja '49

DAVIS, RUTH RUSSELL. Questing self [poems]. 54p $2.50 Alved of Detroit

811 48-6522

A first book of poems by a Michigan newspaper woman. It is "devoted to those dismayed or frightened folk who have seen the solid earth of our times crumbling and twisting into dread crevasses. She has joined the final bright mission of mankind, to measure and bridge these crevasses with a structure of fresh faith." (San Francisco Chronicle)

"In these verses there is no bravura note of affirmation; but each poem slips into the brooding mind with the restoring reverie of a twilight hour spent in a cathedral's dusk, or in the deep wintry woods where the arbutus breaks through the snow to greet the spirit that has been 'ice-locked in life's stream.'" H. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 27 '48 350w

"Mrs. Davis is a better observer than craftsman. Her ideas are fresh, her choice of images often unusual." A. M. Sullivan
+ Sat R of Lit 32:19 Ja 1 '49 130w

DAVIS, MRS WINIFRED LEMON. School library routines visualized. 56p $2.50 Lib. research service

020.2 Library science. School libraries

"The primary purpose of this manual is to present simply the principles underlying essential school library routines in the school library where usually a teacher-librarian is employed. Many details have been omitted in order that the fundamentals may stand out more clearly. A second purpose has been to show the use of 'aids', especially in classifying and in some parts of cataloging. These are of two kinds: those primarily concerned with classifying or cataloging; and, those furnishing such assistance in addition. The latter which are usually aids in book selection, by their arrangement and by their suggestion of class numbers and subject headings give added assistance." (Foreword) Bibliography.

Booklist 44:375 Jl 15 '48

"Will be useful to either school or public librarians with little or no training. An excellent selective bibliography that suggests books for further help and study."
+ Wis Lib Bul 44:152 S '48

DAY, CLARENCE SHEPARD. Best of Clarence Day. 451p $3.75 Knopf

818 48-6580

"Close to half of Mr. Day's total output, including 'God and My Father,' 'Life with Father,' and 'Life with Mother,' plus his long essay on man's wobbly trajectory toward the good society, called 'This Simian World.' There are also a few pages of jingles, embellished with drawings by the author, from the collection 'Thoughts Without Words.'" New Yorker

Booklist 44:316 My 15 '48

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 Ap 25 '48 230w

"I advise all families to read many parts of the book aloud, for it will have the same effect that the play had when attended by a husband and wife. . . 'The Best of Clarence Day' indeed! That's what he never did anything except." F. P. Adams

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 15 '48 550w

New Yorker 24:124 My 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 31:25 Je 12 '48 100w

DAY, CYRUS LAWRENCE. Art of knotting and splicing. 229p il $6 Dodd

677.7 Knots and splices 47-11814

Following chapters on the history of knots and their relative strengths, the book consists of photographs and text on the knotting and splicing of rope. Bibliography. Index. This is an outgrowth of the author's earlier work: Sailors Knots (Book Review Digest 1935).

Booklist 44:212 F 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:44 Ja 1 '48 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:14 Ja '48

"The author has carefully arranged his material so that the text and the appropriate photographs face each other throughout. Moreover, a glossary accompanied by Mr. Day's clear, easy style of writing leaves nothing unexplained." R. S. Robbins

+ N Y Times p29 Mr 7 '48 150w

DAY-LEWIS, CECIL (NICHOLAS BLAKE, pseud). Minute for murder, by Nicholas Blake. 242p $2.50 Harper

48-774

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Ja 9 '48 270w

Kirkus 15:612 N 1 '47 90w

"A highly literate job, with detection taking a back seat to an assortment of 'public servants' and their departmental wranglings." E. H.

+ New Repub 118:30 Ja 19 '48 100w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 34:74 Jl 26 '47 450w

"Nicholas Blake, otherwise Cecil Day-Lewis, British poet, herewith offers jigsaw puzzlers the choicest item in quite some time, a good old-fashioned whodunit full of excitement and superior dodges of every sort, including a bit of fun. Naturally, the detection is fine." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ja 18 '48 290w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p24 F 1 '48 180w

"A wartime government bureau is not only an excellent locale for murder but a made-to-order target for literary ribbing. Both these advantages are fully exploited in this account. . . A very neat piece of work, faintly reminiscent of Dorothy Sayers' 'Murder Must Advertise,' though not on a par with that landmark."

+ New Yorker 23:84 Ja 17 '48 110w

"Very best British brand."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:26 Ja 17 '48 50w

Reviewed by John Garrett
Spec 179:56 Jl 11 '47 300w

Wis Lib Bul 44:41 F '48

DAY-LEWIS, CECIL (NICHOLAS BLAKE, pseud) Poems, 1943-1947. 82p $2.75 Oxford

821 48-9136

These poems are on a variety of subjects: about the author when young; love; tributes to Hardy, De La Mare, Blunden; nature; and translations from Valéry.

"Interesting, sincere and capable poetry, at times faintly incandescent and moving, this will be received with interest by all who follow modern poetical output."

+ Kirkus 16:590 N 1 '48 220w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p3 D 28 '48 150w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 167:731 D 25 '48 130w

"'Poems 1943-47' is not an exciting book, nor does it add perceptibly to Mr. Day Lewis' stature. One has come to expect from him those qualities of humanity and sympathetic insight which he expresses, at his best, in verse which is formally and sonably attractive. And one is not disappointed here in such poems as 'Married Dialogue,' 'The Woman Alone' and 'Emily Brontë'—to cite three of the most successful. The longer poems, notably 'New Year's Eve,' tend to disintegrate." Dudley Fitts

+ — N Y Times p28 N 14 '48 300w

"Mr. Day Lewis is so frequently brilliant in a single poem, and in a single line and stanza, that the fact that his volume as a whole seems inconsequential is puzzling. The assurance of his early, revolutionary political point of view has been dissipated by a wavering pessimism, and it is this lack of emotional base that defeats him."

New Yorker 24:86 Ja 22 '49 70w

"Common sense is a virtue not often associated with poetry. The reader finds it abundantly—and refreshingly—manifest here, however. Take the long, reflective, admirably controlled 'Sketches for a Portrait,' in which a mass of Lewis-imagery lies embedded: the forest, the mines, water-pictures. Tangential, suggestive, densely-conceived, this poem is one of the most revealing and impressive in the book." Howard Griffin

+ Sat R of Lit 32:18 Ja 1 '49 460w

"The latest poems of C. Day Lewis are a disappointment. They lack ignition. Day Lewis has, indeed, the range of expression of a first-rate poet, the aim, the sensitivity, but not the effect. The poet's work must have some application wider than the intimacies of the experiences which produce it; but reading Day Lewis is like reading a personal notebook. He has passion and pain, but it is the passion and pain of a man in another city, not yours." H. A. L. Craig

— + Spec 181:176 D 10 '48 270w

"He has not quiveringly celebrated his ego like Mr. Spender, nor achieved the apotheosis of undergraduate brilliance like Mr. Auden, nor become a dab at slick felicities like Mr. MacNeice. He has taken a quieter, even at times a duller, path, and it has led him more and more from a poetry of ideas to one of feelings—in the contemporary case, so often an improvement. His progress has been from iron to feathers, and it is curious that a movement in the other direction should ever have been thought progressive."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p654 N 20 '48 1400w

DEAN, ABNER. What am I doing here? 160p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 47-12507

"In eighty-eight deft drawings, Mr. Dean runs a hopeful and hapless specimen of contemporary man through a gamut of minor frustrations, nightmares, bafflements and wish-

DEAN, ABNER—Continued
thinking. The hero and the men and women who people his world, are naked. Not naked as the day they were born, but naked as the day Mr. Dean's pencil got to work on them: for it is not the presence of nakedness so much as the absence of clothes (or protection) that is underlined in Mr. Dean's figures." N Y Times

---

Reviewed by Iris Barry
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 21 '47 400w

Reviewed by A. S. Morris
N Y Times p24 D 14 '47 550w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 25 '48 300w

"It may be that you will disagree with Mr. Dean. You may regard yourself as a person of purpose, of meaning, of virtue, of nobility. Most of all, you may regard yourself a center of intellect and will, a mind objectively scanning its environment, making judgments based on reflection, acting shrewdly and for gain. It may be that this is so; your bank books, your newspaper clippings, and the signed statements of people in your hire may prove it. In such case you will find Mr. Dean's drawings an interesting commentary on the people around you in the world. Either way the book is an ideal Christmas gift." Thomas Sugrue
+ Sat R of Lit 30:27 D 6 '47 450w

DEAN, AMBER. No traveller returns. 189p $2.25 Doubleday
49-7003

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p38 Ja 14 '49 50w
Kirkus 16:561 O 15 '48 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 Ja 9 '49 100w

"Passable."
New Yorker 24:80 Ja 8 '48 90w

"Beginning and ending are hackle-raising but intervening chapters seem rather thin and casual."
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:32 Ja 22 '49 40w

DEAN, GRAHAM M. Dusty of the Double Seven; il. by John Mariani. 189p $2 Viking 48-1919

A young ex-marine takes a job riding range on the Double Seven ranch in Nevada. As he steps off the train he lands in the middle of a range war. A combination of cowboy and detective story for junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 44:302 My 1 '48

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Jl 3 '48 50w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 29 '48 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:279 Jl '48 80w

"All young readers of Westerns will like this."
+ Kirkus 16:87 F 15 '48 90w

"Good, authentic, modern Western with plenty of action, good characterization, and local color." M. D. Read
+ Library J 73:882 Je 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by V. H. Mathews
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 15 '48 200w

Reviewed by Howard Pease
+ N Y Times p12 Ag 1 '48 140w

DEAN, LEON W. Red man's trail; decorations by Kurt Werth. 264p $2.25 Rinehart 48-1064

Adventure story about a hunt for Indian relics around Lake Champlain.

"There's enough of romance, discreetly in the background for this to have girl as well as boy appeal. Sprightly writing, with easy literary puns, which will delight young teens."
+ Kirkus 16:52 F 1 '48 130w

"Excellent story for teen-age boys; action, suspense, humor and well-developed characterizations make this not only exciting but easy reading." M. F. Cox
+ Library J 73:562 Ap 1 '48 70w

"Kenn and Tud are the kind of young men most people, whether teen age or adult, would like. Much of the story is told in dialogue, and as the talk is modern, real and often funny it adds a great deal to the general liveliness of the book." Irmengarde Eberle
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 11 '48 240w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
+ N Y Times p29 Ap 4 '48 190w

DEAN, ROBERT BERRIDGE. Modern colloids; an introduction to the physical chemistry of large molecules and small particles. 303p il $3.75 Van Nostrand
541.342 Colloids 48-1599

"Begins with methods for determining the size and shapes of colloidal particles in the wide-spread uses of the electron microscope, X-ray diffraction apparatus, ultracentrifuge and other new research tools. Covers the present-day range of colloid science with emphasis on practical applications. Includes the natural high polymers, synthetic rubbers, resins, and other products of chemical reactions. It deals with dyes, stains and absorption indicators, as well as with ion exchange, chromatographic analysis, heterogeneous catalysis, electrokinetic phenomena and the Donnan equilibrium." (Library J) Index.

"According to the author, colloid chemistry had fallen into bad repute, but much of the dead wood is being cleared away. The reviewer doubts that this book will assist in this process of rejuvenation. The author's definition of colloids is not up to date and will give the reader an entirely wrong impression of what colloid chemistry stands for. . . The author deserves credit for his enthusiasm and for his desire to stimulate the interest of others in the multifarious colloidal phenomena in such diverse fields as chemistry, biology, medicine and agriculture. It would be risky, however, to depend upon this book for an introduction to the behavior of colloidal materials, because it disregards many basic phenomena characteristic of this state of matter or offers inadequate explanations; and its organization will confuse the reader more than it will enlighten him." E. A. Hauser
— + Am Chem Soc J 70:1987 My '48 350w

Reviewed by R. C. Bacon
Chem & Eng N 26:2386 Ag 9 '48 450w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:480 Mr 15 '48 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:37 My '48

DEAN, MRS VERA (MICHELES). United States and Russia. 321p maps $3 Harvard univ. press
327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia. Russia—Foreign relations—U.S. 47-11573

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"There is surely a danger in seeing everything in too dark colors, but there is also a danger in the inclination to present too rosy a view. The Soviet Union of Mrs. Dean is somewhat too good-natured, too harmless. The Bolsheviks appear as progressives who sometimes act too brutally and without regard for individual rights in order to overcome Russian backwardness with accelerated methods. Therefore Mrs. Dean is inclined not to drive deep enough (despite some critical remarks) the analysis of Soviet terminology. . . What must be criticized in Mrs. Dean's informative book is not the enumeration of facts, but their selection and interpretation. Despite a wide knowledge of details and the presentation of interesting but isolated facts—for example, Soviet trade relations with Sweden—Mrs. Dean's book does not probe the fundamental trends of the Soviet regime." Waldemar Gurian

+ — Am Hist R 53:541 Ap '48 800w

"Except for what the reviewer regards as a failure to deal with the essential issue, Mrs. Dean's book is scrupulously fair, and free of pro-or anti-Soviet bias. In view of various efforts to smear the writer as a party-liner, this point deserves underscoring. The book is equipped with a good index and some useful, though rather incomplete, suggestions for further reading." Barrington Moore
+ — Am Pol Sci R 42:127 F '48 750w

" 'If we are to meet Russia on equal terms, we shall have to abandon our nonchalant attitude of a spectator and accept full responsibility for the idea of democracy we profess and urge other nations to put into practice.' With this profession of faith no one could quarrel. Buttressed by fact and argument, it would be an eloquent appeal. But it tends to be lost in the author's special pleading for Russia. Even this secondary aim, however laudable in theory, is hardly achieved; the complete absence of documentation leaves unsupported the arguments she advances and leads one to believe that they are a mere matter of opinion." S. R. Tompkins
— Ann Am Acad 256:213 Mr '48 500w

Foreign Affairs 26:576 Ap '48 100w

"If Vera Micheles Dean's The United States and Russia . . . could receive the attention it deserves, it would make a contribution toward substituting sanity and good sense for the growing hysteria about the Soviet Union. Not for many months has any author regarded the relations between the two current world antagonists with such calmness, objectivity and intelligent understanding." Richard Watts
+ New Repub 117:29 D 29 '47 850w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 25 '48 160w

Reviewed by Harold Butler
Spec 180:530 Ap 30 '48 700w

"Many of Mrs. Dean's readers will endorse her attitude that the conflict between the two nations will not be resolved by a reactionary America. Her book is an appeal for liberalism at home, and for attempted understanding rather than fear and ignorance in our relations abroad. The logic of the argument, the manifest effort to be objective and fair in the presentation, and the depth of understanding that are characteristic of the author's approach can only be appreciated after a careful reading, and perhaps rereading of the volume. Thoughtful and concerned Americans should do just that." R. A. Brown
+ Survey G 37:169 Mr '48 380w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:70 Mr '48 320w

Wis Lib Bul 44:61 Mr '48

DEASY, MARY. Hour of spring. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 368p $3 Little 47-12534

A family chronicle of the Irish-American Joyces and the people they married, from 1870 to 1928. The Joyces came from County Kerry and settled in the American middle west, and their story is told thru three generations.

Booklist 44:248 Mr 15 '48

"The Hour of Spring is rewarding and promising."
+ Cath World 167:286 Je '48 200w

"Some of the charm of the book comes from the unusual method of presenting the material. . . Each narrator is clearly portrayed in his own talk and each presents a different view of the Joyces. . . Miss Deasy's way of writing about the Irish is not conventional. She would doubtless take up the cudgels for them at any moment, but she is realistic about them." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 21 '48 480w

"The restrictions on immigration imposed by the quota system will eventually put an end to Irish-American literature—and to all hyphenated American literature—as such. But in the meanwhile, since a tradition becomes most precious when people grow aware that it is dying, we may expect a number of more or less nostalgic family chronicles on the lines of 'The Hour of Spring.' It wouldn't at all surprise me if Mary Deasy's remained the best of them, but her future books are hardly likely to continue this genre. I think it would be a great mistake if they did. She has great skill in construction, and a gift for creating characters that the reader not only believes in, but positively gets to know. Now that she has made this gesture of piety towards her Irish past, she ought to feel free to follow her talent wherever it leads. Her subject matter is the individual or the family group, and neither has to be Irish." Vivian Mercier
Commonweal 47:402 Ja 30 '48 1100w

Kirkus 15:655 D 1 '47 220w

"Irish speech and humor mark the telling of the chronological tales by three of the characters, and the whole forms a novel that is at times colorful but at other times tiresome in the extreme." M. H. Zipprich
+ — Library J 73:122 Ja 15 '48 70w

" 'The Hour of Spring' creates a rich sense of the peculiar bright-patterned fabric of Irish-American family life; and Miss Deasy's writing, strikingly Irish-American in its idiom, smoothly sustains the mood. The lyric quality of the novel and much of its emotional momentum arise, one suspects out of the author's own half-Irish heritage. 'The Hour of Spring' has all the earmarks of being a romantic love letter to Erin from one of her own." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 25 '48 700w

"The author's quiet, perceptive handling of all this turbulence irons out the Wild Irish Rose flavor you might expect. In spite of the vivid Irish accent ringing through these pages, this is no fine broth of a book to be filed away with foreign recipes for living. These are human, comic, tragic, emotional reminiscences told in an easy flowing style which takes possession of our Anglo-Saxon prejudices. It is also a warm record of America, the great alchemist." Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p14 Ja 25 '48 600w

"Miss Deasy manages to differentiate between several shadings of the Irish brogue, but her attempt to bind the activities of her twenty-two characters into a firm narrative is less successful."
New Yorker 23:82 Ja 24 '48 110w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 29 '48 100w

" 'The Hour of Spring,' Miss Deasy's first novel, is like one of the Joyce funeral conclaves, a rousing affair with never a dull moment, lively with racial wit, family gossip, and internecine repartee. Miss Deasy has charm of characterization and a warm touch in portraying the petite bourgeoisie of a Midwestern city during the transition from the Victorian to the modern era. The story of the Joyces is a good story. It lacks only the spiritual approach to make it a strong story." A. F. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 31:16 Ja 24 '48 550w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p12B Mr 21 '48 180w

Wis Lib Bul 44:63 Mr '48

DE BEAUVOIR, SIMONE. See Beauvoir, S. De

DE BRUNHOFF, LAURENT. See Brunhoff, L. de

DEBS, EUGENE VICTOR. Writings and speeches; introd. by Arthur M. Schlesinger, jr. 486p il $4 Hermitage press
308 48-3028

"It is good to have these speeches and articles gathered together in a handy volume, for while many of them are simply exhortations to the faithful, often in terms the modern faithful will regard as quaint, a proportion of

DEBS, E. V.—Continued
them help redress the historical balance. I would select as especially worth reading those dealing with the Pullman strike, the Canton speech that got Debs into Atlanta during World War I, the furious attacks on Theodore Roosevelt for his labor outlook and the equally furious (in the opposite direction) apologetics for Haywood, the McNamaras and Tom Mooney." N Y Times

---

"A useful selection from the works of Eugene V. Debs. . . It is a serious weakness of this volume [however] that there is no explanation by the (unnamed) editor as to how the included material was selected. For all the reader knows, the book may contain nearly all the published articles and speeches of Debs; or it may contain only a small fraction of them. What was excluded and why?" P. M. Sweezy
+ — J Pol Econ 56:541 D '48 1050w

Reviewed by George Mayberry
New Repub 119:24 N 1 '48 1150w

"Mr. Schlesinger's introduction is very good, though it leans more to historical than to personal analysis. At the end of his essay Schlesinger is at pains to dissociate Debs from the Communists, for he sees Debs, entirely correctly, as a true democrat, analogous in outlook to the British Socialists and fundamentally antipathetic to the Soviet totalitarians." C. H. Grattan
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 18 '48 850w

DE CAPITE, MICHAEL. Bennett place. 210p $2.75 Day
47-12535

"The effects of one woman's suicide on a group of people in a small Midwestern university town. Katherine Bennett who lived in the Bennett Place up on the hill and whose family had founded the town and the university, had become, without her wishing it, a kind of symbol to the people of Sparta. . . The story is told [by] six of the people of Sparta. The weak, self-indulgent man who could not face the uncompromising demands of Katherine Bennett's love for him. A girlhood friend grown hard and ruthless with wealth. A young veteran whom Miss Bennett had befriended. A writer trying and failing to have it both ways, to cling to the security and comfort of his job at the university and 'write on the side.' A broken crippled hero of the first World War. And finally the doctor who had known her all her life." N Y Times

---

Reviewed by E. B. Thompson
Chicago Sun p47 F 12 '48 310w

"DeCapite has used very well the method practiced by Conrad, and by Browning in The Ring and the Book, of relating a central story by means of the reflections of minor characters. He has arranged the stories of Miss Bennett's friends so that each advances the action and each increases our knowledge of all the characters concerned. Though the stories are not all equally successful, the author shows in general a fine understanding of the dreams and desires of diverse people." R. H. Goodale
+ — Christian Century 65:448 My 12 '48 350w
Christian Science Monitor p12 F 7 '48 360w
Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja 1 '48

"A credible if rather purposeless interpretation of a woman to whom the years brought little resolution, but with scarcely sufficient story value to attract a large audience."
+ — Kirkus 15:632 N 15 '47 120w

"Worthwhile as a finely written psychiatric study, but not as a well integrated novel. Recommended for large libraries." R. P. Tubby
+ — Library J 73:39 Ja 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
— Manchester Guardian p3 Jl 16 '48 210w

Reviewed by Simon Harcourt-Smith
New Statesman & Nation 36:161 Ag 21 '48 150w

"Mr. De Capite writes with vigor and smoothness and concreteness. The distinction of the book lies deeper, however, in the range and nicety of his characterization of Katherine and the six. One is not likely soon to forget this portrait of a lost lady—a woman for whom Amy Lowell's 'Patterns' might have been written." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 1 '48 600w

"In many ways 'The Bennett Place' deserves high praise: by any real standards it is a better book than many that reach the best-seller lists—better written, better constructed, more deeply and honestly felt, and concerned with a genuine and important problem. The trouble is that in writing this kind of book, Mr. De Capite has, commendably, waived his right to the charitable standards accorded popular books on popular subjects. And lacking the slick superficiality of many novels, his book unfortunately lacks too the intense perception and feeling, the really fine characterization and prose of the kind of writing by whose standards it must be judged." Marc Brandel
N Y Times p21 Ja 18 '48 500w

"A familiar theme, but quite well handled in this case. It is possibly the first time that New England and the South have lost out to Ohio as the setting for a story of aristocratic suffering."
+ New Yorker 23:82 Ja 17 '48 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 27 '48 750w

" 'The Bennett Place' does not quite come off. There is an unevenness in the images and a tendency towards discursiveness which destroy clarity. This is a pity as there is so very much that is splendid in it. The feeling of a small town, the hunger of university life, the terrible impulse to conceal despair are unforgettably done. So is the house on the hill and the last of the Bennetts living in it. But these choice bits only make us long for more." C. M. Brown
— + Sat R of Lit 31:17 Ja 17 '48 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Jl 24 '48 180w

DE CHANT, JOHN A. Devilbirds; the story of United States Marine corps aviation in World war II; foreword by A. A. Vandegrift. 265p il $4 Harper

940.544 U.S. Marine corps. World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 47-30946

"A detailed account of Marine Corps aviation in World War II. . . The author, combat correspondent for four years with aviation units from one end of the Pacific to the other, knows the Marine Corps inside out and was chosen to tell the story of its exploits in the air. From Pearl Harbor to Okinawa not a single campaign or major combat is omitted, while the telling ranges from the overall scene to individual feats. Though the bulk of the narrative is given over to front-line fighting Captain De-Chant does not overlook the less spectacular 'milk-run' containing raids on Rabaul and other by-passed strongholds which continued long after the main effort had moved thousands of miles away." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Glossary. Index.

"A well written and splendidly illustrated section of American history."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 D 14 '47 180w

" 'Devilbirds' is authentic history. But it has the inherent defect of all books about the war that attempt to tell it from the perspective of only one organization. A story of Guadalcanal with only bare mention of the great sea battles that were fought in those waters, the story of the Philippines campaign with only a bare mention of the battle for Leyte Gulf, one of the great sea battles of all time, gives too distorted a picture. The principal objection to 'Devilbirds,' however, is its title. I would advise any one addressing a marine flier with that appellative to duck. But quick." Foster Hailey
N Y Times p5 F 1 '48 330w

"The book gives a concise, excellent history of Corps aviation from its inception. Neither a critique nor a judgment, it is a dramatic and coherent account of one fact of the kaleidoscopic pattern created by the diverse nature of the Pacific war. In viewing the part played by Corps airmen in these campaigns, the reader will catch revealing glimpses of the efforts of all Allied forces. He may, and should, scrutinize the details of modern war needed to prosecute such efforts." C. L. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ja 25 '48 320w

DECKER, DUANE WALTER. Starting pitcher. 187p $2.50 Mill

48-2166

Baseball story for older boys and girls. A star shortstop, because of an accident, is unable to finish out his first year's contract. But Eddie was not content to draw his salary for sitting on the sidelines, so he joined the mound corps, and eventually he was back in the game.

Booklist 44:357 Je 15 '48

Kirkus 16:112 Mr 1 '48 80w

"The writing is above average. One feels the author really knows his baseball, and he has not written down for younger readers. Highly recommended for older boys." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 73:955 Je 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

N Y Times p20 Je 27 '48 110w

DE FOREST, JOHN WILLIAM. A Union officer in the reconstruction; ed. with an introd. and notes by James H. Croushore and David Morris Potter. 211p $3.75 Yale univ. press

973.714 Freedmen. South Carolina—Social life and customs. Reconstruction 48-6392

John De Forest was a Northerner who married a Charleston girl. During the Civil war he was captain of a Connecticut company. For fifteen months he was an official of the Freedmen's Bureau in Greenville, South Carolina, whose duty it was to protect the rights and provide for the needs of the liberated Negroes. This volume, based on De Forest's original manuscripts, is a description of the troubles of his administration. Index.

Reviewed by H. E. Starr

Am Hist R 54:214 O '48 260w

"De Forest had a remarkable eye for detail, ear for dialect and mind for the discovery of motive and character. His picture of the reconstruction period and of the work of the Freedmen's Bureau is neither Thomas Dixon's nor Howard Fast's. But when you have finished reading it you will say, 'Yes, this is probably the way it was.'" Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 65:686 Jl 7 '48 250w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery

Commonweal 48:410 Ag 6 '48 230w

Current Hist 14:347 Je '48 60w

Kirkus 16:162 Mr 15 '48 150w

"This edition of his original manuscripts (preserved in the Yale University Library) sparkles with real people, all portrayed brilliantly and not without humor by a man with a very discerning eye for vital human experiences. Recommended." Clarence Gorchels

+ Library J 73:704 My 1 '48 140w

"To the historian, De Forest's articles will prove invaluable for their rich portrayal of southern society—the Negroes, the poor whites, and the crackers, the defeated gentry. It is strange that scholars of Reconstruction have neglected these essays, but now that they are available, all students of American culture will find them rewarding." Perry Miller

+ New Eng Q 21:392 S '48 1050w

"When John William De Forest returned from service as acting assistant commissioner for the Greenville, South Carolina, District of the Freedman's Bureau, he wrote a series of articles on his experiences. . . Their reappearance, splendidly edited and provided with an adequate introduction, is a most welcome event." Avery Craven

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Je 13 '48 1000w

"De Forest speaks with such graphic force, such intellectual clarity, and such artistic brilliance upon so many phases of Southern life that the readers interest is under incessant whip and spur for 204 pages—for 230 pages, as a matter of fact, since the book has an introduction by David M. Potter which is wise, balanced and brilliant, too." Lloyd Lewis

+ N Y Times p19 Jl 18 '48 1000w

"It is an accurate and unprejudiced document on a turbid phase of our history. De Forest knew the South well, and he levels upon its collapsed society the steady and searching beam of his dispassionate New England intellect."

+ New Yorker 24:118 My 22 '48 130w

Time 51:106 My 24 '48 900w

DEGAS, HILAIRE GERMAIN EDGAR. Letters; ed. by Marcel Guerin; tr. from the French by Marguerite Kay. 270p il $6 Studio

B or 92 49-188

"The first edition in English of the French Impressionist's letters. . . The letters are frequently concerned with humdrum matters—discussions of money, problems with dealers, and such—but even these had their importance in Degas' life, and from the whole collection one gets a valuable impression of the man's complex personality." (New Yorker) Index.

"'Degas was he a letter writer?' as the preface rhetorically asks. Alas! Not one who will be interesting to posterity; only very occasionally does one find a remark of any permanent importance." S. B.

— Manchester Guardian p3 Je 4 '48 170w

"[The letters are] unfortunately marred by a halting translation."

New Yorker 24:84 Ja 15 '49 80w

"Degas allowed his personality to appear, though guardedly, in his letters to his friends. One gets the flavour of the man, and it is the flavour of a silent, rather sardonic individual, who kept even his sense of humour well buried." Monk Gibbon

Spec 181:312 S 3 '48 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p622 N 6 '48 750w

DEGRAFF, HERRELL FRANKLIN, and HAYSTEAD, LADD. Business of farming. 244p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

631.1 Farm management Agr48-32

An outline of the business of managing a farm so as to make a profit. Considers such aspects as soil, equipment, labor management, and farm organization. Index.

"Sticking to fundamentals, they point out many useful ideas to the farmer." F. W. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 1 '48 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '48

Wis Lib Bul 44:183 N '48

DEGRAS, HENRY ERNEST (MARK BENNEY, pseud). Gaol delivery. 128p $2.50 Longmans

365 Prisons—Great Britain 48-3082

"An account of English prisons during the war based on the testimony contained in a hundred replies made by ex-prisoners [mostly conscientious objectors] to a questionnaire prepared by the Howard League for Penal Reform." Foreword

---

"A more orthodox cross-section of the prison population might have been less articulate and, in some respects, less trustworthy, but it would have provided a better 'lag's-eye' view. Some of the present witnesses are not entirely free from the suspicion that they would have found the Army little better than the gaol—or perhaps even a factory, had they taken the alternative of industrial service. Fortunately the greater part of the book is Mr. Benney's own and his use of his expert witnesses is tempered with sound judgment and an intimate knowledge of his subject. The general impression he successfully conveys is that of the great number of comparatively little things that are wrong with prison life, most of which could be put right with a minimum of reforming effort, though in cumulative effect they are far from trivial." H. D. N.

DEGRAS, H. E.—Continued

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 30 '48 210w

"A neat, trenchant, condemnation of the modern English prison system." Maurice Richardson

+ New Statesman & Nation 35:338 Ap 24 '48 750w

Reviewed by Edward Hodgkin
Spec 180:562 My 7 '48 330w

"A remarkably sane, thoughtful, restrained piece of work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p200 Ap 10 '48 1100w

DE KERCHOVE, RENE. International maritime dictionary; an encyclopedic dictionary of useful maritime terms and phrases, together with equivalents in French and German. 946p il $10 Van Nostrand

359.03 Naval art and science—Dictionaries. Dictionaries, Polyglot 48-5261

"Very complete authentic encyclopedic dictionary of maritime terms and phrases together with equivalents in French and German. 30,000 terms include those used in seamanship navigation, marine meteorology, oceanography, maritime and international law, marine insurance and shipping. By means of large number of illustrations integrated with descriptions, the book portrays the salient features and distinguishing characteristics of ships and all their parts, nautical instruments, equipment and machinery. French and German glossaries." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:201 F 1 '48 70w

"Mr. de Kerchove has included as few maritime dictionaries have, descriptions of native and local craft from all parts of the world, a handy feature if you want to know what a sauterellier, sondmorsbaat, moato, paraje or a Thames sailing barge may look like. . . Another useful feature is the inclusion of German and French equivalents for most words and nautical expressions since these languages and English are most commonly used in international trade. A generous sprinkling of charts and sketches also helps to make things clear. One regrets the omission of a phonetic guide to pronunciation, and the dictionary might have been made even more interesting if derivations had been included for some of the colorful sea terms defined." Walter Hamshar

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 F 29 '48 420w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:8 Ja '48

New Yorker 23:68 Ja 31 '48 160w

DE KNIGHT, FREDA. Date with a dish; a cook book of American Negro recipes; foreword by Gertrude Blair. 426p $3 Hermitage

641.5 Cookery, Negro 48-7502

"This is the first cookbook of American Negro recipes. Its author [is] a home economics major, a teacher of cooking in the New York Public School system and cooking editor of Ebony, the widely circulated Negro magazine." San Francisco Chronicle

"Even though it is a hodge-podge, including some traditionally bad Southern recipes along with many very good ones, it has a place on the housewife's shelf." H. L. Mason

N Y Times p39 N 28 '48 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 6 '48 650w

DELACROIX, EUGENE. Journal; tr. from the French by Walter Pach; il. with reproductions of the paintings and drawings of the artist. 750p $5 Crown

B or 92 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-6089

This journal, first published in 1937 (Book Review Digest 1937, 1938) is a record of the painter's thoughts and activities from 1822 till his death in 1863. Index.

"With reduced margins, illustrations gathered together and an excellent index added, this book, otherwise identical with the 1937 edition, long out of print, is a valuable addition to library shelves." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 73:709 My 1 '48 130w

Reviewed by Stephen Bone
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 31 '48 330w

Reviewed by E. S. West
New Statesman & Nation 36:197 S 4 '48 2000w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Je 6 '48 220w

New Yorker 24:120 Mr 20 '48 80w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 My 15 '48 450w

"Delacroix was one of the most brilliant men of his century, and was able to say eloquently what he thought, felt, and knew." J. T. Soby

+ Sat R of Lit 31:44 O 9 '48 110w

DELAUNAY, CHARLES. New hot discography; ed. by Walter E. Schaap & George Avakian. 608p $6 Criterion music corp, RKO bldg, Radio City, N.Y. 20

789.9 Phonograph records. Jazz music 48-8464

"The standard directory of recorded jazz." (Subtitle) The first section traces in outline the careers and recordings of pioneer jazz recorders up to 1930. The second covers the period from 1930 on. Index.

Booklist 45:62 O 15 '48

"Indispensable in its field." P. L. Miller

+ Library J 73:1513 O 15 '48 100w

"For jazz fans, scholars and musicologists, and those undertaking to build a representative collection of jazz discs (a most rewarding undertaking), the New Hot Discography is an essential tool. It is a tool, too (but no more), in the acquiring of a sound jazz taste, which must always begin with a musical ear and memory and evolve from the interaction of sensitivity and knowledge." Rudi Blesh

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 6:159 D '48 850w

DE LA VERGNE, YVONNE. See La Vergne, Y. de

DE LEEUW, ADELE LOUISE. Clay fingers. 230p $2.50 Macmillan 48-8425

Vocational story for junior and senior high school girls. It tells the story of Laura Carpenter who learned to work in clay to while away the time during the year she had to stay out of college, and of the success she made of her avocation.

Booklist 45:72 O 15 '48

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:462 N '48 80w

Kirkus 16:440 S 1 '48 100w

"A vivid, detailed description of a career in which there is a growing interest enlivens what would be otherwise a rather dull story." Judith Stevenson

Library J 73:1523 O 15 '48 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 14 '48 140w

"The vocational angle of this gives the story depth. At times there are minor situations that seem a bit overdrawn, but young readers will probably not mind this." R. A. B.

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:32 N 13 '48 150w

Springf'd Republican p7B S 12 '48 150w

DE LORENZI, OTTO, ed. Combustion engineering; a reference book on fuel burning and steam generation. [1025p] il $7.50; to libs $2.50 Combustion eng. co, inc, 200 Madison av, N. Y. 16

621.18 Combustion. Fuel. Steam engineering 48-358

"The subject matter of this book deals with the various methods and equipment used for fuel burning, steam generation, and heat recovery. It represents an effort to cover the subject comprehensively, within the limits of one treatment, and thereby to provide answers to many questions that continually arise in the classroom, the engineering office, and the boiler plant. The information and data from which the text has been prepared were contributed by a number of outstanding fuel technologists, combustion engineers, and specialists. Their collective experience includes design, application, and operation of equipment for thousands of installations and the use of virtually all commercially available fuels, including many so-called waste fuels." (Pref) Index.

"Authoritative technical reference work for engineers and engineering students."
+ Library J 73:479 Mr 15 '48 50w

"The book was written by thirty specialists on the staff of the Combustion Engineering Company. There are many incidental references to this Company's activities and products, but these do not detract from the potential usefulness of the book. The material is intended primarily for engineers and engineering students, and is therefore rather technical in nature."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:27 Ja '48

DE LUBAC, HENRI. See Lubac, H. de

DE LYS, CLAUDIA. See Lys, C. de

DE MADARIAGA, SALVADOR. See Madariaga, S. de

DEMING, DOROTHY. Anne Snow, mountain nurse. 272p $2.50 Dodd

47-11813

Vocational story for older girls. It describes the experiences of two young nurses who worked for the Mountain medical and nursing association in Tennessee, and became enthusiasts for public health nursing.

Booklist 44:204 F 1 '48

"There is romance, glamor and excitement, a feeling for the people, the locale and the profession, and a promise of further stories. More up to date than Mountain Girl Comes Home by Fox. Specific information given in footnotes. Recommended where nursing stories are needed." E. A. Groves
+ Library J 73:340 F 15 '48 70w

"It is one of the most exciting of the 'career' books; nurses will enjoy it most, but any one may." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 15 '48 160w

DEMING, DOROTHY. Practical nurse. 370p $3 Commonwealth fund

610.73 Nurses and nursing Med47-2443

"The types of nursing in hospital and home, duties, qualifications, training, and legislation for the practical nurse are summarized but instructions in actual techniques are not included. Vocational value, both to institutions using practical nurses and to women and men considering the occupation. References at end of each chapter." Booklist

Booklist 45:116 D 1 '48

"This reviewer . . . like most registered nurses has had many grave reservations about the use of the practical nurse, but she does not hesitate to say that this book leaves one without any doubt about the reality that the practical nurse meets a need which never has and never will be completely met by the professional. The problem is not essentially whether there should be a practical nurse but how she can best fulfill the community's need of her." B. T. Kaye
+ Survey 84:283 S '48 650w

DENHOLM-YOUNG, NOEL. Richard of Cornwall. 187p il $3.75 Salloch

B or 92 Cornwall, Richard, earl of A48-6336

"This is the most comprehensive biography of Richard of Cornwall. Since he was one of the most influential counsellors of his brother, Henry III, this account of his life supplements our knowledge of the reign, especially with regard to political developments. It takes careful account of Richard's estates and other sources of revenue, which won him the reputation of being the richest man in England, and is particularly enlightening on his relations with the Jews, the profits of the stannaries in Cornwall and the recoinage begun in 1247. It also sheds light on several aspects of Continental history. Richard took part in three expeditions to Poitou and Gascony, conducted a crusade to the Holy Land, intervened to some extent in the affairs of Provence and Savoy, negotiated with several popes, and was occupied with German business from time to time after he was elected king of the Romans in 1257. His acts in association with these affairs are related fully, but some of the events in which he took part are explained rather briefly." Am Hist R

"The treatment of the subject is based upon an extensive search in contemporary sources, which the author interprets with an appreciative understanding of their value. No attempt is made to laud the hero, and in one instance Richard is judged more harshly than he deserves. . . The meaning of a few statements is somewhat obscure. Some of the titles in the bibliography are cited carelessly. These, however, are minor defects in a contribution of importance to our understanding of the period." W. E. Lunt
+ — Am Hist R 53:592 Ap '48 360w

"This little book, which despite its stiff documentation has a clarity and vitality that hold the reader's attention without strain, is a striking instance of the difference in technique between the biography of a mediaeval prince and the presentation of a celebrity of the modern world. There can be little question which is the more exacting craft; this life of Earl Richard is the fruit of laborious and accurate scholarship far removed from journalism or what is called the 'interpretation of history.' Fortunately for mediaevalists, there would seem at the present day to be no lack of readers prepared to endure a little austerity when the reward is a fuller knowledge of mediaeval England." M. D. Knowles
+ Spec 179:212 Ag 15 '47 650w

"Mr. Denholm-Young is a scholar of repute; technically, his latest book is the product of a thorough knowledge of both English and German sources. He has made especially good use of the Chronicle of Thomas de Wykes, who had unique information about Richard. His study is the more interesting for its appearance in the same year with Sir Maurice Powicke's important work on the reign of Henry III. Yet it is much more than a valuable supplement to Powicke. Its approach is independent, its criticism of the English monarchy more shrewd and searching."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p109 F 21 '48 1050w

"Richard, Earl of Cornwall, the younger brother of Henry III, has waited long for an adequate biography, which has now been written by a brilliant rising English mediaevalist." S. K. Mitchell
+ Yale R n s 37:755 summer '48 900w

DENIS, PAUL. Your career in show business; with a foreword by Abel Green. 240p il $3 Dutton

792 Acting as a profession. Music as a profession 48-6236

"Mr. Denis, the radio and television editor of the New York Post, has covered all aspects of the amusement field including stage, screen, radio, night clubs, orchestras, music, records, and television [giving] advice on how to prepare for and to secure jobs in these fields." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:348 Je 15 '48

Kirkus 16:89 F 15 '48 120w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 73:652 Ap 15 '48 110w

"'Your Career in Show Business' is more a trade paper survey of the entertainment world as a whole than a practical guide for the tyro in any single theatrical field. . . Even when coupled with carefully garnered words of advice from 'names' in the various entertainment arts, all this seems somewhat shallow and mechanical to be of much help to a confused beginner. The book covers too much without covering anything basically or perceptively or provocatively enough." Hobe Morrison
— + N Y Times p24 S 19 '48 400w

DENISON, CAROL. What every young rabbit should know; with pictures by Kurt Wiese. [64p] $2.25 Dodd

48-10247

Pictures and story showing how the Puff-Tails taught their children to recognize tracks in the snow. For ages 4-8.

"Delightful pictures and a story which is amusing, informative, and pleasantly exciting for younger children."
+ Booklist 45:108 N 15 '48

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 168:221 D '48 60w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 11 '49 250w

"A gorgeous little picture book and primer of how to stay alive in a world of foxes and dogs and trucks."
+ Commonweal 49:148 N 19 '48 70w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges
+ Library J 73:1825 D 15 '48 100w

"A warm pleasant story of one of children's favorite animals, well-written and beautifully illustrated."
+ New Repub 119:33 D 6 '48 100w

"An ingenious surprise ending makes 'What Every Young Rabbit Should Know' good reading and fun." Lillian Gerard
+ N Y Times p5 N 14 '48 130w

Reviewed by M. Z. Brown
San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 14 '48 200w

DENNEY, DIANA (DIANA ROSS, pseud). Little red engine goes to market; il. by Leslie Wood. 31p $2.25 Transatlantic

48-5003

"The little red engine which, as many children will remember, once carried a king still hurries through the English countryside, valiantly intent on whatever its immediate duty may be. This time it is market day and the engine must pick up hens and geese, cows and lambs, even a cat on its way to the vet's—so many animals that the reader is almost as breathless as the engine itself wondering if it will make Taddlecomb on time. Of course it does." N Y Times

Booklist 44:174 Ja 1 '48

"A delightful book for the three to five year olds." M. B. King
+ Chicago Sun N 29 '47 50w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 13 '48 270w

Kirkus 15:624 N 15 '47 80w

"This third episode in its career doesn't quite measure up to 'The Little Red Engine Gets a Name' for excitement, but it is more rounded than the second book of the series. It is full of the same kind of sonorous words and rhythms which make reading aloud an event for both grown-up and youngster. Although the illustrations in half-tone are darker than formerly and so less distinct, those in color are excellently reproduced, and they are all distinguished in concept and design." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p28 D 14 '47 200w

"The simple, repetitive story is good for reading aloud to very small children."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p636 D 6 '47 40w

DENNISTON, ELINORE (RAE FOLEY, pseud). No tears for the dead. 213p $2.50 Dodd

48-1019

Detective story.

"Neat and synthetic but pat enough to be called competent." James Sandoe
+ — Chicago Sun Ja 30 '48 70w

New Repub 118:26 Mr 8 '48 20w

"Unless one looks in the back of the book—and surely no reader would do that—the only way to pick the murderer of Ballard Hitchcock is by sheer guesswork. The detective who arrives at the correct solution of the crime comes upon the scene rather late and the author keeps us completely in the dark as to what line his investigation has taken." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p30 Ja 25 '48 110w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 29 '48 100w

"Above average."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:26 Ja 17 '48 50w

DENT, EDWARD JOSEPH. Handel. (Great musicians ser) 140p $1.50 Wyn

B or 92 Handel, Georg Friedrich 48-10968

A brief biography of Handel which makes use of all the scant material on his life. The author is a former professor of music at Cambridge university, now president of the International society for contemporary music. Bibliography. List of Handel's works. No index.

Reviewed by R. W. Flint
Nation 167:584 N 20 '48 100w

"Standing as they do between the scope of long encyclopedia articles and that of full biographies, the volumes in the Great Musicians series are difficult to place. Their price is attractive; and it is always a pleasure to have at hand the effortless authority of Edward J. Dent."
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 D 5 '48 170w

DENT, LESTER. Lady afraid. 191p $2 Doubleday

48-5841

Mystery story.

"Synthetic, even a little spurious."
— Kirkus 16:8 Ja 1 '48 80w

"The few hours during which the action takes place are packed with thrills and suspense." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p21 Mr 14 '48 180w

"One of those very breathless absurdities."
New Yorker 24:128 Mr 13 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 4 '48 100w

"Above average."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:35 Mr 27 '48 50w

DE ONIS, HARRIET. See Onis, H. de

DE PEREDA, PRUDENCIO. All the girls we loved. 240p $2.75 Farrar, Straus 48-772

"Not so much a novel as an anthology, with a frail superstructure of plot, of the American soldiers' opinions about women—a sampling of what the author heard in barracks conversations during the recent war." New Yorker

"Saroyan derivative, but lacking the continuity, the charm, the humor to carry off loosely linked sketches, although it has an intensity and sincerity that are often effective."
— + Kirkus 15:632 N 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by H. W. Hart
Library J 72:1685 D 1 '47 90w

"As a theme, the relationship of soldiers-about-to-die to the girls who will be left behind is rich and promising. For reasons of his own, however, Mr. De Pereda has chosen to emphasize not what is universal and generally applicable but what is queer and bizarre. . . It's unfortunate that when Mr. De Pereda writes on love he does so with all the uncontrolled excitement of an adolescent. . . Far more successful, in general, are his non-amorous stories, such as those about the shooting of a goat which wandered into a court-martial; the gleeful reactions of a discharged G. I. upon hearing, amid parental grief, of the death of a hated sergeant." David Davidson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ja 18 '48 650w

"Written in a punching, natural prose. It dissects the bitterness and violence of human emotions with thoroughness and feeling. . . The Hemingway influence is most apparent in the stories of the men's love affairs, for they take on the primal emotional aura of case histories, with every thought and action probed in graphic detail." Andrea Parke
N Y Times p21 Ja 18 '48 450w
New Yorker 23:81 Ja 17 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 8 '48 250w

DE POLNAY, PETER. Moot point. 314p $3 Creative age
48-5612

A combination of mystery and psychological novel. The scene is a private hotel in an English seacoast town. John Denton, a charming but weak young man, comes to the hotel and there meets the lovely deaf and dumb daughter of the hotel owner, Mrs Hughes. That night Mrs Hughes is murdered. The remainder of the novel describes the workings of the police with the different inmates of the Red House, and the tragic outcome of the investigation.

"His canvas is slight but his touch is subtle, mature and engagingly distinctive. He writes crisply, with suggestive understatement and sustained irony. His characters are skillfully particularized and revealed by the trivia of everyday existence. . . A novel that is refreshingly different."
+ Atlantic 181:111 Mr '48 120w
Booklist 44:283 Ap 15 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Mr 5 '48 50w
Kirkus 16:2 Ja 1 '48 170w

"Considerably better than average fiction both in style and story, and sure fire in the pay duplicates." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:336 F 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 30 '48 90w

Reviewed by David Tilden
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33 N 28 '48 230w

"There is nothing absolutely wrong here, except that the particular routine has been so overdone. The quality of the writing is just good enough, as is the organization, to raise the book above the level of detective fiction." B. V. Winebaum
+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 28 '48 490w

Reviewed by J. M. Lalley
New Yorker 24:94 Mr 6 '48 400w
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 25 '48 370w

"The final chapter is rather foolishly allegorical, so that the novel ends (unintentionally, I am sure) upon a note of farce. This merely shows that the author, though a good novelist, is not yet a powerful one. Perhaps he never will be a powerful one. But good novelists are rare; and for this reason it is a great pleasure to be able to report that Mr. de Polnay is once again in our midst." George Dangerfield
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:14 Mr 6 '48 850w

"It is competently written, the characterisation is adequate but the story of a boarding-house is no better and no worse than a hundred like it." Robin King
Spec 180:236 F 20 '48 50w

"Mr. Peter de Polnay is a talented, if somewhat uncomfortable, writer. He has any number of excellent ideas and a lively, economical way of expressing them; but this good measure is at times almost an embarrassment, in so much that it involves him in dealing with diversified and often incongruous elements. As a result his novels are apt to suffer from a lack of focus. The Moot Point shows his strength and his weakness. It has effective scenes and characters, but these do not entirely save the story from the twin dangers of triviality and melodrama."
Times [London] Lit Sup p61 Ja 31 '48 600w

DERIEUX, MARY, and STEVENSON, ISABELLE. Complete book of interior decorating. 434p il $6.95 Greystone
747 House decoration 48-6172

Advice on home decorating for all types of homes and apartments. Covers arrangement of furniture, lighting, kind of woods, floor coverings, fabrics, color in rooms, wall paper, and restyling. Copiously illustrated. Index.

"For libraries that want another book on the subject."
Booklist 44:348 Je 15 '48

Reviewed by R. S. Robbins
N Y Times p23 Jl 11 '48 150w

"Well-arranged and sensibly indexed volume. . . And every word of it makes good sense." Edith James
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 11 '48 90w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Milwaukee road; its first hundred years. (Railroads of America ser) 330p il $4 Creative age
385 Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad 48-6523

Narrative history of the first hundred years of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St Paul and Pacific railroad. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:293 My 1 '48

"From personal knowledge as well as wide research, Derleth has given a solid but interesting report on an individual segment of railroad history."
+ Kirkus 16:36 Ja 15 '48 110w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 73:331 F 15 '48 130w

"It is unfortunate in a way that August Derleth has come into a series in which the two preceding volumes were written by Alvin Harlow. So far as this reviewer is concerned, Mr. Harlow is America's best railroad historian, hands down. Mr. Derleth's work, although good, suffers by comparison." Ruth Teiser
San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 2 '48 600w
Wis Lib Bul 44:130 Je '48

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM. Sac Prairie people. 322p $3 Arkham house
48-7762

Collection of short stories about the people of a small Wisconsin town. Similar to the author's previous stories of Sac Prairie people.

DERLETH, A. W.—Continued

"Pleasant easy reading, but lacking spark of acute observation that made Anderson's Winesburg, Ohio outstanding. In spite of minor villains and tragedies, the happy Hollywood ending is always there. Good for High School collections although some may object to the Ellie Butts tale." C. W. Roth

+ — Library J 73:1089 Ag '48 70w

"The best of the stories in this volume, to this reviewer's mind, are the minor sketches, thinner of plot but heavier in meaning than those which are cut to a more conventional short story pattern. These are warm, rather defiantly sentimental pieces, not unlike the early writings of William Saroyan." R. T.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 14 '48 150w

DERLETH, AUGUST WILLIAM, ed. Strange ports of call. 393p $4 Pellegrini & Cudahy

Short stories—Collections 48-6688

Twenty science-fiction "stories, all now out of print, which seem to have sufficient literary value to assure them of an existence extending beyond our immediate time. . . None of the stories in this book has ever appeared in any anthology and the majority of them have never appeared in book form." (Introd) Partial contents: The cunning of the beast, by Nelson Bond; At the mountains of madness, by H. P. Lovecraft; Mars on the ether, by Lord Dunsany; The crystal egg, by H. G. Wells; The lost street, by Carl Jacobi and Clifford Simak; Far Centaurus, by A. E. Van Vogt; The green hills of earth, by R. A. Heinlein; Blunder, by Philip Wylie; The million year picnic, by Ray Bradbury.

Booklist 44:352 Je 15 '48

"Derleth modestly disclaims trailblazing and points in his introduction to several earlier anthologies. His own, though, has a contenting diversity and a level of literacy which scorners of science-fiction ought to examine before they sneer again." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun My 14 '48 290w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 4 '48 40w

"Treasure-trove, that's what it is." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 23 '48 390w

"Mr. Derleth agrees that previous science fiction anthologies have been very good, his only complaint being that most of the characters are 'effigies' and lack human warmth. He has sought to supply this missing ingredient in his selections and possibly has done so to his own satisfaction. It is fairly evident, however—at least it is in several local cases of science-fictionists—that addicts of the outre care less for 'literature' than they do for large gobs of action, the more outlandish the better. And they get it in Mr. Derleth's book, along with the character nuances." R. F. H.

Springf'd Republican p10B My 9 '48 360w

DESCHIN, JACOB. Fun with your camera; practical chats on amateur camera activity [il. with phot. by the author]. (Whittlesey house publication) 264p $3 McGraw

770 Photography 47-12465

Advice and useful hints on the use of the camera for amateurs. Partial contents: Color à la carte; Twin-lens reflex—new favorite; Pictures on the wing; How to win prize contests; Streamlining darkroom chores; Grooming the print. The author is photography editor of the New York Times. Index.

Booklist 44:198 F 1 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '48

Kirkus 15:570 O 1 '47 100w

"The beginner will find his treatment of color photography especially interesting since this exciting phase of shutter snapping is generally reserved for the expert." R. S. Robbins

+ N Y Times p23 My 16 '48 110w

DE SCHWEINITZ, KARL. People and process in social security. 165p $2 Am. council on educ.

331.2544 Insurance, Social. Insurance, State and compulsory 48-13300

"This is the first study of the Committee on Education and Social Security of the American Council on Education, established in 1944 to explore the problem of training for social security administration and related problems. The study . . . [discusses] the process by which a great social program enacted into law is translated into policies, procedures, and action, and extended to millions of people, and the attitudes as well as the skills necessary for its administration." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by J. P. Harris

+ Am Pol Sci R 42:571 Je '48 900w

"The great virtue of Karl de Schweinitz' book is that it deals with administration in relation to people as human beings. . . Executives, social work practitioners, social work teachers, and all persons in policy-making positions cannot but value this volume. It does exactly what its title indicates—brings together people and process in social security." A. E. Fink

+ Ann Am Acad 257:253 My '48 320w

DETHIER, VINCENT GASTON. Chemical insect attractants and repellents. 298p il $5 Blakiston

632.9 Insects, Injurious and beneficial 47-6857

"Study of insect attractants and repellents, a treatment of insect response to chemical stimuli and the physiological, physical and biological factors involved. Object of the study is to aid in the search for effective chemical control of insect pests. Baits and traps are considered." Library J

"Although the literature on attractants and repellents is extensive, most of the effort has been expended on research by the trial-and-error method, with not enough consideration of the chemical, physical, physiological and botanical factors involved. In an effort to remedy the situation and to impart a greater impetus to research in this field, Dr. Dethier has undertaken the difficult task of assembling and correlating the widely scattered literature. In this respect he has done a commendable piece of work. . . The book contains numerous errors in chemical nomenclature and in the structural formulas of compounds. These errors might have been avoided if the manuscript had been submitted to an organic chemist for review. Nevertheless the book is a valuable one and meets a definite need for both the chemist and the entomologist." H. L. Haller

+ — Am Chem Soc J 70:2300 Je '48 320w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:949 Je 15 '48 50w

DE TOLEDANO, RALPH, ed. Frontiers of jazz; foreword by Milton Gabler. 178p $3 Durrell

780.973 Jazz music. Musicians 48-230

Sixteen articles about jazz, chosen from such sources as the Musical Quarterly, Hound and Horn, Fortune, and Jazz Information. Contents: The case for hot jazz, by Louis Harap; Harpsichords and jazz trumpets, by R. P. Dodge; The Blues, by Abbe Niles; Notes on boogie woogie, by William Russell; Directions of jazz, by Ralph de Toledano; King Oliver, by Preston Jackson; The New Orleans rhythm kings, by George Beall; Jazz pre-history, and Bunk Johnson, by Morroe Berger; I discovered jazz in 1902, by Jelly Roll Morton; Jelly Roll Morton on records, by Hughes Panassie; Bechet and jazz visit Europe, 1919, by Ernst-Alexandre Ansermet; The Wolverines and Bix, by George Johnson; Duke Ellington, by Wilder Hobson; Benny Goodman and the swing period, by Frank Norris; Piano in the band, by Otis Ferguson; Grandfather of hot piano, by Ross Russell. Index.

"The most authoritative book on the subject."
+ Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '48

"Most of the essays in this volume will already be familiar to older students of the subject. The chief value of the book, therefore, lies in its making available to new students a collection of standard contributions to the theory, history, and criticism of jazz, drawn from a variety of sources, some of them now difficult of access." T. R. Barcus
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 5:247 Mr '48 240w

"Of all the people who keep the public misinformed on the conditions of the arts, jazz writers are easily the most irritating. . . Surprisingly enough, this snip-and-paste job by Mr. de Toledano, who formerly was one of the editors of a little sheet called Jazz Information, is a refreshing change from the usual jazz tone. By exercising admirable taste, restraint, and industry, this young man has become something of a traitor to the general herd of jazz writers. . . The first section of the book, which Mr. de Toledano calls 'The Anatomy of Jazz,' is by far more intelligent and exhaustive than the second, which is labeled 'The Men Who Made Jazz.' . . But all in all, Mr. de Toledano has prepared an excellent anthology, one which undoubtedly will be consulted as a reference work for some time to come." R. B. Gehman
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:31 My 22 '48 600w

DE TOLNAY, CHARLES. Medici chapel. (Michelangelo, 3) 275p pl $20 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Michelangelo Buonarrati 48-4080

"In the third volume to be published in the definitive and truly monumental series on the life and works of Michelangelo, Charles de Tolnay continues his study by covering the years 1512-34 in the career of one of the few supreme artists of all ages. Continuing the carefully documented and penetrating method which so brilliantly marked 'The Youth of Michelangelo' and 'The Sistine Chapel,' [Book Review Digest 1944, 1946] this middle volume of the projected five-volume work is devoted to the Medici Chapel (the New Sacristy) in San Lorenzo, the Medici family's parish church in Florence." N Y Times

Reviewed by L. J. Wathen
+ N Y Times p7 Ag 8 '48 800w

Reviewed by J. T. Soby
+ Sat R of Lit 31:44 O 9 '48 50w

DETZER, DOROTHY. Appointment on the Hill. 262p $3 Holt

172.4 Women's International League for Peace and Freedom 48-1367

Reminiscences of the author's experiences as social worker connected with Hull House, with the Quaker rehabilitation commission in Austria and Russia after World war I, and as a secretary of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom in Washington, D.C. The greater part of the book deals with twenty years in the last named organization.

Booklist 44:267 Ap 1 '48

Reviewed by Mary Hornaday
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 10 '48 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '48

Reviewed by Florence Codman
Commonweal 48:80 My 7 '48 700w

Kirkus 16:75 F 1 '48 120w

"Highly recommended." L. R. Miller
+ Library J 73:393 Mr 1 '48 130w

"I recommend this book especially to one who has struggled through the dull memoirs of Cordell Hull. . . Miss Detzer's courage, patience, and integrity, and her intimate knowledge of the political scene illuminate the pages of 'Appointment on the Hill.' No wonder the lobbyists for special privilege get panicky when they see 'that woman' talking to a bemused Congressman or a soon-to-be embarrassed Under Secretary." McAlister Coleman
+ Nation 166:554 My 15 '48 600w

"She tells her story in several conglomerate literary styles, now enthralling recollection of behind the scenes maneuvers, now scrap book memories of persons and dramatic episodes, now evangelical insistence. All of it is addressed to the heart of every citizen's current predicament and is a free gift of her peculiar experience. . . The best part of Dorothy Detzer's book is in its candid close-ups of Washington." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ap 18 '48 900w

"Miss Detzer commands an excellent prose style, and parts of her story have a high dramatic flavor. Its documentary value is somewhat impeded by frequent detours into her purely subjective reactions to events and situations. But it is interesting not only as a chronicle of one segment of the peace movement, but as a memoir of one of the most talented and popular 'lady lobbyists' Washington has known." Cabell Phillips
+ N Y Times p28 Ap 25 '48 600w

"A book for everyone. There is entertainment in the humor which the author injects into the story information about the life of a lobbyist, and inspiration in Miss Detzer's message." A. K. Doughty
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 26 '48 800w

Reviewed by L. T. Mowrer
Sat R of Lit 31:15 My 8 '48 600w

Reviewed by A. N. Baker
Survey G 37:406 S '48 550w

Wis Lib Bul 44:103 My '48

DEUTSCH, ALBERT, ed. Sex habits of American men; a symposium on the Kinsey report. 244p $3 Prentice-Hall

392.6 Sex. U.S.—Moral conditions. Kinsey, Alfred Charles—Sexual behavior in the human male 48-6937

Contents: Kinsey, the man and his project, by Albert Deutsch; Cultural factors in sex expression, by R. J. Havighurst; Psychiatric issues in the Kinsey report, by R. P. Knight; Sociological implications of the report, by J. K. Folsom; As an anthropologist views it, by Clyde Kluckhohn; Are Kinsey's methods valid? by Leo Crespi; Sexual patterns and the law, by Morris Ploscowe; Significance for American women, by A. W. Field; How the report affects marriage counseling, by Abraham Stone; Religious aspects—a Protestant viewpoint, by Seward Hiltner; Religious aspects—a Catholic viewpoint, by C. G. Wilber; Religious aspects—a Jewish viewpoint, by L. I. Newman; Sexual behavior in penal institutions, by R. M. Lindner; Must we change our methods of sex education, by S. M. Gruenberg. Index.

Am Soc R 13:649 O '48 50w

Booklist 44:346 Je 15 '48

Chicago Sun p8X My 30 '48 140w

"These articles vary a good deal in value, some being chiefly personal testaments and others serious efforts to evaluate certain aspects of the Report. Mr. Deutsch's article alone is worth the price of admission, and Dr. Stone's on marriage counseling, Professor Crespi's on the validity of Kinsey's statistical methods, and Magistrate Ploscowe's on sex and the law all have something to offer that is at once pertinent to the main topic of the symposium and worthwhile in itself." H. M. Parshley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Je 6 '48 700w

"The Deutsch symposium contains comment on the Report by Protestant, Catholic and Jewish clergymen, who write from their special religious point of view. To this reviewer their essays seem the weakest in the volume, and it is not surprising that this should be true. It would hardly be reasonable to ask any clergyman at this time to discuss in a completely dispassionate way a study so violently out of accord with many of the assumptions of organized religion." Bruce Bliven
N Y Times p4 My 16 '48 650w

DEUTSCH, ALBERT—Continued
Reviewed by Louis Wasserman
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 4 '48 150w

"One contributor to the Deutsch symposium thinks that 'the wise reader will not restrict his reading to second-hand sources but will study "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male" for himself.' This is doubtless good advice, depending somewhat, however, on whether the reader is wise enough for the task and on what is meant by 'second-hand.' The present reviewer recommends to the general reader that he turn to the Deutsch symposium as either a supplement or a preliminary to the reading of the Kinsey report, and suggests that it might even serve as a substitute." R. G. Fuller
+ Sat R of Lit 31:19 Je 12 '48 600w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 68:142 Ag 28 '48 270w

Springf'd Republican p10B My 30 '48 140w

Wis Lib Bul 44:161 O '48

DEUTSCH, ALBERT. Shame of the states. 188p il $3 Harcourt

362.2 Mental diseases—Hospitals 48-9247

A documentary account of conditions in state mental hospitals. "After brief survey of the scope of mental illness in the U.S., this moves to a description of the specific institutions in all sections of the country and finds much the same conditions everywhere—overcrowding, insufficient staff, insufficient everything. Winds up with discussion of the mentally sick and their families, a description of work done in the U. S. Army's Mason General Hospital, and brief specifications for an ideal mental hospital." (Library J)

Atlantic 182:122 D '48 240w

Booklist 45:150 Ja 1 '49

Reviewed by M. J. Ward
Chicago Sun p9X D 19 '48 270w

Christian Century 65:1273 N 24 '48 300w

"Mr. Deutsch offers no cure. He voices one great urgency—that the public as a whole be roused from its longstanding apathy. His book is part of a growing crusade to evoke from the average citizen an awareness of his responsibility in this as in all other areas of community life. If the book accomplishes this purpose, Mr. Deutsch wil havel done a great service." K. F. Brehaut
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 5 '49 330w

Commonweal 49:310 D 31 '48 260w

Kirkus 16:542 O 1 '48 100w

"Powerful indictment of the treatment we accord our mentally ill in our state hospitals. . . Urged for most collections for adults." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:1592 N 1 '48 100w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 21 '48 750w

Reviewed by F. G. Slaughter
N Y Times p12 N 14 '48 900w

"This would have been a better book if it had been written with a better balance between good and the bad conditions in mental hospitals, and if there had been more emphasis on the problems of the hospitals and their administrators." R. G. Fuller
Sat R of Lit 31:11 D 25 '48 850w

Reviewed by Kathleen Sproul
Survey G 37:478 N '48 600w

DEUTSCH, OTTO ERICH, ed. Schubert reader; a life of Franz Schubert in letters and documents; tr. by Eric Blom; being an English version of Franz Schubert; die dokumente seines lebens; rev. and augmented with a commentary [Eng. title: Schubert; a documentary biography]. 1039p il $10 Norton

B or 92 Schubert, Franz Peter 47-12315

"Comprised of 1234 documents (letters, diaries, official papers, etc.) bearing on the life and works, plus indexes and bibliography thereto, and other appendices covering iconography, first performances and first publications during Schubert's lifetime, etc." (Library J) Index of names, places, titles, and selected subjects.

Booklist 44:216 F 15 '48

"Another distinguished addition to the Norton Readers and a testament to the unbelievable industry of Dr. Deutsch, world authority on the life of Schubert. . . Carefully translated by Eric Blom. Good for material on life and the arts in early nineteenth century Vienna. Source material for the serious student." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 73:124 Ja 15 '48 140w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 16 '47 90w

"Apparently nothing has escaped Dr. Deutsch's searching eye, and we must stand in rapt admiration of the vigilance with which he has followed his hero from before the cradle to after the grave. It was no small task to translate a book of this size and nature, and Eric Blom has turned in a creditable performance. As much, perhaps more, praise should go to the publisher for issuing this necessarily expensive book at a time when all book buyers and libraries find their budgets less and less sufficient. . . Let us hope that The Schubert Reader sells handsomely, not alone for the House of Norton but because of the magnificent book it is." E. N. Waters
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 5:227 Mr '48 750w

Reviewed by Desmond Shawe-Taylor
New Statesman & Nation 35:77 Ja 24 '48 240w

"Many biographies have been written about Schubert. None of them brings him satisfactorily before us, for among his Romantic composer-brethren he alone was not voluble nor addicted to expressing himself, except in music. . . That is why a book consisting of the unadorned record of more than a thousand documentary facts becomes immensely refreshing and revealing. Any true Schubertian who has rejected the usual literary effusions about Schubert as false or dishonest will wish to study this mass of facts (ordered by their strict chronology), and in them he will find a remarkably clear picture of the Biedermeierish circle in Vienna in the 1820s." J. N. Burk
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 D 28 '47 700w

"Otto Erich Deutsch is not a biographer at all, but a scholar, and the foremost authority on the facts of Schubert's life. His book is a compendium of these facts, with nothing added except a few indispensable explanatory notes. It consists almost entirely of excerpts from letters, diaries, criticisms, programs and similar documents—the total accumulation of a biographer's raw material. The result is a book for students rather than lay readers. Its publishers, however deserve a great deal of credit for making available for the first time in English a landmark of musical scholarship." Winthrop Sargeant
+ N Y Times p12 F 8 '48 290w

"This is the main body of the life-work of an eminent Viennese Schubert scholar and an indispensable book of reference for all future biographers of the composer. No document relative to Schubert or his family has been neglected, and to each of the nearly 1,200 entries in the book Dr. Deutsch has appended notes giving details of all the characters mentioned and explaining local or historical points which might be obscure to those unacquainted with the period or the topography. Interpretation there is none; the facts are presented fully and clearly and the reader is left to draw his own conclusions." Martin Cooper
+ Spec 178:728 Je 20 '47 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p376 Jl 26 '47 330w

DE VILMORIN, LOUISE. See Vilmorin, L. de

DEVOE, ALAN. Speaking of animals; a book of nature studies. 198p il $3 Creative age

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 47-11265

Brief studies of the lives of some of the common animals, birds, and fish. Partial contents: Inside chipmunkdom; Toad ways; Raccoons; The nesting of the birds; The darkness of mole; Great blue heron; The Beavers' spell; White-foot, the deer-mouse; Newts; Gray squirrel; Snapping turtle; Otter, the player; Dragonflies; Days of a deer; Crayfish; Hummingbird: Atom in feathers.

"His whole book, illustrated with splendid photographs, explains what most of us, though fascinated, may never see." J. W. Lane
+ Cath World 166:374 Ja '48 330w

"In addition to being a good reporter and an interesting story-teller, Mr. Devoe is philosophically inclined. He laments our modern isolation from the rhythm and lessons of nature. . . He would have us see the universe as a 'Living Totality' and mold our lives accordingly. His language is often that of the pantheist but the ideas are mostly those of common sense." Emerson Hynes
+ Commonweal 47:355 Ja 16 '48 450w

"A beautiful piece of bookmaking, with fine photographs—center grouped."
Kirkus 15:595 O 15 '47 50w

"A must for the natural history shelf of junior and senior high schools as well as part of the adult collection." J. F. Kennedy
+ Library J 73:50 Ja 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by L. J. Halle
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Mr 14 '48 100w

DEYRUP, FELICIA JOHNSON. Arms makers of the Connecticut valley; a regional study of the economic development of the small arms industry, 1798-1870. 290p pa $3 Smith college

338.47683 Munitions industry and trade 48-5513

"Ever since early times the manufacture of firearms has been carried on in New England, and Felicia Johnson Deyrup has localized the subject in 'a regional study of the economic development of the small arms industry, 1798-1870.' This monograph is based largely on records at the Springfield Armory. . . Following an introductory Part 1, the subject is surveyed in three other parts regarding eras of 'government patronage,' 'industrial independence' and 'expansion and adjustment', the latter including the Civil War years. Roots of the industry and such factors as labor, methods and raw materials are considered in their various phases, while besides the text there are 74 pages of index, references and appendices, together with charts and tables." Springf'd Republican

Reviewed by Elizabeth Donnan
Am Hist R 53:900 Jl '48 320w

Springf'd Republican p15A F 22 '48 600w

DIBNER, MARTIN. Bachelor seals. 309p $3 Doubleday 48-5043

The stories of four young men during the years of the depression and the second World war, woven into a picture of despair and defeat.

"A hard, bitter novel for adult readers only." A. J. Gaines
Library J 72:1778 D 15 '47 90w

"This is an odd novel. The last part of it is so good it makes one wonder if that section actually was written by the same person who put together the sophomoric beginning. In the first two sections of the book the writing is embarrassingly awkward, the story banal to a point of disbelief. Then, without warning, comes a wind-up, keen, adult, sensitive and perceptive. Since this superb third section stands almost by itself as a short story and with very little change could be presented as such, a reader is tempted to guess that it was written first and then a very bad lead-up fastened to it to stretch it out to book length. What could have been a memorable short piece is thus turned into a very bad novel." Elliott Arnold
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 11 '48 550w

"When Mr. Dibner tries to assess blame for the disaster that overtook the Class of '33 he wanders into an ill-defined area of bitter generalities. Yet 'The Bachelor Seals' belongs among the partially successful first efforts of young novelists who can write powerfully about the people and places they have known." Richard Match
N Y Times p20 Ja 25 '48 650w

DICK, EVERETT NEWFON. Dixie frontier; a social history of the southern frontier from the first transmontane beginnings to the Civil war. 374p il $4.50 Knopf

975 South—Social conditions. Frontier and pioneer life—South 48-5379

Story of life in pioneer days in Tennessee, Kentucky, and some of the other Southern states west of Virginia. The study is brought down to the Civil war period. Bibliography. Index.

"A valuable catalogue of the folkways and mores of frontier society." T. C. Cochran
+ Am Hist R 54:376 Ja '49 550w

Booklist 44:247 Mr 15 '48

"The book is interesting and serious, filled with detail. The fact that it is a bit prosaic may enhance the impression of authenticity which it makes. Though not 'clever,' the writing is brightened with many anecdotes. Though the style is simple and devoid of purple passages, it reveals something of the motives, aims, and heroism of the pioneers. The differing characteristics of the hunters, squatters, and real farmers are well portrayed. . . This reviewer found it instructive and entertaining. It doesn't quite show just what the men and women who founded America were like, but it gives details that help toward an understanding." R. H. M.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 5 '48 420w

Kirkus 15:667 D 1 '47 160w

"His new book, 'The Dixie Frontier,' has all the merits of his earlier ones. It is packed with precise accounts of the processes and techniques of frontier life. . . The book is furthermore, as exciting as it is extensive. For Professor Dick has mined much of his material from the rich beds of anecdote and legend deposited during America's heroic age. But although the author has retained his old skill, he has certainly not learned any new tricks. His diction is still poor." Joseph Kraft
+ — Nation 166:359 Mr 27 '48 450w

"The book is a pleasantly organized miscellany, done in simple expository prose, well flavored with bits of graphic description, savory anecdotes, and salty quotations from diaries, letters, and reminiscences. The bibliography, which covers 33 pages indicates a vast extent of research. Wisely, Mr. Dick avoids a plethora of footnotes, and gets into his text much of the rich flesh of his source material, instead of mere bare bones of fact." Donald Davidson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 21 '48 1550w

"The years here covered saw profound change and growth in the Southwest. No sense of the passage of years is conveyed by the mingling of data drawn helter-skelter from various years and divers geographical locations. The frontier (not here defined) as a place was a progressive thing. And furthermore, in the old Southwest the river and loess regions, the piedmont, the black belt, the blue grass and the piney woods, cannot all be lumped together. Possessed of subtle individualities they cry for differentiation." W. B. Hamilton
N Y Times p20 Ap 25 '48 470w

DICK, E. N.—Continued
"There are unsolved problems here which our historians are under obligation to face. Professor Dick's lack of clarity in dealing with them is important not because it is peculiar to him but precisely because it is wide-spread among his colleagues." H. N. Smith

Sat R of Lit 31:11 Ap 10 '48 1400w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Social Educ 12:332 N '48 320w

DICKENS, CHARLES. Best short stories; collected with an introd. by Edwin Valentine Mitchell. 620p il $3.50 Scribner

47-12199

Contents: The great Winglebury duel; The wreck of the 'Golden Mary'; The story of the bagman's uncle; The perils of certain English prisoners; The holly-tree; Mr. Pickwick's tale; Mugby junction; The haunted house; Holiday romance; Horatio Sparkins; Hunted down; The seven poor travellers; The battle of life; Going into society; Mrs. Lirriper's lodgings; Mrs. Lirriper's legacy; A Christmas carol; The chimes; The cricket on the hearth.

Booklist 44:184 Ja 15 '48

+ Kirkus 15:515 S 15 '47 100w

"We find not only the famous Christmas stories but other short pieces as well, little known to the present generation of readers, which display the author's extraordinary vitality and variety, and prove that Dickens could write successfully in almost any manner he chose to employ. If you doubt this ability, please consider the four parts of 'Mugby Junction.'" B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 D 27 '47 80w

DICKENS, CHARLES. The Dickens reader; ed. by Trumbull Huntington; with a foreword by Sylvia Townsend Warner. 352p $3.50 Howell, Soskin

48-7603

Excerpts from the works of Charles Dickens arranged under the following headings: The Dickens characters; How they live; Their burdens; Their joys; Their dramas; America and Americans.

Booklist 45:47 O 1 '48

"Altogether, you cannot read through this collection without feeling that you know something of Dickens's style, his vivid characterization, and his inimitable manner of exaggeration that distinguishes his people from those of all other writers. But the only way really to understand and enjoy Charles Dickens is to take him whole." H. J. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 19 '48 420w

"Many don't altogether like such collections of bits and pieces, and I should blame no one for that attitude. If, however, one does not know Dickens and wants to get a touch of his true flavor, this volume is a good way to accomplish that. Perhaps it may even lead some to discover in Dickens pleasures they had never known were there." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 29 '48 1000w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 31:32 S 18 '48 40w

DICKERSON, ROY ERNEST. So youth may know; sex education for youth; foreword by Percy R. Hayward. rev ed 261p $2.50 Assn. press

176 Sex. Sexual ethics 48-5378

"This book which has proved particularly helpful with boys since it was first published in 1930 [Book Review Digest 1931] has been revised in the light of present-day scientific information. Although the author is somewhat inclined to preach, he gives common-sense advice backed by numerous quotations from authorities. Bibliographies and quoted materials have been brought up to date." Booklist

Booklist 44:252 Mr 15 '48

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 68:142 Ag 28 '48 120w

DICKINSON, ASA DON, comp. The best books of the decade, 1936-1945; another clue to the literary labyrinth. 295p $3 Wilson, H. W.

028 Bibliography—Best books. Books and reading 48-7680

This volume which the compiler calls his fourth "clue to the literary labyrinth" is an attempt to list the four hundred best books produced for readers of English during the years 1936 to 1945. His work is based on a computation of points for the books on many booklists published in the United States, and on the opinions of critics. Contains many classified lists and an index to the titles of the four hundred best books.

Booklist 45:4 S 1 '48

Sat R of Lit 31:22 Ag 7 '48 1050w

School & Society 68:95 Ag 7 '48 20w

Wis Lib Bul 44:161 O '48

DICKINSON, ROBERT ERIC. City region and regionalism; a geographical contribution to human ecology. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 327p il maps $4.75 Oxford

323.352 Cities and towns. Regionalism 47-8268

"This book consists of a summarization of published research on urban and metropolitan spatial patterns in the United States, England, and Europe." (Am Soc R) "The subject is not city or regional planning. The purpose is to further the kind of analysis of social structures (intracity, intercity, city-regional, intraregional, interregional, national, and international) that will result in planning and plans properly adjusted to the 'natural' characteristics of these structures. Attention is directed to the maladjustments existing between the natural-spatial structures of society and the corporate limits of cities or the boundaries of counties, states, provinces, or nations —boundaries devised in administering to the needs of these structures." (Geog R)

"This volume . . . should have a wide appeal. Students of local government, general public administration, public planning, geography and sociology, among others, will find it interesting, although none is likely to find his curiosity and his appetite for a discussion of regionalism entirely satisfied within the limits of this rather small book." William Anderson

+ — Am Pol Sci R 42:785 Ag '48 700w

"No new research is reported. So inclusive is the author's review of research studies, however, that the volume will find considerable use as a handbook."

+ Am Soc R 13:247 Ap '48 120w

"As this is a book of description, it furnishes little in the way of critical evaluation of studies or political aims. The reviewer hence feels a certain vague sense of dissatisfaction, even while recognizing that the volume will have value in providing descriptive material where such has not previously existed." L. S. Greene

+ — Ann Am Acad 257:239 My '48 380w

"As a leading exponent of the necessity for analyzing the structure of society in its ecological-spatial setting, Dickinson provides here a feast to be relished by the specialist but rejected by the layman as indigestible. . . The 'indigestibility' of the book is due to its concentration. Too often it is not clear whether the author is expressing his own idea or the ideas of others. Scholarly documentation may be both a blessing and a curse. However, the bibliographic citations give an exceptionally good foundation of knowledge concerning regionalism in its urban and rural manifestations." M. J. Proudfoot + — Geog R 38:339 Ap '48 480w

Reviewed by J. D. Millett
Pol Sci Q 63:630 D '48 700w

DICKINSON, THOMAS ALBERT. Plastics dictionary; il. by Joseph W. Dickinson. 312p $5 Pitman

668.4 Plastics—Dictionaries 48-983

"The book covers much more than mere definition of words coined in the plastics industry. Catalysts, fillers, pigments, monomers, solvents, plasticizers and other materials used by the trade are included. The listing of trade names and the chemical identification of the materials is of interest, particularly because foreign products are included." Chem Eng

Chem & Eng N 26:3298 N 1 '48 50w

"Dickinson's 'Plastics Dictionary' is a compilation of a tremendous amount of data. Chemical engineers who deal with plastics in any form will find it valuable. The appeal is not limited to molders and fabricators. Producers of monomers, plasticizers, and solvents will find it worthwhile. . . It is too bad that no system of marking was adopted to differentiate trade marks and generic names. Like all dictionaries, it is somewhat incomplete. Some of the newer resins are missing. Despite its shortcomings, the dictionary is a valuable addition to the growing bookshelf of the plastics industry." Roger Williams
+ — Chem Eng 55:302 Ap '48 170w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:480 Mr 15 '48 70w

"The compiler of this dictionary has avoided the tendency of many lexicographers to overload their work with terms only remotely connected with the subject in hand. He has produced a dictionary which is truly limited to the plastics field, and one which will appeal to the non-specialist because of its brief and nontechnical definitions."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:8 Ja '48

DICKSON, CARTER, pseud. See Carr, J. D.

DICKSON, HELEN (MRS HELEN [CAMPBELL] DICKSON REYNOLDS) (DICKSON REYNOLDS, pseud). Big shark; il. by Grattan Condon. 159p $2.50 Nelson
48-4221

Two boys discover the remains of what they believe to be a sea serpent in the British Columbia Fraser river country. On a fishing trip off Vancouver Island they fight a forty-foot shark, and decide that they have found their "sea serpent."

Kirkus 16:483 S 15 '48 150w

"Story starts off at a fast pace and is exciting to the end. Recommended." R. M. McEvoy
+ Library J 73:1524 O 15 '48 70w

"Boat-minded fellows in their early teens will like this yarn." Felix Riesenberg, jr.
+ N Y Times p35 O 3 '48 140w

DICKSON, MRS MARGUERITE (STOCKMAN). Roof over our heads; il. by Jean Macdonald Porter. 239p $2.50 Nelson
48-7213

Georgia Lane did not want to leave Boston and go back with her mother to the Maine coast town where she had been born. Besides there was the suspicion in the town that her father had stolen some money. But after a summer in Maine, renovating an old house, and clearing her father's memory, Georgia found contentment. For older girls.

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 9 '48 220w

"The illustrations by Jean Macdonald Porter seem old-fashioned and unprepossessing. The story is good."
+ — Kirkus 16:282 Je 15 '48 90w

"Recommended." R. M. McEvoy
+ Library J 73:1101 Ag '48 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 14 '48 200w

"Although Georgia is not very clearly defined as an individual her story will appeal to young girls for its quality of courage mixed with some very human failings. And there is the added attraction of watching an old house beginning to live again." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p12 Ag 15 '48 190w

DICKSON, SAMUEL. San Francisco is your home. 262p $3.50 Stanford univ. press

979.461 San Francisco—History. San Francisco—Biography 47-12053

For five years the author has been writing the scripts of a weekly radio program called This is Your Home. This book is made up of rewritten chapters from that program, all of them about the history, legends, and famous people of San Francisco. Partial contents: The fire companies; Adah Isaacs Menken; Black Bart; Nob Hill; Lotta Crabtree; Emperor Norton; David Belasco; R. L. S.; The color of the city; Mardikian and food; The earthquake. Selective bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:200 F 1 '48

"Mr. Dickson obviously bent to his job with a will determined to make his collection as colorful and readable as possible. As a matter of fact, this determination has, it seems to us, led Mr. Dickson astray at times. Everything is described in superlatives. . . In any event, he has written a book that is full of drama and consistently engrossing." Paul Speegle
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 23 '47 450w

DICTIONNAIRE de biographie Francaise, sous la direction de J. Balteau [and others). [20v] v 1-3 American distributors: J. S. Canner, 909 Boylston st, Boston

920 France—Biography

"This work is designed to fill the long-felt need for a dictionary of biography for France comparable to those which have been published for several other countries, such as the Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie, the Dictionary of National Biography, and, more recently, the Dictionary of American Biography. . . Biographies are signed and are well documented with very full bibliographies, usually from a wide variety of sources. The articles are primarily factual, but most of the longer ones, at least, attempt to give some assessment of the significance of an individual. Length of biography generally increases with the importance of the subject, but not always proportionately. The average length of articles is less than one column, but a few run to ten columns or more. Names are entered under their most familiar forms, with references from other forms." Subscription Bks Bul

"It is apparent that the Dictionnaire must either restrict its inclusiveness or far outrun its planned size. Even if the scale is reduced, the completion of the alphabet will undoubtedly take a number of years. Notwithstanding these uncertainties, it is a work of high quality and great importance, which will fill a serious gap in reference literature outstandingly if carried through on the present scale, and can still fill it well even if the scale must be much reduced. . . The Dictionnaire de Biographie Française is recommended for college, university and reference libraries which maintain scholarly collections extending beyond English language material and which keep in mind that publication may not proceed as scheduled. Other libraries may wish to defer purchase until more of the volumes have been published."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 19:44 Jl '48 800w

DILLON, MYLES. Early Irish literature. 192p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

891.62 Irish literature—History and criticism 48-6027

"Myles Dillon, now professor of Celtic at the University of Edinburgh, is one of the greatest Celtic scholars in the world. . . 'Early Irish Literature' provides a summary of every important story in the great cycles; many of the loveliest passages are translated word for word. The author gives only the necessary minimum of scholarly commentary, and is thus able to cover a great deal of ground. The reader will find not only the great stories which are already familiar to him through the writings of Yeats, Synge, and others, but also such hidden treasures as 'The Vision of Adamnán' and that irresistible parody 'The Vision of Mac Con Glinne.' " (Sat R of Lit) Indexes.

Booklist 44:279 Ap 15 '48

"Obviously it is a work of high scholarship, of even greater distinction than the same author's Cycles of the Kings of two years since. But after all he is one of the men best fitted for the task he has here so brilliantly performed." B. M. Kelly

+ Cath World 167:374 Jl '48 400w

Chicago Sun Mr 17 '48 60w

"While this volume seems designed primarily for budding scholars in Celtic, considerable enjoyment and information are to be derived from it even by readers who have no knowledge of any Celtic tongue. . . The last chapter consists chiefly of translations of lyrics, and here the reader catches glimmerings of the beauty that, he is told, inheres in the originals. As a whole this book is more than a fascinating footnote on the medieval mind." P. H.

+ Christian Century 65:913 S 8 '48 320w

Current Hist 14:296 My '48 20w

Reviewed by Padraic Colum

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bks p14 Jl 25 '48 950w

"Professor Dillon has performed a great service in gathering data on the ancient Irish epics and mythology. But it is a rather specialized work, limited in its appeal to the students of ancient literature and to the Irish." W. R. W.

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 23 '48 150w

"I have only two criticisms of Professor Dillon's study. One is that he seems almost entirely unaware of the relevance of anthropology to his subject. . . My second criticism is that a book so calculated to whet the appetite gives no short list of the feast of Irish literature that is now available in English. . . I would urge those who have never had any previous interest in mythology to read Professor Dillon's book. It will open up a new world to them, a world that is already lurking in their own unconscious." Vivian Mercier

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:35 Mr 20 '48 600w

"Mr. Dillon's approach is the realistic one of the judicial scholar. While his book sheds little new light on the subject of Irish literature, it does collect in one convenient place much of what has been written on the subject. It well complements and orients the excellent collection of old Irish legend in translation edited by Tom Peete Cross and Clark Slover some dozen years ago." Horace Reynolds

+ — Yale R n s 38:182 autumn '48 700w

DILTS, MARION MAY (MRS PAUL KOPP). Pageant of Japanese history; il. by photogravures from Japanese art and drawings by Toyojiro Onishi. new ed 418p $4 Longmans

952 Japan—History 47-11861

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"Miss Dilts has presented well the ideological and artistic sides of Japanese culture; she displays keen interest in religions. But, except for certain excellent treatments of social trends—as for the Tokugawa period—the book is weak in social, economic, and political analysis." A. B. Cole

+ — Ann Am Acad 256:237 Mr '48 360w

"This is a popular but sound history which seems to be based upon careful study of reliable sources." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 65:575 Je 9 '48 210w

Current Hist 14:175 Mr '48 20w

"Students will find the book very readable and persuasive, but teachers will do well to suggest complementary reading for students in other more objective and analytical histories of Japan." D. G. Tewksbury

+ — Social Educ 12:136 Mr '48 260w

"The Pageant of Japanese History is worthy of attention by anyone who is interested in Japanese history and concerned about the future in the Far East. It is well written in an easily readable, straightforward style. It is beautifully illustrated, and contains not only a very helpful glossary and dictionary of Japanese proper names, but an outline chart of Japanese history. The author, sympathetic to Japan and the Japanese, poses some profound and highly disturbing questions." W. R. Klinger

+ Social Studies 39:137 Mr '48 750w

DI MAGGIO, JOSEPH PAUL. Baseball for everyone; a treasury of baseball lore and instruction for fans and players; line il. by Lenny Hollreiser; advisory bd. of baseball experts, Carl Hubbell [and others] with a special chapter How to score, by Red Barber. (Whittlesey house publications) 224p $2.50 McGraw

796.357 Baseball 48-6684

"An inside story of baseball, a survey of the game written expressly for fan and player alike—the bleacher fan, the sand-lot player, the high school athlete, and anyone who has ever swung a bat or whooped it up for the home team." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 45:8 S 1 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '48

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 24:292 Jl '48 20w

"One of baseball's truly great has written a book that should be of real value to players—of all ages—who want to get some of the fine points. . . The collaborator, Tom Meany, deserves credit for the presentation and organization of material into a professional whole. A book for players and fans."

+ Kirkus 16:184 Ap 1 '48 80w

"An excellent book for player and fan." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:711 My 1 '48 20w

"A really effective piece of work of its kind." John Lardner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 30 '48 80w

"This is no ordinary textbook on baseball; more textbooks would be read outside the classroom if they had as many laughs as this one. . . There are a few errors and debatable statements. . . But, though the strategy as well as the comedy sometimes seems to belong to Meany rather than to DiMaggio, 'Baseball for Everyone' has much to recommend it to every baseball-minded reader." Harold Kaese."

+ — N Y Times p10 My 30 '48 470w

DIMOCK, HEDLEY SELDON, ed. Administration of the modern camp [contributors, Hedley S. Dimock and others]. 283p $4 Assn. press

796.54 Camping 48-7363

Chapters on the principles of running a summer camp for children. Partial contents: The place of the camp in education and social welfare, by H. S. Dimock; The functions and principles of camp administration, by L. H. Blumenthal; Organization of the camp, by H. J. Boorman; Staff qualifications and selection, by E. D. Partridge; The organization and administration of camp program, by H. J. Boorman; Administration of health and safety, by J. H. Ebbs; Financial management, by J. A. Ledlie and F. R. Eckford; Administration of food service, by E. F. Ott; The professional role and equipment of the camp director, by H. S. Dimock. Selected readings. Index.

Booklist 45:8 S 1 '48

"The camp executive will find in this book a welcome synthesis of the best modern thinking about what a camp can do to develop and socialize the camper, and how to do it." B. B. Bates

+ Survey 84:224 Je '48 270w

DIRINGER, DAVID. Alphabet: a key to the history of mankind. 607p il $12 Philosophical lib.

411 Alphabet—History. Writing—History 48-6615

"[A study of] the assorted kinds of writing produced by the human race: hieroglyphics, ideograms, syllabaries, and all the varieties of the alphabet. The book is illustrated with examples of almost every kind of writing described in the text. . . Two plates demonstrate the similarity between the ideographic notation of the American Indian, chronicling his simple adventures, and the 'pictographic appeal' of the present-day American advertiser, trying to attract attention to his wares." New Yorker

Booklist 45:6 S 1 '48

Reviewed by H. J. Fleure

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 20 '48 420w

"A comprehensive but non-technical and readable work."

+ New Yorker 24:106 S 11 '48 120w

"Although his book is an excellent exposition of a significant and fascinating subject, it does not tell the complete story, a story which involves the profound intellectual revolution that attended the dawn of history proper. We are told that Dr. Diringer is now at work on such a study. One cannot but look forward to it with keen interest—not unmixed with some misgivings. If the project comes off successfully the author will be clearly entitled to use in that work the subtitle which is a little sanguine in the present instance." E. A. Speiser

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:32 Ag 28 '48 550w

"This book, the fruit of an encyclopaedic knowledge, has much to offer, not only to the general reader who will find the whole field attractively laid out for his instruction and delectation, but also to the expert, who will derive great profit from the opportunity of making a comparative study of scripts drawn from widely differing epochs and areas and so of correlating them with his own work in this or that special field of research." G. R. Driver

+ Spec 180:592 My 14 '48 650w

"The main thesis of Dr. Diringer's work is that the alphabet was invented only once. Peoples of every continent were able to contrive systems of writing. . . But only the north-western Semites took the final step of creating a 'true alphabet.' The author states that their creation 'was from the first moment of its existence a true alphabet; at least, from the Semitic point of view.' But whether a 'true' alphabet from the Semitic point of view would be as 'true' from other points of view is a question which only definition could decide. This reveals the most serious defect in an otherwise excellent and staggeringly erudite work. . . Dr. Diringer's approach is chiefly archaeological and historical, and in this he excels."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p406 Jl 17 '48 1350w

DIRKS, JOHN EDWARD. Critical theology of Theodore Parker. 173p $2.25 Columbia univ. press

230.8 Theology. Parker, Theodore 48-7527

"This book attempts to get at the biblical and religious bases of Parker's theology of 100 years ago. The volume is thoroughly documented, shows how other interpreters have been led to emphasize other aspects of his contributions to American Christianity, and then evaluates Parker's contributions to biblical scholarship, to religious methodology, and to theology." (Churchman) Bibliography. Index.

"It is an interesting and valuable commentary."

+ Churchman 162:16 N 15 '48 90w

"In these days when a book must sell several thousand copies in order to pay its way, one rejoices in a serious book which sticks honestly to its subject and makes no passes at the general reader. Mr. Dirks's book will scarcely pay its way. It will interest only the handful of persons who are seriously concerned with the history of American religion. For this handful it will be an important book, because it examines the theological ideas of Theodore Parker more carefully than they have been examined hitherto." E. S. Morgan

+ New Eng Q 21:405 S '48 650w

DISNEY, DORIS MILES. Testimony by silence. 189p $2 Doubleday 48-8698

Mystery story.

Booklist 45:138 D 15 '48

Kirkus 16:416 Ag 15 '48 100w*

New Repub 119:27 N 1 '48 20w

"A fair enough, tale of a poisoned husband, light wife and sinister housekeeper for those who don't know where plots come from and care less. So far, Roughead wins, with Mrs. Disney an easy third." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 O 31 '48 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p37 O 24 '48 160w

"Approximately the same set of circumstances that provided William Roughead with the material for 'Malice Domestic,' a factual study of a British cause célèbre of the nineteenth century. . . Miss Disney has added some frills . . . but her conclusions as to the identity of the villain of the piece are the same as Mr. Roughead's. Fortunately, the case is interesting enough to bear repetition, even under this author's fairly pedestrian treatment."

+ — New Yorker 24:132 O 9 '48 130w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 12 '48 60w

"Nice going."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 N 20 '48 40w

DISNEY, DORIS MILES. That which is crooked. 190p $2 Doubleday 48-6713

Mystery story.

Booklist 44:383 Jl 15 '48

"Here as before Mrs. Disney has planned her history with scrupulous care but set it down very lightly so that the reader's sympathies and repulsions are never very deeply engaged. His interest though will be neatly pinned to the murderous progression." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun My 7 '48 230w

Kirkus 16:130 Mr 1 '48 70w

New Repub 118:26 Je 21 '48 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 23 '48 80w

"The book is a penetrating study of a warped mind from childhood through adolescence and manhood to old age. It is told with understanding and compassion." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 My 9 '48 60w

"All very plausible, but too long-drawn-out and psychiatrically didactic to sustain any great feeling of horror."

New Yorker 24:115 My 8 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Je 6 '48 90w

DISNEY, D. M.—Continued
"Curious, and absorbing, combination of case-history and novel, with plenty of tense moments and romance, against rural American background. Interesting."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:32 My 15 '48 40w

DISNEY, DOROTHY CAMERON (MRS MILTON MACKAYE). Explosion. 309p $2.50 Random house 48-5565

Detective story.

Booklist 44:383 Jl 15 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Mr 5 '48 130w

Kirkus 15:685 D 15 '47 80w

"Chatty as all get-out, but a skillful puzzler." E. H.
New Repub 118:26 Mr 8 '48 90w

" 'Explosion' struck us as Grade A mystery, an early contender for 1948 honors." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Mr 7 '48 230w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p22 F 29 '48 190w

"One of Miss Disney's best jobs."
+ New Yorker 24:88 F 28 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 7 '48 100w

"Several interesting characters; solution that is in doubt until closing chapter; effective emoting and detecting of superior grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:35 F 28 '48 40w

DIVINE, ARTHUR DURHAM (DAVID RAME, pseud). Dunkirk. 311p $4.50 Dutton 940.542 Dunkirk, France, Battle of, 1940
48-7008

"War correspondent and author of The Road to Tunis (1943) here records the rescue of the British Expeditionary Force from the Mole and beaches of Dunkirk, May 26-June 3, 1940. [This account was] based initially on a collection of informal logs of small boat masters taking part in the evacuation, supplemented by reports of commanders of destroyers and large passenger vessels, and by other Admiralty records." (Library J) Index.

"With all this in its favor, this is not a book for the casual reader. It is primarily a history in which the logs of countless ships tell much of the story. This makes it all the more valuable to the historian and specialist. Other readers can do best by reading the opening chapters, the closing ones, and by dipping into the central day-by-day chronology for countless inspiring stories of men who, as one wrote of the event in great restraint, were not brave but just had a will." Roland Sawyer
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 24 '48 370w

Current Hist 15:101 Ag '48 50w

"The material has been skilfully interwoven, with a fine sense of drama, into a day-to-day account of the disciplined frenzy of this 'armada of a fantastic improvisation', and of the organization that made it possible. . . Recommended where needed." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 73:810 My 15 '48 140w

"There are not heroics, merely a tale of great deeds performed without fuss or self-glorification. The book deserves to be read and reread." P. J. Searles
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 13 '48 1000w

"This book might have been more exciting. It might have been better organized. It might have avoided an island man's condemnation of the French. But if you weren't at Dunkirk it will take you there as nearly as words can." E. R. Murrow
N Y Times p3 My 30 '48 1700w

Reviewed by W. R. Manchester
Springf'd Republican p11B Je 6 '48 500w

"British Naval Analyst A. D. Divine (who skippered the yawl Little Ann in the great evacuation) has tried to collect every available account, and to place each one in its proper place within the great, overall story. He has succeeded so brilliantly that Dunkirk takes a place among the most exciting records of heroism in World War II."
+ Time 51:104 Je 21 '48 1100w

Wis Lib Bul 44:163 O '48

DIX, JOHAN FREDERIK CHRISTIAAN, and ROOZEN, WALTER, eds. Flowers in colour; rev. by W. E. Shewell-Cooper. 163p col pl $10 Oxford
635.9 Flowers—Pictorial works 48-10694

"This book is compiled with great care from photographs taken in Dutch gardens of flowers and shrubs suitable for northern climates. . . The book is arranged in sections, bulbs, shrubs and flowers forming the three divisions; and there are descriptions of the plants illustrated, with notes on size and flowering times, and useful advice as to growing and cultivation, soil and fertilisers. Tulips, narcissi and daffodils take up most of the space of the first section; dahlias, roses and carnations that of the second." Spec

"A beautiful book of interest largely to horticulturists."
+ Kirkus 16:418 Ag 15 '48 110w

"If you have a flower fancier on your Christmas list you might want to take a look at this excellent book." E. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 10 '48 100w

"For those who want a guide as to what is the colour of the flower they mean to buy and grow, and who cannot go to flower shows, this book will indeed be a help, and one to look at on autumn or winter evenings when they cannot have the vital beauty of the living plant." Constance Sitwell
+ Spec 181:442 O 1 '48 500w

DOAN, EDWARD NEWELL. The La Follettes and the Wisconsin idea. 311p $4 Rinehart
B or 92 La Follette, Robert Marion, 1855-1925. La Follette, Robert Marion, 1895- . Wisconsin—Politics and government 47-6998

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

Booklist 44:201 F 1 '48

"To everyone but the uninformed and hopelessly prejudiced it must seem a valuable study of a famous family and of American insurgent politics." Miles McMillin
+ Nation 166:188 F 14 '48 1350w

"Mr. Doan does not truly mean that the Primrose Township in which 'Old Bob' was born was in Indiana, though his sentence structure puts it there. He does not truly mean other similar ineptitudes. He just writes that way. The La Follettes' forty-odd years in major public office were important. They deserve a better book." E. B. Davis
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 F 15 '48 900w

Wis Lib Bul 44:20 Ja '48

DOANE, PELAGIE, comp. Small child's book of verse; il. by [the compiler]. 142p $3 Oxford
808.81 Children's poetry 48-11511

An anthology of children's poetry arranged under such headings as: Just about me; All through the year; All out of doors; Creatures, big and small; Fairies and wishes; Comes the starlighter. Includes poetry by Blake, Tennyson, Keats, Riley, Taggard, Coatsworth and many others. Indexes.

Booklist 45:161 Ja 1 '49

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:35 Ja '49 70w

"A fresh, but inclusive collection of poems for children, illustrated in a popular style in black and white and some full color. Many reliable favorites tastefully selected and a good sprinkling of lesser known charmers."

+ Kirkus 16:622 D 1 '48 150w

"The poems are well selected, well arranged, and cover a wide variety of subjects close to children. Many of the verses are unfamiliar. The book has good-looking large pages and excellent illustrations by the compiler, some in color. Recommended." Lillian Morrison

+ Library J 74:65 Ja 1 '49 90w

DODGE, DAVID. How lost was my weekend; a greenhorn in Guatemala; with il. by Irv Koons. 247p $2.75 Random house

917.281 Guatemala—Social life and customs 48-2707

Continues the travel diary begun in How Green was my Father (Book Review Digest 1947). The "weekend" of the title lasted about a year and a half, which the author and his family spent on a Guatemalan estate, with time out for visits to Honduras and Antigua.

Kirkus 16:101 F 15 '48 170w

"It is really funny, often brash, but gives real information and some excellent pictures of life in Central America. Will be popular." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 73:554 Ap 1 '48 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38 N 14 '48 80w

Reviewed by Margaret Mellinger

N Y Times p10 Je 20 '48 230w

Reviewed by Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 7 '48 450w

Wis Lib Bul 44:148 S '48

DODGE, DAVID. The long escape. 241p $2.50 Random house 48-3591

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun p44 O 22 '48 100w

Kirkus 16:270 Je 1 '48 80w

"Over-larded with Spanish terms in attempt to create 'atmosphere.' Told in slangy, somewhat vulgar jargon. Not much to recommend it." R. W. Henderson

— Library J 73:1026 Jl '48 70w

"With its peppering of local color, scraps of Spanish and transportation details, this sounds a bit like a travel tome entitled 'So You're Going to Antofagasta;' that is, until the plot begins to boil in that old cemetery. Lively writing in spots." Will Cuppy

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 15 '48 150w

"Romance, shooting and even a bit of grave-robbing, all contribute their bit to a carefully built up character study of the missing Parker —who is finally turned up." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 8 '48 180w

"A neat puzzle, considerably enhanced by an authentic-sounding South American background."

New Yorker 34:80 Ag 21 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 8 '48 150w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 28 '48 40w

"Better grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:24 Ag 14 '48 40w

DODGE, GUY HOWARD. Political theory of the Huguenots of the dispersion, with special reference to the thought and influence of Pierre Jurieu. 287p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

320.1 Huguenots. Jurieu, Pierre. Political science—History 47-30897

"The two main problems treated in this study of seventeenth-century Huguenot political theory are popular sovereignty and religious tolerance. In the discussion of these concepts the emphasis has been placed upon Pierre Jurieu since, as a political thinker, he towered above all other French Calvinists of the period, and with the success of the English Revolution of 1688 he became the theorist of the Glorious Revolution and the Whig cause. . . The author is Assistant Professor of Political Science at Brown University." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"A thorough, systematic, and scholarly account of the evolution and significance of the ideas of Pierre Jurieu and of their relationship to those of other theorists of the Dispersion, especially Pierre Bayle." T. I. Cook

+ Am Pol Sci R 42:147 F '48 1150w

"Mr. Dodge has explored with great skill this byway in the development of political theory. His book is well written, thoroughly documented from the European archives, and clear and forceful in exposition. It would be unjust to complain that the dramatis personae never quite emerge as flesh-and-blood individuals. Mr. Dodge's purpose has been to analyze ideas, not to write a history of the Huguenots in exile. He has sketched in enough of the background, however, to make his book meaningful and useful to historians of the period as well as to specialists in theory. It deserves to be labeled a first-rate piece of research." Gordon Wright

+ Ann Am Acad 255:201 Ja '48 450w

"This careful and competent study of seventeenth-century Huguenot political thought is especially welcome because it covers a field hitherto largely neglected. Jurieu, in particular, has never received the attention he deserved as the outstanding continental political theoretician of his day, and Professor Dodge's discussion of his relationship to the English revolution of 1688 is fresh in approach and illuminating in content. Many readers will find his use of John Locke as a foil by which the thought of both men [Jurieu and Bayle] is illumined to be a very useful literary technique." W. S. Hudson

+ Crozer Q 25:82 Ja '48 550w

"Dodge has placed students of political philosophy in his debt by re-creating in comprehensive fashion, and with heroic though unobtrusive labor, an important and too little known period in the history of political ideas." Alan Gewirth

+ Ethics 58:229 Ap '48 600w

"Mr. Dodge has made a scholarly and distinguished contribution."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p207 Ap 10 '48 700w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:70 Mr '48 240w

DOHERTY, EDWARD JOSEPH. Tumbleweed; a biography [of Catherine de Hueck Doherty]. 203p il $2.75 Bruce pub.

B or 92 De Hueck, Catherine 48-7923

A biography of this Russian Catholic noblewoman who is the founder and director of the Catholic settlements known as Friendship Houses established in various cities in the United States and Canada. The author is an Irish-American journalist who married the baroness in 1943.

Booklist 45:30 S 15 '48

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 168:170 N '48 170w

Reviewed by J. S. Kennedy

Cath World 168:214 D '48 100w

"In the course of four decades of newspapering, Eddie Doherty has told thousands of stories in print. Probably he never told a more amazing story than that of this biography. It is told with deep feeling, yet with restraint, cheerfulness and grace." W. F. Morse

+ Chicago Sun Jl 28 '48 500w

Wis Lib Bul 44:184 N '48

DOLBIER, MAURICE. The half-pint Jinni, and other stories; il. by Allan Thomas. 242p $2.50 Random house 48-7634

Eight humorous tales of adventure and magic in the Orient. For boys and girls.

Booklist 45:36 S 15 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun S 4 '48 290w

"Delightful tongue in cheek fairy tales with a touch of oriental splendor and a whiff of Charlie Chaplin."
+ Kirkus 16:280 Je 15 '48 80w

"Should prove effective material for reading aloud. . . Recommended." Clara Adams
+ Library J 73:1097 Ag '48 130w

"The title story of the collection is a small masterpiece, as is 'The Fable of the Sensitive Prince.' As a matter of fact, all of the stories will be read again and again, enjoyed and remembered." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ag 1 '48 250w

"Save for 'Moonquest', an over-long tale which lacks the quick twist of imagination of the others, this collection is notable for its originality, wit and genial humor." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p17 Ag 22 '48 190w

Reviewed by E. B. Schlipp
San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 28 '48 160w

"Eight fresh and amusing tales. . . They will remind boys and girls of 'The Arabian Nights' in background and atmosphere. But the humor is individual and has no relation to anything else at all."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:37 Ag 14 '48 60w

DOLPH, JACK. Murder is mutuel; an adventure in murder which recounts the further exploits of Doc Connor and Katie Storm. 250p $2.50 Morrow 48-8320

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun S 17 '48 50w

Kirkus 16:323 Jl 1 '48 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 S 26 '48 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p31 S 26 '48 160w

"Commonplace and sordid stuff, with not one horse race in it."
— New Yorker 24:108 O 2 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 24 '48 60w

"Presents fool-proof murder plan that looks new to fiction, brisk chatter, some very narsty characters, and likable sporting-doctor sleuth. Adequate toughie."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:34 S 25 '48 40w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 14 '48 90w

DOLPH, JACK. Odds-on murder. 242p $2.50 Morrow
48-1829

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun My 7 '48 100w

"Redolent of the race track and its followers, this is marked for the more rhinoceros-skinned readers."
Kirkus 16:96 F 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p13 My 30 '48 40w

"Narrator-hero resourceful and likable, despite historical-present declamations; people, mainly scummy, offer some good characterizations and action hits high peaks. Readable toughie."
Sat R of Lit 31:32 My 15 '48 40w

DOLSON, HILDEGARDE. Husband who ran away. 342p $3 Random house
48-8234

Addison Stubbs was a mild man, and no match for his dominating mother-in-law who lived too near for comfort. The day he broke his mother-in-law's clock and crept under the porch for refuge, he heard some frank remarks about himself made by the members of his wife's family. After that Addison actually got the courage to run away to New York, and thru a few lucky breaks became a well-known designer. By the time his mother-in-law caught up with him she found herself outclassed, and her daughter happy at last with her "Addy."

Booklist 45:51 O 1 '48

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p15 S 23 '48 90w

"Without the exaggerations of Thorne Smith, this still follows the pattern of a shriveled life expanding under special conditions, and the crispness of the writing, the pleasantness of the characters, and unstressed humor of situation make it amusing."
+ Kirkus 16:344 Jl 15 '48 150w

"Readers who enjoyed Hildegarde Dolson's humorous sketches in We Shook the Family Tree (1946) will find this novel diverting and amusing." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 73:1089 Ag '48 80w

"About as solemn as a merry-go-round. As a novel, it has a definite merry-go-round effect: you travel dizzily but are right back where you started, and the solid ground underfoot feels a little strange."
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 19 '48 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 O 3 '48 100w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 31:32 N 27 '48 130w

Springf'd Republican p7B O 3 '48 260w

DONAHEY, MRS MARY AUGUSTA (DICKERSON). Castle of Grumpy Grouch; il. by Pelagie Doane. 162p $2 Random house
48-6759

A fairy tale about a little princess who lost her temper once too often and became so horrid in consequence that no one could stand her until she went on a search for her temper. The story of her adventures is for ages seven to ten.

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Jl 3 '48 100w

"An unbelievable hodge-podge of sentimental poppycock, in a medley of fairy tale and morality tale."
— Kirkus 16:48 F 1 '48 110w

"This is fantasy in very readable form. Recommended for children 7-10 who are interested in fairies." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 73:883 Je 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 9 '48 270w

"Compared to our present-day allegories the story seems a little naive but it has a refreshing charm and glints of humor. Children of 6 to 10 will get the point in painless fashion while they enjoy the trappings of an honest-to-goodness fairy tale." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p21 Je 20 '48 180w

DONALD, DAVID HERBERT. Lincoln's Herndon; introd. by Carl Sandburg. 415p $5 Knopf
B or 92 Herndon, William Henry. Lincoln, Abraham
48-8469

A scholarly biography of William Herndon, the friend, law partner, and biographer of Abraham Lincoln. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:65 O 15 '48

"The author has done a superb job. His volume is scholarly without ever being dull, critical but not pedantic, as brilliant in analysis as it is colorful in narrative." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 6 '48 420w

Kirkus 16:419 Ag 15 '48 140w

"Highly recommended." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 73:1269 S 15 '48 140w

"Public gratitude to Mr. Donald must be generous and outspoken. Whether considered as biography or as historiography or as a bibliographical revelation that 'the folklore Lincoln is essentially Herndonian in origin,' it is a masterly achievement of sound scholarship, enlightened exposition and absorbing interest. Mr. Donald has found his material in scores of depositories and brought them under complete and responsive discipline. From Herndon's 'Lincoln Records,' now in the custody of the Library of Congress, he has been able to distinguish fact from fiction, truth from trumpery. Herndon hoped that his book would 'cause a squirm'; Mr. Donald has neatly turned the tables in what should be received in an honored place among the major studies of our time." D. C. Mearns

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 S 19 '48 1550w

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

N Y Times p10 S 26 '48 1050w

"The task of Lincoln research will never end, it seems, and one book is followed by an opposing viewpoint. It will be hard, though, for any person to find flaws in Mr. Donald's biography of a biographer." Keith Kent

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 19 '48 600w

" 'Lincoln's Herndon' is a synthesis of biography with literary and historical criticism in the most orthodox academic tradition. The statements of men are weighed as impartially as one studies an algebraic equation, every assertion of consequence is documented, and the bibliography indicates an almost incredible degree of patience and industry. Yet these characteristics, usually considered to be concomitants of dulness, do not keep the book from being as lively and readable as a hasty piece of journalism. Mr. Donald has a flair for picking pungent phrases from his sources." P. M. Angle

+ Sat R of Lit 31:21 S 18 '48 850w

DONALDSON, ELVIN FRANK. Personal finance. 499p il $4.50 Ronald

332.024 Finance, Personal 48-5686

"This book has been written to give adequate and practical help to the person who wants to do a better job of managing his personal finances." (Pref) Partial contents: Borrowing money; Living within your income; Bank accounts; Savings; Buying life insurance; Annuities and social security; Financing a home; Investing in securities; Taxes; Wills and trust plans. Selected readings. Index. The author is professor of finance, college of commerce and administration, Ohio state university.

Booklist 44:346 Je 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:1032 Jl '48 40w

DONCASTER, PATRICK. Sigh for a drumbeat. 255p $3 Dutton

48-2554

A story of Ireland in the early days of World war II. The chief character is Franky Kavanagh, a poor lad not quite an idiot tho he looks like one. Thru his love of beauty and his simple nature Franky becomes involved with the IRA, is used by them in their secret plottings, and when he becomes dangerous, is destroyed.

Reviewed by C. Kilmer

Commonweal 48:360 Jl 23 '48 90w

Kirkus 16:176 Ap 1 '48 210w

"Unconvincing and not too well written novel. . . Not recommended." M. H. Zipprich

— Library J 73:878 Je 1 '48 100w

"This tense story of a manhunt has been likened by British reviewers to 'The Informer' and 'Odd Man Out,' but it is palpably spun out to book length. The author delves overtime in Franky's fumbling dreamy mental fog."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Je 13 '48 220w

"Mr. Doncaster takes his title from a passage in O'Casey, and critics have mentioned O'Flaherty in reviewing 'A Sigh for a Drumbeat'; but the author of this novel has neither the skill nor the feeling of these writers. His novel is badly focused, shifting from the viewpoint of Noel McKeown, whom readers will find sympathetic, to the viewpoint of Franky Kavanagh, deformed in spirit as well as in body. The emotions which impel it are wasted, being confined in no successful esthetic pattern and being used to emphasize no moral conviction. As a story of the underprivileged it lacks compassion and concentrated attention to the subject; as a story of civil war it lacks a sufficient dramatic crisis." Lawrence Lee

— N Y Times p23 Jl 18 '48 550w

"Although the basic elements of this thriller —the city of Belfast, darkness, bad weather, and the doings of the Irish Republican Army— are potent enough to have yielded 'Odd Man Out' to F. E. Green, the amalgam into which they have been worked by Mr. Doncaster is of a more pedestrian order."

New Yorker 24:108 Je 5 '48 160w

DONER, MARY FRANCES (MRS C. L. PARZANT). Ravenswood; a story of the impact of a family and an industry on a Great Lakes town. 254p $2.75 Doubleday

48-8042

A novel of several generations of a family and of the salt industry which made them. The scene is a Michigan town on Lake Huron. Much of the action of the book is based on complicated family relationships.

Booklist 45:51 O 1 '48

"Excellent are descriptions of the locale, fatiguing are technical conversations about the manufacture and uses of salt." W. K. Rugg

+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 S 2 '48 180w

Kirkus 16:290 Je 15 '48 170w

"Above average entertainment. Interesting information on the salt industry and thrilling description of boat racing in a storm. . . Worthwhile reading. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 73:1089 Ag '48 80w

"The St. Georges have some family skeletons —all involving bastardy. . . They all tend to dislike one another, and certain key numbers of the family, who start hinting at their group shame in the beginning, finally end the suspense by disclosing who is who. By this time the reader, bored by endless descriptions of how to refine salt, tired of trying to keep the characters straight, and not very interested in the rather tedious St. Georges anyway, is apt to care very little."

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 22 '48 140w

Reviewed by Isabelle Mallet

N Y Times p32 N 28 '48 430w

" 'Ravenswood' is a slick magazine novel 'famoused up' with somber overtones that never amount to much more than stage directions or window dressing." Edwin Seaver

— Sat R of Lit 31:25 S 4 '48 360w

DOOB, LEONARD WILLIAM. Public opinion and propaganda. 600p $5; text ed $3.75 Holt

301.154 Public opinion. Propaganda 48-6783

An attempt to analyze public opinion and propaganda from the viewpoint of modern science and in terms of human beings. Bibliography. Index.

DOOB, L. W.—Continued
"Professor Doob has done a commendable service by cleaning away much accumulated under-brush of myth, fantasy, dogmatism, and muddled thinking that impedes the intelligent study of public opinion." H. L. Childs
+ Am Pol Sci R 42:989 O '48 1250w

Reviewed by William Albig
Am Soc R 13:642 O '48 800w

Reviewed by Herbert Hyman
Ann Am Acad 260:201 N '48 420w

Booklist 45:44 O 1 '48

Chicago Sun p6X Jl 4 '48 40w

Kirkus 16:277 Je 1 '48 100w

"This book should become a standard work in more than one respect. In it Professor Doob of Yale University organizes a vast, amorphous and fluctuating body of material so masterfully that it becomes finite, articulate and firm. What knowledge we have acquired in these fields is not only surveyed but also analyzed with a circumspection which owes much to the author's wealth of experience. . . His sense of depth shows magnificently in the concluding chapter, in which he examines the value of his analytical enterprise. It proves itself to be rooted in a prudent, well-balanced conception of human affairs." Siegfried Kracauer
+ N Y Times p3 Jl 4 '48 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 29 '48 220w

"The propaganda purveyors themselves, as well as college students and teachers, will find 'Public Opinion and Propaganda' worth reading. In the social sciences it will be required reading." Lucien Warner
+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 O 23 '48 600w

School & Society 68:15 Jl 3 '48 20w

"This excellent book contains such a vast amount of information on public opinion and propaganda that it is virtually impossible to do justice to it in a brief review such as this. The reader can be certain of a very thorough and exhaustive analysis of the subject. For this reason, perhaps, it may not be easy reading for those who are not specialists in the field. The book, however, will be of definite value to anyone cast in the role of either the producer or consumer of public opinion and propaganda." R. P. Holben
+ Social Studies 39:371 D '48 700w

DOOLAARD, A. DEN, pseud. See Spoelstra, C.

DOORLY, ELEANOR. Story of France; il. from drawings by Katharine Lloyd. 274p $3 Didier pubs.

944 France—History—Juvenile literature
48-11191

A narrative history of France from prehistoric times to 1939, written for young people. The book was first published in England in 1944.

Kirkus 16:531 O 1 '48 120w

"The book would certainly confuse a serious student, but it makes pleasant reading. Miss Doorly does not disguise her passionate admiration for France and everything French. She writes con amore of Jeanne d'Arc and Napoleon, Richelieu and Pasteur. Her apologies for the France of 1939 sound a little thin. But teen-age readers who can ignore the special pleading here and elsewhere in the book will enjoy it for its color and vivacious style." N. B. Baker
+ — N Y Times p41 N 7 '48 130w

"A rambling record, diverting though superficial, informative though incomplete. Yet much of the essence and spirit of France are here, due in no small part to the numerous and exceptional drawings by Katharine Lloyd." D. B. B.
+ — Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 9 '49 270w

DOTY, SILAS. Life of Sile Doty, 1800-1876; a forgotten autobiography; the most noted thief and daring burglar of his time; foreword by Randolph G. Adams [comp. by J. G. W. Colburn]. new ed 288p $4 Alved of Detroit, inc, 500 Buhl bldg, Detroit 26
B or 92 48-8106

A reprint of the autobiography of a famous burglar, born in Vermont in 1800, who died in Michigan in 1876. The book was first printed in 1880.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun S 24 '48 70w

"In its way it is a remarkable book, chiefly because although its author piously declares his conviction that crime does not pay he nevertheless takes obvious delight and considerable pride in recounting the details of his criminal career. Such unregeneracy is sad, no doubt, but it makes for amusing reading." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 Ag 28 '48 600w

"The book is not one calculated to stir excitement in readers used to high-powered cars and submachine guns, but there is undeniable enjoyment in following Sile's brushes with the law and marveling at his complete lack of morals." R. F. H.
Springf'd Republican p7B S 19 '48 390w

DOUGLAS, MRS EMILY (TAFT). Appleseed farm; il. by Anne Vaughan. 128p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

Chapman, John—Juvenile literature
48-5822

A story told to a city child by her country aunt about how their ancestral farm received its name in memory of Johnny Appleseed.

Booklist 44:253 Mr 15 '48

Chicago Sun Ap 17 '48 220w

"It is told very simply, almost amateurishly, but little girls to whom I have shown it have been captivated by it." F. C. Darling
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 14 '48 210w

"The simple manner of telling the story is suited to the younger children who like pioneer history, and the glimpse of an almost legendary figure is in keeping with his life as it is known. The format of the book is not as good as it deserves." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:193 My '48 120w

Kirkus 16:85 F 15 '48 120w

"Easy reading for the third- and fourth-graders. Recommended." Anne Izard
+ Library J 73:484 Mr 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 14 '48 320w

"Long after his apple trees have ceased to bear, the spirit of Johnnie Appleseed still walks through the Middle West, its most typical and most beloved folk-hero. This little story, less ambitious than some, and perhaps because of that unpretentiousness, more effective, should help to keep his memory alive." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p29 Ap 18 '48 240w

Sat R of Lit 31:35 Ap 10 '48 180w

Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 11 '48 120w

Wis Lib Bul 44:65 Mr '48

DOUGLAS, GEORGE WILLIAM. American book of days; rev. by Helen Douglas Compton. rev ed 697p $6 Wilson, H.W.

394.26 Holidays. Festivals 48-28210

"A compendium of information about holidays, festivals, notable anniversaries and Christian and Jewish holy days with notes on other American anniversaries worthy of remembrance." (Subtitle) "The 1937 edition of this useful reference book has been revised and brought up to date by Helen Douglas Compton, daughter of the original author. Many important dates have been added such as January 6th with Roosevelt's Four Freedoms speech, VE and VJ Days, and the ratification of the more recent constitutional Amendments." (Library J) Index.

Christian Century 66:21 Ja 5 '49 40w

"Excellent index and table of contents make this a valuable book for all reference collections." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 74:61 Ja 1 '49 130w

" 'The American Book of Days' is practically indispensible for school and reference libraries, and a handy standby for newspaper editors." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p6B D 26 '48 360w

DOUGLAS, LLOYD CASSEL. Big fisherman. 581p $3.75 Houghton

Peter, Saint—Fiction 48-10352

"By the author of the Robe, this closely follows the Biblical account of Jesus' years of ministry. The big fisherman, Simon Peter, his family and his neighbors, are the leading characters. Joseph of Arimathea, Jairus, Herod Antipas, John the Baptist, and the disciples, Philip, Andrew, James and John all play their parts. An international element is introduced with the love interest which concerns a beautiful young girl, half Arab, half Jewish." Library J

Booklist 45:103 N 15 '48

Reviewed by D. Mosdell

Canadian Forum 28:240 Ja '49 380w

"The style is undistinguished and overcolloquialized. Apostles and disciples become Johnny, Joe and Jake. . . The Bible tells us very little of Peter, but it is enough. Rough and untutored no doubt he was, but this is not his portrait. . . To those who believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of the Living God and that Peter was the Rock upon which He built His Church, The Big Fisherman is a travesty." B. J. Thompson

— Cath World 168:410 F '49 300w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun p9X N 14 '48 600w

" 'The Big Fisherman' combines palpable sincerity of purpose with a total lack of literary distinction, dubious scholarship with warmth and generosity of story-telling; and if it serves to vitalize and vivify for a great host of readers —as did 'The Robe'—an early Christian scene that has never before lived for them, it can well justify itself as a current sermon-novel." O. D. Hormel

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 18 '48 1050w

Reviewed by R. M. Pearson

Churchman 162:15 D 15 '48 180w

"Mostly it is a lumbering tale, interesting in spots, but with little in clear focus. The characters rarely come to life. The countryside lacks color. And even the miracles of Christ somehow fail to be impressive. Let us bear witness to the good will of the author. But let us be honest about his book. It is a well-intentioned sermon which, like most of the species, runs to wordiness and often tempts to slumber." H. G. J. Beck

— + Commonweal 49:357 Ja 14 '49 390w

Kirkus 16:534 O 1 '48 340w

"Probably will be a best seller and is recommended for all public libraries." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 73:1594 N 1 '48 130w

"Mr. Douglas tells a tale with exceeding skill. His account of Fara and her mission moves swiftly in the atmosphere of exciting adventures, while the recreation of the Bible narrative is done with resourcefulness and beauty. But artistry fails to bring these two portions of the book into any harmony. The characters and events meet, but never fuse into an organic whole." J. H. Holmes

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 21 '48 500w

" 'The Big Fisherman' is earnest and affectionate, devout almost at times to the point of paraphrasing its Biblical sources. But the critical pollsters will not greatly affect Mr. Douglas' assured public reception. His Spenglerian Roman Mencius, his clumsy attempts to write the sophisticated dialogue of the palace set, his painted backdrops—none of this will prevent 'The Big Fisherman' from netting one of the largest readership hauls of the year." Charles Lee

— + N Y Times p6 N 21 '48 700w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 21 '48 700w

"The story, considered apart from style, interpretation, and literary skill, is good. . . Chief fault of 'The Big Fisherman' is a lack of literary skill appropriate to the theme. Lacking the magnificence of Milton or the insight of Mann, Mr. Douglas converts the great Christian drama into something soft, sentimental, diluted with words." Bradford Smith

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:12 N 20 '48 700w

"Dr. Douglas' books always combine inspirational moralizing and vigorous action. This gives them the strange, busy air of jaunty sermons. The Big Fisherman is no exception. The ordinariness that makes the book attractive when it deals with the minor characters becomes something of a handicap when it is called upon to picture the disciples together, or the eternal wonder of the Christ story."

+ — Time 52:110 N 22 '48 650w

Wis Lib Bul 45:13 Ja '49

DOUGLAS, WILLIAM ORVILLE. Being an American; [speeches]. 214p $2.75 Day

815 U.S.—Politics and government. World politics 48-8054

A collection of speeches and addresses by an Associate Supreme Court justice who narrowly missed the Democratic nomination for President in 1948. They date from 1940, are of the liberal tendency, and contain tributes to such people as Norris, Brandeis, and Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt.

Booklist 45:29 S 15 '48

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun p8X Ag 15 '48 500w

"Justice Douglas's little book will become a contemporary solace to students and followers of the liberal tradition. Being a compilation of speeches, and so naturally repetitious, it would have been a better book if edited more strictly with some of the lesser speeches omitted. But that is a minor criticism." Roland Sawyer

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 14 '48 900w

"Mr. Douglas reveals himself as a phrasemaker with eloquent and optimistic devotion to Civil Rights and the well-being of the common man. These excerpts also hint at considerable understanding of the requirements for true political democracy."

+ Commonweal 48:458 Ag 20 '48 90w

Kirkus 16:300 Je 15 '48 170w

"Recommended for purchase by libraries operating under democratic principles." H. S. Taylor

Library J 73:1084 Ag '48 100w

"Mr. Douglas is, for a Supreme Court justice, young. He will be available in 1952 if Mr. Truman is defeated in November. Truman's defeat would make him, in fact, the leading liberal candidate, so this exposition of his ideas may yet acquire political as well as philosophical importance. In any event it is interesting to the student of the history of ideas, and it should not be dismissed by the student of the history of politics. . . The speeches here presented were selected and arranged by Richard J. Walsh, who has done a discreet and intelligent job." G. W. Johnson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ag 15 '48 1350w

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler

N Y Times p3 Ag 15 '48 750w

DOUGLAS, W. O.—Continued
Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 17 '48 750w
Reviewed by Eliot Janeway
Sat R of Lit 31:15 Ag 21 '48 1200w
Springf'd Republican p7B S 12 '48 550w
Wis Lib Bul 44:163 O '48

DOUGLASS, HARL ROY, and GRIEDER, CALVIN. American public education; an introduction. 593p il maps $4.50 Ronald 370.973 Education—U.S. 48-3161

"American Public Education has been written in recognition of, and to advance, today's developing trend toward teacher education rather than teacher training. Designed as a textbook for sophomores, juniors, and seniors in such courses as Public Education in the United States, The American School System, and Introduction to Education, it does not materially overlap the content of courses in Methods, Curriculum, Principles of Education, Principles of Secondary (or Elementary) Education, or School Administration. With adequate supplementation, it may also be used in classes of graduate students." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

School & Society 67:487 Je 26 '48 20w

"Regarding the school of tomorrow, the authors may be taking to flights of fancy but regarding the subject of historical development of, and current trends, in American public education, however, they keep on solid ground, and their text is an excellent summary of materials to be covered in that field." J. A. Killough
+ — Social Studies 39:372 D '48 650w

DOUGLASS, RAYMOND DONALD, and ADAMS, DOUGLAS PAYNE. Elements of nomography. 209p $3.50 McGraw 510.84 Nomography (mathematics) 48-793

"This book deals with the preparation and use of alignment charts, presenting seven elementary types. A feature is the inclusion of the circular nomograph as a separate entity. The subject is developed from the viewpoint that each type of chart considered solves a certain type of equation, as compared with the method of using the general theory of nomography to find a chart for any given equation." (Eng N) Index.

"The text is unusually informative, indexing is adequate, and typographical errors are few. The book is worthy of the publisher and of Douglass and Adams, who are experienced professors of mathematics and graphics, respectively, at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology." D. S. Davis
+ Chem & Eng N 26:2388 Ag 9 '48 250w

"If you are a student approaching a course in nomography, chances are that the teacher will use 'Elements of Nomography' as a text. He will if he's smart. This book, plus a lot of work, will produce a master nomographer." L. B. Pope
+ Chem Eng 55:285 Ap '48 240w
Eng N 140:95 Ap 1 '48 70w
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:44 Ja 1 '48 60w

DOUTHIT, DAVIS. Nobody owns us; the story of Joe Gilbert, midwestern rebel. 240p il $2 Coop. league of the U.S.A.
B or 92 Gilbert, Joseph 48-14988

Joe Gilbert came to this country from England when he was eighteen. His first jobs were as various as carpet-making and prospecting. Later he became a prospector in Alaska, a labor organizer in the northwest, a newspaperman, a lawyer, and a politician. Index.

Commonweal 47:574 Mr 19 '48 80w

"His story is told with little art, some dulness, but much sincerity, and the reader must imagine for himself what spell Gilbert cast over his audiences." S. T. Williamson
Sat R of Lit 31:18 Jl 31 '48 650w

DOWNES, MRS ANNE (MILLER). Mary Donovan. 319p $2.75 Lippincott
48-5366

A novel of a marriage in which the partners were a woman of good background and fine integrity, and a man who had very little of either. Thru all the years of their marriage it was Mary Donovan who bore the burdens and forgave her handsome rascal of a husband, even when he deserted her.

"Sound, straightforward story-telling make this an entertaining novel of a modern marriage. . . The book winds up in an excessive spurt of dramatics, but this is a minor flaw, after all, in a novel that deals thoughtfully with the subject of marriage and family solidarity." Barbara Bond
+ — N Y Times p27 Mr 7 '48 230w
"Light reading."
Wis Lib Bul 44:63 Mr '48

DOWNEY, FAIRFAX DAVIS. Seventh's staghound; il. by Paul Brown. 230p $2.50 Dodd
Dogs—Legends and stories 48-9225

Story for older boys and adults. It is based on fact and describes General Custer's Seventh Cavalry. The heroes are Peter Shannon, trumpeter of the Seventh, and his magnificent staghound, Bran. The book ends with the massacre at Little Big Horn.

"The historical setting seems accurate, and there is action and excitement aplenty for any boy or man. Illustrations by Paul Brown are admirably suited to the book." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 73:1828 D 15 '48 70w

"What gives this story substance and distinction are Fairfax Downey's accurate depiction of Army life, his sure familiarity with soldiers and their ways, his convincing reconstruction of the historical period, his love of dogs and his detailed information about staghounds in particular. The illustrations by Paul Brown are most appropriate." M. C. Scoggin
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 31 '48 180w

"Combines fast action with a depth of feeling that will appeal to almost every youngster. . . As in his other novels, the author has based his incidents on historical data, drawing also on his own extensive military career. The result is a dramatic account of Army life on the old frontier." H. B. Lent
+ N Y Times p4 N 14 '48 110w
Sat R of Lit 31:42 N 13 '48 20w

DOYLE, SIR ARTHUR CONAN. Adventure of the blue carbuncle; with an introd. by Christopher Morley; ed. and with a bibliographical note by Edgar W. Smith. 64p pl $2.50; ltd ed $5 Baker st. irregulars, inc, 45 E. 17th st, N.Y. 3

A Sherlock Holmes Christmas story, published separately for the first time since its appearance as a Strand magazine story in January 1892.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 D 12 '48 220w
Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 18 '48 320w

"Morley preface and Edgar Smith postlude give extra fillips to tastefully presented edition of nostalgic and slightly creaky masterpiece. For aficionados."
Sat R of Lit 31:30 D 18 '48 40w

DRAKE, CARLOS. Mr. Aladdin. 214p $2.75 Putnam

B or 92 47-7007

An account of the adventures of an American in Paris in the 1920's. The author's father, a wealthy Chicagoan, decided to put his son on his own, and Paris seemed a good place to be in those days. He started a service for finding things for traveling Americans, from pink elephants to unprocurable apartments, and made a success of it until the crash came.

Kirkus 15:569 O 1 '47 140w

"All in all, a gay glimpse of the fabulous past."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja 11 '48 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ja 18 '48 220w

"For those who find both the myth and the reality of Parisien life fascinating and enchanting, 'Mr. Aladdin' is recommended." W. R. Manchester

+ Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 11 '48 90w

DRAKE, DANIEL. Pioneer life in Kentucky, 1785-1800. 257p il $4 Schuman

B or 92 Frontier and pioneer life—Kentucky 48-7439

Ten long letters written by a pioneer doctor, Daniel Drake of Louisville. In this attempt to preserve some family history for his children, he has made a record of frontier living during the years 1785 to 1800. The letters were first published in 1870 and reprinted in 1907. The present edition is based on the manuscript letters. Illustrated with family portraits and facsimiles of manuscript pages. Index.

"Worthy of a place on American shelves beside Mark Twain's Life on the Mississippi. . . The letters are 'advantaged' also by the intelligent care with which the editor, Dr. Emmet Field Horine, of the University of Louisville School of Medicine, has supplied notes, corrections, and a biographical sketch." Raymond Walters

+ Am Hist R 54:225 O '48 360w

Booklist 44:384 Jl 15 '48

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald

Library J 73:876 Je 1 '48 100w

"The descriptions of everyday living—feeding cattle in winter, keeping the sheep under the cabin, sugaring off, weddings and church services, taverns and schools, washing clothes in winter, making brooms and candles, spinning flax and then bleaching it, all of the myriad tasks of a way of life that is now far behind our memories—make this volume as interesting as it is important." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 1 '48 430w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 12 '48 120w

School & Society 67:463 Je 19 '48 50w

DRAKE, MRS FRANCES (SPODICK), and DRAKE, CHARLES ARTHUR. Human relations casebook for executives and supervisors. 187p $2.50 McGraw

658.3 Employment management 47-7072

A book on human relations based on real situations reported by foremen and students in management courses. There are comments on each case for purposes of discussion. Suggested readings at end of each section and supplementary references. Index.

Booklist 44:212 F 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:201 F 1 '48 70w

"While this text is one that any individual in management can profitably read on his own, it is also ideal for executive and supervisory training and for university courses in business and personnel management." E. H. van Delden

+ Management R 37:109 F '48 550w

DRAKE, MARGARET EVELYN. Chrysantha. 252p $2.75 Lippincott

48-7528

Novel in diary form, relating the adventures of Chrysantha Tuffet, aged nineteen, in her efforts to find romance. Chrysantha was told by her parents that she was "endowed at birth with every gift of fortune except beauty and common sense." Her adventures began when she discovered psychoanalysis, and ended with her approaching marriage to Paul Newton. The scene is an English provincial town.

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg

Christian Science Monitor p9 S 2 '48 150w

"An amusing story good for a summer hour. Recommended." K. T. Willis

Library J 73:1026 Jl '48 50w

"Chrysantha's journal is distinctly odd and sometimes obscure, but it is lively and amusing, and if Miss Drake can learn to regulate her oddity without losing her imaginative wisdom she should, like Sterne, contradict Dr. Johnson." Charles Marriott

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Je 11 '48 70w

"Truth to tell, the characters in the story (with the exception of Chrysantha herself) might well have stepped straight out of a serial in a woman's magazine, and Miss Drake has an amiable weakness for farce. But this does not matter in the least. Chrysantha spins entertainment like a spider spinning a web—and she certainly caught me." P. H. Newby

New Statesman & Nation 36:57 Jl 17 '48 300w

"Chrysantha's story, written in the form of a diary, is semi-innocent, semi-sophisticated, and is filled with sprightly spoofing. Although perhaps the author has overbalanced her ending by growing unexpectedly serious, 'Chrysantha' is still an engaging and original novel of unusual charm."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 1 '48 250w

"It is difficult to say why the book doesn't come off. Perhaps because it too obviously points out its unexciting moral that virtue triumphs—even over impending madness. Or, perhaps because the story is so slight and what action there is moves at a snail's pace. Or, perhaps because the author tries so hard to be funny, especially in the dialogue, which strains painfully at the seams of brightness. Or, perhaps the fault is with the postwar reader and not the book. The very thought of the Nineteen Thirties, conjuring up as it does images of strikes, unemployment and depression at one end of the decade and war at the other, is not conducive to a frivolous mood." Rose Dobbs

— N Y Times p11 Ag 1 '48 400w

"I know the word 'charm' is thoroughly overworked, but it fits here. This slightly mad tale is altogether charming, even when—as it occasionally does—it goes straight over the edge into an unknown dimension." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 21 '48 850w

"The reason why this love story . . . is so refreshing is that it contains something unmistakably alive, almost electric, when what one is used to is at best a good piece of morticianship in the style of Mr. Joyboy. . . It is Miss Drake's achievement that although the story is told entirely by Chrysantha one is enabled to see her with startling objectivity. So that though one learns about events through her alone one often understands things of which she is quite unaware. It must be admitted that towards the end of the book some of the events begin to pall. But of Chrysantha herself one would never grow tired." Robert Kee

+ — Spec 181:218 Ag 13 '48 360w

"Lively and rambling. . . [Chrysantha] establishes herself as a real character with at any rate some genuine charm. But in order to get to it the reader has to put up with so much elaborate whimsicality that the act of reading is transformed, at times, into an esoteric psychological exercise."

Times [London] Lit Sup p329 Je 12 '48 170w

DRAKE, ROLLEN H. Aircraft engines. 348p il $5.90 Macmillan

629.13435 Airplane engines 48-3264

Designed primarily as an introductory textbook for vocational schools. Partial contents: Fundamentals of internal combustion engines; Metals and alloys used in Aircraft engines; Glossary of terms used in aircraft engines; Types of engines; Piston assembly; Valves and cams; Electrical fundamentals; Ignition systems; Fuel and fuel systems; Lubricants and lubricating systems; Engine installation and cooling systems; Engine instruments; Jet propulsion. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:950 Je 15 '48 80w

"The material is largely descriptive, the author's style is clear, and there are more than 30 well-reproduced illustrations. These qualities make it suitable also for laymen and young people studying by themselves."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:33 My '48

DREIKURS, RUDOLF. Challenge of parenthood. 334p $3.50 Duell

649.1 Children—Management. Child study 48-5711

Discussion of the psychological principles which should govern parent-child relations in order to insure a happy, wholesome childhood and a mature, confident adulthood.

Booklist 44:275 Ap 15 '48

"After having placed a humbling forefinger against the Parent's chest in his introduction, Dr. Dreikurs guides his reader through a well-planned, illuminating expose of family relationships and efficient methods of coping with any of an amazingly wide variety of situations that occur between children and adults." James McGuinn
+ Chicago Sun Mr 2 '48 450w
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '48

"A book for careful study, for psychologists, teachers and parents."
+ Kirkus 15:691 D 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by M. R. Brown
N Y Times p31 Mr 28 '48 180w
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 6 '48 170w

DREPPERD, CARL WILLIAM. Handbook of antique chairs. 275p il $3.95 Doubleday

749.31 Chairs 48-7579

Beginning with the historic background of chairs, this book for the amateur collector, discusses chairs made in the United States from colonial times to the late nineteenth century. Many illustrations in black and white; a glossary, and lists of early chairmakers, but no index.

Booklist 45:8 S 1 '48

"Useful addition to an indispensable series for the amateur collector, and a book that should be available to dealers as well. . . All supplies good reading for those who can take some debunking without pain."
+ Kirkus 16:227 My 1 '48 150w

"A little book useful for any library in many ways."
+ Library J 73:1092 Ag '48 110w
New Yorker 24:137 N 6 '48 120w

"His book is long on interesting anecdotes about chairs and their makers and is illustrated with 500 line cuts." E. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 29 '48 70w

DREPPERD, CARL WILLIAM, and GUILD, LURELLE VAN ARSDALE. New geography of American antiques. 254p il $4 Doubleday

749.211 Antiques 48-6134

Handbook on American antiques which stresses the types of furniture, glass, and other accessories peculiar to the Eastern seaboard states and Ohio. Includes separate chapters on lighting; mirrors; glass; pottery and porcelain; pewter and silver; floor coverings, coverlets, and textiles; and clocks. Illustrated glossary.

"A fascinating exploration of American antiques, which promises to be a Must book in its field."
+ Kirkus 16:41 Ja 15 '48 250w

"Readable and informative study. . . Generally useful." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 73:709 My 1 '48 130w

"A valuable handbook not only for collectors but for anyone with an interest in the origin and development of our native crafts."
+ New Yorker 24:109 Ap 24 '48 100w

DRESSER, DAVIS. Blood on the stars [a Michael Shayne mystery] by Brett Halliday [pseud]. 214p $2.50 Dodd

48-7415

Detective story.

"'Blood on the Stars' is a piece of palpable manufacture which makes a more than liberal use of dead herrings. The author's perfunctory endeavor to give Shayne some private life by supplying him with a high-minded love affair is not very convincing." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun Jl 2 '48 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Je 27 '48 120w

"We regret to say that we cannot entirely approve of Mike Shayne. Where money is concerned his conscience is much too elastic." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p16 Je 27 '48 150w
New Yorker 24:76 Je 26 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 27 '48 60w

"Silly first chapter is followed by entrance of Shayne and satisfying amount of shooting, slugging, cognac swilling, and shrewd sleuthing. For Shayne fans."
Sat R of Lit 31:30 Je 26 '48 40w

DRESSER, DAVIS. Michael Shayne's triple mystery, by Brett Halliday [pseud]. 225p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

48-1650

Three detective stories featuring Michael Shayne, private investigator. Contents: Dead man's diary; A taste for cognac; Dinner at Dupré's.

Kirkus 16:179 Ap 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 My 9 '48 160w

"Tough—but tolerable."
Sat R of Lit 31:32 My 15 '48 40w

DRINKER, MRS SOPHIE LEWIS (HUTCHINSON). Music and women; the story of women in relation to music. 323p il $5 Coward-McCann

780.071 Women as musicians 48-5215

"An extensive and valuable study of women in their relation to music from earliest times down to the present. The dominant place of women in primitive tribes as attested by anthropological studies carries over into the field of music. In Greek times when man became the aggressor woman's leadership was pushed into the background leading to inhibitions in music as well as in other phases of life—inhibitions which are only beginning to be overcome today. Mrs Drinker believes that when women are able to release their imaginations from age-long repressions, they again will become a force in the realm of music." (Library J) Bibliographical references in notes. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '48
Kirkus 15:638 N 15 '47 190w

"An interesting and instructive book." H. E. Bush

+ Library J 72:1611 N 15 '47 100w

"The book is a fascinating piece of work, and Mrs. Drinker's emphatic message—not to think of music as a matter of technical proficiency possessed only by a few, but as a natural form of expression and a vital force in the lives of everyone—is well worth heeding. With a second edition in mind the reviewer should like to utter one wish. Occasionally more detailed documentation in the footnotes would seem desirable." Karl Geiringer

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 5:234 Mr '48 400w

"Since Mrs. Drinkwater wished to tell the 'story of women in their relation to music' we are fortunate in the fact that she took considerable pains to inform herself on the many aspects of her subject. She started out as a well read amateur, practiced in the arts of singing and of managing musical ensembles. This equipment she has supplemented with research in five languages which enabled her to find and use the few really solid works of social history and music criticism. . . But when she complains that the enslavement of women has not yet been undone and asks (via music) for the recognition of 'collective rights,' she goes beyond any demonstrable case." Jacques Barzun

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 F 22 '48 1550w

"An interesting contribution to the literature of musicology. It is perhaps unfortunate that Mrs. Drinker sets down her story in a tone so reminiscent of latterday suffragette tracts. She has done a good research job, and the sheer number of facts she has unearthed is imposing, but on the whole her effort lacks real objectivity, and the fault lies in her approach." James Lyons

+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 4 '48 750w

"Mrs. Drinker is aggressively feminist in tone and sometimes, contemplating the way woman musicians have been and are neglected in history and in contemporary society, lets her temper get the better of her. Her scholarship and thoroughness, however, are commendable."

+ — New Yorker 23:67 Ja 31 '48 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 21 '48 250w

"There is not a rehashed idea in the book. Every idea is her very own. If you ever thought of music as a sentimental art, a purposeless diversion, or as mere radio drooling, you will be shocked out of your absurd notions into realization that music is the most functional activity of man or woman. If this book doesn't start a hurricane of debate, I miss my bet." Sydney Greenbie

+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 Ap 24 '48 1000w

DRURY, JOHN. Midwest heritage; with hundreds of old engravings. 176p $5 Wyn

977 Mississippi valley 48-9123

A pictorial history of the mid-west: that section of the country which begins with the Ohio west of Pennsylvania, and ends with the Missouri; with the Great Lakes as northern boundary. The pictures, from old engravings and books, cover most of the nineteenth century, but concentrate on the middle years. Index.

Booklist 45:134 D 15 '48

Kirkus 16:496 S 15 '48 120w

"It is a handsome and fascinating book, without benefit of photography. Its 300-odd prints, from collections of engravings and illustrated books and magazines, lack nothing of interest, variety or verisimilitude. The sketch book could do some things better than the camera. . . The prints in 'Midwest Heritage' have more character than the over-explanatory and sometimes stilted text." Walter Havighurst

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30 N 28 '48 550w

"Many of the engravings are not only valuable social documents but reveal surprising charm and beauty. . . A single picture showing an Ohio River keelboat, judges going to court, or an early waterfront view, flashes a reality to the observer's mind which not even the most vivid contemporary description can equal. Mr. Drury's reproduced engravings will delight a large audience. The narrative commentary, unfortunately, is much less effective. Not only is it geared to the pictures so that strange hiatuses and emphases appear, but stale anecdotes and a somewhat artificial nostalgia make the writing seem superficial." J. T. Flanagan

+ — N Y Times p38 N 21 '48 550w

Wis Lib Bul 45:12 Ja '49

DU BOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK). The devil and destiny. 186p $2 Doubleday

48-6591

Detective story.

"Skillful plotting, highly readable in the gore-minus school."

+ Kirkus 16:130 Mr 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p26 My 16 '48 90w

"Most improbable, on the whole, but smoothly presented."

New Yorker 24:108 My 1 '48 110w

"If pay-off were as good as build-up this might rank high. Harrassed people are interestingly done, but plot demands considerable believing."

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:32 My 22 '48 50w

DU BOIS, MRS THEODORA (MCCORMICK). Face of hate. 189p $2 Doubleday

48-9224

Detective story.

"Reliably resourceful."

+ Kirkus 16:492 S 15 '48 70w

"Polite, soft-boiled, for the ladies." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p34 N 28 '48 140w

"The story of their investigation is interrupted far too often by descriptions of the scenery along the way, but they do finally succeed in rescuing Linden and apprehending the murderer after he had added two more victims to his list. The McNeills have done better than this in the past, and so has Theodora DuBois." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p41 N 28 '48 160w

"A little confusing, at least for a landlubber."

New Yorker 24:168 N 20 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 12 '48 100w

DUDLEY, OWEN FRANCIS. Michael; a tale of the masterful monk. (Problems of human happiness) 302p $3 Longmans

48-1371

Character study of a sensitive and introverted young Englishman, with a horror of violence. On a sea voyage to New Zealand he meets an understanding priest, and thru his influence, and that of a young woman, also a passenger on the trip, Michael lives down his fears and becomes a hero in World war II.

Reviewed by R. J. Hurley

Library J 73:395 Mr 1 '48 100w

"On its best level, 'Michael' is the story of a conversion. Here Father Dudley is sure of himself and his subject. Elsewhere he seems uncertain and his writing is vague. His narrative is weak and far too obvious." W. R. W.

— + San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 18 '48 120w

DUGGAN, STEPHEN PIERCE HAYDEN, and DRURY, BETTY. Rescue of science and learning; the story of the Emergency committee in aid of displaced foreign scholars. 214p $3 Macmillan

378.12 Emergency committee in aid of displaced foreign scholars. World war, 1939-1945—Displaced persons. Learning and scholarship 48-4595

A report on the rescue of European scholars and their reinstatement in scholarly positions in this country. The author was for many years the Director of the Institute of international education, and the co-author was his executive director. Appendices contain statistics. Index.

Booklist 45:58 O 15 '48

Current Hist 15:295 N '48 40w

"With a little more imagination and gift in writing, this might have been a thrilling story. As it is, it provides a clear statement of what the Committee did during fifteen years of its existence."

+ — Kirkus 16:140 Mr 1 '48 130w

Reviewed by F. E. Hirsch

Library J 73:1022 Jl '48 200w

Nation 167:612 N 27 '48 50w

"Dr. Duggan and Miss Drury deserve credit for a conscientious job in recounting the history of the displaced foreign scholar. . . Enough of the human side of these scholars is told to give every one concerned with the democratic way of life a sense of pride and at the same time concern." Benjamin Fine

+ N Y Times p15 D 12 '48 1000w

Reviewed by H. N. MacCracken

+ Sat R of Lit 31:12 S 11 '48 800w

School & Society 68:176 S 11 '48 10w

"No college library should be without this unique reference book." D. C. Fisher

+ Survey G 37:481 N '48 650w

DUN, ANGUS, bp. Prospecting for a united church. 115p $1.50 Harper

280 Church unity 49-7100

"The Episcopal bishop of Washington, Dr. Angus Dun, gives us in this small volume the addresses with which he inaugurated the Hoover Lectures on Church Unity, given at the Disciples' Divinity House in Chicago last year. . . After some preparatory chapters . . . Dr. Dun turns to 'an essay in understanding.' He endeavours to sketch the three main types of Christian church expression, using the key words. 'Catholic,' 'Classical Protestant,' and 'fellowship of the Spirit,' as his central ideas." (Crozer Q) Index.

Booklist 45:150 Ja 1 '49

"It is almost unbelievable that the Episcopal Bishop of Washington, D.C., could have added to the stature of those lectures, but the expansions have grown naturally out of the richness of the original material, adding to its inspiration as well as to its persuasiveness." W. B. Blakemore

+ Christian Century 65:1272 N 24 '48 900w

"We can heartily commend this book, since it tells us prophetically what the goal must be, but does not seek to dictate how the Holy Spirit is to guide the scattered Christian bodies of the world towards the achievement of that goal." W. N. Pittenger

+ Crozer Q 26:72 Ja '49 650w

"The Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington has given us in this volume a characteristically thoughtful and deeply spiritual interpretation of the problems involved in moving toward a united church. . . Bishop Dun has not written for the learned few but for the average Protestant minister and the thoughtful lay members of our churches."

+ Kirkus 16:507 O 1 '48 210w

DUNCAN, DAVID. The bramble bush. 215p $2.75 Macmillan 48-7556

Novel in which an ex-agitator, attempting to enter the United States in disguise, is framed into adopting the name and character of a murderer.

Booklist 45:194 F 1 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Jl 16 '48 240w

"A first in the field which, though highly complicated, is competent and provides some expert entertainment."

Kirkus 16:127 Mr 1 '48 130w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 73:1026 Jl '48 110w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk p10 Jl 25 '48 100w

"A series of exciting adventures and miraculous escapes which provide thrills and suspense in full measure." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p25 Jl 18 '48 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 15 '48 100w

"There is a certain amount of skill displayed, unquestionably, in the telling of the story, although the long arm of coincidence and the long leg of chance are twisted unconscionably whenever it is to the author's advantage. The style is crisp, direct, hardboiled, and all the other adjectives, as definitely trade-marked as Mr. Bogart's famous sniff or twitch of the lips. In short, there is absolutely nothing the matter with an entertainment like 'The Bramble Bush' except that the whole thing is utterly meaningless." Edwin Seaver

— + Sat R of Lit 31:37 Ag 7 '48 360w

"This is an exciting suspense story, ably planned and worked out. The plot is complicated, but it can be predicted that the reader won't be disappointed. Try it and see." D. F. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 29 '48 120w

DUNCAN, KENNETH. Home builder's handbook. 515p il $6.95 Van Nostrand

692 Building. Dwellings. Architecture, Domestic—Designs and plans 48-8631

"Handbook on home planning construction and remodeling. Explains the new functional method of design, planning each room for activities to be carried on in it, suggestions for built in furniture and storage space, then all assembled into floor plans; gives economy in materials and costs. Prefabricated houses and remodeling are discussed. Information is given on phases of residential construction from choosing a site to finished house including specifications, framing details, legal and financial aspects of ownership, outdoor living, practical pointers on landscaping and terracing. Chapters on electricity, heating and plumbing. 362 illustrations." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:99 N 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:1516 O 15 '48 140w

"Thorough as it is, and lavishly illustrated, 'The Home Builder's Handbook' is not designed for the experienced craftsman so much as to give the home buyer and home builder enough information for him 'to be able to check the work of architect and builder, and be equipped to make more intelligently the many decisions that only the owner can make.' " D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p7B O 3 '48 330w

DUNHAM, CLARENCE WHITING. Planning industrial structures. 481p il $6 McGraw

658.2 Industrial buildings. Engineering 48-6185

Contents: General planning of structures; Exploration of the site; Daylighting industrial plants; Electric lighting and power; Ventilation; Roofs; Floors; Walls and partitions; Steel mill buildings; Multistory steel buildings; Concrete structures; Wooden structures; Foundations; Machinery foundations; Miscellaneous considerations and structures; Some lessons in structural planning. Index.

Eng N 141:95 Ag 5 '48 120w

"Emphasis is on the need for complete planning before beginning computation and construction. Will interest also construction engineers and members of engineering departments of industrial concerns." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 73:480 Mr 15 '48 130w

"Design is carried only through the selection of materials and parts. Thus in the chapter on floors, there is information on types of floor construction and on special details, such as joints, but none on methods of calculating allowable spans, because the work is intended chiefly for engineers who are already well grounded in the theory of structures."
N Y New Tech Bks 33:3 Ja '48

DUNHAM, JAMES HENRY. The religion of philosophers. 314p $4 Univ. of Pa. press

180 Philosophers. Philosophy and religion 48-408

"The purpose of the book is to give an account of the philosophy of religion of Plato, Aristotle, Epicurus, Marcus Aurelius, Augustine, Leibniz, Spinoza, David Hume, Immanuel Kant, and Auguste Comte. Roughly thirty pages are assigned to each man." (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Index.

"This is the kind of book that pleases the professional philosopher. Its author, dean emeritus of the college of liberal arts and sciences of Temple University, is much at home with the ten philosophers about whom he writes; he has studied them painstakingly, the sources and the times, and exhibits critical and mature knowledge of the history of Western philosophy." Vergilius Ferm
+ Christian Century 65:1079 O 13 '48 2150w

"The dean emeritus of Temple University proves in the book before us that his retirement was not occasioned by any flagging of his powers or by any deterioration of his scholarship. The book could be written only by a man of extraordinary industry, critical insight, and close familiarity with the primary sources of classical occidental philosophy. It repays careful study. Its style is lucid and pleasing, save for a tendency to overwork the term 'conceit,' in the sense of a regrettable concept." E. S. Brightman
+ Crozer Q 25:168 Ap '48 1000w

"It is refreshing indeed to read a discussion of the problems of religion that is free from the all-too-prevalent practice of name-calling which attempts to label a writer and thus impose upon him an all-too-precise and certain relationship to other thinkers. Mr. Dunham rightfully asserts that this practice yields nothing for philosophical investigation. He has therefore limited himself to more basic concerns. . . Teachers of religion and sincere seekers of truth will welcome this volume not so much for its careful description of the ideas of the ten selected thinkers, for they could be read directly easily enough, but rather for the wealth of analytical discussion which draws into relationships the rich relevancies of the problems of religion to other problems in the field of human experience." A. W. Painter
+ J Religion 28:218 Jl '48 550w

DUNIGAN, DAVID RONAN. History of Boston college. 362p il $6 Bruce pub.

378 Boston college, Boston 48-636

"Eighty-five years ago a little group of Jesuit priests, with no resources but their own heroic vision and the loyal assistance of the Catholic poor of Boston, founded a college with the purpose of raising up Catholic leaders in the city of Parkman, Lowell and Holmes. The early decades of their venture held a full measure of discouragements in the small beginnings, the sparse student-rolls and the ever pressing debts. As time went on a small but fairly well established college justified their hopes. . . Almost fifty years passed when the presidency of the college came to its second founder, Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S.J. This dynamic priest, undaunted by the lack of financial resources, planned a university that would re-create the great Catholic universities of the Middle Ages. . . Father Dunigan tells the story of this heroic struggle of poor priests and poor people for an ideal." Cath World

"This history of a church-related college testifies to the author's industry but never rises above the level of the trivial." Thomas LeDuc
Am Hist R 53:901 Jl '48 160w

"A narrative that will thrill any Catholic reader." M. P. Harney
+ Cath World 167:375 Jl '48 400w
School & Society 67:30 Ja 10 '48 20w

DUNKEL, HAROLD BAKER. General education in the humanities. 321p $3.50 Am. council on educ.

370.1 Education, Humanistic 47-6013

A report on a five-year cooperative study of general education in the United States, by a selected group of American colleges. The data was obtained, for the most part, by testing and interviewing a large number of students in the twenty or twenty-five participating colleges and universities. No index.

Reviewed by R. H. Heindel
Ann Am Acad 255:217 Ja '48 120w

"There is much that is commendable in this volume. . . And there is much said about this matter of values, a topic which many of our contemporary theorists are only too willing to avoid or ignore. But these and other good things are weighted down by an amazing conglomeration of statistical data and an infusion of jargon that make the book an extremely annoying one to read. . . The case history approach, coy to the point of nausea, is maddening. It is of course simply another example of our contemporary tendency to test and measure everything and to minimize any attempt at intellectual speculation. Perhaps some good will come of it." T. A. Kirby
— + Commonweal 47:381 Ja 23 '48 450w

"Mr. Dunkel's account is a clear and honest report, not only of the methods employed in the study, but of the basic problems faced by the teachers who were engaged in it." Russell Thomas
+ Library Q 18:231 Jl '48 950w
School & Society 66:254 S 27 '47 20w

"General Education in the Humanities will prove a valuable and stimulating guide to anyone interested in this branch of teaching. Its implications become wider the more deeply it is read and reflected upon." H. R. Walpole
+ School R 56:118 F '48 1050w
Social Studies 38:379 D '47 20w

DUNKLEY, G. T. Controlled atmospheres in heat-treatment. 69p il $1.75 Pitman

669 Metallurgy A48-6380

"A brief review of current practice in the use of gases rather than air in furnaces during the heat-treatment of metals, both ferrous and non-ferrous. The book is suitable only as an introduction, to be read quickly by persons who desire a general view of the subject." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1615 N 15 '47 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:76 O '47

DUNLOP, AGNES MARY ROBERTSON (ELISABETH KYLE, pseud). Lost Karin; il. by Nora S. Unwin. 267p $2.50 Houghton 48-7901

Mystery story for young readers.

Booklist 45:53 O 1 '48

DUNLOP, A. M. R.—Continued

"Humor, sense of place and suspense enter into the story of how Karin was lost and found. Elisabeth Kyle has the ability to create real people and lifelike situations and her writing is good. Readers of different ages find her books entertaining and this is no exception." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 42:463 N '48 80w

Kirkus 16:281 Je 15 '48 110w

"Good atmosphere. Recommended." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 73:1198 S 1 '48 80w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis

New Statesman & Nation 34:514 D 20 '47 180w

"The dry, subtle humor throughout the book is refreshing. An excellent, fast-paced mystery, written for the pre-teenager, which will also entertain adults who like children." Rosejeanne Slifer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 22 '48 150w

"As usual, Miss Kyle tells her story with considerably more distinction than is generally found in mystery-adventure stories, infusing it with plenty of picturesque local color. Nora Unwin's drawings are pleasant footnotes to characters and action." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 29 '48 200w

— New Yorker 24:120 D 11 '48 120w

Wis Lib Bul 44:168 O '48

DUNN, ALAN. East of Fifth; the story of an apartment house [il. by the author]. 168p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 48-5632

"A sort of illustrated 'Grand Hotel,' concerning the lives of the inhabitants of a New York apartment house, told in a sequence of captioned drawings and related text. Mr. Dunn roams all over the place, from penthouse to subbasement, to record the griefs, triumphs, and spats of the tenants and employees." New Yorker

Booklist 44:278 Ap 15 '48

"Mr. Dunn's text is serene, filled with pity for his characters, and also with irony and understanding. His drawings find the truth and state it sharply, wittily, but with restraint and tenderness. The snobs, the drunks, the simple people, the unhappy people, the bores, the timid, the despairing people who are packed into this tight urban box are people we know and are. That being understood, you can read the book and laugh, the way you could laugh with Chaplin, but only after you had understood." C. G. Paulding

+ Commonweal 47:548 Mr 12 '48 450w

" 'East of Fifth' will delight the New Yorker in general and fascinate the apartment dweller in particular. And there is no reason why it shouldn't be enjoyed by Eskimos, who have to generate their own heat but at least live in privacy. Its humor is acid and laced with a grim and granular truth."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 4 '48 190w

"In 'East of Fifth,' Alan Dunn presents a lively picture-and-text comment on apartment-house life in New York City. This little book is, in its own modest way, unique." Russell Maloney

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 7 '48 600w

"An original and diverting piece of light-hearted sociology."

+ New Yorker 24:127 Mr 13 '48 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 9 '48 130w

DUNN, ALAN. Last lath. [96p] $2.50 Architectural record, 119 W. 40th st, N.Y. 18

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 47-8279

"Alan Dunn, whose cartoons grace the pages of the New Yorker, has also been providing laughs for readers of the Architectural Record for 10 years. These drawings are all from the latter publication." San Francisco Chronicle

"Without some acquaintance with the building trades a few of Mr. Dunn's beams will be over your head." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D '47 130w

"They are pretty specialized as to subject and to working, but don't let that scare you. For if they don't strike you as funny, then you've never built a house, or knew anyone who built a house, or even lived in one. And the strangeness of the architectural terms makes the cartoons even funnier." Allan Worth

+ San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 30 '47 120w

DUNSANY, EDWARD JOHN MORETON DRAX PLUNKETT, 18th baron. Fourth book of Jorkens. 194p $3 Arkham house

48-11670

Fourth book of the fantastic tales, recounted by Jorkens in the Billiards club.

"The worst that can be said is that the execution is so smooth that one does not realize until the punch line that there was not much of a story after all. The book is perhaps not up to the Dunsany of old." Fletcher Pratt

N Y Times p30 N 7 '48 160w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 14 '48 100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 14 '48 90w

DUNSING, DOROTHY MAY. Swamp shadows; il. by Ralph Ray, jr. 226p $2.50 Longmans

48-7182

Adventure story for older boys. The scene is Florida, near Tallahassee, in the 1820's. The two youths who hope to make their fortunes have to combat one misfortune after another until they discover the identity of a dishonest white trader.

Booklist 45:72 O 15 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun S 11 '48 170w

Kirkus 16:281 Je 15 '48 120w

Reviewed by M. B. Snow

Library J 73:1101 Ag '48 70w

"Moves along steadily without bogging down in swamps of inaction, although the mystery is somewhat contrived and the villain improbable." G. C. Castor

+ — N Y Times p22 Ja 9 '49 90w

Sat R of Lit 31:31 N 13 '48 200w

School & Society 68:127 Ag 21 '48 20w

Wis Lib Bul 44:187 N '48

DURAND, JOHN DANA. Labor force in the United States, 1890-1960. 284p $2.50 Social science research council

331.12 Labor supply—U.S. 48-7397

"A technical statistical analysis of trends in the labor force in the United States, showing the gradual increase in the labor force as a percentage of the total population despite the sharp decline in the percentages of young workers aged 14-19. This over-all trend is due mainly to the tremendous increases in the percentages of women of ages 20-64 in the labor force." (Am Soc R) Bibliography. Index.

"Economists who haven't thought seriously about the labor force in the United States in the past few years will be well advised to examine this book. Those whose work involves projections of labor force trends will find it invaluable. Particularly useful to the specialist are the several appendixes, which include full descriptions of the methods used by the author in his various computations, and also a comprehensive labor force bibliography classified according to subject matter." T. K. Hitch

+ Am Econ R 38:975 D '48 2050w

"This is the kind of scholarly work which best fulfils the highest goals of the Social Science Research Council, its principal sponsor. Durand has brought within the covers of this book the best available data dealing with the labor force in this country." Robert Dubin
+ Am J Soc 54:380 Ja '49 420w

"A solid piece of work."
+ Am Soc R 13:648 O '48 150w

"The study should be of special interest to social scientists because of its effort to integrate important economic and noneconomic elements into the framework of statistical presentation and analysis of published and unpublished census data. . . The monograph should be very helpful to any one who cares to try to supply what appears to have been omitted." C. R. Daugherty
+ Ann Am Acad 260:233 N '48 400w

DURANT, JOHN. The Dodgers; an illustrated story of those unpredictable bums. 154p $2.75 Hastings house

796.357 Brooklyn. Baseball club (National league) 48-6693

History of the Brooklyn Dodgers told in picture and prose from about 1860 to the present. Includes the complete record of every Dodger and other statistics on the club. No index.

Booklist 44:309 My 15 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '48

"The charts of complete records will delight the fans."
Kirkus 16:210 Ap 15 '48 60w

"Will be popular." R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:711 My 1 '48 20w

Reviewed by John Lardner
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 30 '48 40w

"The Durant history of the Dodgers is, like the Robinson autobiography, liberally illustrated with interesting and amusing photos. Durant dug back to the most ancient of Brooklyn teams, the Excelsiors, an amateur nine organized in 1854. . . One picture of slightly earlier vintage shows an umpire on his back at Ebbets Field and an irate fan punching away at him. That alone should make the book a best seller in Brooklyn." John Kieran
+ N Y Times p33 My 2 '48 270w

DURBAHN, WALTER EDWARD. Fundamentals of carpentry; ed. by J. Ralph Dalzell. 2v il v. 1 $3.25; v2 $4.25 Am. tech. soc

694 Carpentry. Building 47-6275

"First volume covers fundamentals of carpentry; history of carpenters tools, use of tools, wood fastenings, the framing square, identification and choice of woods, insulation and a dictionary of carpentry. Second volume concerns the application of principles as applied to ordinary and special types of modern structures with set of eight blue prints." Library J

Booklist 44:277 Ap 15 '48

"Much needed books for the building trades, apprentices, trade schools and for the layman. . . Books are replete with excellent diagrams." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 73:480 Mr 15 '48 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:4 Ja '48

DUROCHER, LEO ERNEST. Dodgers and me; the inside story. 284p il $2.50 Ziff-Davis

796.357 Brooklyn. Baseball club (National league) 48-2783

"Leo Durocher, who has returned to the wars again after an enforced year of quietude in baseball's Bastille, has come up with a book about his life with the beloved Bums, and at first glance he appears to tell all in typical no-holds-barred Durocher fashion. . . That's the way the book runs—inside stuff, with Leo apparently telling all. But a closer look reveals that he doesn't spill everything—not by a good deal." N Y Times

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis
Chicago Sun p9X My 16 '48 800w

Kirkus 16:210 Ap 15 '48 70w

"Not very admirable self-revelation of baseball's most loquacious and bellicose personality. Antithesis of all that is worth while in sport."
— Library J 73:1030 Jl '48 20w

"Since Mr. Durocher is a figure of considerable consequence to a great many hundreds of thousands of people, his unabashed tale should have a wide appeal. Like all apologias, it is full of inaccuracies and ellipses. It provides Mr. Durocher's side of the story. Any book signed by Mr. Durocher which provided anyone else's side would be out of character, and therefore a piece of junk." John Lardner
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 30 '48 270w

Reviewed by John Durant
N Y Times p10 My 30 '48 700w

DUUS, OLAUS FREDRIK. Frontier parsonage; [his] letters, 1855-1858; tr. by the Verdani study club of Minneapolis and ed. by Theodore C. Blegen. 120p $2.50 Norwegian-Am. hist. assn.

B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Norwegians in the U.S. Frontier and pioneer life—Wisconsin

A collection of letters, written home, by an immigrant Norwegian pastor in Wisconsin from 1855 to 1858.

Reviewed by C. A. Clausen
Am Hist R 53:910 Jl '48 370w

Social Studies 39:192 Ap '48 10w

"This small volume should be of interest to the general reader as well as to the student. Yet it must be remembered that it was not nationalists like Parson Duus, with his essentially reactionary ideas, who broke and seeded the prairies, but those aliens who exchanged their nostalgic dreams of the homeland for the realities of life in America."
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:151 Je '48 240w

DUVOISIN, ROGER ANTOINE. Four corners of the world [the unbelievable adventures of Francisco Pizarro] il. by [the author]. 128p $3 Knopf

B or 92 Pizarro, Francisco, marquis—Juvenile literature 48-8235

A retelling of the story of Francisco Pizarro and his adventures in Panama and Peru. For eight to twelve-year-olds.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:46 Ja '49 90w

"Handsome, colorful drawings fail to compensate for an uninspired text."
— + Kirkus 16:437 S 1 '48 70w

"Recommended for ages 11-14." Claire Nolte
+ Library J 74:133 Ja 15 '49 80w

"Sound research and good writing and illustrations make this a book which will hold the attention of boys and girls. Facts and impressions will remain colorfully in their minds." I. E.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 14 '48 230w

Reviewed by N. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p5 N 14 '48 110w

New Yorker 24:145 D 11 '48 90w

Sat R of Lit 31:53 N 13 '48 40w

E

EASTMAN, ELIZABETH. Mouse with red eyes. 244p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

48-7131

At the age of 27, Alexandra Hubbell considered herself lucky to find a devoted admirer in Brad Williams. However she soon found herself in a strange mental state which seemed to be caused by her fiancé's actions. When she discovered his true identity her problems were solved and she could look forward to a happier life in the family home in Vermont.

Booklist 44:352 Je 15 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Je 18 '48 40w

+ Kirkus 16:200 Ap 15 '48 170w

New Repub 118:26 Je 21 '48 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 13 '48 130w

"No addict will fail to spot the fiend, and his precise intention, before he turns the corner of the fourth chapter, but the cat-and-mouse technique is so expertly managed that few of those same addicts will mind going the distance." James McBride
N Y Times p24 Je 13 '48 230w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 27 '48 20w

"Good job."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 Ag 7 '48 40w

EASTMAN, MAX. Enjoyment of living. 603p il $5 Harper

B or 92 48-6299

Autobiography covering the first thirty-three years of the author's life (to 1917)—childhood, education, marriage and his years as editor of the Masses.

Booklist 44:298 My 1 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '48

Current Hist 15:166 S '48 60w

"Not only is this personal autobiography, perhaps as frank and outspoken and self-analytical as any I have ever read, but it is also a fifteen year record of New York's left wingish liberals, intellectuals, artists, writers, and leaders of revolutionary thought. An iconoclastic book, which will produce a storm of discussion, argument, dissension. He names names, yes even down to his love affairs, largely in the realm of fantasy to be sure, but none the less vivid. A tremendous tome, which will be avidly read by all who have been a part, or even on the fringe, of the world which was Eastman's."
Kirkus 16:43 Ja 15 '48 180w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman
Nation 166:479 My 1 '48 950w

"Enjoyment of Living is valuable as a chronicle of an important chapter in American social and journalistic history and as a revelation of how revolutionaries become counter-revolutionaries. There are, however, long and detailed accounts of what the author refers to as 'my thirty-three years' introduction to living' which are less commendable. That Max Eastman was always a monstrously clever fellow is undeniable, but his romantic triumphs and misadventures and his interesting pre-Freudian complexes are pallid in comparison with his adventures in radicalism." Richard Watts
+ — New Repub 118:17 Ap 12 '48 750w

"This book is the record of a time now vanishing into the mists of the past. It is perhaps an historically valuable record; it is certainly one full of beauty and charm and humor. Its candor is extreme, and there will no doubt be two opinions about that." Floyd Dell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 11 '48 1400w

"The finest part of the book recounts the story of the great years on The Masses. Hardly a page passes without a vignette of some memorable character. . . In short, through an unintentional and certainly unanticipated alchemy, Mr. Eastman has created of his youthful self something close to a Jekyll and Hyde personality. When he writes subjectively of himself, sex and women (except of his mother), he confounds confusion. The skilled delineator of stimulating thoughts and actions is all too frequently buried under the protrusive mass of verbiage." J. W. Chase
+ — N Y Times p3 Ap 11 '48 900w

"Vastly overweight."
New Yorker 24:98 Ap 3 '48 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 1 '48 950w

"As a piece of literary craftsmanship, it is beautifully sustained throughout its 600 pages, and it is an ardently honest attempt at self-revelation though what one is to make of the self that is revealed remains a problem." Granville Hicks
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:21 Ap 17 '48 850w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 37:265 My '48 200w

Time 51:104 Ap 19 '48 650w

EASTON, BURTON SCOTT. The Pastoral Epistles. 237p $3 Scribner

227.83 Bible. New Testament—Epistles

47-11675

"A book on the Pastoral Epistles (I, II Timothy and Titus). Using all material to date and for the first time the church orders, especially, Hippolytus and the Didascalia, Dr. Easton has given us an enlightening introduction to the Pastoral Epistles, an original translation in modern English, a simple commentary, a comprehensive exegesis and a unique section on word studies. The book is arranged so that the non-technical reader may use it for one or more of the above purposes." Churchman

Reviewed by C. L. Willard
+ Churchman 162:17 Ap 15 '48 210w

"This is a book which will not be read and laid aside. It is definitely a volume to be studied. The detailed lexicographical material and the sound and judicious exegetical discussions make it a distinct contribution to the scholar's chest of tools." M. S. Enslin
+ Crozer Q 25:275 Jl '48 850w

EATON, EVELYN SYBIL MARY, and MOORE, EDWARD ROBERTS. Heart in pilgrimage. 273p $2.75 Harper

Seton, Mother Elizabeth Ann (Bayley)—Fiction 48-6356

A novel based on the life story of Elizabeth Bayley, an early New York city belle who, as Mother Elizabeth Seton, became the founder of the Order of the Sisters of Charity in the U.S. The first part of the book deals in fictionized form with Elizabeth's marriage to William Seton; the last part, containing many excerpts from letters, tells the story of her life after Seton's death and her conversion to Catholicism.

Booklist 44:382 Jl 15 '48

"The amazing story of this great woman's life has been told many times before but never so interestingly. We see new lights and shadows on the old portrait as we look at it from the angles suggested or imagined by the authors. Mother Seton comes alive and stirs our hearts with a quivering admiration for her character and with gratitude for the grace of God." J. B. Sheerin
+ Cath World 167:375 Jl '48 450w

"The subject is notable and the treatment thoroughly professional. The liberties taken are minor and do not invalidate the book as factual." J. S. Kennedy
+ Cath World 168:214 D '48 90w

Reviewed by E. S. Skillin
Commonweal 48:242 Je 18 '48 270w

"The light touch, wit and charm characteristic of Evelyn Eaton's previous work seems overlaid with the heavy hand of her collaborator. While the early part of the book may hold mild interest for the average reader, it is in the main essentially for Catholics."
Kirkus 16:2 Ja 1 '48 220w

"Highly recommended as inspirational reading." R. J. Hurley
+ Library J 73:473 Mr 15 '48 120w

"A straightforward, moving story that is of interest both as a picture of the days when New York was a bustling city of 33,000 souls and as an interpretation of a remarkable woman." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 N 21 '48 430w

"'Heart in Pilgrimage' presents this active and fascinating life in detail. . . It is written in a pleasant, flowing, romantic style that should appeal to many readers." J. W. Chase
+ N Y Times p19 My 9 '48 470w

"The account of the heroine's party days will probably appeal to everyone, but the description of her conversion and her struggle to establish the order of the Sisters of Charity will have its greatest success with the predisposed."
New Yorker 24:114 Ap 17 '48 100w

"Miss Eaton and Monsignor Moore have stressed the struggle for individual conviction rather than weighing the merits of opposed faiths. It is enough for one person to have found the truth for herself to have become dedicated to selflessness. This is a glowing record, portrayed simply, authentically, and with admiration. Not even the most antagonistic could oppose Elizabeth Seton's conversion. It yielded so much that has proved permanently rewarding. Her followers must be grateful that her work has been so fully acknowledged." C. M. Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 31:15 Je 19 '48 450w
Wis Lib Bul 44:133 Je '48

EATON, JEANETTE. That lively man, Ben Franklin; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 253p $2.50 Morrow

B or 92 Franklin, Benjamin—Juvenile literature 48-8648

"The author presents the many-faceted genius of Benjamin Franklin, showing him as a man of integrity who was ever alert to new ideas, remained constant in his defense of the rights of man, and to the end of his life possessed a keen enjoyment of life. . . Grades 6-9." Booklist

---

Booklist 45:90 N 1 '48
Commonweal 49:155 N 19 '48 140w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:465 N '48 80w

"A book highly recommended for reference, schoolroom research, public libraries."
+ Kirkus 16:402 Ag 15 '48 100w

"Delightful biography of Franklin. . . Valuable addition to children's books." J. F. Carter
+ Library J 74:67 Ja 1 '49 80w

"The open page and the lively illustration give this immediate eye appeal for the 9-to-14-year-old readers. . . No one could possibly read this book without obtaining a well rounded picture of Ben Franklin and a clearer understanding of why and how the American colonies declared their independence of England and formed a new nation." M. C. S.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 N 14 '48 260w
New Yorker 24:145 D 11 '48 80w
Sat R of Lit 31:38 N 13 '48 200w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p7C N 14 '48 180w
Wis Lib Bul 44:187 N '48

EBENSTEIN, WILLIAM, ed. Man and the state; modern political ideas. 781p $6.50 Rinehart

320.4 Political science. State, The 47-4739

Collection of excerpts from many writers, preceded by introductory essays by the editor. The authors quoted range from Machiavelli and Hobbes, John Locke and Thomas Jefferson to H. J. Laski, Henry Wallace, F. D. Roosevelt, and John Dewey. The excerpts are grouped under such heads as: The right to rebel; Freedom; In defense of private property; Revolutionary Marxism; Race: Sense and nonsense; War; The sovereign assassin; The supranational community. Bibliographical notes. Index.

"Professor Ebenstein has executed his purpose with considerable originality and brilliance. The selection of authors and writings is generally judicious. . . While the merits of the book as such are considerable, it belongs to a species which is open to objections on philosophical and pedagogical grounds. . . A book such as this is a substitute for a systematic exposition of modern political philosophy. As such, it is sometimes illuminating and suggestive, yet sometimes rather misleading." H. J. Morgenthau
+ — Am Pol Sci R 41:1209 D '47 800w

"This is an important addition to the growing collections of source material on political thought. . . Straightforward introductions present explanations of the scope and the content of each chapter. However, the chapter selections might be more valuable with some indication of the amount of original material used or omitted, especially for the half-dozen items less than a half-page long. One definite asset of the book is its annotated bibliography." W. G. Tyrrell
+ — Ann Am Acad 255:201 Ja '48 350w
Current Hist 14:105 F '48 80w
Foreign Affairs 26:394 Ja '48 30w

"While the book will not convert one to anthologies if one is predisposed to be irritated by them, I venture to suggest this anthology reduces the irritation almost to the vanishing point." M. R. Konvitz
+ Sat R of Lit 31:27 F 7 '48 650w
School & Society 66:519 D 27 '47 20w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:372 D '47 280w

EBERHART, RICHARD. Burr Oaks [poems]. 68p $3 Oxford

811 A48-6411

"Richard Eberhart is something of a maverick among American poets writing today. His first appearance on the public literary scene was in that exciting little collection, 'New Signatures,' which issued from the Hogarth Press of London in 1932 and first displayed the emergent talents of Auden, Spender, and Lewis. Eberhart was the only American in the group. . . But neither in 1932, nor today, can this poet be said to fall easily into line with 'the Auden generation.' He is always an individual." Sat R of Lit

---

"This poet is especially distinguished by his fine wit and unabashed fancy. . . More important are his use of nostalgia and memory in the title poem and elsewhere and his gift for uniting bleak philosophical realism with these qualities of imagination as well as with the kind of humility and pity found in 'At the End of the War.' . . Eberhart does not depend on ingenuity and sensitivity alone to carry him through, nor is he the familiar variety of intellectual grasshopper." M. L. Rosenthal
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 4 '48 360w

"Mr. Eberhart can be embarrassing . . . about the dessication of scholars, the wickedness of restraining inspired poets, the philosophy in the eye of the cow, and how 'though all turn to worm and dust, to death and ashes,' (no less), spring returns. And he can be very uncertain about style. . . Yet these are mostly the faults of a remarkable honesty. . . When Mr. Eberhart succeeds he achieves a kind of direct rightness of feeling toward central experiences which is about the rarest thing there is in contemporary verse; and he does it in a language as simple and perfect for its purpose as you could ask." Arthur Mizener

EBERHART, RICHARD—Continued
+ — Poetry 73:226 Ja '49 750w

"It came out of England a few years ago, the interspersion of real poetry with sayings of deliberate awkwardness degenerating to nothing more or less than cerebral doggerel. . . We've lost something that Chaucer, Milton, Donne and Keats knew was right, and always will be right. If the poets insist on cutting off their own ears, let Tin Pan Alley take over with God's blessing! Let me not imply that you will not be rewarded by Mr. Eberhart's poems. Some stand high according to our current critical mores. He has arresting wit and skill and speaks in some poems, such as 'A Ceremony By The Sea,' with a clean, tragic beauty." T. H. Ferril
— + San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 13 '48 190w

"In the new volume (this is his fifth) there are special excellences to note, something in nearly every poem to admire. Ecstasy and awareness are never far away; but here, as every so often, is surely a complete, nearly perfect thing, 'Imagining How It Would Be to Be Dead.' " G. P. Meyer
+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 Ap 10 '48 470w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE. Circus of our own; il. by Kurt Wiese. 162p $2.50 Dodd 48-8395

Story of the Mundys who were so fond of circuses that they went to Africa for animals and organized their own circus. For grades 4-6.

"Written with humor and imagination, this book is reminiscent of Dr. Dolittle. For reading aloud to seven- and eight-year-olds, it should be particularly successful." M. B. Snow
+ Library J 73:1600 N 1 '48 60w

"The Mundys adventures in the jungle are an amusing mixture of the real and just the sort of make-believe eight-to-elevens understand and enjoy. There's good fun both in Irmengarde Eberle's imaginative story and in the lively pictures by Kurt Wiese." P. A. W.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 N 14 '48 200w

"The story is smoothly and interestingly told. It centers too much, perhaps, on the adult Mundys to have the fullest appeal for the 8 to 11 year olds for whom it is intended, but the antics of the animals themselves will entertain most young readers." Marjorie Burger
+ — N Y Times p29 S 19 '48 170w

"A nice story with funny, appealing illustrations."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:44 N 13 '48 60w
Wis Lib Bul 44:186 N '48

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE. Modern medical discoveries. 183p $2.50 Crowell

610.9 Medical research—Juvenile literature. Drugs—Juvenile literature. Medicine—History—Juvenile literature 48-8699

After a brief biographical sketch of Dr Alexander Fleming, this book for junior high school readers, takes up the story of some of the newer medical discoveries: penicillin, the sulfa drugs, blood transfusion, and the vitamins. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:90 N 1 '48

"Here and there the simplification lies in the use of simple words rather than simple ideas, but on the whole this should prove interesting background material for junior high level, with special appeal for youngsters thinking of nursing or medical careers."
+ — Kirkus 16:402 Ag 15 '48 90w

"Very readable account. . . Of interest to even older readers than the eleven- and twelve-year-olds for whom it is intended." M. B. Snow
+ Library J 73:1747 D 1 '48 100w

"It is readable, from the point of view of boys and girls, and an exciting story from a scientific point of view."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:46 N 13 '48 50w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE. Steam shovel family; il. by Connie Moran. 187p $2 McKay 48-6715

"The 'steam shovel family'—mother, father, Tressy and Pete, head west to visit grandparents in California, and their old car gets them as far as Kansas. They see new territory, meet friendly people, have pleasant adventures. And then the car gives out. Dad goes ahead to get work in his own field; Mother and the children stay behind until they can earn enough to go the rest of the way; eventually difficulties are resolved and the family is reunited." Kirkus

Booklist 44:370 Jl 1 '48

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted
Chicago Sun Ag 4 '48 140w

"All are cheerful, resourceful and amusing and their experiences will give pleasure to children of the middle age group." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:277 Jl '48 90w

"Refreshing story of a family at an economic level that is neither harried by debts and illness—nor provided with a nest egg for travel and emergencies! . . Connie Moran pictures have a lively appealing quality."
+ Kirkus 16:48 F 1 '48 130w

"Ending is logical, unspectacular; warmth, serenity, and security characterize the story. . . Recommended for grades 5-6." E. A. Groves
+ Library J 73:880 Je 1 '48 80w

"The Marlins have the happy faculty of making family life seem thoroughly desirable." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Je 13 '48 330w

"Four thoroughly likable people in a situation made to order for adventure deserve a story with stronger plot and sprightlier style. Uninspired writing and lack of suspense rather suggest a supplementary reading in geography." Elizabeth Hodges
— N Y Times p31 Je 6 '48 170w

"This is a warm, friendly story, filled with adventure and the realization of a little girl's dearest dream. There is a wholesome unity in the Marlins' light-hearted journey across our great country from coast to coast. Its humor and ingenuousness are effectively illustrated in the line drawings." R. H. V.
+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 Jl 10 '48 180w

EBERLE, IRMENGARDE. Story of cloth; spin, weave and wear, by Phyllis Ann Carter [pseud]; il. by Kathleen Voute. 159p $2.50 McBride

677 Textile fabrics—Juvenile literature
48-8877

The first part of this book contains a brief summary of the history of cloth from prehistoric times to the Industrial revolution. Following this section there are separate chapters on each of the principal kinds of cloth used today, wool, linen, cotton, rayon, how they are produced and how used. A final chapter deals with how cloth is made into clothes.

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins
Library J 73:1672 N 15 '48 70w
Sat R of Lit 31:47 N 13 '48 30w

EBERLEIN, HAROLD DONALDSON, and HUBBARD, CORTLANDT VAN DYKE. Diary of Independence Hall; prologue by Richardson Wright; 53 il. from photographs and engravings. 378p $3.50 Lippincott

974.811 Philadelphia. Independence Hall. U.S.—History 48-9333

Traces the history of Independence Hall, Philadelphia, in diary form, from 1717 when "the State house is born of a riot," to 1824, when Lafayette visited America. Illustrated with plans and photographs. Index.

Booklist 45:134 D 15 '48

"The authors have operated on the sound conviction that readers would really like original-source material if they met it unawares. They have therefore made 'Diary of Independence Hall' mostly quotation, strung together with only transitional prose. Inasmuch as they have blocked most of the quoted material in fine print, and as the great body of mankind skips fine print on principle, they may have defeated their own purposes. . . It covers nearly the whole range, from private diaries to public documents, reads fast and sometimes furiously, and is always alive. This liveliness has, however, its bad effects. In an effort to be equally colloquial and engaging, the authors are prone to speak of pep talks, zoot suits, and so on. . . Still this is a very small objection and 'Diary of Independence Hall' has many positive virtues and certainly one negative one. It points no moral." E. H. Smith

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 D 5 '48 500w

"These authors possess the art of quoting; they know when to step aside and let their actors speak for themselves, and this gift is the source of one of the reader's several satisfactions in their buoyant book. They give us much of the life we call history straight from the tap." H. R.

+ N Y Times p49 D 5 '48 300w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 12 '48 300w

EBERSON, FREDERICK. Microbes militant: a challenge to man; the story of modern preventive medicine and control of infectious diseases. 401p il map $4.50 Ronald

616.01 Medicine, Preventive. Micro-organisms, Pathogenic. Infection and infectious diseases 48-10875

"A revision of the material in the first edition entitled The Microbe's Challenge [Book Review Digest 1941] shows progress made in preventive medicine. This edition presents the microbe's challenge, meeting our newest advances with another kind of resistance, the antibiotics including streptomycin. While technical in character the book is written in such a fashion as to be of interest to the layman. Glossary. Suggested reading." (Library J) Indexes.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1823 D 15 '48 90w

School & Society 68:326 N 6 '48 30w

EBON, MARTIN. World communism today. (Whittlesey house publication) 536p $4.50 McGraw

335.4 Communism 48-5202

"A survey of Communism in every country in which it is an important political factor. Mr. Ebon gives, briefly, the history of each national Communist Party, together with an appraisal of its strength, actual and potential. He says that the contradictory nature of the various national party groups—which results, for example, in the Dutch Communists' upholding of royalty, and the quarrelling between the local parties of other countries over purely national issues—demonstrates the new international strategy of adaptability, which strengthens the Party without jeopardizing Soviet policy." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by O. K. Flechtheim
Am Pol Sci R 42:1013 O '48 800w

"One can picture the author harried by the press of events and striving to get his ideas quickly on paper lest the morning cables prove him wrong. Thus the book is not profound. But the author cannot be wholly blamed for that; a bewildered public avid for information on the topic he presents will not give a writer time for much pondering. Hence, within the limitations imposed upon him, Ebon has written a vivid story of world communism. And with all its oversimplification, he has accomplished a valuable bit of research." J. S. Roucek

+ — Ann Am Acad 256:230 Mr '48 300w

Booklist 44:293 My 1 '48

Reviewed by Griffing Bancroft
Chicago Sun p47 F 5 '48 490w

Current Hist 14:175 Mr '48 50w

Foreign Affairs 26:737 Jl '48 60w

"This is an important book. One could wish it were easier and livelier reading."

+ — Kirkus 15:664 D 1 '47 380w

"Mr. Ebon's book rates a place on the shelves of anyone interested in knowing what means are employed by the Communists everywhere to achieve their professed ends." McAlister Coleman

+ Nation 167:52 Jl 10 '48 750w

"In a series of hops, skips and jumps, Mr. Ebon has covered the entire world, most of a century of modern history, and a good deal of political science. He has boiled all this down into a useful, somewhat didactic, single volume. It is a Baedeker in which few of the monuments are starred and the pace is a little breath-taking, but the tourist through this strange world who uses this guide is not likely to miss any of the major sights or fail to get back to his hotel." Joseph Barnes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 F 15 '48 800w

"'World Communism Today' comes as a valuable corrective. Its moderate tone and its hard factual substance should commend it to all serious students of foreign policy." A. M. Schlesinger, jr.

+ N Y Times p1 F 1 '48 1300w

New Yorker 23:87 F 7 '48 120w

Reviewed by Morroe Berger
Pol Sci Q 63:470 S '48 600w

Reviewed by Allan Temko
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 21 '48 1650w

"Judging by this book and by his photograph, Mr. Ebon is a rather mild, gentle, soft-spoken person. He seems sweetly reasonable and factual, not very original or passionate, but solid, careful, eager to be safe. This book—his first, I assume—contains no strident tones, no denunciations." Louis Fischer

Sat R of Lit 31:16 F 14 '48 850w

School & Society 67:191 Mr 6 '48 10w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:186 Je '48 240w

"It must be useful as a reference work to teachers, editors, and officials. Otherwise it has little or no intellectual impact." F. C. Barghoorn

Yale R n s 38:355 winter '49 210w

ECKARDT, ARTHUR ROY. Christianity and the children of Israel. 223p $3 King's crown press

296 Christianity and other religions—Judaism. Jews 48-5516

"The Apostle Paul was faced with the problem of the relation of Christianity and the children of Israel. His problem was solved when Christianity ceased to be Jewish and became Gentile. But the problem of relationships has arisen again and again to plague both Jew and Gentile. Writing as a neo-orthodox (he prefers to call it 'neo-reformation') theologian, Dr. Eckardt considers the historical and ethical problem of the relation of the Christian and the Jew. His book is principally a survey of contemporary attitudes with special stress on the thought of the neo-reformation writers, principally Reinhold and H. Richard Niebuhr." (San Francisco Chronicle) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:293 My 1 '48

"That the author does not understand the Catholic Church need not bewilder; what is astonishing is that he should be satisfied with so limited a knowledge of the Church's attitude toward the Jews. He knows nothing of the Catholic theological literature on the Mystery of Israel. Thus his book does not even meet

ECKARDT, A. R.—Continued
scholarly standards, but what is worse, hiding behind 'the sinful relativities of history,' he betrays the Cross of Christ, and he betrays love, for the Jews have two enemies: those who hate them, anti-Semites, and those who withhold the Truth from them." J. M. Oesterreicher

— Cath World 168:173 N '48 550w

"Eckardt tries to show that in Niebuhrian neo-orthodoxy the Christian approach to Judaism can best be found. Unfortunately the comparative brevity of the book makes his treatment of his subject seem cursory. Even though the space is used well, there is not enough of it to permit the author to give definitive treatment to his theme." J. O. Supple

Chicago Sun Mr 21 '48 230w

"The factual part of the record is excellent and well documented. One's judgment of the interpretative part will, to some extent, depend upon the degree of one's acceptance of the author's neo-orthodox presuppositions. . . I should like to pay tribute to the scholarship and fairness with which the author attempts to relate the successive phases of Christian thought to both the theoretical and the practical aspects of Christian-Jewish relations." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 65:512 My 26 '48 700w

Reviewed by C. H. Voss

Churchman 162:16 D 15 '48 240w

"The volume seems to be a synthesis of graduate studies and gives an excellent glimpse into the methods, attitudes, and conclusions of one of our great seminaries. It is well documented, probably one half of the book consisting of quotations, some of which lack cogency, and not a few of which are quite inconsequential. The main outline and conclusions are valid." I. G. Matthews

+ — Crozer Q 26:87 Ja '49 450w

Reviewed by C. H. Moehlman

J Religion 28:297 O '48 600w

Reviewed by E. M. Tainton

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ap 4 '48 700w

ECKSTEIN, GUSTAV. Everyday miracle. 235p $2.75 Harper

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 48-7580

A series of essays, setting forth in more or less popular style, the author's observations of animal behavior. The majority of the essays deal with the habitants of the author's laboratory in Cincinnati, others tell of incidents abroad—in Greece, in Spain, in Egypt, scenes of of his field trips.

Booklist 45:7 S 1 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '48

"Written with quiet humor. Recommended." D. F. Lucas

+ Library J 73:938 Je 15 '48 80w

"The little pieces that compose this volume are rather shorter than usual, but otherwise they are perfectly characteristic Eckstein—which means that they exhibit a unique sensibility and a unique style. Perhaps no one else ever felt about canaries and cockroaches exactly as he does; certainly, no one else ever wrote about them before in just this way. The very sentence structure is individual and sometimes, perhaps, rather contrary to the rules. But it works, and it contributes to a total effect which could not be mistaken for that of any other writer." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 167:268 S 4 '48 340w

"Gustav Eckstein is that rarest phenomenon, an imaginative scientist. He might even be called a poet-scientist (though the first half of that phrase would damn him with the scientists, and the second with the poets). Yet we have it on high authority that the poet sees eternity in a grain of sand, and Dr. Eckstein is constantly seeing the mysteries of life in the queerest places—an amoeba under the microscope, a cockroach in a desk drawer. With all his knowledge, he still finds life a mystery not to be simply explained in terms of endocrine secretions and conditioned reflexes." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 25 '48 900w

"A series of entertaining and informative essays." John Kieran

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 29 '48 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 29 '48 470w

"I have looked forward to 'Everyday Miracle.' I must now regretfully record my disappointment." John Woodburn

— Sat R of Lit 31:31 O 16 '48 850w

Wis Lib Bul 44:146 S '48

EDEN, ANTHONY. Freedom and order; selected speeches, 1939-1946. 436p $5 Houghton

942.084 Great Britain—Foreign relations. World war, 1939-1945—Great Britain. Great Britain—Politics and government 48-8656

"A collection of speeches, delivered in the House of Commons and elsewhere, from 1939 to 1946, in which Mr. Eden endorses both of his title's large abstractions." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 45:48 O 1 '48

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 24 '48 950w

"An important book." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 73:1269 S 15 '48 150w

"The selected speeches of Anthony Eden, delivered between 1939 and 1946, lack the thundering eloquence of his great chief, Winston Churchill, and suffer from the flatness of virtually all published addresses. But they do make an interesting record of the official viewpoint of a man who has played a vital role in recent world history." Richard Watts

New Repub 119:23 Ag 2 '48 1300w

"Freedom and Order is so broad-minded that it ends by saying nothing at all. Mr. Eden floats rudderless under a flapping sail of good intentions." R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 34:274 O 4 '47 1000w

"The principal value of Mr. Eden's addresses is that they provide Americans with an intelligent criticism of the Labor approach and an intelligent defense of those values which Americans still cherish. But beyond that it gives material which is useful in appraising one of the great figures of our time, a civilized, literate mind at grips with the continuing crisis of mankind." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 21 '48 700w

Reviewed by F. G. A. Cook

N Y Times p4 N 21 '48 1250w

"Mr. Eden is a clear, if occasionally highblown, thinker and a persuasive exponent of the Conservative viewpoint, but he lacks Winston Churchill's magic with words. His speeches, many of them dealing with great events upon which his wartime chief also spoke, suffer by inevitable comparison with the Old Master."

New Yorker 34:79 Ag 21 '48 100w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 12 '48 900w

"It is perhaps unlikely that Mr. Eden's speeches will live for their language alone. They do not reflect Macaulay's 'reason penetrated and made red-hot by passion,' nor the perfectly balanced grandiloquence of Burke, nor yet the vivid and popular imagery of Lloyd George. But they have a cool reasonableness, a potent sincerity, and the real stuff of statesmanship which will assure them of a grateful welcome from contemporary readers of this hard-pressed generation." Derek Walker-Smith

+ Spec 179:374 S 19 '47 650w

EDEN, EMILY. Semi-detached house; il. by Susanne Suba. 216p $3 Houghton

48-8700

"The lesser-known of Miss Eden's pair of witty, amiable novels about the minuscule problems of well-to-do English family life in the early nineteenth century. Like its predecessor, 'The Semi-Attached Couple' [Book Review Digest 1947], which was written in the eighteen-thirties . . . the book dissolves happily at the end into a scramble of tears and church bells, with just enough earnest young clergymen and extravagantly rich young sons of earls to please every unmarried daughter in the neighborhood." New Yorker

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p15 O 28 '48 300w

"Simple, gay, and nostalgically entertaining."
+ Kirkus 16:448 S 1 '48 120w

"The tale trips along in dialogue and tinkles on the ear. The story is all about the upper classes and those fortunate others who bow and then are allowed to mix in the top drawer with their betters: and then are delighted to find that they, too, are betters and brave and kind and wise, though not so rich and chic." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 19 '48 380w

"Readers who succumbed to the quiet, humorous and completely proper charm of Miss Eden's other novel, 'The Semi-Attached Couple' will likely be ready for this equally entertaining companion piece. Shorter and slighter than its predecessor, [the book] confronted its author with a severer test of her skill as story-teller: Could she make her characters sufficiently engaging so that a sympathetic reader would be continuously interested in their welfare throughout a tale in which almost nothing happens? Her success is clear." Carlos Baker
+ N Y Times p46 O 17 '48 600w

"Lively, humorous, and astonishingly modern in tone, despite the old-fashioned atmosphere of pleasantry and general good humor."
+ New Yorker 24:131 O 16 '48 120w
San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 7 '48 220w

"Though Emily Eden is not in the same class with the incomparable Jane Austen (she was a great admirer of hers, a disciple in fact) her work partakes of the same temporal climate. The Suba pictures are delightful, and in key. This preserves the charm of the Victorian age, both its virtues and its vices." R. C. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 31:14 D 25 '48 450w

EDGE, WALTER EVANS. Jerseyman's journal; fifty years of American business and politics. 349p $5 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 New Jersey—Politics and government 48-10223

"Walter Evans Edge began an amazingly rapid rise in the business world by purchasing, at the age of 18 an advertising agency for $500, and six years later his income from the agency alone was $10,000 a year, and he was the editor of a successful New Jersey newspaper. . . He served in the New Jersey Legislature several terms and was a notably successful Governor of that State from 1916 to 1919. Thereafter he served two terms in the United States Senate, and he was our Ambassador to France during the Hoover Administration. Following 10 years of retirement he returned to the political scene and was elected to serve four more years as Governor of New Jersey, retiring a second time in 1947." San Francisco Chronicle

"Mr. Edge writes well, clearly and without superfluous ornamentation, and the reader can catch some of the excitement which surrounds participation in even the pettiest of local politics." H. W. Baehr
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 N 28 '48 550w

"He had a story to tell, for he has done and seen many things in his seven and a half decades. It is, therefore, rather a waste that he should take the events of a really full life, add to them an alliterative and intriguing title, and have the product emerge a prosaic, uninteresting tome. . . Mr. Edge had a chance here to build up a case for the things he believes in, and while he tries, his success is not outstanding. Mr. Edge's services to his state and nation will be remembered longer than his book." Warren Moscow
— + N Y Times p30 N 21 '48 500w

"His autobiography is a straightforward, fast-moving narrative, modest and pleasantly written in a clear, unobtrusive style. . . 'A Jerseyman's Journal' is an able and entertaining account of a most useful and happy life." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 14 '48 310w

"As a self-portrait of a superior GOP old-guardsman 'Jerseyman's Journal' has moderate historical value. Otherwise, its charms will be mainly for the author's friends." Duncan Aikman
— + Sat R of Lit 31:17 N 27 '48 650w

EDIDIN, BEN M. Jewish community life in America; il. by William Chollick. 282p $2.50 Hebrew pub.

296 Jews in the U.S. 47-23471

"Describes the agencies, institutions and organizations that characterize Jewish life in American cities." Cleveland Open Shelf

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '48

"Intended for students, teachers, and group leaders in Jewish communities, it aims to create a better understanding of Jewish problems. While adult study groups may use it, the book is more suitable as a textbook for secondary school age groups. . . We have here a good exposition of what Jewish group life has done for the welfare and survival of its people." Ira Kreider
+ Social Studies 39:184 Ap '48 500w

EDISON, THOMAS ALVA. Diary and sundry observations; ed. by Dagobert D. Runes. 247p il $4.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 48-6525

A brief diary, dated July 1885, is followed by a much longer section made up of selections from Edison's talks and papers, which appeared in periodicals between 1914 and 1930. In them he speaks of the motion picture, war and peace, education and work, the philosophy of Thomas Paine, man and machine, etc. Index.

Canadian Forum 28:70 Je '48 210w

"The fragment of the Diary shows Edison to have possessed a strong sense of humor, and a ready wit. It is delightful reading. . . Handy, well chosen collection which deserves a place in the library." Robert Henderson
+ Library J 73:704 My 1 '48 130w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:34 My '48

"Only a fraction of Edison's literary output is here presented, but there is enough to hold the interest. The personality of an eager, creative man stands out on every page. For this reason alone the volume is to be welcomed, though the reader will sigh with regret that the editorial work was not better." Waldemar Kaempffert
+ — N Y Times p5 My 2 '48 900w
Springf'd Republican p10B My 30 '48 240w
Time 51:102 Ap 26 '48 950w

EDMINSTER, FRANK CUSTER. Fish ponds for the farm. 114p il $3.50 Scribner

639.311 Fish ponds Agr47-47

"This book tells the story of fish ponds, ancient and modern, how to design and build them and how to stock and manage them." Publisher's note

Booklist 44:197 F 1 '48

EDMINSTER, F. C.—Continued

"The whole is probably a must for anyone considering stocking fish on their property."
Kirkus 15:423 Ag 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:711 My 1 '48 30w

EDMONDSTON, C. M., and HYDE, M. L. F. King's man; decorations by Avery Johnson. 282p $2.50 Longmans

Pembroke and Striguil, William Marshal, earl of—Fiction 48-5821

Historical novel based on the life of William of Newbury, the trustworthy knight who began his career as a penniless squire, and ended it as the King's marshal and Earl of Pembroke. He was faithful and loyal to his king —Henry II, and to the king's charming but unstable son, the younger Henry, as long as they both lived. Then he took on the role of Marshal during the reigns of Richard I and John, and was largely responsible for John's signing of the Magna Charta. Bibliography.

Booklist 44:286 Ap 15 '48

"Young people who like historical romance will find excitement here, as they absorb a sound acquaintance with the reign of the first Plantagenets." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:197 My '48 120w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:212 My '48 80w

"Tops in historical adventure romance. . . Interestingly presented, with good balance of historical detail and with personal story bits, local color, names of high romance, songs (French as well as English), this is excellent library material, of permanent value."
+ Kirkus 16:22 Ja 15 '48 120w

"There is evidence of careful research into the turbulent years of the Plantagenet kings, and the writer presents a colorful picture of court life, of Thomas à Becket, Eleanor of Aquitaine and her Court of Love, and of Kings Richard and John. Recommended." Katherine Shorey
+ Library J 73:396 Mr 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 23 '48 130w

"The authors assume a familiarity with twelfth-century English history which few young Americans possess. Without it, the tale is hard to follow, even with the map and genealogical table provided. Nevertheless, it is a sound story in the old-fashioned pseudo-Scott tradition, replete with chivalric oaths and knightly derring-do." N. B. Baker
+ — N Y Times p27 My 16 '48 150w

"The story of Thomas Becket, of court customs, make this a vivid and interesting historical novel. William of Newbury emerges a strong and vital character, one who will win and hold the admiration of young people. Equally real and likable is the renowned Henry the Second." R. A. Brown
+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 Jl 10 '48 230w

School & Society 67:191 Mr 6 '48 20w

Social Studies 39:283 O '48 230w

"A splendidly sound historical novel, completely devoid of romantic frills, but thoroughly engrossing. . . The authors have distinguished themselves by carefully avoiding fiction at all turns." L. S. Munn
+ Springf'd Republican p12B Mr 21 '48 240w

Wis Lib Bul 44:107 My '48

EDWARDS, JAMES G., pseud. See Macqueen, J. W.

EDWARDS, MAY. Hobo hound; il by Susanne Suba. [31]p $1.25 Rand McNally

48-6064

Illustrated story about a dog with no home who adopted a boy with no dog. For ages five to nine. At the back there is a heavy cardboard cutout.

"The story is for the five to nine year olds. The gay, sensitive drawings are for everyone." Martha King
+ Chicago Sun Ap 3 '48 100w

"Good merchandise value on superior level."
+ Kirkus 16:144 Mr 15 '48 50w

Reviewed by Irmengarde Eberle
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Jl 4 '48 120w

EELLS, MRS MAY (WORTHINGTON). Touch of parsley; a young home economist in business. 245p $2.50 Dodd

48-7428

Vocational story for older girls. Lucy Chapin, a young home economist, tries her hand as laboratory assistant with a large meat packing firm. She is amazed at the different kinds of work she has to do: kitchen testing, food photography, radio script writing and broadcasting, lecture demonstrations, etc. Eventually she is sent from the Chicago plant to be assistant in a branch plant on the Pacific coast.

"Recommended for large libraries." M. A. Webb
+ Library J 73:1199 S 1 '48 100w

"In spite of the somewhat stereotyped touch of romance and good times enjoyed after office hours, this career story is gayly written and surprisingly readable." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 15 '48 210w

"Any girl interested in going into the field of home economics will find both warnings and encouragement, as well as step-by-step advice on every page. Recipes abound for the girl who wants to experiment in her own kitchen. Little attention is given to plot or development of character. There is a touch of romance along with the parsley, but suspense depends mainly on how the pie-crust turns out and whether the cold cuts will arrive in time. It is readable, but strictly vocational." P. A. Whitney
+ N Y Times p19 Jl 11 '48 150w

EGBERT, DONALD DREW, and LEE, DIANE MARTINDELL. Princeton portraits. 360p il $15 Princeton univ. press

757.3 Portraits. Princeton university—Biography. U.S.—Biography 48-720

"Assembled in this handsome volume are reproductions of the portraits scattered throughout the buildings on the Princeton University campus, together with biographical annotations. Many of the nearly two hundred and fifty portraits, including busts, have not been previously published, and the list of artists include such names as Thomas Sully, Gilbert Stuart, Rembrandt Peale, Samuel Waldo, Charles Willson Peale, William Rush, Olin Warner, Daniel Chester French, and Augustus Saint-Gaudens." U S Quarterly Bkl

Am Hist R 53:634 Ap '48 160w

"The biographical annotations display a facile phrasing, dignity, and humor often conspicuously missing from works of this kind. There are many amusing anecdotes of Princeton's presidents and faculty members gathered from traditions and personal recollections. This biographical material should be valuable to many persons both within and without the Princeton family, who may have only a slight interest in the portraits as works of art."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:244 Je '48 240w

EGLOFF, GUSTAV, and HULLA, GEORGE. Alkylation of alkanes; 3v; v. 1, Patents on alkylation of alkanes. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser.) 1144p il $20 Reinhold

665.5 Paraffins (48-4033)

"800 patents concerning the production of aviation motor fuels by alkylation of alkanes, a chemical reaction discovered by V. N. Ipatieff and Herman Pines in 1932. Each of the selected significant patents is digested. The purpose of the three volume set of which this is the first is to present an organized digest of the literature for organic chemists. The next two volumes will cover periodical references, reports and other data." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1516 O 15 '48 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:50 Jl '48

EHRENWALD, JAN. Telepathy and medical psychology; with a foreword by Gardner Murphy. 212p $3 Norton

133.82 Thought transference. Psychology, Pathological Med48-19

"From a long experience in psychiatry on the continent and in Britain, and from a first-hand acquaintance with the phenomena and the personalities which characterise modern psychical research, Dr. Ehrenwald has formulated a series of psychological hypotheses about the nature of the telepathic process. After reviewing the various classes of experimental research on telepathy, he turns to the clinical understanding of the personal dynamics of telepathic communications, with emphasis upon unconscious needs, projective mechanisms, and the devices by which the dream and the waking course of associations find a way to weave the telepathic impressions into the structure of thought." (Foreword) Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad
New Statesman & Nation 35:158 F 21 '48 1050w
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 18 '48 300w

"Dr. Ehrenwald sometimes generalizes too freely on aspects of modern psychical research, but the service he has done in his own field by writing this book is inestimable. Armed with his awareness of telepathy, he even turns a new searchlight on insanity." Signe Toksvig
+ Sat R of Lit 31:27 Ap 24 '48 950w

EHRLICH, BETTINA. Cocolo. new ed [32p] il $2.50 Harper

48-9303

"The hero of this tale is a donkey. . . He belongs to Lucio, son of Babbo and Mamma, who live on the island of Ravaya-Reena. Mr. Fatimus Greedy and his daughter Fussy come to the island, fall in love with Cocolo, buy him and take him away, thereby making Lucio and Cocolo very unhappy. On the mainland at Port Town Cocolo is cleaned, rubbed, polished, barbered, and given a very dressy hat. But he is not happy. He is homesick for Ravaya-Reena and for Lucio. Of course, he finally gets back to them." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 45:161 Ja 1 '49
Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun D 11 '48 140w

"A work of art. . . Nothing slick and oh so much that is lasting in this lovely book. Bettina's seas are so wet, her suns so big as they go down, Mr. Fatimus and his child Fussy so well named, the whole book so suitable for generations to read together." E. E.
+ Commonweal 49:147 N 19 '48 70w

"Delicate, enchanting color surrounding the scenery of an island in the Adriatic gives distinction to this large book. Its humor is equal to its charm." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:33 Ja '49 80w
Kirkus 16:599 N 15 '48 130w

"Recommended for third and fourth grades." M. M. Smith
+ Library J 73:1829 D 15 '48 70w

"There is something very endearing about little donkeys, and Cocolo is no exception. . . A picture-story book which, though somewhat involved, will appeal to the younger children. The artist-author is a young Viennese who spent her childhood on an island in the Adriatic. Her unusual and charming watercolors have a feeling for the region and a strong sense of caricature." H. A. Masten
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 28 '48 250w

"The unconventional arrangement of the illustrations seems at first distracting until one realizes how carefully they are coordinated with the text. Some of the pictures are too dark in tone, but those in color are lovely and all of them are rich in humor and in the imaginative use of detail." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p31 Ja 16 '49 180w

"This delightful volume, from England, is a find for five-to-eight-year-old readers. . . In Cocolo, a shabby little Italian donkey, the author-artist has created a truly lovable character. Children will want to look again and again at the lovely pictures of the blue Adriatic seacoast and the amusing ones of Cocolo's various owners, rich and poor."
+ New Yorker 24:126 D 11 '48 90w

"These drawings are irresistible. They have humor and vitality and an atmosphere so effective that it brings back the very sight, smell, and sound of southern Italy."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 D 11 '48 220w

EISENBERG, PHILIP, and KRASNO, HECKY. Guide to children's records; a complete guide to recorded stories, songs and music for children. 195p $2 Crown

789.9 Phonograph records—Juvenile literature 48-8805

Annotated list of available recordings for children from two to fifteen. Arrangement is according to age. Index of titles.

Booklist 45:84 N 1 '48

"This compact manual ought to be a boon to teachers and librarians and deserves to be in the right-hand coat pocket of every Christmas shopper." Thomas Lask
+ N Y Times p41 N 7 '48 150w

EISENHART, CHURCHILL, ed. Selected techniques of statistical analysis for scientific and industrial research. See Columbia university. Statistical research group

EISENHOWER DWIGHT DAVID. Crusade in Europe. 559p $5 Doubleday

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 48-9171

General Eisenhower's personal narrative of the part he played in events which led us into the war, and of his campaigns leading up to and thru the end of the war. Includes an account of his postwar visit to Russia. Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by E. M. Earle
Atlantic 182:85 D '48 4000w
Booklist 45:101 N 15 '48
Reviewed by R. E. Merriam
Chicago Sun p9X N 21 '48 700w

"Lifting examples or trying to quote from this brilliant account is almost like tearing threads from the Bayeux tapestry in order to analyze its beauty. Compressed and compact to the point that it must treat some of the most thrilling actions and hair-raising adventures of the war in a paragraph or two, this book is rich in lessons and satisfaction, for soldiers, statesmen, and plain citizens of every country. One hopes, even prays, that the lessons are beginning to penetrate in the capitals of the world, particularly in our own." Paul Farrell
+ Commonweal 49:201 D 3 '48 600w
Current Hist 16:34 Ja '49 80w

"This stands head and shoulders above the other records of fighting men, in its simplicity, clarity, and the illumination it throws on the basic human relations of the men at the top. . . It is the innermost story of a great Crusader and the book is worthy of the man."
+ Kirkus 16:493 S 15 '48 260w

"One of the most readable military accounts of the war yet to appear. . . The simplicity with which these descriptions are presented makes them easy and exciting to read. . . Recommended." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 73:1663 N 15 '48 130w

EISENHOWER, D. D.—Continued
Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Nation 167:607 N 27 '48 1100w
Reviewed by W. H. Hale
New Repub 119:22 D 20 '48 2200w

"This non-ghost-written book is as simple and as forthright as the innumerable admirers of its author have every right to expect it would be. It is soldierly in the finest sense of that word, and it is manly. . . 'Crusade in Europe' should be Textbook No. 1 in all military academies the world over, for it provides basic lessons in the true meaning of that honorable term 'officer and gentleman.' For the rest of us, it provides a heartening demonstration of what we are pleased to call Americanism at its best." R. E. Sherwood
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 N 21 '48 2500w

"After the bitterness of earlier books, it is a relief to read Eisenhower's calm judgment of the men who made up the Allied team. Here is warm praise for Bradley and for Alexander and for Spaatz. And here too is the best evaluation I have seen of General Patton. . . Eisenhower gives the reader a true insight into the most difficult part of a commander's life. The reader will conclude we were fortunate to have men like this in our century." Drew Middleton
+ N Y Times p1 N 21 '48 2600w
+ New Yorker 24:143 N 27 '48 220w
Reviewed by William Hogan
San Franicsco Chronicle p23 N 21 '48 1550w

"These are General Eisenhower's personal memoirs of his service in the last war. They provide an orderly, objective, well-documented account of the war in Western Europe. . . They are hardly autobiographical at all in the conventional, subjective sense. This is the General's account of his mission, addressed to the American public; it is military history written by a professional soldier who has himself lived a full soldier's life, culminating in supreme command." Crane Brinton
+ Sat R of Lit 31:9 N 20 '48 1400w

" 'Crusade in Europe' is set off from all memoirs written by military leaders—it is the least military and most democratic of them all. It is the report of a citizen who led other citizens in a difficult task of restoring order and peace. When its author describes military actions he writes not for the archives of West Point but for the understanding of Americans who sent their sons into battle." Harry Hansen
+ Survey 85:50 Ja '49 1100w

"It is always good-tempered, never less than friendly to Britain, and fair in its outlook, except that, perhaps naturally, the writer is as firmly convinced in retrospect as he was at the time that where his views conflicted with those of others, particularly of Mr. Churchill, Field-Marshal Lord Montgomery, and General de Gaulle, he was almost invariably right. . . At the same time, there was aroused an expectation of particularly high quality in the book which, it must be confessed, has not been completely fulfilled. Great soldiers seldom write great books, though they may produce instructive and interesting ones. General Eisenhower does hold our interest throughout a very long book, but he does not raise it as high as would have been the case had he been a skilful writer with an individual and attractive style."
Times [London] Lit Sup p20 Ja 8 '49 1450w
Wis Lib Bul 45:12 Ja '49

EISENHOWER, DWIGHT DAVID. Eisenhower speaks; in his messages and speeches; selected and ed. by Rudolph L. Treuenfels. 299p $3 Farrar, Straus
815 48-2548

Includes all the important public utterances of General Eisenhower from his V-E Order of the Day, May 8, 1945, to his final report as Chief of Staff, February 7, 1948. "The volume includes the Guildhall address in London, and a number of other European speeches. It contains testimony before two Congressional committees, a number of statements and messages, and the letter to Leonard V. Finder of The Manchester, N. H., Evening Leader disclaiming all political ambitions. The greater part of the book, however, is composed of brief addresses at various colleges and universities and speeches to a wide variety of organizations—the CIO, the Economic Club of New York, the United Jewish Appeal, the American Legion, and so on." (N Y Times)

Booklist 44:334 Je 1 '48
Reviewed by R. E. Merriam
Chicago Sun My 20 '48 700w

"There's a human quality that conveys bigness of heart and clarity of mind, honesty and integrity, and a sincere belief that the office of the presidency is not for a military man. His words are impressive, dignified, humorous, intelligent and direct. They reveal a great man."
Kirkus 16:202 Ap 15 '48 150w

"Source material in convenient form. For large and medium libraries." G. W. Hill
+ Library J 73:705 My 1 '48 130w

"These [papers] give at least some idea of the quality of mind which, together with his singularly engaging personality, has made Dwight D. Eisenhower so attractive a presidential candidate to so many worried and confused Americans. They reveal him as obviously no great original thinker, and certainly no revolutionary. But they also show him as a friendly, open-hearted and open-minded man, with considerable tolerance and breadth of vision and with a great capacity for making divergent types of people work together and get along together. . . While many of his speeches show him an enlightened and understanding liberal, there are passages which may strike one less happily." Richard Watts
+ — New Repub 118:31 My 17 '48 1300w
Reviewed by Harry Baehr
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 16 '48 1000w

"A volume of surprising liveliness. Knowing that General Eisenhower writes his own speeches, we should expect a clear reflection of a mind of great sincerity, modesty and power; we find humor, wit and a flair for ancedote as well." Allan Nevins
+ N Y Times p3 My 16 '48 1150w
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 6 '48 320w

"This is a valuable book in the current hectic Presidential scramble. It sheds revealing light on the most intriguing personality in that melee. . . For the first time, this book presents in handy form a complete collection of Eisenhower's public utterances. They reveal a great deal, both in what he said and what he didn't say." R. S. Allen
+ Sat R of Lit 31:16 My 15 '48 750w

EISENSCHIML, OTTO, and LONG, E. B. As luck would have it; chance and coincidence in the Civil war; maps by Barbara Long. 285p $3 Bobbs
973 U.S.—History—Civil war 48-8540

Chapters on the part chance played in the Civil war. The book is presented "as an historian's holiday." Among the fifteen episodes presented the authors discuss how a mess of shad affected the surrender of General Lee, and how a British official's violation of an English law kept the United States from going to war with England in 1863. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 45:86 N 1 '48
Reviewed by Jay Monaghan
Chicago Sun O 11 '48 550w

"If, in spite of Hitler, you still naïvely believe that economic forces determine the course of history, you will not like this book. If you give due consideration to the influence of human agents, you will be quite favorably impressed with it. . . The book is easily one of the most unusual ever published in the field of Civil War history." Paul Kiniery
+ Commonweal 49:126 N 12 '48 350w

"Interesting for those fascinated by what might have been, but it adds little to our knowledge of the Civil War." J. H. Berthel
Library J 73:1187 S 1 '48 130w

"An amusing game, well handled."
+ New Yorker 24:131 O 9 '48 110w

ELBERFELD, JOHN. Metallurgical materials and processes. 188p il $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

669 Metallurgy. 48-7181

"Designed to provide a general background in the science of metals and a useful metallurgical text. Among the contents are grain-structures and constitution diagrams, heat treating furnaces and their controls, forming of metals, welding and powder metallurgy and laboratory procedures. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1032 Jl '48 40w

"The book will not interest the reader who is planning to become a professional metallurgist, but it will be helpful to practical workers in industry who want a reliable but easy-to-understand account."
N Y New Tech Bks 33:42 My '48

ELDER, ALBERT LAWRENCE, and others. Textbook of chemistry. rev ed 758p il $4.50 Harper

540 Chemistry 48-7043

"Revision of a standard college textbook in general chemistry, incorporating the findings of wartime research. Intended for students planning to be scientists. Theoretical portion of the text has been rewritten and is featured by the early introduction on modern ideas of molecular and atomic structure and valence." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1032 Jl '48 50w

"Although intended for use in courses provided for students who will become professional chemists, this comprehensive text is characterized by a readable style, frequent references to current techniques and manufacturing processes, and an abundance of illustrations. These qualities make it useful also to persons out of college who are 'brushing up' on general chemistry."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:35 My '48

ELIOT, GEORGE FIELDING. Hate, hope and high explosives; a report on the Middle East. 284p $2.75 Bobbs

956 East (Near East) 48-4464

Records the author's experiences on a tour of the Middle East in the spring of 1948. His object was to observe the political and military situation in that area. He gives his account in a series of chapters on the main cities visited. Indexes.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 182:113 N '48 1050w

Booklist 45:48 O 1 '48

Chicago Sun p7X O 3 '48 140w

"Whether the comparison of military establishments is to be the determining factor in Palestine, or whether the Arabs are working toward some form of collective action, or resistance of a kind not so far evident, the author is not in a position to say. However, what his story lacks in this kind of information it makes up in the thrill of adventure, in highly seasoned GI language, in toastings, in stories of the author's easy familiarity with a large array of notabilities, and of his proficiency in causing all transportation difficulties to dissolve into thin air." H. J. S.
Christian Science Monitor p16 S 8 '48 750w

Current Hist 15:294 N '48 90w

"An interesting, though superficial book." Donald Wasson
Library J 73:1187 S 1 '48 130w

"The book is, on the whole, an interesting and enlightening journalistic report on what the author saw and heard. At the same time, while his evidence on the military and political situation as it concerns Israel and the Arab nations—the latter appear to be far more anti-Zionist in words than in deeds—is persuasive and valuable, there is one ungenerous complaint to be made. It does seem that Eliot, whose reputation and credentials gave him advantages the average correspondent does not possess (for instance, our diplomatic people did everything to open up important news sources to him), could have mined a little deeper for some of his verdicts and conclusions." Richard Watts
+ — New Repub 119:22 S 20 '48 1250w

"George Fielding Eliot has some of the gifts of a good reporter, he can tell a story, he can phrase it simply, and he can turn it out fast. . . If [this book] is not very penetrating and is perhaps aimed a little young it's still a nice piece of news writing: an accurate, colorful and reasonably objective picture of an odd situation, Palestine last spring. . . And Major Eliot's book has an added and refreshing touch, too, for any book on Palestine; so far as this reviewer was able to ascertain, he looked at the Arab-Jewish quarrel without bias or slant, as a reporter should." Fitzhugh Turner
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 S 12 '48 950w

"The author would agree, I think, that there is a good deal more to the problem than its strictly military angle. The position of King Abdullah, for instance, is not nearly so commanding as the control of the Arab Legion would seem to make it. By the same token, the prospects for a Greater Syria are not quite so good as Mr. Eliot believes. The book tries to present an honest and impartial analysis. Only events can show how correct this analysis is." E. A. Speiser
N Y Times p3 S 19 '48 950w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens
San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 26 '48 600w

"Eliot's reports and comments related to Palestine provide lively and fair background to the day-to-day news. For that alone, this is a worthwhile book." Martin Ebon
+ Sat R of Lit 31:14 S 25 '48 750w

Wis Lib Bul 44:213 D '48

ELLENWOOD, JAMES LEE. Just and durable parents; il. by Gertrude Howe. 224p $2.50 Scribner

173 Family. Children—Management 48-6768

Companion volume to the author's There's No Place Like Home, and It Runs in the Family (Book Review Digest 1938, 1942). This volume deals with the changing relationships within the family as the young people reach maturity. The author now assumes the position of a "durable" grandparent.

Booklist 44:346 Je 15 '48

"This is a fast-reading book and the ideas are not so profound that one has a sense of guilt in skipping; but sure as one does skip, a sentence that shouldn't be missed catches the eye. The total effect of the book is a quickening of the reader's sensibilities so that he looks at the members of his own family with fresh appreciation and tolerance." M. H. Bro
+ Christian Century 65:880 S 1 '48 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '48

"Limiting the infallibility of parenthood, investing it with humility and humor, this manages a very common, contemporary touch, and is at all times reassuring, recognizable, readable."
+ Kirkus 16:103 F 15 '48 170w

ELLIN, STANLEY. Dreadful summit. 181p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

48-5820

"Teen-age son of Manhattan saloonkeeper sees father savagely beaten by sadistic sports writer, and determines to avenge adored parent." Sat R of Lit

ELLIN, STANLEY—Continued
Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Ap 23 '48 400w
Kirkus 16:8 Ja 1 '48 130w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Ap 25 '48 140w

"Despite the revolting details, the story is bound to excite admiration for its skillful directing of an adolescent mind driven by a compulsion which it does not understand and which it is unable to resist." Isaac Anderson
+ — N Y Times p32 My 2 '48 170w

"As a psychological study of a youth who has been well enough cared for physically but ignored in almost every other respect, the novel makes its point, but it is extremely repetitious about a good many of the more intimate phases of adolescence. Technically excellent, except for a trick ending, apparently the trademark of suspense stories these days."
+ — New Yorker 24:111 Ap 24 '48 110w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 25 '48 100w

"Distinguished—but not pretty."
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:43 Ap 24 '48 50w
Springf'd Republican p12B My 2 '48 240w

ELLINGSTON, JOHN ROCKY. Protecting our children from criminal careers. 374p $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

364.36 Juvenile delinquency 48-3450

A study of California's Youth authority and its new treatment of juvenile delinquency, written by the man who for eight years has been field representative of the American Law institute, charged with putting the plan into action. Index.

"Juvenile delinquency is a subject that has been mauled, misconstrued, and oversimplified by nearly every writer and speaker who has had anything to say about it. It is, therefore, gratifying to find a book like John R. Ellingston's which discusses, competently and sanely, this social problem that concerns the very foundations of civilized democracy. . . It is hard to overstate the potential value of this book of Mr. Ellingston's. Detailed enough to be a handbook for correction authorities, it is also comprehensive and penetrating enough to furnish encouragement and sound principles to any thinker on this vastly important problem." Laura Haddock
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 1 '48 470w

Reviewed by William Healy
N Y Times p26 Ja 16 '49 700w

"It would be hard to find a man better qualified to write this account of what has been done here and what is yet to be done. And Mr. Ellingston comes up to his responsibility, telling the story directly and with chapter-and-verse examples. . . His book is not light reading, and is not intended to be. But it is a valuable and intelligent contribution in a field in which California has been a leader, and in which, for its own sake, it must continue to lead." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 26 '48 650w

"The author's common-sense approach is largely sustained throughout this well written but only partially documented book." W. W. Brickman
+ School & Society 68:306 O 30 '48 650w

"On the whole, this study represents a timely contribution, especially for the four states that have already passed laws enacting a youth authority. It also has considerable value for those states that have not as yet faced the problem of combining, at the state level, all the rehabilitation work among youthful offenders with systematic aid to communities from which the offender comes." W. C. Kvaraceus
+ School R 57:57 Ja '49 1400w
Wis Lib Bul 44:161 O '48

ELLINGTON, RICHARD. It's a crime. 243p $2.50 Morrow
48-8521

Detective story.

"'It's a Crime' is better paced than contrived, for its final lap shows up some heavy coincidence and a very cumbersome alibi-machine. During the rest of its course, it is tight and fast and unpretentious. And it avoids cliches." James Sandoe
+ — Chicago Sun O 8 '48 100w

"The going is good—if complicated."
+ — Kirkus 16:380 Ag 1 '48 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ja 2 '49 90w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p31 S 26 '48 180w
San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 10 '48 70w

"Snappy item."
Sat R of Lit 31:34 N 6 '48 40w

ELLINGTON, RICHARD. Shoot the works. 249p $2.50 Morrow
48-5221

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:660 D 1 '47 50w
Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Mr 28 '48 100w

"The scene shifts from New York to Florida, with plenty of excitement in both settings." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p33 F 8 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 1 '48 110w

"Breezily written and popping with action."
Sat R of Lit 31:34 F 14 '48 50w
Springf'd Republican p15A Ag 1 '48 120w

ELLIOTT, BRUCE. Magic as a hobby; new tricks for amateur performers; il. by L. Vosburgh Lyons [foreword by Orson Welles]. 231p $3.50 Harper

793.8 Conjuring. Tricks 48-6260

"New tricks and techniques for the inexperienced amateur with simple equipment listed and helpful suggestions for dramatizing a magic presentation. Some of these tricks have appeared in The Phoenix, published for professional magicians." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 44:295 My 1 '48

"The tricks are simple and basic, the presentation is clear and concise. The nature of the illusions is such that the need for apparatus is at a minimum. This latter, especially, should prove encouraging for those who wish a preview before investing money in magic equipment." R. S. Robbins
+ N Y Times p29 O 10 '48 250w
Wis Lib Bul 44:131 Je '48

ELLIS, CUTHBERT HAMILTON. Trains we loved. 196p il $4.50 Macmillan

385 Railroads—Great Britain [A48-5386]

A history of the "great romantic age of railways" in Great Britain, by which the author means the days of the steam train. There are chapters on the locomotives of the past; carriages on the Scottish and Irish lines; on railway racing; and Irish and Scottish companies. Over seventy illustrations, part of them in color. Index.

"A nostalgic book about the old railways. It has the right touch; facts, but not too many; details, but not obtruded; good manners; careful illustration; humour without facetious-ness. . . In general, the trouble about railway books, as with so many others on technical or specialised subjects, is that either they are factually sound but illiterate, or prettily written but unsound. This is of the rarer kind, in which the facts, though they are there, are kept under restraint, and when they do intrude are correctly dressed." Oliver Warner

+ Spec 180:52 Ja 9 '48 650w

Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 25 '48 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 20 '48 360w

ELLIS, JOHN TRACY. Select bibliography of the history of the Catholic church in the United States. 96p pa $1.25 McMullen

282.73 Roman Catholic church in the U.S.—History—Bibliography 47-4369

"The need for a general bibliography of the Catholic Church in the United States is now supplied with this booklet containing 775 entries, most of them critically or descriptively annotated. Although the bulk of the titles, 80-729, are in one section of general works which includes social history of the United States and three sections arranged chronologically, special sections are devoted to guides, archival centers, periodicals, and Catholic historical societies." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Cath World 168:256 D '48 120w

"A happy awareness of current material is apparent, as in the several lives of Mother Cabrini and the new life of Francis P. Kendrick, archbishop of Baltimore. The popular as well as the scholarly is also evident in the writings of Katherine Burton and Theodore Maynard. This should make the bibliography much more usable among laymen and the ordinary inquirer. . . It is a privilege as well as a pleasure to indorse the work of a former colleague and an old acquaintance. Any library with a Catholic clientele should have this on its reference shelf; and for that matter, any library." R. J. Hurley

+ Library Q 18:141 Ap '48 900w

"No attempt has been made at exhaustiveness; only a few important periodical articles are listed, and only a handful of parish histories, regarded as models of their kind. The variety of literature noted is striking. . . Unfortunately, this work is not without flaws. Entries are too meager; there are many slips in bibliographical detail and in proofreading; and the annotations are somewhat unduly impressed by documented works, and suspicious on the other hand of works designed for the general public. Nevertheless, the bibliography furnishes a good introduction to a great body of literature, and should prove of value to the serious student within or without Professor Ellis' communion."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:418 D '47 280w

ELLISON, RHODA COLEMAN. Early Alabama publications; a study in literary interests. 213p $4 Univ. of Ala. press

810.9 American literature—Alabama 47-32017

"Check list of works printed in [Alabama] between 1807 and 1870. The present volume describes the literary interests of residents of Alabama as evidenced in the publications printed there during the sixty-four-year period. After a discussion of the difficulties which beset editors and printers on the Alabama frontier, attention is given to the popularity in Alabama of certain English and American writers, notably Mrs. Hemans, Byron, Scott, Cooper, and Longfellow. More important is the treatment given to outstanding local writers, Johnson Jones Hooper, creator of the Simon Suggs sketches, Alexander B. Meek, author of The Red Eagle, Caroline Lee Hentz, popular novelist, and Augusta Evans Wilson, remembered today for her St. Elmo." U S Quarterly Bkl

"An important piece of spade work which will strengthen future surveys of American intellectual history. . Miss Ellison has given us a well-rounded picture of the Alabama literary scene between the years 1807 and 1870. One matter which has been overlooked was the healthy interest in an Alabama Press Association by those selfsame feudin' editors. This, however, was aside from the central theme of the study." M. C. Boyd

+ Am Hist R 53:408 Ja '48 320w

"Although Early Alabama Publications is a useful study of the cultural interests of persons on a frontier, the work has certain shortcomings. Early publishing in the Deep South was not greatly different from that in other frontier regions, but few attempts are made to relate the activity in Alabama to similar developments in other sections. The literary interests of Alabama settlers are classified in this volume by form of publication—newspapers, periodicals, books, and pamphlets—rather than by subject, locality, or period. This arrangement requires discussion of topics under each type of publication, and the reader may find it difficult to determine the significance of a subject as a whole."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 4:13 Mr '48 250w

ELLMANN, RICHARD. Yeats, the man and the masks. 331p $5 Macmillan

B or 92 Yeats, William Butler 48-9443

A study of the intellectual and literary development of William Butler Yeats, which treats also of his personal life and its effect on his writings. The author is an assistant professor of English composition at Harvard university. Index.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun p56 N 29 '48 470w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p15 D 16 '48 1200w

"As a critical biography this book is excellent." John Cournos

+ Commonweal 49:308 D 31 '48 420w

"A difficult subject, expertly handled and scholarly."

+ Kirkus 16:430 Ag 15 '48 160w

"Not a popular biography, it requires of the reader a willingness to understand Yeats; a desire to penetrate shadows and to explore his ivory tower. Recommended to all libraries serving literary scholarship." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 73:1269 S 15 '48 100w

"His book is an example of well planned, neat, decorous, quick-witted scholarship, and one can imagine that if the ghost of Yeats chanced to read it, that handsome shade, with its broad shoulders and carefully disordered, flowing white hair, would be half-gratified and half-amused." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 14 '48 1200w

"To write an excellent book about a great Irish poet without giving the reader the slightest sense of Ireland—the character of its people or the tradition of its literature—is a remarkable feat. Yet this is what Mr. Ellmann has done in 'Yeats: The Man and the Masks.' It is an excellent book because Mr. Ellmann goes straight into the man to find the sinews of the poet, and keeps his eye unwaveringly on the relations between the man and his work, and does it gracefully and most readably." J. J. Sweeney

+ N Y Times p5 D 19 '48 1150w

"The book helps fill in the picture of a complex and fascinating man, and it will probably prove indispensable for the serious study of the subject. It can always be supplemented with the admirable biography of Joseph Hone, an Irishman who knows Dublin inside out and gives us Yeats in his milieu." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 24:103 D 18 '48 950w

"Mr. Ellmann traces the inner drama of Yeats's life clearly, calmly, convincingly. He has been frank to point out weaknesses of the flesh and spirit; he treads firmly if softly on the poet's dreams. He is cool and detached; he sheds light not heat; he is at the same time full of his subject and yet detached from it. He has scaled detail wisely to interest and understanding. So clearly has he presented difficult backgrounds and related the poet and his work to them that he makes the reader realize that much of what Yeats's friends have written about him has been the mere outward manifestations of a drama to which they had few clues." Horace Reynolds

ELLMANN, RICHARD—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 31:11 N 13 '48 1100w

ELMS, FRANCIS RAYMOND. Stories of neighbor nations; stories and pictures of the countries of the Western Hemisphere. 79p $2 Whitman, A.

917 America—Description and travel—Juvenile literature 47-11812

"Social science material on the countries of the western hemisphere, excluding the United States and including Cuba, Haiti and the Dominican Republic. Each chapter is accompanied by a full color map and poster type illustrations. Indexed for countries included. Grades 4-6." Wis Lib Bul

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Jl 27 '48 70w

"The maps are the chief value—the illustrations that decorate the tops of the pages suggest something of scenery and occupation. But the text is so scrappy, so superficial, that the book lacks substance and serves as merely a sketchy introduction to our 'neighbor nations.'"
— + Kirkus 15:626 N 15 '47 120w

"Simple text, many maps, and illustrations present this excellent reference material in a form that will be most useful. Recommended for ages 9-12." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 73:48 Ja 1 '48 60w
Wis Lib Bul 44:42 F '48

ELTING, MARY and GOSSETT, MARGARET. Patch; il. by Ursula Koering. 159p $2 Doubleday

Dogs—Legends and stories 48-7934

The story of two boys on a Kentucky farm and their beloved dog, Patch, who was "mostly Airedale."

Booklist 45:16 S 1 '48

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 25 '49 240w
Kirkus 16:398 Ag 15 '48 120w

"Slow readers in the fifth and sixth grades will appreciate this easy-to-read story. . . Not important but fills a need for easy-to-read books." N. L. Rathbun
Library J 73:1283 S 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by V. H. Mathews
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 15 '48 200w

"The book presents race relations normally and naturally, without special emphasis in that Ursula Koering's illustrations depict Sally, playmate of the Hall boys, and her family as Negroes, while there is no reference to this fact in the text." Marjorie Burger
+ N Y Times p12 Ag 15 '48 140w
Wis Lib Bul 44:167 O '48

ELUARD, PAUL. Pablo Picasso; tr. by Joseph T. Shipley. 168p il $6 Philosophical lib.

759.6 Picasso, Pablo 47-12022

"A sort of tribute, in Imagistic prose and poetry, to the painter, by the French writer and critic. The book also contains a fair amount of little-known material—early photographs of the artist, youthful sketches, and so on—that should be of special interest to students of Picasso, as well as numerous illustrations of his works, some of which are reproduced here for the first time." New Yorker

Kirkus 15:636 N 15 '47 110w

"Not essential [but] illuminating." A. S. Plaut
Library J 72:1688 D 1 '47 100w
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Roger Marvell
New Statesman & Nation 34:254 S 27 '47 130w

"The book is a collection of poetic texts in verse and prose by Eluard interspersed with portraits of Picasso and reproductions of the latter's work from his early years down to the conclusion of the late war. The idea, as it was carried out in the original French, afforded a critical approach valuable in suggestion. . . But from the American volume such a product is impossible due to the deadness of the translation." J. J. Sweeney
— + N Y Times p7 Ja 25 '48 650w
New Yorker 23:60 D 27 '47 100w

Reviewed by Hubert Buel
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 25 '48 160w

ELWIN, MALCOLM. The first romantics. 280p $3.50 Longmans

928.2 Romanticism. Wordsworth, William. Coleridge, Samuel Taylor. Southey, Robert 48-9492

A collective biography of Coleridge, Wordsworth and Southey, showing them in relation to one another, and against the historical background which affected all three of them. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:191 F 1 '49

"Mr. Elwin writes a fluent, lucid style which is not the least of the book's attractions as it often reflects the luster of Coleridge's prose. There are, too, frequent moments of penetrating criticism and comparison which will doubtless stimulate readers to a new or renewed interest in the romantic movement. The concrete pictures of the period, the brisk, forward movement of the narrative do much to counterbalance what is, after all, an amiable trait in a biographer: the disposition to defend a subject worthy of defense." C. T. Houpt
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 21 '48 650w
Kirkus 16:641 D 1 '48 60w

"Mr. Elwin is to be congratulated on weaving the three always interesting biographies into such a stimulating and vivid narrative. And now that there is talk of a new romantic revival in English and American poetry, this book is of very timely value indeed. For throughout, Mr. Elwin in writing of the past is always careful to point out the relevance of the first romantics to the new romantics of our day." Marya Zaturenska
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 D 26 '48 1000w

"All the minutiae of detail bespeak hours of research and probing into books, letters, journals, etc. The author's pages are liberally sprinkled with quotation marks. Footnotes are rare, perhaps too rare. Even so, the obvious erudition behind the pages evokes confidence that all is well documented in the author's notes. . . Was this book hurried through the press? To one reader at least there appear to be a large number of places where grammatical references are unclear and there are such slips as: 'obivate,' 'as Cambridge' for 'at Cambridge,' 'forgeting,' 'rheumantic,' 'emotion fervor.' . . This is unfortunate in a work that shows unusual attention to detail in the accumulation of material." Claire McGlinchee
+ — N Y Times p5 D 19 '48 750w

"Tolerably well told."
New Yorker 24:182 D 4 '48 150w

ELWOOD, MAREN. Write the short short. 348p $3.50 Writer

808.3 Short story 47-11772

Advice on the writing of short short stories; what editor and readers want, and how to produce this type of story. An appendix contains eleven examples with an analysis of each. One chapter each is given to the motion picture short, the one-act play, and the ten-minute radio drama. Indexes.

Booklist 44:169 Ja 1 '48
Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '48

ELWOOD, MURIEL. Towards the sunset. 335p $3 Scribner

47-6518

The third volume in the author's chronicle of the French-Canadian family, the Boissarts, who came to the new world in the late 1600's. "This one covers the years between 1721 and 1743 and is concerned with the children and grandchildren of the original colonists. Against a background of change and exploration, of new civilization emerging against a wilderness that still held the terrors of Indian attack, she tells the story of two members of the Montreal family, of André Boissart, nicknamed 'Le Roux' because of his red hair, and of Paul-André de Brievaux, son of his twin sister." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R)

Kirkus 15:408 Ag 1 '47 170w

"In writing that has greatly matured since her first volume appeared, Miss Elwood brings to her work a deep knowledge of the period and a warm facility for interpreting historical events in terms of the emotions and experiences of likable characters."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 18 '48 190w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 44:83 Ap '48

EMBLEN, DONALD LEWIS, and EMBLEN, MRS BETTY JANE (MITCHELL). Palomino boy; decorations by Lynd Ward. 189p $2 Viking

48-10353

Pictures the life of a quiet little Mexican boy, an orphan, living in the Palomino Valley in southern California. It is the story of a perplexed ten-year-old, his dog, his problems with the three old ladies with whom he lived, and his attempts to study out the matter of racial prejudice. Grades five to seven.

Booklist 45:144 D 15 '48

"This story . . . while basically true, appears a little contrived and unnatural; but the adventures of Juan and his gray horse Moonlight will interest young readers between eight and twelve." B. J. Thompson

+ — Cath World 168:219 D '48 50w

"In effortless English that can be read by a ten-year-old, yet is not ridden by vocabulary restrictions, this singularly endearing book comes from California. It was written for a real boy about things he knew and loved. The surroundings of the beautiful valley where the scene is laid are realistically drawn. Juan, the Palomino boy, is a Mexican-American orphan. The simple details of his life at school, with his dog and horse and the old ladies whose home he shares, are described with a dignity and directness that give a charm to the book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:38 Ja '49 90w

"An unreal sort of story, with little that will capture the attention of the average child. Lynd Ward jacket and end papers add distinction, but not enough to give this book the impetus it lacks."

— + Kirkus 16:399 Ag 15 '48 130w

"Very little plot or action, but good writing. Appeal somewhat more adult than juvenile, but intended for ages 10-12. . . Recommended for limited purchase." Claire Nolte

+ — Library J 74:132 Ja 15 '49 100w

EMBURY, DAVID AUGUSTUS. Fine art of mixing drinks. 372p il $3.50 Doubleday

663.8 Beverages, Alcoholic 48-9361

A handbook on the preparation of about 700 mixed drinks, which can be used by either amateur or connoisseur. Contains data on basic principles, glassware and gadgets, the use and abuse of liquor, judging liquor, cocktails, short drinks, tall drinks, party drinks, hot drinks, etc. Index.

Booklist 45:116 D 1 '48

"Peculiarly thorough; handy vade mecum. . . This pleasant work, ex cathedra also obiter dicta, in the legal phrase, seems to bear the stamp of finality." Idwal Jones

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 9 '49 220w

EMERICK, LUCILLE. Web of evil. 304p $3 Doubleday

48-7662

In 1887 Caroline Springer, a gently bred Pittsburgh girl, married Jonathan Warren, after a brief courtship. Caroline's first impression of her husband's home was one of fear. A sinister old aunt and her husband's younger brother added to her difficulties. Strangely enough it took a murder and the Johnstown flood to bring complete understanding to Caroline and Jonathan.

Booklist 45:13 S 1 '48

"A love story, in 'true confession' style; surefire women's reading, psychological period novel."

Kirkus 16:243 My 15 '48 180w

"Made dramatically stirring by excellent character development and absorbing plot. . . Suspense, well-depicted background and spirited writing make this a novel worth adding to libraries that buy fiction." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 73:1026 Jl '48 100w

"It might have been expected that the melodramatic setting of this story would have produced taut suspense and an atmosphere of mounting emotional crisis. However, the novel maintains a certain monotonous pace from which it rarely escapes. The author has consistently failed to take advantage of dramatic situations, and the veiled hints, the movements in the shadows and mysterious remarks are not justified by their anti-climactic explanations. Miss Emerick is more convincing when she is describing coal mining than when she is spinning a web of evil." Margaret Clucas

— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 8 '48 320w

"Suspense and suspicion . . . forceful characters and an interesting, if familiar, love theme combine nicely in this novel. Well presented is the unscrupulous chicanery that prevailed in labor-capital relations at that time. . . Though the happy ending can be anticipated, the actual turn of events is as surprising as the mystery of the lilac bush that worried Aunt Harriet." George Froede

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 25 '48 140w

EMERSON, MRS ELIZABETH (HOLADAY). Garnered sheaves; decorations by Joseph W. Hopkins. 264p $2.50 Longmans

48-7910

Companion valume to Good Crop (Book Review Digest 1946). This carries on the story of the Rees family, Quaker farmers in Illinois, to the early 1900's. Sibyl, who was dedicated to the ministry, but does not feel her call until she had been married and had four children, is the central figure.

Booklist 45:13 S 1 '48

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 14 '48 130w

"Warmth and good family feeling [are] in this story."

+ Kirkus 16:339 Jl 15 '48 90w

"Written with dignity, charm, sincerity and faith, it is a glowing but tranquil story. . . Heartily recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 73:1089 Ag '48 110w

Wis Lib Bul 44:165 O '48

EMERSON, GERTRUDE (MRS BASISWAR SEN). Pageant of India's history; il. by Edith Emerson. v 1 431p maps $4.50 Longmans

954 India—History. Civilization, Hindu

(48-9199)

An account of India's history and civilization before the European invasions. A second volume will tell of India's role in the modern world. Bibliography. Index.

EMERSON, GERTRUDE—Continued

Booklist 45:118 D 1 '48
Christian Century 65:1338 D 8 '48 150w
Christian Science Monitor p28 D 10 '48 550w

" 'The Pageant of India's History' rates a good recommendation. That it will have a rather limited audience is probable, but that is the fault and loss of the audience, not the book. In handling one of the most difficult of historical subjects, Mrs. Sen has done a workmanlike, authoritative and wholly enjoyable job." J. O. F.
+ Commonweal 49:237 D 10 '48 330w
Current Hist 16:34 Ja '49 40w
Kirkus 16:431 Ag 15 '48 90w

"For the general reader this is an excellent introduction to India. . . Recommended." J. W. Rogers
+ Library J 73:1191 S 1 '48 140w
Nation 167:612 N 27 '48 50w

"This history is not intended for Sanskrit scholars and will not be read by them. But for young people and their elders, for anybody in fact, who wants an idea of Indian history without having to study laboriously through volumes of reference and cross-reference, this should be valuable in the extreme. I know of no other like it." Vincent Sheean
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 28 '48 900w

"Not the least of the book's many virtues is the fact that it primes the reader for an understanding of present-day India." J. G. Hitrec
+ N Y Times p3 N 7 '48 1100w

"I thought I could communicate the thrilling nature of this book. I thought I could suggest its broad sweep and vision. I hoped to indicate its tremendous value—especially in view of the West's ignorance of Asia. I fear I have failed. It would take an entire issue of The Saturday Review to do justice to Mrs. Sen's wonderful volume." Louis Fischer
+ Sat R of Lit 31:9 D 18 '48 800w

"A scholarly book with a lucid style."
+ School & Society 68:312 O 30 '48 40w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein
Springf'd Republican p18A Ja 30 '49 210w

EMERY, ANNE. Mountain Laurel; frontispiece and end papers by John C. Wonsetler. 239p $2.50 Putnam

48-3951

Life in the remote sections of the Smoky Mountains of Tennessee is the background of this story for older girls. Laurie, who had planned to become a nurse, gave up the idea to care for her younger brothers and sisters after her mother's death. Disillusioned by the unkept promises of some Chicago visitors, Laurie turned to the weaving which had been her mother's craft, and a new solace was her reward.

"It's a charming bit of Americana, and entirely accurate. We were particularly impressed by the skill with which the rhythmic quality of the mountain speech is presented without resorting to written dialect. And there isn't a dull moment in the book." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 182:120 N '48 110w
Booklist 45:160 Ja 1 '49

"Adequate, sympathetic tracing of a young girl's development."
+ Kirkus 15:683 D 15 '47 130w

"Here are Americans to be proud of—dignified mountaineers, with a well preserved culture as creative weavers and folk musicians, and a stalwart integrity despite inadequacies in educational opportunity, physical comforts, and medical care. Teen-age girls will appreciate the touch of romance and find excitement in the surviving remnants of feuding." L. R. Miller
+ Library J 73:1523 O 15 '48 100w

"An uncommonly good novel for older girls, this is a fresh, flavorsome account of mountain life, neither sentimentalized nor overquaint. Most importantly, the background, good as it is, never obscures the humanity of the characters." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p43 N 23 '48 230w

ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA. Ten eventful years. 4v il maps $39.90 Encyclopaedia Britannica

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 47-6281

"A record of events of the years preceding, including, and following World War II, 1937 through 1946. . . [It] is arranged alphabetically with topics varying in length from a few lines to over one hundred pages. In libraries it will serve as a supplement to the Encyclopaedia Britannica for the developments of the last ten years. The choice of subjects is wide—covering the world of events, personalities, science, technology, sports, literature; all fields usually covered in an encyclopedia, but omitting those subjects in which there was no development in the ten-year period." Subscription Bks Bul

---

Reviewed by Emmet Dedmon
Chicago Sun D 30 '47 600w
Foreign Affairs 26:568 Ap '48 40w

"Generally, this set seems indispensable to all libraries—schools, college and public. Through it, the small library can control a vast amount of current information which it could never hope to have otherwise. The large library will have much of the content in other but in no such handable form. Whenever the time reference 1937 to 1946 has any significance for what somebody wants to know, Ten Eventful Years is obviously the first place to look for the answer." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:482 Mr 15 '48 550w

"An excellent reference book that might well be put on the library shelf alongside the encyclopedia, where it might serve as a supplement bringing it up to date. It's hard to imagine anyone sitting down and reading it right through from Abbreviations to Zoology (though it wouldn't surprise me in the slightest to receive a letter tomorrow from someone who already has), but the reader who takes pot-luck, picking the subjects that interest him, will find it surprisingly good reading, though uneven." Daniel Schwarz
+ N Y Times p7 Ja 18 '48 900w

"10 Eventful Years will be particularly useful in libraries that do not have the files of yearbooks published by the Americana, Britannica, and the New International. Most libraries will need it for its up-to-date information and bibliographies. It will have a valuable place as a summary history of the war years. Reference collections will need it also as a supplement to their encyclopedias and yearbooks. It is recommended for all types of libraries."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 19:10 Ja '48 1200w

ENGEBRETSON, BETTY LOU. What happened to George? il. by Esther Friend. [40p] $1.25 Rand McNally

47-6458

Picture-storybook about a small pig named George. George was practically perfect except that he always ate too much. One day he ate twelve doughnuts at one time, and that was the end of George. For ages five and six.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ja 17 '48 120w

"The book is written with gaiety that children love, and illustrated enchantingly, by Esther Friend. The very exaggeration of the ending takes it out of the moral class and makes it into slapstick humor and hearty reading."
+ Kirkus 15:580 O 15 '47 80w

"Delightful story . . . moral is humorously suggested. Author is a children's librarian in Minneapolis." M. A. Herr
+ Library J 72:1691 D 1 '47 70w

ENGEN, SVERRE, and ATWATER, MONTGOMERY MEIGS. Ski with Sverre; deep snow and packed slope ski technique. 143p il $3.50 New directions

796.93 Skis and ski running 48-5268

Explanation and hints on the "mental side of skiing" rather than the mechanical aspects.

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:711 My 1 '48 30w

"The book has a lot to offer beginners and experts. It is exceptionally well-written and in logical order covers various turns, equipment, deep snow skiing, competitions, first aid and mountain safety. Excellent photographs point up the text." James Eden
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 F 1 '48 110w

"With Mr. Atwater's help, the book is clearly written, avoiding purposedly confusing technicalities. You get Sverre's idea of skiing despite the simplification, and it is obvious the publisher has done a loving job on the book. There is a special chapter on deep-snow skiing with which I agree—except that the telemark, the easiest, swiftest, and most elegant turn in deep snow, isn't even mentioned. . . Nevertheless, 'Ski with Sverre' is an enjoyable book that, together with the National Ski Association's 'Manual of Ski Mountaineering,' is a must for anyone who makes a pretense of having a ski library." Frank Harper
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:28 F 7 '48 360w

ENGSTRAND, STUART DAVID. Beyond the forest. 303p $3 Creative age
48-8520

Portrays a ruthless, neurotic woman, whose schemes for her own advancement ruin the lives of almost all with whom she comes in contact. She is Rosa Moline, wife of the only doctor in a remote Wisconsin lumber town. Among her victims are her husband, a country boy, a trapper, and a Chicago sportsman.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Chicago Sun p7X D 5 '48 210w

"Engstrand appears to be doing a bit of wallowing here and the result is a not too well written book that has trashy undertones and overtones."
— Kirkus 16:408 Ag 15 '48 170w

"The outstanding feature of the book is its skillfully handled, forward-moving plot. . . The dramatic confrontations are all carefully planned; the downfall of a woman possessed by a destructive will to power and determined to make full use of her natural advantages in achieving it is worked out with a minimum of chance and coincidence. Unfortunately the logic of plot is sometimes different from the logic of life, and in a number of scenes one feels that, because of the exigencies of plot, the author has distorted the state of mind and feelings of his characters." Stephen Stepanchev
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 O 3 '48 600w

"Readers innocent of Freud, the more devious chapters of abnormal psychology, and life as it is known in Hollywood, may well remark (with gratitude) that they've never known anyone quite so ornery as Rosa. . . Mr. Engstrand's grueling, emotional tale will undoubtedly bemuse many a reader; it demonstrates, at least in so far as its star performer is concerned (although some others get off fairly well), that selfishness and crime do not pay; and, certainly it will look handsome in technicolor." N. K. Burger
+ — N Y Times p22 S 26 '48 500w

Reviewed by E. S. Mills
— Sat R of Lit 31:30 N 6 '48 550w

ENNES, HAROLD E. Broadcast operators handbook. 265p il $3.30 Rider, J. F.

621.384193 Radio broadcasting 48-5944

Contents: Part I, Operating in the control room and studio: What you're up against. Are mechanical operations apparent? Keeping sound 'out of the mud.' You're often a producer, too. Put that mike there! by Bert H. Koeblitz. Part II, Operating the master control: Where split seconds count. Part III, Operating outside the studio: Remote control problems. Remote versus studio pickups. Remote musical pickups. Eyewitness pickups and mobile transmitters. The live symphony pickup, by Bert H. Koeblitz. Part IV, Operating the transmitter: Operator's duties. Programs are entertainment. Measuring noise and distortion. Part V, We're off the air: Emergency shutdowns. Why preventive maintenance. Preventive maintenance instructions. Part VI, Technically speaking: Control room and studio equipment. The broadcast studio. Selecting the broadcast transmitter location. Bibliography. Appendix.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:202 F 1 '48 40w

"While there is much in print on radio engineering and the manufacture of radio apparatus, there is remarkably little on the work of the broadcast control technician. This manual covers in detail the technical and routine jobs. . . It should aid persons who are planning to enter the field as well as those already employed in it."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:23 Ja '48

ENNIS, THOMAS EDSON. Eastern Asia. 627p $5 Lippincott

915 China—Civilization. Japan—Civilization. Eastern question (Far East) 48-2499

"Dr. Ennis devotes the first 100 pages to the early civilization and history of China and Japan up into the nineteenth century, and the last 450 pages to the twentieth century, including two chapters on World War II. He deals especially with the life and thought of the peoples concerned, as seen in literature and the arts, education and recreation, the press, and social movements." Ann Am Acad

"The text is written in a vigorous and readable style. . . Two points of inadequacy may be suggested, however. One refers to content and the other to organization. The content includes an enormous number of proper names and other points of detail, many of which are not explained or identified, and some of which are, almost inevitably, wrong. . . The second difficulty which may confuse the reader is the sequence of topics. The revolutionary process in China, for instance, is presented down through the Kuomintang-Communist civil war of 1946 (p. 273) before the rise of Japan is recounted, from the Sino-Japanese war of 1894 down through the expansion of the Empire to the attack on China in 1937 (p. 464). This makes it difficult to correlate events." J. K. Fairbank
+ — Ann Am Acad 258:137 Jl '48 550w
School & Society 67:374 My 15 '48 20w

ENRICK, NORBERT LLOYD. Quality control. 122p $3 Industrial press

658.562 Sampling (statistics) 48-7718

"A manual of quality control procedure based upon scientific principles and simplified for practical application in various types of manufacturing plants." (Subtitle) Index.

"Written for average plant owners and in simple language which may be understood without the aid of specialists. Many of the examples are from metal working plants, but the principles can be applied in other industries. Shows benefits derived by using these statistical methods." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 73:1517 O 15 '48 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:59 Jl '48

EPSTEIN, BERYL (WILLIAMS). See Williams, B.

ERDMAN, LOULA GRACE. Lonely passage. 234p $2.75 Dodd
48-8701

Novel of life among the clannish Pembertons of Missouri. The chief character is Thurley who falls in love with a hired man's son; but finds the understanding she needs in an older distant cousin.

"Unimportant but pleasant story."
Booklist 45:103 N 15 '48

"A warm and simple story of the lonely passage from childhood to womanhood." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 25:63 Ja '49 100w

"Miss Erdman's novel creates an atmosphere of family solidarity without the usual massive detail of most family chronicles. But her principle theme—the love between Thurley and Vance, has a static quality, and one feels that she delves too deeply into background to tell a really forceful story."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ja 9 '49 250w

"Miss Erdman takes the part for the whole with such näiveté that her book fails to entertain even on its own level." Gertrude Buckman
— N Y Times p21 Ja 16 '49 250w

"'Lonely Passage' is even a quieter book than was 'Years of the Locust.' But it is equally agreeable and will undoubtedly please an even larger audience." Guy Patrick
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 23 '49 320w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 14 '48 120w

Wis Lib Bul 44:213 D '48

ERGANG, ROBERT REINHOLD. Europe in our time, 1914 to the present [maps by Theodore R. Miller]. 710p il $5.50 Heath
940.5 Europe—History 48-6796

A textbook on modern European history, from 1914 to 1947. Bibliography. Index.

School & Society 67:342 My 1 '48 20w

"Will give the student an intelligent understanding of the history of our time."
+ Social Studies 39:380 D '48 20w

ERICKSON, PHOEBE. Slip, the story of a little fox; pictures by [the author]. [26p] $1 Childrens press 48-4154

Pictures and slight story for first readers about the education of a little fox in the ways of the world.

"'Slip the Story of a Little Fox' is a slender volume which captures in its simple tale of a fox cub, and especially in its delightful pictures of the fox family and other wildwood animals, the charm of out of doors and something of that animal drollery which makes such an appeal to children." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 D 21 '48 150w

"Illustrations by the author remind one of Rojankovsky's animals." F. W. Butler
Library J 73:1600 N 1 '48 80w

ERNST, MORRIS LEOPOLD. So far so good. 271p $3 Harper
B or 92 Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-8878

Rambling reminiscences of the author's life and reactions to everything from his family to gossip on Nantucket, during the last ten years. A sequel to his The Best is Yet (Book Review Digest 1945).

Booklist 45:135 D 15 '48

Reviewed by Ben Kartman
Chicago Sun N 11 '48 250w

"This thoroughly readable and provocative book is recommended as a palliative to lawyers whose outlook has been narrowed by too much law and not enough life."
+ Columbia Law R 48:1273 D '48 130w

"With charm and sagacity, the author recalls the past ten odd years in a rambling manner, frames his memoirs only with his progression from the personal to the public and national. . . Urbane causerie which provides effortless reading."
+ Kirkus 16:390 Ag 1 '48 140w

"Of special interest: the chapters on his long friendship with F. D. R. and the 'chores' he undertook for him. Recommended for wide reading." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 73:1381 O 1 '48 100w

"Mr. Ernst's great hero was Franklin D. Roosevelt and he presents some interesting sidelights on the character of that extraordinary man, but nothing that either adds or detracts very much from what the world already knew. As a matter of fact, Mr. Ernst is not particularly good on heroes. He is at his best when he wades into villains with unholy joy, and, fortunately for the reader, he finds them in battalions." Gerald Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 17 '48 850w

"This is a good, sane, warm-hearted book, as even those who may vehemently object to one or two of its contentions will probably admit. Perhaps the best way to get at the thinking of Morris Ernst would be to sit for a few hundred hours with him in a New York night club or on a Nantucket beach. Since this sort of town meeting is impossible one can profit by knowing him in print. The style is good. One hears the sincere and eloquent voice behind it." R. L. Duffus
+ N Y Times p5 O 24 '48 800w

"'So Far So Good' contains a good deal of detailed history of Ernst, the libertarian and social engineer. It is written with a nice turn of phrase, an ingratiating humility and considerable wit. It is, in short, easy to read and that is a happy circumstance, for it ought to be read widely. There is a diverseness about Mr. Ernst's range of interest which is fairly rare in compressed modern society, and exposure to his kind of personality is good for any of us." Vince Mahoney
+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 28 '48 650w

"His is not an explanatory book. It is rather an autobiographical fragment written with ebullience, candor, and a brash, saucy reference to such sources of insight as law, sociology, anthropology, economics, psychiatry, and philosophy. . . All is grist to his mill and his thoughts pour forth in conversational prose, which reads as though it came fresh from a dictaphone cylinder." E. C. Lindemann
+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 N 13 '48 650w

"It is a thoroughly delightful book, discursive but not rambling, and pleasantly personal although it deals with a good many matters of public interest." W. H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p5C O 31 '48 240w

Wis Lib Bul 44:213 D '48

ERNST, MORRIS LEOPOLD, and LOTH, DAVID GOLDSMITH. American sexual behavior and the Kinsey report; with a foreword by Robert L. Dickinson. 191p $1.96 Greystone
392.6 Sex. U.S.—Moral conditions. Kinsey, Alfred Charles—Sexual behavior in the human male 48-2596

"This book demonstrates what lessons may be learned from the Kinsey Report for a more intelligent comprehension of the sexual behavior of children as well as adults. Besides contrasting American sexual habits with foreign, the authors show how the findings of the Report emphasize the need for revising many current ideas about sex—among them, what constitutes sexual normalcy, perversions, obscenity, and sex crimes." (Publisher's note) No index.

Booklist 44:346 Je 15 '48

Chicago Sun p8X My 30 '48 50w

"Like it or not the Kinsey Report has made a deep impress on the thought-trend of American readers. To the reviewer this sane and sober assay is of great value, not definitive but immensely helpful to those who do not shy away from realities." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 162:16 O 15 '48 210w

"The book by Morris Ernst, lawyer and foe of censorship, and David Loth, author and publicist for planned parenthood, is a unified and somewhat detailed analysis of the Kinsey Report. It displays a definitely liberal point of view and it is written in a sprightly and entertaining if not highly polished style. In some respects it may be more useful than the Deutsch symposium because it parallels the Kinsey Report more faithfully and undertakes to state and discuss a far greater number of the Kinsey findings." H. M. Parshley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Je 6 '48 250w

"Both of the authors of 'American Sexual Behavior and the Kinsey Report' have a long record as fighters for better sexual education and more freedom of choice for the individual on such matters as contraception and divorce. Perhaps for this reason their book is written with a proselyting zeal which Dr. Kinsey and his collaborators sought hard and on the whole successfully, to exclude from their own findings." Bruce Bliven

N Y Times p4 My 16 '48 650w

"A brief and clearheaded study of the Report."

+ New Yorker 24:118 My 22 '48 80w

Reviewed by Louis Wasserman

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 4 '48 230w

Reviewed by R. G. Fuller

Sat R of Lit 31:19 Je 12 '48 270w

Springf'd Republican p10B My 30 '48 140w

ERSKINE, JOHN. My life as a teacher. 249p $3 Lippincott

B or 92 48-6579

The first of three promised volumes which are to supplement the author's autobiography: The Memory of Certain Persons (Book Review Digest 1947). This one deals mainly with Erskine's experiences as an educator at Amherst, Columbia, and as an administrator of the A.E.F. university at Beaune after the first World war. Index.

Booklist 44:351 Je 15 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '48

"He opens the door to a delightful kind of self-education in all things that make life fine and enjoyable. Particularly recommended for readers' advisers." G. O. Kelley

+ Library J 73:705 My 1 '48 110w

"Vivid is the word for Erskine. I doubt if anyone in academic circles, or outside of them for that matter, can look back on a life of more varied incident, happy achievement, and rich and rewarding associations than this professor of universal literature, who is also a skilled musician and a writer of highly successful fiction. And certainly no teacher in our time ever recorded his works and days with more magnificent gusto." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 My 16 '48 1250w

Reviewed by Willard Thorp

N Y Times p21 Je 13 '48 650w

"A delightful, easygoing, and human book, with a hard kernel of good sense."

+ New Yorker 24:79 My 29 '48 130w

"Quite interesting and frequently quite insipid. This latter is due chiefly to an overly parochial interest in what Professor Soandso said to or wrote to, or thought of Professor Suchandsuch. 'My life as a teacher' is at its most sprightly when Erskine tees-off at academic pomposity, when he lets fly satirical shafts at the Ph D system, when he examines alma mater's boast of building character." W. R. W.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 18 '48 160w

"This volume follows Erskine's autobiography, 'The Memory of Certain Persons.' His has been a full, a fruitful and, without doubt, an entertaining life. Through the pages of this volume he has passed in review students, teachers, trustees, of whom he has presented keen and engaging vignettes. We should be the poorer if there were not to be further volumes of his recollections." A. E. Cohn

+ Sat R of Lit 31:11 Je 19 '48 1250w

School & Society 67:360 My 8 '48 10w

Wis Lib Bul 44:148 S '48

ERSKINE, MARGARET, pseud. See Williams, W.

ESTES, MRS ELEANOR. Sleeping giant, and other stories. 101p il $3 Harcourt

48-9223

Three tall tales: The sleeping giant, The lost shadow, and A nice room for giraffes.

Booklist 45:123 D 1 '48

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 14 '48 170w

Churchman 162:17 N 15 '48 20w

"These three amazing tales sparkle with the fun and imagination that characterize books by Eleanor Estes, and cause us to open a new one with pleasant anticipation." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:35 Ja '49 90w

"The pictures in these three stories are fun for the imaginative child, the tales are fun for those who like word play."

+ Kirkus 16:571 N 1 '48 90w

"The author's illustrations in color are imaginative, delicate, and very funny. Highly recommended for all libraries for ages 6-10." Clara Adams

+ Library J 73:1825 D 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by P. A. Whitney

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 2 '49 180w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges

N Y Times p49 N 21 '48 180w

New Yorker 24:129 D 11 '48 80w

"All three stories are a mixture of fact and fantasy that will tickle boys and girls. Eleanor Estes's knowledge of what children like is based upon a long experience with them and their books. She has used this understanding here, and has used with it her skill and grace as a writer."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:25 N 13 '48 240w

Wis Lib Bul 45:15 Ja '49

ETHRIDGE, WILLIE (SNOW) (MRS M. F. ETHRIDGE). It's Greek to me. 297p $3 Vanguard

914.95 Greece—Description and travel

48-5518

The author describes her trip to and through not only Greece but Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, and other spots in southeastern Europe, as the wife of a member of one of the United Nations commissions.

"By turns laughable and impulsive, sobered and sympathetic, her book is at all times fun to read." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 181:108 Je '48 420w

Booklist 44:247 Mr 15 '48

Reviewed by Frayn Utley

Chicago Sun Mr 8 '48 550w

"There is a warm, retrospective glow for me, as well as a rich reward of reading pleasure, in this fourth book heralding the intimate misadventures of Willie Snow Ethridge. . . Mrs. Ethridge's three previous books have already identified her as a vital new name in American humor. 'It's Greek to Me' reveals her also as one of journalism's able women reporters." J. H. Hoagland

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 11 '48 600w

Kirkus 15:691 D 15 '47 120w

ETHRIDGE, W. S.—Continued

"One must admit that the book is amusing, but her observations on the Greek and Balkan situation should not bear any more weight than political salvos exchanged across the bridge table. . . It is well to remember the apt title." C. W. Roth
Library J 73:195 F 1 '48 140w

"Mrs. Ethridge has the columnists beat a mile, and half the reporters, for making you acquainted with dozens of folks in their off-the-record moods and for good colorful backdrop of the Greek Way of Life." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 F 15 '48 1200w

"A combination of the trivial and the sinister. . . And of course Mrs. Ethridge, who like any self-respecting Southern woman would not be seen flaunting her intelligence, knows quite what she is about. She is saying something but being mighty careful to be amusing about it." Mary McGrory
N Y Times p7 F 29 '48 750w

Reviewed by Quentin Reynolds
Sat R of Lit 31:33 Mr 6 '48 600w

Wis Lib Bul 44:81 Ap '48

ETS, MRS MARIE (HALL). Little old automobile; pictures by [the author]. [30p] $1.50 Viking 48-4046

The story of what happened to Little Old Automobile who wouldn't consider anybody else's feelings and by always answering "I Won't" finally came to a bad end.

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 168:221 D '48 60w

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ja 15 '49 60w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p14 O 26 '48 180w

Commonweal 49:146 N 19 '48 80w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Book 24:453 N '48 40w

"There's nothing lovable about the 'little old automobile' of Marie Ets' new glorified comic strip book, but the pictures have a certain zest and humor and gaiety that the dismal solid blacks of Oley lacked."
— + Kirkus 16:395 Ag 15 '48 120w

"Miss Ets accomplishes humor and clarity with a few fine strokes in the black-and-white illustrations on every page set off by heavy black borders. Recommended." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 73:1745 D 1 '48 100w

"The illustrations are simple, blunt drawings that show many easily recognizable scenes and animals. Story and pictures will appeal to the individualist who likes his action strong and his moral pointed."
New Repub 119:32 D 6 '48 90w

Reviewed by Helen Masten
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 3 '48 140w

"What becomes of the pieces gives the story of the Little Old Automobile a surprise ending which is very satisfactory. Marie Ets writes in a simple, direct style which shows a clear understanding of what interests and amuses young children. Her black-and-white drawings are the kind that grow more expressive the longer you look at them." Lois Palmer
+ N Y Times p29 S 19 '48 170w

"Young children will laugh at the author's whimsey, for whimsey it is, and more successful than most."
+ New Yorker 24:125 D 11 '48 80w

"The drawings, beautifully printed in black and white on a large page, are a delight. Each one is worthy of long study for its fascinating details. Each one has a story to tell. . . What the moral is, we are not quite sure; but we are sure that little children will love the story of the little old automobile."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:22 N 13 '48 160w

Wis Lib Bul 45:15 Ja '49

EVANOFF, VLAD. Surf fishing; il. by the author. 83p $1.50 Barnes, A.S.
799.16 Fishing Agr48-394

This handbook "shows the beginner in surf fishing how to buy the proper tackle and accessories; different styles of casting; the importance of wind, tide and food supply; how to locate fish; live bait and its use; artificial lures; how to make his own lures; proper care of tackle; descriptions and habits of surf fish; together with illustrations for identification." (Publisher's note) The author has spent the past fifteen years in surf fishing.

Booklist 45:33 S 15 '48

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:711 My 1 '48 20w

"The author's many drawings have good diagrammatic quality. [The book] is a concise and helpful introduction to a field of angling on which there is relatively little literature, well worth its modest price to the surf-fishing hopeful." J. R. de la Torre Bueno
+ N Y Times p25 Je 13 '48 110w

EVANS, EDWIN BEN. Scandinavia; il. by Rafaello Busoni. (Lands and peoples) 24p $1.25 Holiday 914.8 Scandinavia—Juvenile literature
48-8390

A description of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and Finland; their histories, economic and social conditions, governments, and contributions to the world. The author, an American teacher, knows the countries intimately. For teen-age boys and girls.

Booklist 45:144 D 15 '48

+ Kirkus 16:481 S 15 '48 40w

"Since this reviewer has visited Norway, Sweden and Denmark, she realizes how concise and meaty this little book is and how surprisingly well informed its readers will be on the subject. . . Recommended for ages 10 and up." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 74:65 Ja 1 '49 70w

Reviewed by Marion Conger
+ Sat R of Lit 31:40 O 2 '48 70w

Wis Lib Bul 44:216 D '48

EVANS, HUGH AUSTIN (HUGH AUSTIN, pseud). Drink the green water; or, Young Caldwell's toe; a Sultan's harem mystery. 212p $2.50 Scribner 48-5175

Mystery story.

"What is amusing for a chapter is dull at novel-length although the legal mind might find the sedulous plot-maze of genealogies and inheritances humorous in a stately, deliberate, dullish way." James Sandoe
— + Chicago Sun Ja 23 '48 140w

Kirkus 15:661 D 1 '47 80w

New Repub 118:26 Mr 8 '48 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 1 '48 180w

Reviewed by W. J. Glick
— N Y Times p24 F 8 '48 150w

"Very funny in spots, but the plot at times is overwhelmingly complex."
+ — New Yorker 23:88 Ja 24 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 29 '48 90w

"Diverting."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:34 F 14 '48 40w

EVANS, HUGH AUSTIN (HUGH AUSTIN, pseud). Milkmaid's millions; a Sultan's harem mystery. 181p $2.50 Scribner 48-8107

Detective story.

"Small-time but good."
+ Kirkus 16:294 Je 15 '48 80w

"Readers of fiction being what they are (different, we mean), a great many of them should like this comic mystery, even if one sampler did find the fun pretty tedious in spots." Will Cuppy
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 S 5 '48 150w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p20 Ag 29 '48 200w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 19 '48 70w

"Very good."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 S 4 '48 50w

EVANS, JOHN, pseud. See Browne, H.

EVANS, KATHERINE. Flowers for mother. [32p] il $1.50 McKay
48-1891

Picture book describing the adventures of Rosie and Davie in their search for "flowers for mother."

+ Chicago Sun Ap 10 '48 110w

"An innocuous story with small claim to originality."
Kirkus 16:169 Ap 1 '48 100w

"Pleasant, easy-reading story of everyday things. Small children will like it, as well as those learning to read. . . Recommended for ages 4-8." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 73:716 My 1 '48 50w

"This little story keeps moving right along in the way little children like, with a picture in red and black on every page to translate the words into action." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ap 11 '48 140w

EVANS, RALPH MERRILL. An introduction to color. 340p il $6 Wiley
535.6 Color 48-7620

"Systematically covers the physical and psychological aspects of color, discussing the effects of the combination of these factors on the observer." Library J

Booklist 45:7 S 1 '48

"Who would be repaid for study of this book? Disregard physicists, artists, oculists and photographers. Our list then seems to be: illuminating, safety and design engineers. Then we add company officers responsible for personnel safety and morale, good housekeeping, sales, product purity and packaging." L. B. P.
Chem Eng 55:348 N '48 400w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:819 My 15 '48 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:51 Jl '48

School & Society 68:31 Je 10 '48 10w

EVATT, HERBERT VERE. United nations. 154p $2.50 Harvard univ. press
341.1 United nations (organization) 48-5297

"The Australian Minister for External Affairs discusses the formation, working and future of the United Nations. Active in the development of the organization and as Australia's representative to the General Assembly, Dr. Evatt relates in his concise, blunt manner the compromises and the efforts made at San Francisco to improve the Dumbarton Oaks draft. Describing the working of the U.N., he tells of the successes and failures of each of its organs. With a minimum of national prejudice, he clarifies points often obscured by incomplete or sensational newspaper reporting. Finally, he sets forth his ideas on how each organ should proceed in order to strengthen itself and perform its proper functions." Library J

Reviewed by D. F. Fleming
Am Pol Sci R 42:605 Je '48 220w

"Mr. Evatt supplies a heartening reminder of the UN's concrete achievements, a searching diagnosis of its weaknesses, and a forceful set of recommendations for its improvement. He wastes no words and pulls no punches."
+ Atlantic 181:111 Mr '48 60w

Booklist 44:195 F 1 '48

Reviewed by Blodwen Davies
Canadian Forum 28:69 Je '48 850w

Current Hist 14:173 Mr '48 40w

Foreign Affairs 26:737 Jl '48 40w

"Although this book presents an authoritative and readable analysis of the problems facing the United Nations, it is rather disappointing. The author is still fighting over issues which were solved, for better or for worse, at San Francisco." L. B. Sohn
+ — Harvard Law R 61:1082 Je '48 1100w

Kirkus 16:12 Ja 1 '48 130w

"Cautiously optimistic, this is an important book." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 73:120 Ja 15 '48 140w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 28 '48 300w

Reviewed by J. K. Gordon
Nation 166:358 Mr 27 '48 650w

Reviewed by John Rogers
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 F 29 '48 600w

"Dr. Evatt's lectures, originally delivered at Harvard University, should be widely read. They will clarify the Charter to those who have become confused about its character, they will offer even the dourest pessimists a gleam of light, a wisp of hope. In a rational world the U. N. truly could, in Dr. Evatt's concluding words, guide us to cooperation between all powers, based not on 'mere tolerance, but . . . real comradeship.' Can we recapture rationality?" C. H. Grattan
+ N Y Times p3 F 8 '48 1150w

Reviewed by Grayson Kirk
Pol Sci Q 63:292 Je '48 700w

"Herbert Evatt's book may do something to help revive the flagging general interest and faith in the U. N. Reading it, one is bound to feel again the magic of the One World dream, and in the author's sound, simple summing up of desirable reforms at the conclusion you will find much of the stuff from which that dream could be made a reality." Luther Nichols
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 7 '48 800w

Reviewed by Fred Smith
Sat R of Lit 31:8 Ja 31 '48 1800w

Reviewed by J. P. C. Carey
Survey G 37:267 My '48 700w

"A well-informed book for the serious student who is interested in a discussion of details."
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:187 Je '48 280w

Wis Lib Bul 44:101 My '48

Reviewed by T. J. Hamilton
Yale R n s 37:523 spring '48 1400w

EVERS, HELEN, and EVERS, ALF. Moonymouse [pictures by the authors]. [40p] 60c Rand McNally 48-6030

Moonymouse was a day dreamer. One day, while walking and dreaming in the hayloft, he fell off the edge and landed in the cow's water trough. Frightened by that experience, he confined his dreaming to nights in bed. For ages 2-7.

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Je 5 '48 90w

Kirkus 16:144 Mr 15 '48 60w

"No child objects to a moral as applied to little animals, and if they apply this one to themselves all the better; anyway they'll have fun." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 9 '48 140w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p29 Ap 4 '48 110w

EVERSON, WILLIAM. Residual years. 148p $3 New directions

811 48-19203

Includes poems from seven earlier collections, one of which was published in 1945 under title: Residual years; poems, 1940-1941.

"I recommend this forthright book. . . The poetry is very right, emotion never disproportionate to the cause of utterance excepting possibly where his feelings against taking any kind of life encounter ecological absurdity. Mr. Everson meets his inevitabilities positively and heroically, with astonishing mastery over language." T. H. Ferril

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 7 '48 90w

"It cannot be said that he has a particularly good ear: indeed, he can be painfully harsh and disconcertingly awkward; and there are few poems in his book that suggest more than an elementary feeling for structure. Moreover, his insistent, almost lurid eroticism is apt to betray him. . . In spite of which lapses and Californian extravagancies, 'The Residual Years' makes its point and makes it powerfully." Dudley Fitts

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:32 N 20 '48 320w

EWING, ALFRED CYRIL. Definition of good. 215p $3 Macmillan

179.9 Good and evil 47-11860

An English philosopher discusses the question: What is the definition of goodness, as distinguished from the question: What things are good? He attacks the naturalistic and subjectivistic schools of ethics and defines "good" as "a fitting object of a pro-attitude." Index.

Reviewed by T. A. Cowan

Ann Am Acad 258:146 Jl '48 550w

"A valuable contribution to the field of ethics. . . In these days of relativism and utilitarianism and materialism it is helpful to have a profound thinker point the way to a determination of what is good and what is right."

Kirkus 15:536 S 15 '47 160w

"An original and vastly interesting contribution to this timeless subject, but far too difficult for any but the best trained readers. For college and larger public libraries." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 72:1541 N 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad

New Statesman & Nation 35:418 My 22 '48 1000w

"His book, as books on ethics go, is brief, and Dr. Ewing does not attempt to survey the entire field. What he aims at is to traverse the position of the schools known as the subjectivists and the naturalists, whose frames of reference are empirical science and psychology. He does not blink the logical causes for the prevalence of their views." H. J. Forman

N Y Times p23 Ja 4 '48 550w

"We do not think that Dr. Ewing's definition is altogether satisfactory. Nevertheless, his book on the whole is an admirable example of that sober and dispassionate analysis of the facts of human experience which has been the best feature of modern English philosophy—best not only in the sense of deserving a pro-attitude of approval and imitation but also in the sense of fulfilling the potentialities of the philosopher and of his readers."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p321 Je 5 '48 950w

EWING, CORTEZ ARTHUR MILTON. Congressional elections, 1896-1944; the sectional basis of political democracy in the House of representatives. 123p $2 Univ. of Okla. press

328.73 U.S. Congress. House of representatives 47-31040

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

Reviewed by W. R. West

Ann Am Acad 256:191 Mr '48 380w

"The book's brevity belies the immense amount of work that such a study must have involved. . . All in all, Congressional Elections constitutes a fair demonstration of the significance of statistical analysis in the study of politics." J. A. Vieg

J Pol Econ 56:274 Je '48 750w

Reviewed by M. V. Badger

Social Studies 39:92 F '48 220w

"Although at points the discussion lacks incisiveness and sense of direction, and indulges in sweeping statements, the book contains material of interest and value to both the political practitioner and the academician."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:372 D '47 300w

EXTON, WILLIAM. Audiovisual aids to instruction. 344p il $4 McGraw

371.335 Visual instruction 48-5739

Reports on the audio-visual techniques developed in the Armed Forces' emergency training program during the war, and the applications to civilian education. Index.

Booklist 44:227 Mr 1 '48

"This book is a challenge to the instructional staffs in institutions of higher learning to put aside their research, forthcoming book or bridge game, to study these new effective methods of teaching to try to adapt them to their own needs." K. A. Kobe

+ Chem Eng 55:311 My '48 600w

"Fourteen experts have contributed articles on various aspects of the subject. A feature of the book is the wealth of outstanding illustrations, hitherto restricted to military personnel."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:45 S 11 '48 100w

"As a repository of photographic evidence of wartime use of visual materials, Capt. Exton's volume is a welcome addition to the literature on audio-visual education." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 67:324 Ap 24 '48 220w

"The book has value not only as a history of a wartime activity, but also as a critique of methods and materials valuable in peacetime training."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:169 Je '48 220w

F

FABRICANT, NOAH DANIEL, and WERNER, HEINZ, eds. Caravan of music stories, by the world's great authors; introd. by Karl Krueger. 312p $3.50 Fell

Short stories—Collections 48-5256

Twenty-six stories about music, musicians and musical instruments. Partial contents: The infant prodigy, by Thomas Mann; A humoresque in ham, by Ben Hecht; Putzi, by Ludwig Bemelmans; Lesson in music, by Marianne Hauser; Guitar, by Langston Hughes; Rothschild's fiddle, by Anton Chekhov; A mother, by James Joyce; Keeley street blues, by Dorothy Baker; The fiddle, by Sholom Aleichem; The singing lesson, by Katherine Mansfield; The concert, by Bruno Frank; The fiddler of the reels, by Thomas Hardy.

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted

Chicago Sun p7X F 15 '48 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '48

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 73:476 Mr 15 '48 60w

"A Caravan of Music Stories, from the editors who earlier gave us A Treasury of Doctor Stories, is pleasant enough as a mélange, but it does little to demonstrate that music may be a theme conducive to greatness in the short story. This seems to be the result not of the narrow range of material available but of the editors' wish to provide a well-varied bill of fare." Bernard Stambler

Music Lib Assn Notes 5:241 Mr '48 480w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Je 6 '48 150w

Wis Lib Bul 44:149 S '48

FAIRBANK, JOHN KING. The United States and China. (Am. foreign policy lib) 384p maps $3.75 Harvard univ. press

951 China. U.S.—Relations (general) with China 48-7351

"John King Fairbank went to China in 1932 after studying at the University of Wisconsin, Harvard and Oxford; he came back an authority on western imperialisms and their impact on Oriental societies. He taught Chinese history at Harvard, where he set up one of the most comprehensive China programs in our country." (N Y Times) His study explains the China of today and the possibilities of its future in terms of its history, and takes into consideration all the facets of the Chinese situation from its cultural background to Chinese communism. Bibliography. Index.

"The reviewer knows of no other brief book which surveys the broad range of Chinese history so well, while linking the past closely with the present. Many of the sections . . . cover their historical or recent subject matter much better than do available texts on the Far East. On the other hand, as the author himself points out, 'every part of this book will be subject to revision as our study and understanding of Chinese society continue to develop.' Apart from this unavoidable limitation, there are a number of points of interpretation and emphasis which the reviewer is inclined to question." L. K. Rosinger

+ — Am Hist R 54:364 Ja '49 550w

Reviewed by P. H. Taylor

Am Pol Sci R 42:1234 D '48 600w

Reviewed by A. W. Burks

Ann Am Acad 260:213 N '48 600w

Atlantic 182:106 S '48 210w

Booklist 45:11 S 1 '48

"This book does not have all the answers, but it can save politicians—and others—from talking a vast deal of nonsense." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Jl 17 '48 600w

Current Hist 15:225 O '48 60w

"Thorough and competent."

+ Kirkus 16:228 My 1 '48 170w

"Many will quarrel with [Dr. Fairbank] for his adverse criticism of Chiang Kai-shek's regime. Many will object to his estimate of total benefits of the Chinese Communist activities. But this slant is needed, and John King Fairbank as an honest scholar, is one of the best equipped men to provide it. Book is highly recommended to the scholars, less modern in their thinking, to students and to laymen for its value in giving perspective to past researches, broadness of viewpoint and in presenting facts which must be understood in the formulation of our policy toward China." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 73:1022 Jl '48 280w

Reviewed by Owen Lattimore

Nation 167:104 Jl 24 '48 1000w

"Under the editorship of Sumner Welles, the American Foreign Policy Library is rapidly acquiring a reputation for its cool-headed, scholarly and intelligently liberal studies of the contemporary world and our relationship to it. The latest volume in the series, John King Fairbank's The United States and China, is a distinguished addition. It is also one of the most brilliant and informative analyses of Chinese society, culture and politics, and America's concern with them, that has been written anywhere. . . He shows almost every quality of mind, knowledge and sympathy important for his work, but he lacks showmanship. As a result, his book has few graces of style and color and is at times hard going for the reader not already versed in Far Eastern matters. It is a pity, because the United States and China, if slightly more popular in treatment, could play a great part in liberating prejudiced and uninformed American thinking about the unhappy Chinese republic." Richard Watts

+ — New Repub 119:24 Jl 12 '48 1550w

"Fairbank has suffered as well as profited from being a professor, a bureaucrat, and a journalist. His book reveals weaknesses under all three headings. But its central ideas are important and will be ignored by American policy makers only at the public peril. . . He assigns, in American policy in China, a remarkable degree of influence to 'our egalitarian concern for the underdog,' a proposition that might give Americans a nice, warm feeling about themselves but which is scarcely supported even by the facts that Fairbank himself adduces about the reality of America's role in Chinese history in the past eight or ten decades. But on the other hand, Fairbank's chapters on the present situation of Chiang Kai-shek's regime, on the prospects of Chinese liberalism, on problems of political and economic reconstruction, are filled with some extremely cogent and useful observations." H. R. Isaacs

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 11 '48 1500w

"Only a foolish man or a remarkably learned one will write a book about China for the next few years. After 'The United States and China,' there's not much left to say. I can't remember another volume which holds, packed so tightly, as much scholarly information about a single subject." Annalee Jacoby

+ N Y Times p1 Jl 11 '48 1500w

New Yorker 24:61 Jl 31 '48 140w

Reviewed by Charles Webster

Pacific Affairs 21:416 D '48 1350w

"This book will assist the American public—and American policy makers, if they will read it—to understand the realities of our contest with communism for the favor of the Chinese people." C. M. Wilbur

+ Pol Sci Q 63:619 D '48 650w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 11 '48 950w

"Those who read 'The United States and China' must forego the smooth journalistic appeal of 'Thunder Out of China' by Theodore H. White and Annalee Jacoby or Harrison Foreman's 'Report from Red China.' Mr. Fairbank's readers will tend to be those who have previously turned to such authoritative texts as Lawrence K. Rosinger's 'China's Crisis.' But he will ultimately reach far beyond his immediate readership. Lecturers on the Far East for the next ten years will be garnering his tersest phrases." Gordden Link

+ Sat R of Lit 31:12 Jl 10 '48 700w

Wis Lib Bul 44:211 D '48

FAIRCHILD, HENRY PRATT. Race and nationality as factors in American life. 216p $3 Ronald

572 U.S.—Race question. U.S.—Nationality 48-33

A study of class discriminations in a democratic society. It is the author's intention to "make it clear that on the basis of a genuinely scientific analysis, and a clear differentiation in the nature of many of the problems, it is feasible to work out solutions which are impossible under conditions of mere undiscriminating good-will." (Pref) The author is professor emeritus of sociology at New York University. Index.

"This is a deceptive volume. It commences innocuously in the vein of a popularization of the physical and social anthropological theories of race and ethnic groups. The first warning sign is the insistence that race-nationality antipathies are basically reactions to the different. . . Dr Fairchild could have made an important contribution by replacing much of the emotional bias underlying liberal racial thought with a firm scientific foundation. But instead he has torn away the sound with the unsound and added confusion to an already confused subject." R. H. Turner

Am J Soc 54:95 Jl '48 1000w

Reviewed by H. L. Andrews

Am Soc R 13:235 Ap '48 800w

Reviewed by F. H. Hankins

Ann Am Acad 256:248 Mr '48 600w

Foreign Affairs 26:739 Jl '48 30w

"Much profit may be derived by reading Professor Fairchild's warnings against loose thinking about race relations, and especially his restatement of the well-known fact that prejudice is not identical with antipathy, and

FAIRCHILD, H. P.—Continued
that some antipathies rest not upon judgments without experience but judgment and feelings after experience... Professor Fairchild has nowhere demonstrated that the United States has been weakened either in its internal unity or in its external position in the world by having played the historic role of a society and a nation composed of many heterogeneous elements. On the other hand, there is an impressive body of evidence to show that the United States derives its fundamental strength and its democratic and free institutions in large measure from the fact that it has been a multi-cultural and multi-racial nation... That Professor Fairchild is entitled to his opinions on these and all other questions goes without saying. It should be understood, however, that despite his repeated statements to the contrary, his conclusions and suggestions as to national policy rest not upon scientific demonstration but upon personal prejudices and predilections." Louis Wirth

N Y Times p6 Ja 18 '48 1250w

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz
Sat R of Lit 31:22 F 28 '48 1200w

School & Society 66:447 D 6 '47 20w

"The author's reputation as an eminent sociologist, teacher, and liberal should insure a wide reading for this essay. It is intended for the general public and the style is clear, interesting, and nontechnical. The book deals mainly with conditions in the United States, but the principles have a much wider application." Read Bain

+ Survey G 37:168 Mr '48 550w

FAIRFAX, VIRGINIA, and BUIE, HALLIE. Ke Sooni; il. by Janet Smalley; with decorations by Jeanne McLavy. 127p $1.50; pa $1 Friendship press

Children in Korea 48-5411

Ke Sooni was a happy little girl, enjoying all the Korean games and festivals. She was fearful only when her ancestor-worshipping grandmother threatened to make her leave the Christian school. However two birthday gifts, made at school, proved to grandmother that the American mission was doing Ke Sooni good.

"Although written from the missionary point of view and of no real literary merit, this simple story of the everyday affairs of a little Korean girl at home, at a mission school, and at church reveals a good deal about the customs of the people of Korea before the war."

Booklist 44:288 Ap 15 '48

"The background is authentic, for Hallie Buie taught in Korea for many years. A scarcity of this kind of material makes this little book additionally acceptable. Recommended for ages 8-10." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 73:399 Mr 1 '48 50w

FAIRLEY, BARKER. Study of Goethe. 280p $4.25 Oxford

B or 92 Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von [48-13433]

"Goethe, the prince of Erlebnisdichter, of writers of their own experience, once said that he did not so much write what he had experienced as that he experienced what he would write. In this study Barker Fairley, Professor of German at the University of Toronto, tries to explain both the experience and the works as aspects of the developments of Goethe's personality, his Inner Life." N Y Times

"This is one of the best books I have ever read, and I do not expect very often to read one as good." Kathleen Coburn

+ Canadian Forum 28:20 Ap '48 1200w

"Mr. Barker Fairley, already known for his excellent Goethe as Revealed in His Poetry, has returned to the charge, after an interval of fifteen years, with a much more searching essay in which he is clear that those who concentrate on Goethe's universality caused him to disappear altogether. In order to avoid this trap, he has taken the outer facts of Goethe's life for granted and has followed the inner history of his mind with a perception, a judicious sympathy and a discrimination which will command admiration even where they do not compel assent." Edward Sackville West

+ New Statesman & Nation 35:53 Ja 17 '48 2150w

"Fairley could, I think, have probed deeper if he had been more careful in handling the evidence... He makes little effort to treat fantasy and early memory as a special kind of evidence with its own rules. He rather astoundingly skips over the entire childhood, and is what can only be called squeamish about sexual implications. The weakest part of the picture is the curious history of Goethe's political life and social thought... Yet in spite of these defects and the author's avoidance of all material causes in favor of formal causes, this book is a serviceable one... It is only at the beginning and the end that his attitude seems to me inappropriate." Paul Goodman

+ — N Y Times p4 Ja 18 '48 700w

School & Society 67:63 Ja 24 '48 20w

Reviewed by Goronwy Rees
Spec 179:532 O 24 '47 1000w

FARBER, MILTON. Blackstone and White rock. 213p $2.75 Dutton

B or 92 Lawyers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-8141

"Reminiscences of an attorney. Mr. Farber recalls the lawyers and litigants in the Ohio village where he spent his youth and some of the clients he has served in his own career; these have included an uncommonly large number of 'morons, screwballs, intellectual imposters.' Author's anecdotes of their behavior, and his strictures on politicians and the legal profession generally have the energy, the moral tone, and the command of invective associated with the American Mercury under Mencken." Library J

Kirkus 16:331 Jl 1 '48 120w

"For admirers of the H. Allen Smith school of humor, and other readers with robust tastes." H. W. Hart

Library J 73:1022 Jl '48 100w

"Mr. Farber's humor is somewhat heavy-handed, but there is real vigor in the impeachment."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 S 19 '48 130w

Springf'd Republican p8B O 10 '48 290w

FARLEY, JAMES ALOYSIUS. Jim Farley's story, the Roosevelt years. (Whittlesey house publication) 388p il $3.50 McGraw

B or 92 U. S.—Politics and government—20th century. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 48-946

A continuation of Mr Farley's autobiography begun in Behind the Ballots (Book Review Digest 1938). This volume is mainly about his association with Franklin Roosevelt, and about the break between the two men. As it closes with the death of President Roosevelt it makes an unofficial history of his years in office. Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 181:114 Ap '48 750w

Booklist 44:246 Mr 15 '48

Reviewed by P. A. Preston
Canadian Hist R 29:417 D '48 360w

Reviewed by M. P. Akers
Chicago Sun Mr 7 '48 700w

Reviewed by George Streator
Commonweal 47:602 Mr 26 '48 600w

Current Hist 14:348 Je '48 50w

Kirkus 16:69 F 1 '48 210w

"Very readable and enlightening; good tonic for the pessimistic; authentic record of changes in standards of conduct. Farley believes that the United States of America will come through every crisis safely, that the worst has never happened and can never happen." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 73:393 Mr 1 '48 140w

Reviewed by Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
Nation 166:399 Ap 10 '48 1150w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
New Repub 118:21 Mr 15 '48 1550w

"This narrative of the original politician-in-chief of the New Deal is a document that should have the careful attention of all students of public affairs, of historians, of diplomatists and especially of psychologists. In fact, almost any American can read it with profit except an American politician. It has nothing to teach him. . . Jim Farley is a man of many admirable traits, truthful, honest, industrious and kindly. He has richly earned his countless friends. It is impossible to dismiss such a man as merely a poor sport, embittered because his personal ambition was defeated. . . The difficulty is that he belongs to the breed of politicians, a breed useful and perhaps indispensable in times when things are fairly serene, but one that is wholly out of place when the situation grows desperate." G. W. Johnson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Mr 7 '48 1450w

"In view of Mr. Farley's deserved reputation for truthfulness, few will dispute his assertions of fact—particularly as it is known that his reports of conversations with Mr. Roosevelt (and other leading members of the Democratic party) were written from memoranda made at the time. With his deductions there undoubtedly will be many readers who will disagree." J. A. Hagerty
+ — N Y Times p3 Mr 7 '48 1350w

"It is the journal of a disappointed man who naïvely shows his wounds and comes near to whimpering on occasion. Much of what Mr. Farley has to say on the mechanics of politics is interesting, if not very lively, but the book is too often marred by a rather unattractive disingenuousness."
— + New Yorker 24:99 Mr 6 '48 100w

"Intimate glimpses of the President this time do not make up a flattering portrait, but neither are they quite convincing because so many of the direct quotations do not ring true. A task of historians of Roosevelt will be to place accounts of private conversations with him published by Farley and many another memoir-writer beside the notes they actually made at the time to see whether so many of the President's friends and his son Elliott were as skilled as court stenographers. More valuable than the material on Roosevelt is Farley's revelation of his own character and part in great affairs." Basil Rauch
+ — Pol Sci Q 63:478 S '48 450w

Reviewed by William Coblentz
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 14 '48 1000w

Reviewed by R. S. Allen
— Sat R of Lit 31:23 Mr 13 '48 1650w

Springf'd Republican p10B Mr 7 '48 900w

"The author has entirely failed to perceive the difference between the Farley political code of party regularity and the Roosevelt codes of values and policies. Mr. Farley's estimates and interpretations of the President's motives, therefore, are open to question, although his record of the facts may be accepted as accurate. Scattered throughout the text are stories of Mrs. Roosevelt, the President's official family, political conventions, and campaigns, which will be revealing to the political scientist and to the historian, and will add to the interest of the general reader as well."
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:152 Je '48 320w

Wis Lib Bul 44:103 My '48

FARLEY, WALTER. Island stallion; il. by Keith Ward. 247p $2 Random house

48-8397

Story of a boy's longing for a horse, and his exciting adventures on a little-known Caribbean island where he finally captures a beautiful red stallion.

"The Farley magic takes over on page one and keeps everyone as alive as a high tension wire far past page 247. The book is dedicated to 'all boys and girls who love horses but never have had one of their own.'" M. B. King
+ Chicago Sun O 9 '48 130w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:44 Ja '49 110w

Kirkus 16:365 Ag 1 '48 110w

Reviewed by J. M. Smith
Library J 73:1675 N 15 '48 70w

"The author's sure understanding of a boy's yearning for a horse comes right up from the pages." M. C. Scoggin
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 24 '48 200w

Reviewed by Dorothy Hamilton
San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 14 '48 270w

"A story like this is necessarily improbable. Parts of this one—for example the derrick that worked perfectly after standing idle for three hundred years—are fantastic; but the story sweeps along so rapidly that young people will not stop to question its plausibility. There are hours of good entertainment here. Readers will probably wait eagerly for the sequel." M. P. A.
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:40 N 13 '48 200w

FARMER, HERBERT HENRY. God and men. 203p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

230 Christianity. God 48-2001

Based on the Lyman Beecher lectures on preaching given at Yale University. The theme is that man is distinctively a person in a world of personal relationships, and emphasizes "the actual business of being a Christian in this tragic modern world." The author is a minister of the Presbyterian church of England, and Barbour professor of systematic theology in Westminster college, Cambridge university. Index.

Booklist 44:306 My 15 '48

"The style of the book is nontechnical and easy for the untrained reader. The tone is that of a moderate liberalism which avoids equally the extremes of neoörthodoxy and of naturalism. The outstanding merit of the thought is its emphasis throughout on personalism. . . God and Men is a somewhat irritating combination of light and darkness. It would be a calamity for any reader of a Religious Book of the Month to take Farmer's thought as the best that can be said for faith. Yet the book makes a real contribution by exposing the inadequacies of current fads, both secularist and neoörthodox, by building on the basic fact of personality, and by its simple honesty." E. S. Brightman
+ — Crozer Q 25:158 Ap '48 1450w

FARNAM, HELEN, and WHEELER, BLANCHE. Let's make a puppet! (Itasca Press publication) 31p $1 Webb

791.5 Marionettes 48-5165

"'Cherry'—the Clown—whose construction and manipulation are carefully presented in this book, creates hearty enthusiasm for puppetry in the grades and is used to illustrate a basic construction plan from which a variety of characters will emerge. A short chapter on stages and plays for the 'little people' is included." School Arts

Booklist 44:221 F 15 '48

School Arts 47:11a Je '48 50w

FARNOL, JEFFERY. Most sacred of all [Eng title: My lord of Wrybourne]. 280p $3 McBride

48-8471

Japhet Scrope, Earl of Wrybourne-Feveril, known to his former seafaring friends as Sam, had hardly settled down on his English country estate with his wife and small son when trouble began. His sworn enemy, Sir Robert Chalmers, tried to break up Sam's happy marriage, and his little son was kidnapped. The novel describes Sam's brave fight to secure his home and happiness.

FARNOL, JEFFERY—Continued

Sat R of Lit 31:32 N 27 '48 150w

Springf'd Republican p8B O 10 '48 150w

FARRAR, HELEN. Murder goes to school. 205p $1.98 Ziff-Davis 48-681

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun F 27 '48 30w

Kirkus 15:684 D 15 '47 80w

"Erickson does the best he can, but the case is so cluttered up with red herrings of varying degrees of redolence that his progress is exceedingly slow. He is assisted to some extent by Miss Sherry Cornell, teacher of languages, who is quite the nicest person in the book. This is not merely our opinion. Erickson thinks so as well." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p26 Ja 18 '48 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 15 '48 150w

"Trials and tribulations of young schoolmarms understandingly portrayed, also those of pupils. Detecting is competent, and romantic side pleasantly handled."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 Ja 31 '48 40w

FARREN, JULIAN. Train from Pittsburgh. 248p $2.75 Knopf 48-470

"Actions and reveries of an advertising man during a critical weekend (lost, finally, with the aid of enough alcohol), when he must decide between his unfaithful wife and an importunate mistress, and must defy his anti-Semitic employer on behalf of a Jewish friend." Library J

"Even the end leaves both Tom and the reader with a bit of hangover. But Julian Farren can write; he's modern and glib and too facile, but he may grow up."
+ — Kirkus 16:3 Ja 1 '48 210w

"In this first novel, Mr. Farren seems to weight the scales somewhat too heavily against his hero; but his account of the tensions which produce a crack-up is probing and relentless." H. W. Hart
+ — Library J 73:336 F 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 F 22 '48 650w

Reviewed by James MacBride
N Y Times p16 Mr 14 '48 340w

"An excellent piece of work, done with incisiveness and skill."
+ New Yorker 24:82 F 28 '48 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 4 '48 850w

"Written with imagination, perception, and eloquence, 'The Train From Pittsburgh' might have become an affecting document of our times. Lacking them, it is little more than a depressing case history of a man's disintegration." Lee Rogow
Sat R of Lit 31:16 Mr 6 '48 600w

FARREN, ROBERT (ROIBEARD O'FARACHAIN). Course of Irish verse in English. 171p $2.50 Sheed
821.09 Irish poetry—History and criticism
47-11656

"Mr. Farren surveys the poetry of the English-writing Irishmen who took over after the Gaelic order disintegrated. He traces the growth of their Irishness from eighteenth-century beginnings in English translations from the Gaelic and the English verse of anonymous hedge-schoolmasters. As he carries his subject on up to Colum, Stephens, F. R. Higgins, Clarke, and the other Irish poets of today, he treats not only the poets and translators who contributed to the development of Ireland's literary separatism, but those who should have and failed to. He lays emphasis on the phenomenal originality and metrical virtuosity of Mangan and the 'total Irishness' of Higgins and Clarke." (Sat R of Lit) Short bibliography

"The writer of this book is one of those scholars whose familiarity with his subject comes from devotedness to it: such scholars when they are competent as this scholar is have an approach and a style that are truly ingratiating. . . This book, then, is a piece of scholarship informed by rare devotedness." Padraic Colum
+ Cath World 167:280 Je '48 600w

"This is a delightful book, informative, brightly written. . . Both the creative student of metrics and the lover of poetry for its own sake will find pleasure and profit in the passages he quotes from, for instance, Mangan and Larminie; one is led to regret one's ignorance of these poets and to make their better acquaintance." Rolfe Humphries
+ Nation 166:24 Ja 3 '48 250w

"This little book, conceived and written as a mere appendix or afterthought to a larger—as yet unpublished—study of the translators from Gaelic poetry into English, has the faults of its origin. Hastily written and loosely organized, it cries out for a complete rewriting; the essential material is there, however, in the numerous poems quoted and the many perceptive comments made about them. Mr. Farren's book on the translators is one to look forward to." Vivian Mercier
N Y Times p6 Jl 4 '48 550w

"'The Course of Irish Verse' is a key piece of literary criticism badly in need of an index. The author quotes generously and comments brilliantly, if not always temperately. In his Swiftian approach there is racial psychoanalysis. Some may find this Irishman unreasonable, but few unreadable. Mr. Farren's poets stand or fall on literary nativeness. He is pretty hard on the 'fine fellows' and 'grandees' who left Ireland's pearly half-lights for 'the false Italianate sunshine of English poetry.'" A. F. Wolfe
Sat R of Lit 31:26 Mr 20 '48 550w

FARREN, ROBERT (ROIBEARD O'FARACHAIN). How to enjoy poetry. 288p $3 Sheed
808.1 Poetry
48-3850

An Irish poet here presents in informal fashion a series of chapters on the appreciation of poetry, contending that almost anyone can enjoy poetry if he sets about it in the right way. Each chapter is in two parts; the first expounding some truth about poetry, with illustrations; the second made up of poems in which the truth thus expounded is also manifested.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun Je 28 '48 180w

"Robert Farren's approach to poetry is the evangelical one. He brings glad tidings for those who may not have heard them before. He is also a tempter. The logical thing would be to call his book delightful if you like your poetry served up as a box of 'lucent syrups, tinct with cinnamon,' and if you prefer to read poems that are clear, sweet, unforgettable, quaint, charming, innocent, passionate, thrilling, etc. If on the other hand, you prefer poems to stand on their own grounds and be discovered in their own terms, this book is not for you. Robert Farren applies so many romantic adjectives to the poems he discusses that they lose their identity. They all cohere into one sticky mass. He has a love of poetry, it seems to me, which passeth all understanding of it." John Hay
Commonweal 48:432 Ag 13 '48 320w

"Enthusiasm is a personal quality. Teachers of poetry may be able to derive some useful ideas from Mr. Farren, but they should not rely on his book to do their work for them. If enthusiasm for poetry is to be encouraged, then it is best done by the individual teachers personally." Hugh Gibb
N Y Times p18 Ag 22 '48 320w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts
Sat R of Lit 31:15 Jl 31 '48 800w

FARRINGTON, SELWYN KIP. Ships of the U.S. merchant marine; with an introd. by Chester W. Nimitz; il. by Jack Coggins. 93p $3.75 Dutton
387.5 Merchant marine—U.S. Ships 47-12469

Factual information about twenty-one American shipping lines. Includes history, tonnage, routes, passenger and cargo service facts, and pictures in color, of individual ships.

Current Hist 14:174 Mr '48 30w

"Recommended for men and boys, and women, too." G. E. Cartmell
+ Library J 73:50 Ja 1 '48 40w

FAST, HOWARD MELVIN. My glorious brothers. 280p $2.75 Little Judas Maccabeus—Fiction 48-8762

This novel about the freeing of Israel from the Syrian-Greek overlords, a hundred years before the birth of Christ, is told by Simon ben Mattathias, oldest of the five Maccabeean brothers.

Booklist 45:88 N 1 '48

"A book that can be read with equal fascination by children and adults." Nelson Algre
+ Chicago Sun p9X N 28 '48 270w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 25:64 Ja '49 90w

"It is an absorbing story. . . A book that won't sell itself, but that deserves to be widely read."
+ Kirkus 16:448 S 1 '48 210w

"A different Howard Fast from the one we have known. A stylistic triumph and an art work of considerable proportions. Recommended for most collections as of permanent worth." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:1384 O 1 '48 100w

"Any one who is incited by the present novel to read its sources in the Apocrypha and Josephus will gain a perspective which transcends the limitations of historical fiction; he will learn, to Mr. Fast's content, that the fight for freedom is always the same. . . The price, however, which Mr. Fast pays for sticking to simplicity may be too great for some readers. The muting of the religious motive is not merely poor history; it impoverishes the personality of the heroes and the nature of the revolt." Marvin Lowenthal
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 O 10 '48 1800w

"Mr. Fast has a subject and cause near to his heart, and he has told it with the narrative skill and emotional power that made such earlier works as 'Conceived in Liberty' and 'The Last Frontier' superior examples of the story-teller's art. Indeed, this reader found 'My Glorious Brothers' an absorbing and moving chronicle throughout; with 'The Last Frontier' it should rank with his finest work." Thomas Lask
+ N Y Times p4 O 10 '48 850w

New Yorker 24:129 O 9 '48 80w

"The pattern of actions tends to repeat itself. The style sometimes seems falsely rhapsodic and strained, even though this is involved in the characterization of the narrator. There is an unfortunate note of false piety throughout. But late in the book occurs a digression called 'The Report of the Legate Lentulus Silanus' to the Roman Senate on what manner of people the Jews are. This is positively brilliant and well worth the price of the book." Edmund Fuller
— + Sat R of Lit 31:14 O 23 '48 650w

Springf'd Republican p7B N 7 '48 210w

Wis Lib Bul 44:213 D '48

FAULKNER, WILLIAM. Intruder in the dust. 247p $3 Random house
48-8519

"First novel in eight years by author of The Sound and the Fury. A Negro is held in a Mississippi jail, charged with murder of a white man; while a mob assembles, evidence proving his innocence is gathered by two 16-year-old boys, one white and one Negro, and their assistant, an elderly spinster of aristocratic family. Faulkner presents this chivalrous exploit as a parable for the South and for hostile 'outlanders.'" Library J

"Intruder in the Dust is more dramatically constructed than its predecessors and the mood is an unusual one for Faulkner. Hate, violence, and degradation are in the background. The Negro is an eloquent characterization, a figure of immense dignity. The whites on whom the story centers are people of good will. . . Unfortunately, Faulkner is altogether too mysterious in his treatment." Edward Weeks
+ — Atlantic 182:108 N '48 850w

Booklist 45:120 D 1 '48

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Chicago Sun p8X S 26 '48 800w

"'Intruder in the Dust' is a powerful and fascinating story, richly creating place, character, and race." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '48 1050w

"Faulkner's Mississippi and its inhabitants seem to have exchanged some of their nightmare quality for a quality of mercy, Southern style."
Kirkus 16:374 Ag 1 '48 270w

"Read as a statement of Faulkner's beliefs, or as another vivid episode in his legend of Yoknapatawpha County, Mississippi, or as the work of a novelist of recognized virtuosity, this is an important book in a major literary career." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 73:1089 Ag '48 130w

Reviewed by Paolo Milano
Nation 167:496 O 30 '48 1500w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 119:21 O 18 '48 1650w

"If the book is not the most sensational of William Faulkner's novels, it is one of the best of his shorter books." Horace Gregory
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 26 '48 1750w

"Being less than 'The Sound and the Fury,' but being more, far more, than any other recent novel I know by an American author, 'Intruder in the Dust' has in it two elements that strike me as being different from—and as gains over—Faulkner's earlier books. One is its tighter construction; the other is its political-social content." Harvey Breit
+ N Y Times p4 S 26 '48 2000w

"The novel has the suspense and excitement that Faulkner can nearly always create and the disturbing emotional power that he can generate at his best. . . It ought to be said that, from the point of view of the writing, this is one of the more snarled-up of Faulkner's books. . . His energy, his image-making genius get him where he wants to go about seventy per cent of the time, but when he misses it, he lands in a mess." Edmund Wilson
+ — New Yorker 24:120 O 23 '48 3000w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 10 '48 700w

"'Intruder in the Dust' is really a Gothic romance in the best Southern style with stage props and literary puppets instead of people and events, and the language, which conceals so much else, fails to conceal this. It is still superior to the average novel but it is far inferior to the work of Faulkner at his best. One might say that even Jefferson, Miss., the center of Faulkner's Deep Southern cosmos, has come under the influence of Hollywood, while the more explicit philosophy of the novel also reflects a distorted but none the less sentimental and romanticized expression of a familiar Southern chauvinism." Maxwell Geismar
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:8 S 25 '48 850w

"Intruder in the Dust makes the reader work, it is not easy reading. But the reward is worth the trouble. It can be read as a detective story, a humorous idyl (a kind of second cousin to Huckleberry Finn), an outraged, descriptive exhortation to Southern society, a parable of modern life. It is also a triumphant work of art."

FAULKNER, WILLIAM—Continued

+ Time 52:108 O 4 '48 1100w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 38:382 winter '49 110w

FAURE, RAOUL COHEN. Lady Godiva and Master Tom; with drawings by Aurelius G. Battaglia. 243p $3 Harper
48-5164

A new version of the legend of the Lady Godiva. In it the real reasons for the lady's ride thru Coventry, clad only in her long beautiful hair, were far from saintly. She is pictured as a woman driven by a force she did not understand to drive her husband, whom she hated, to despair, and death.

"To my mind, Lady Godiva and Master Tom is a book that has something to say, says it with charm, and is fun to read." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 181:109 Mr '48 300w

Kirkus 15:629 N 15 '47 130w

"Mr. Faure's analyses of her nature and of the character of the tailor who observes her (inadvertantly, in this account) are highly ingenious and he relates the somber drama in which they become involved with skill and intensity." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 73:39 Ja 1 '48 90w

"Raoul C. Faure continues in his third novel to fulfill the high promise he showed in 'The Spear in the Sand,' his first book. His rich, evocative style is under skilled discipline in this delightful exercise in human caprice. The precision with which he reports the cycle of Godiva's thoughts during the epic journey . . . the delusions and dreams and confusion of lust and megalomania which he allows to haunt and harry her, the psychoanalyst he casually projects into the Dark Ages in the form of Ezra, a wise and learned Jewish counselor, are the marks of a major writer composing in a minor key." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 25 '48 500w

"In 'Spear in the Sand' Faure's eroticism was blended with a marvelously imagined tropic nature which could absorb and transmute it. . . In 'Lady Godiva and Master Tom,' it has only the medievalism to offset it—a well-imagined medievalism architecturally, but inhabited by characters far too psychologically modern for their own or the reader's good." R. G. Davis
N Y Times p12 F 1 '48 500w

New Yorker 23:66 Ja 31 '48 60w

"With perhaps the single exception of the author's use of the term 'compensation,' this might, to be sure, have been uttered a thousand years ago—as far as language goes. But even the wise Ezra—could he have thought like this? Maybe, but it seems to me only maybe. 'Lady Godiva and Master Tom' is nevertheless a remarkable tour de force, and worth the reading. Mr. Faure, as always, writes tremendously well." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 21 '48 850w

"This is a bold and curious undertaking; and the fact that the author makes two of his protagonists . . . discuss in the closing pages the working of legend and myth makes it no less curious, if less bold. Add to this Mr. Faure's evident preoccupation with psychoanalysis and his well-nigh dislike of the Saxon lady, and you may have an inkling of how puzzling a book has come from the pen of this rightly admired Frenchman whose beautiful, urbane English has very few equals among writers born to this language." Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 31:14 Ja 31 '48 600w

"The book is entertaining, although by no means as 'witty and irreverent' as the jacket promises." W. H. H.
Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 25 '48 240w

FAVRE, LUCIENNE. Temptations of Mourad; tr. from the French by Willard R. Trask. 314p $3 Morrow
47-12532

Character study of a studious young Moslem who could not understand the love of money shown by his Christian friends. Four women played a part in his life, but three of them left the most definite impressions. They were Zina, the love of his youth, whom he lost; Yamina whom he married first, but who drove him to despair; and Zakia, who became his second wife. The scene is Algiers.

Reviewed by Jex Martin
Chicago Sun p8X F 15 '48 220w

+ Kirkus 15:606 N 1 '47 210w

"Altogether the narration of these Algerian nights' tales runs like a tune basically familiar but played on unfamiliar instruments so that it sounds fresh and strangely poignant. What became of the abandoned infant which Mourad found by the roadside and, especially, for what reason Mourad attended the Governor's garden party on the night of a certain brutal murder, is best revealed in Madame Favre's own striking manner, for she has caught an accent and an atmosphere that capture the imagination." Iris Barry
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 11 '48 500w

"Using what should be a valuable form for her purpose, the book purports to be a memoir; it is written with the loving attention to detail generally vouchsafed those who recall a cherished past. But the novel is, in fact, too detailed for either warmth or sympathy." Virginia Dale
N Y Times p31 F 29 '48 220w

"There are excellent qualities about this fresh and persuasive novel dealing with the life of an opportunistic Berber tribesman in Algiers. For one thing, the central character, Mourad, unlike most picaresque heroes, is a real person, and for another, the author's long familiarity with the intricacies and contradictions of the Arab world enables her to portray an exotic society without turning out merely a Baedeker of strange customs and manners."
+ New Yorker 23:82 Ja 10 '48 90w

"Lucienne Favre, a Frenchwoman who spent twenty years of her life in North Africa, tells Mourad's story with sympathy and understanding, and makes clear some of the problems inherent in the superimposition of a Westernized cultural framework upon centuries-old Moslem traditions. At the same time she has written a sort of informal guide book to Algiers. . . She writes with lucidity and with temperate understanding." Hollis Alpert
+ Sat R of Lit 31:16 Ja 10 '48 700w

FAWCUS, ARNOLD. Swing into skiing; il. by Tyler Micoleau [foreword by Charles N. Proctor]. 68p $3.50 Harcourt
796.93 Skis and ski running 47-11871

Instructions for both beginners and average skiers on the fundamentals of the swing technique. Illustrated with diagrams.

"Good explanations and clear illustrations but may not be needed in collections that have more comprehensive books on skiing."
Booklist 44:168 Ja 1 '48

Kirkus 15:643 N 15 '47 120w

"Excellent instruction, fine illustrative drawings. . . Recommended for all over 12 who are interested in skiing." G. E. Cartmell
+ Library J 72:1696 D 1 '47 20w

Reviewed by Frank Elkins
N Y Times p23 Ja 18 '48 180w

"Tyler Micoleau's fluent sketches greatly help the author in making some of his points clearer. A section of the book is devoted to a selection of proper equipment, which I am sure will be helpful to many a novice skier." Otto Lang
+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 F 7 '48 320w

Wis Lib Bul 44:38 F '48

FEARING, KENNETH. Stranger at Coney Island, and other poems. 41p $2 Harcourt 811 48-8380

Poems of city life. Some of the verses have appeared in the New Yorker, Poetry and Tomorrow.

"To Fearing's career, 'The Stranger at Coney Island' is anti-climactic. It reflects neither growth nor change. Desperately, before a fine poet runs himself into the ground, it calls for a shift of mood or method." Leo Kennedy
— Chicago Sun S 6 '48 400w

"Pictorial in quality rather than appealing to the ear."
Kirkus 16:502 S 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald
Library J 73:1277 S 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 167:557 N 13 '48 250w

"His style (it is a very good one, and by this time wholly his own) originated in Walt Whitman's long and casual line. But in that origin, or in the uses Fearing has made of it, there is occasion for regret. For the Fearing of 1948, more suave, more skillful, and certainly more sophisticated politically, is not the Fearing of 'Poems' (1935), angry, naive, and brashly Marxist, but capable, at least occasionally, of rising to the level of Whitman at his most inspired." Selden Rodman
+ — N Y Times p18 O 24 '48 360w

"Fearing is good at the game in this new book, but is the game worth the candle? The reason irregularity can be so attractive in poetry is its contrast with a background of some recurrent beat, scansion, and (often) rhyme-scheme. When the regular background does not exist at all, then the irregular foreground falls flat for lack of contrast and esthetic tension." Peter Viereck
Sat R of Lit 31:30 N 20 '48 500w

FEDDER, RUTH. Girl grows up; drawings by Roberta Paflin. new ed rev & enl (Whittlesey house publication) 271p $2.75; text ed $2.20 McGraw 136.7354 Adolescence. Girls 48-3733

Revised second edition of the author's book on fundamentals of behavior for teen-age girls. There are new illustrations and the bibliography has been brought up to date. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Booklist 45:17 S 1 '48

"It is recommended for its sound and practical advice to modern girls about understanding themselves and about their relationship to their families and friends." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:468 N '48 40w

"A sincere effort directed to girls themselves, trying to help them find meaning, usefulness, and happiness in their lives." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 73:1286 S 15 '48 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 14 '48 50w

School & Society 68:63 Jl 24 '48 10w

FEDERALIST. The enduring Federalist; ed. and analyzed by Charles A. Beard. 391p il $4 Doubleday
342.733 U.S. Constitution. Federal government 48-5091

An abridgement of the Federalist papers of Hamilton, Madison and John Jay. The editor has arranged the text of the papers into brief paragraphs and put them under topical headings of his own. There is also an analytical introduction by the editor. No index.

Booklist 44:211 F 15 '48

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 29 '48 600w

"Readers of Dr. Beard's newest book may wonder if Dr. Beard himself has not been overemphasized. 'The Enduring Federalist,' a selection from the Federalist papers preceded by a short essay, adds nothing to the reputation of the author of 'The Rise of American Civilization' and indeed might better have remained unpublished." Wayne Andrews
— Commonweal 47:451 F 13 '48 220w

Current Hist 14:174 Mr '48 70w

Kirkus 15:635 N 15 '47 250w

"An excellent companion volume to Carl Van Doren's The Great Rehearsal." J. H. Berthel
+ Library J 73:37 Ja 1 '48 100w

"One does not have to 'agree' with Beard to recognize in him the profoundest formulator of issues among living historians. Is the American system of federalism to be used as a model for a world union, he asks, or 'is it to perish from the earth, giving place to a centralized despotism or a new feudalism everywhere, even in the United States?' It is a pleasure and a challenge to reread The Federalist under the guidance of a mind thus ranging and firmly on guard against letting self-deception take the place of knowledge." Perry Miller
+ Nation 166:312 Mr 13 '48 240w

"In general Mr. Beard accepts Douglass Adair's conclusions regarding the authorship of the various essays, but in some disputed instances does not insist on the ascription, since so far as 'The Federalist' is concerned, individual authorship does not greatly matter." Carl Van Doren
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ja 11 '48 800w

"There are some signs of carelessness in the captions and in the publishers' blurb. The three authors are shown—Hamilton, Jay and Madison—but the names and the pictures are not in the same order (in one place), and the implication is that Jay did considerably more and Madison somewhat less than reality. There is no such confusion in Mr. Beard's mind, however, and some of the best comments in his introduction are on these men. . . When we add to this the fact that in their great work they touch on practically every problem or aspect of government which excites interest today, the argument that they should be read becomes overwhelming. Mr. Beard's sound and useful book with its admirable introduction is a good place to start." Dumas Malone
+ — N Y Times p5 F 22 '48 700w

"The result, because of skillful editing and notes that relate the various papers to events of the times, is a clear exposition of that philosophy."
+ New Yorker 23:85 Ja 24 '48 110w

Reviewed by Luther Nichols
San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 1 '48 320w

Reviewed by Douglass Adair
+ Sat R of Lit 31:22 Mr 6 '48 900w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Survey G 37:81 F '48 330w

Wis Lib Bul 44:36 F '48

FEDERALIST. The Federalist; or, The new Constitution, by Alexander Hamilton, James Madison and John Jay; ed, with an introd. and notes by Max Beloff. 484p $2.25 Macmillan
342.733 U.S. Constitution. Federal government

"The Federalist is the name given to a series of essays written and originally published in serial form in the New York press between October 1787 and August 1788 with a view to influencing votes in favour of the proposed new Constitution of the United States which had just emerged from the deliberations of the Federal Convention at Philadelphia." (Introd) This edition contains a sixty-page introduction, but no index.

"The introduction, of some sixty pages, though not without errors and disputable points, is well worth reading, particularly for its discussion of the political theory of The Federalist. . . This edition is not the one for which scholars have been waiting." William Anderson
Am Hist R 54:151 O '48 550w

FEDERALIST—Continued
Reviewed by D. W. Brogan
Spec 181:180 Ag 6 '48 900w
Times [London] Lit Sup p411 Jl 24 '48 600w

FEDOTOV, GEORGII PETROVICH, ed. Treasury of Russian spirituality. 501p il $6.50 Sheed
281.947 Saints. Religious literature—Collections 48-4585

"A selection from original sources, of Russian spirituality. . . The material is taken from the lives of saints, ascetical and mystical treatises, and spiritual autobiographies, embracing the centuries from the eleventh to the twentieth. All the authors selected have belonged to the Russian Orthodox Church and occupy, with one exception (Avvakum), an authoritative place in the sphere of spiritual guidance." (Pref) Short bibliography.

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 168:414 F '49 220w

"This is the first time that a survey of this sort has been made of Russian saintliness. It is almost as enjoyable reading as Norman Douglas's South Wind." W. P. Sears
+ Churchman 162:16 N 1 '48 230w

"This treasury of Professor Fedotov's is a gold mine indeed, and the liberal size of the extracts, and the admirable introductions before each, together with the illustrations, make this book a landmark in the history of spiritual literature. It is a necessary book for anyone seriously interested in techniques of prayer, as well as for anyone conscious of the richness of the Christian heritage, and wishful to explore it and to feast." Anne Fremantle
+ Commonweal 49:74 O 29 '48 1300w
Kirkus 16:597 N 15 '48 160w
Reviewed by Hans Kohn
N Y Times p6 S 19 '48 1500w

FEIBLEMAN, JAMES KERN. Long habit. 365p $3.50 Duell 48-9222

Tragic novel about a feud between the two leading families on Isle Chênière, near the Mississippi delta. Arthur Hoysradt, head of one of the families, had led a contemplative life until he went to war. During his absence his wife had an affair with the head of the rival family. Arthur's return touched off a long string of violence and a tropical storm wiped out nearly all the other principal characters.

"A philosophical and fairly skillful first novel."
+ Kirkus 16:452 S 1 '48 120w

"Perceptive, well written first novel but on the whole frank and distressing reading." H. G. Kelley
— + Library J 73:1510 O 15 '48 100w

"An arresting and entertaining book. If it is a failure as a novel, and that is not lightly to be assumed, it is a failure on the level of a work of art, which makes it more interesting than many a journalistic success. . . Action and motive and emotion are talked about beyond the point where many a reader is likely to yawn, but . . . it cannot be assumed that the author does not have his tongue in his cheek a good deal of the time. . . But Mr. Feibleman can create a memorable figure. Antisocrates, the attitudinizing beachcomber . . . is likely to shuffle right into a corner of your memory from which it will be difficult to dislodge him." Coleman Rosenberger
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 26 '48 650w

"There is, perhaps, nothing in this story to make one conclude that Mr. Feibleman may not one day write an interesting novel, but this certainly is not it." P. H. Myring
N Y Times p40 N 21 '48 110w

"Mr. Feibleman has a sharp sense of the dramatic unities, but, unfortunately, his protagonists never reach the stature of the crimes they commit, and the reader is likely to keep going more out of casual curiosity than out of any real interest in the characters' motivations or fate."
New Yorker 24:127 N 6 '48 190w
San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 28 '48 300w

"Feibleman's calm presentation, which underscores events by underplaying them, is nowhere better than in his portrayal of the storm that brings the book to its close. The author builds a semitropical hurricane to almost unbearable intensity. This skilful bit of writing, however, provided me my only quarrel with the book. After a substantial diet of tragedy growing out of well-motivated revenge, the final tragedy resulting from the storm seemed unnecessary and lacking in justification." James Nelson
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:16 N 27 '48 650w

FEIKEMA, FEIKE FREDERICK. Chokecherry tree. 270p $2.75 Doubleday 48-6300

Elof Lofblom, an Iowa farm boy is the central character. He is sent, against his will, to a dreary theological seminary, but does not make a success of it. He stumbles home to his father's store and gasoline station, after the death of his mother, and is met with stern orders to work and get no pay for it. Elof's sense of inferiority hounds him and keeps him from making a success of anything, until he marries Gert. Gert had the strength of character Elof lacked and life smoothed out for the stumbler.

Reviewed by Emmet Dedmon
Chicago Sun Ap 11 '48 500w

"Uncomfortable, unpleasant at best, most readers will find this indelicate and distasteful."
— Kirkus 16:122 Mr 1 '48 130w

"Not so well-written as his Golden Bowl. Limited appeal. Recommended only for libraries with adequate book funds." E. S. Brown
Library J 73:654 Ap 15 '48 100w

"This is Mr. Feikema's fourth book and a marked improvement over the other three. He has sympathy for his people and a certain raw humor, but he still strains for costume-jewelry words to adorn a naturally good, simple, style." Paul Corey
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ag 22 '48 350w

"The small adventures of Elof during his time at home have a kind of merry, awkward, clownish, and above all—touching quality. . . He is an appealing fellow, this Elof. As rendered here, he is predominantly a natural human animal, lusty, coarse and limited. He has little intellectual range, scant moral or spiritual depth. But he's got good sturdy horse sense and a strong feeling for home, for all the everyday, material values. . . There is a genuine dignity in his presentation. For 'The Chokecherry Tree' is a direct, swift and fresh book, distinguished at once by antic humor and by absolute sincerity." Richard Sullivan
+ N Y Times p7 Ap 11 '48 650w

"Pleasant."
+ New Yorker 24:121 Ap 10 '48 120w

FEIS, HERBERT. The Spanish story: Franco and the nations at war. 282p $3.50 Knopf 946.08 Spain—Foreign relations. World war, 1939-1945—Spain 48-1881

"This is an interpretative account of the diplomacy that focused on Spain during the years 1939-44. Hitler included Spain in his millennial vision of a Europe and Africa organized and controlled by Germany. At a time best suited to his schedule of conquest, he did his utmost to bring Spain into the war. The United States and Britain did their utmost to defeat his efforts. This story tells of the diplomatic battle and of Franco's conduct throughout its course." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by J. A. Brandt
Am Hist R 54:354 Ja '49 480w
Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau
Am Pol Sci R 42:791 Ag '48 750w
Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 181:117 Je '48 360w

Booklist 44:310 My 15 '48

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning
Cath World 167:277 Je '48 500w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 19 '48 700w

Kirkus 16:184 Ap 1 '48 150w

"Mr. Feis, Economic Adviser in the Department of State from 1931 to 1944, has written an authoritative account of our attempts to keep Spain neutral during World War II." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 73:647 Ap 15 '48 110w

" 'The Spanish Story' is one of the most illuminating case histories in American diplomacy. It is also an absorbing, highly readable, and often exciting story. For Dr. Feis not only is a careful scholar and an uncommonly wise diplomat; he is one of the few living American economists able to write decent prose." John Fischer
+ Nation 166:691 Je 19 '48 1400w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 My 9 '48 1050w

"The recent attempt by the House of Representatives to include Franco Spain in the Marshall Plan was a saddening demonstration of the need for Dr. Feis' excellent book. . . Economic warfare, if properly administered, will be a valuable weapon if ever we have to fight again. Dr. Feis' book is an excellent manual on how it should not be carried on." T. J. Hamilton
+ N Y Times p3 My 2 '48 1100w

"The most thorough account so far of the relations between Franco and the Axis and Franco and the Allies from 1939 to 1945, by a former State Department man who was in charge of our economic dealings with Spain during the war."
+ New Yorker 24:107 My 8 '48 130w

Reviewed by R. J. S. Hoffman
Pol Sci Q 63:424 S '48 2750w

"For students of U. S. foreign policy the book will be valuable. For others it will probably have less appeal as it is more of an account of State Department machinations than a book about Spain." Audrey Doughty
San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 3 '48 550w

"Herbert Feis vividly recreates those tense and exciting days when word was momentarily expected that Germany was sweeping through Spain to Gibraltar, the Atlantic, the shores of the Mediterranean, and the African coasts, and explains why the command was never given. 'The Spanish Story' is fascinating reading." Virginia Pearson
+ Sat R of Lit 31:16 My 8 '48 650w

Time 51:99 My 3 '48 700w

FELLER, EUGENE W. F. Instrument and control manual for operating engineers. 426p il $6 McGraw 621.81 Control equipment. Gages 48-481

"Practical manual for operating engineers, power plant maintenance men, plant supervisors, students of power plant engineering and those whose work requires a knowledge of the operation of power plant control instruments, motors and indicators. Author explains basic principles of control and describes the construction and operation of liquid level, pressure, temperature, speed and humidity indicators and controllers." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:308 My 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1615 N 15 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:25 Ja '48

FELLER, ROBERT WILLIAM ANDREW. How to pitch. 90p il $1.50 Barnes, A. S.
796.357 Baseball 48-7099

The problems of pitching described by a big league pitcher.

Booklist 44:354 Je 15 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '48

"Brief, clear, detailed and decidedly authoritative instruction, clarified by lots of illustrations."
+ Library J 73:1030 Jl '48 10w

"The chapter devoted to the balk and how to avoid it seemed to me to be the clearest explanation of the balk rule I have ever read." D. M. Mankiewicz
N Y Times p23 Ag 29 '48 280w

FELSEN, GREGOR. Bertie takes care; il. by Jane Toan. 184p $2.50 Dutton
48-8140

Too stout to be counsellor at beautiful Camp Ijoboko, Bertie Poddle becomes a counsellor for the poor boys of his home town. When his baseball team wins a game from the Camp Ijoboko nine, Bertie is offered the job he wanted; but he had come to love his "bunch of roughnecks" too much to accept. For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 45:72 O 15 '48

"Portrait of a boy who frequently fails, who has faults of all sorts, and yet emerges as alive, funny and likable."
+ Kirkus 16:439 S 1 '48 90w

"Fat, fifteen-year-old Bertie who spends his summer as activity leader of a group of underprivileged boys is a mixture of child and adult, of selfishness and good sportsmanship, that adults may find a little incredible. Younger junior high school boys particularly will take to this story though, as readily as they did to Bertie Comes Through [Book Review Digest 1947]. There are worthy social and race implications in the group's feeling of oneness. . . Recommended." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 73:1284 S 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 7 '48 250w

"Bertie's story has humor, sensitivity and realism. It will bring entertainment and insight to boys of 11 up." F. C. Smith
+ N Y Times p35 O 31 '48 180w

Reviewed by M. J. Koblentz
San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 14 '48 200w

"Real pathos and good humor place this one high on the list."
+ Springf'd Republican p7B S 12 '48 120w

Wis Lib Bul 44:168 O '48

FELSEN, HENRY GREGOR. See Felsen, G.

FENG, YU-LAN. Short history of Chinese philosophy. 368p $5 Macmillan
181.1 Philosophy, Chinese 48-9573

A compact and comprehensive history of Chinese thought from the time of Confucius to the present day. The author is professor of philosophy and dean of the College of Liberal Arts of Tsing Hua university. He was educated in China and in the United States. Bibliography. Index.

Commonweal 49:284 D 24 '48 600w

Current Hist 16:36 Ja '49 50w

"It is doubtful whether this long but highly readable and vital history can be superseded as a standard history in our generation. A Must for libraries, colleges and universities, where Chinese philosophy is studied."
+ Kirkus 16:499 S 15 '48 200w

"Mr. Fung is probably the very best equipped person in the world to write this comprehensive presentation of Chinese philosophy for western readers. Recognized in China as the outstanding authority, and thoroughly familiar with western thought, he has indeed done the westtern world a great service in writing in English this history, the only work of its kind we have. . . A much needed and invaluable contribution, recommended with enthusiasm for all libraries." G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 73:1382 O 1 '48 110w

School & Society 68:358 N 20 '48 60w

FENN, PERCY THOMAS. The development of the Constitution. 733p $5 Appleton

342.733 U.S. Constitution. U.S.—Constitutional law 48-1113

"In one of the latest additions to the growing number of casebooks on constitutional law, Professor Fenn endeavors to present a collection of cases for college rather than law students. In so doing, he has produced a casebook which without being unorthodox, presents three novelties not found in other case collections. These consist of the general notes of a socio-political nature preceding the cases in twelve of the thirteen chapters, more numerous and more lengthy selections from dissenting opinions, and a rather substantial collection of cases interpreting the Sherman and Clayton Acts, the National Labor Relations Act, and the Norris-LaGuardia Act, all of which bear upon interstate commerce, but which are primarily interpretations of statutes rather than of the Constitution." Am Pol Sci R

"Aside from the lengthier selections and from the great number of dissents which illustrate the judiciary in action, it is doubtful whether this casebook does for the college student anything that the other casebooks fail to do. It remains, aside from the introductory notes, some additional comments interspersed between cases and selections from arguments of counsel in two cases, exclusively a casebook. In this neglect of opinions of the Attorney-General, congressional debates, commentaries on the Constitution, and other sources of constitutional law, he has failed to provide valuable materials for the college student in a collection that would be truly novel and even unique. . . It follows, therefore, that the value of Professor Fenn's book as a text will vary according to the scope and method of individual courses in constitutional law." R. J. Harris
Am Pol Sci R 42:564 Je '48 750w

"The reviewer feels that the editor has shifted too much of the burden to the teacher. Neglect of common details is also in evidence. Typographical forms are amateurish and not followed consistently; the proofreading has not prevented many errors from slipping by; cross references, which are all too few, are inaccurate. . . Occasionally the order of cases, without apparent reason, is neither logical nor chronological (note the last two cases in the volume). . . The lack of a general index detracts seriously from the book's usefulness. The only index is a list of the cases selected for this volume, which does not include those cited or quoted in the selected cases." H. C. Hockett
Ann Am Acad 258:149 Jl '48 320w

FENNER, PHYLLIS REID, ed. With might and main; stories of skill and wit; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 190p $2.50 Knopf

Fairy tales 48-8738

Seventeen stories from various countries describing heroes who won with their wits over superior strength or power. Partial contents: Stan Bolovan, by Andrew Lang; The man whose trade was tricks, by George and Helen Papashvily; The ferryman, by C. H. Bishop; The sun and the wind and Mr. Todd, by Eleanor Estes; How the wicked sons were duped, by Joseph Jacobs; The shooting-match at Nottingham town, by Howard Pyle; Rikki-Tikki-Tavi, by Rudyard Kipling; El Enano, by Charles Finger; Tzarevich Petr—and the wizard, by Post Wheeler. For grades 5-7.

Booklist 45:90 N 1 '48

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 168:219 D '48 90w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p18 D 16 '48 180w

"Discriminating selection of seventeen stories, handsomely printed."
+ Commonweal 49:148 N 19 '48 100w

Kirkus 16:529 O 1 '48 110w

"A fine collection for reading aloud at home and in the library. Recommended for ages 8-12." Clara Adams
+ Library J 73:1825 D 15 '48 100w

"Phyllis Fenner's sure touch in selecting stories with appeal for children and Henry C. Pitz's exceptional ability to endow them with pictorial humor and drama are happily combined in this eighth volume of folk tales on which they have collaborated." Elizabeth Hodges
+ N Y Times p35 O 31 '48 190w

FENTON, CARROLL LANE. Wild folk at the pond; il. by the author. 127p $2 Day

591.5 Animals, Legends and stories of 48-4416

"The life stories of thirteen familiar little creatures of the ponds and creeks. The very young readers will learn a great deal in a pleasant way about raccoons, turtles, crayfish, kingfishers, herons, red-winged blackbirds and other creatures. Each subject was chosen because it represented an important way of living, different ways of being cared for, different kinds of homes, different activities. Two children are introduced into some of the stories." N Y Times

Booklist 45:37 S 15 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ag 28 '48 50w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:466 N '48 70w

"Younger children would certainly enjoy having this book read aloud. Recommended for school and home libraries." J. F. Kennedy
+ Library J 73:1388 O 1 '48 80w

"Unlike the first book in the series, 'Weejack And His Neighbors,' this second book has two children introduced into some of the stories. The children, however, seem artificially imposed and unnecessary, as the stories of the animals are interesting enough and would be more closely knit without the children." Helen Masten
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 26 '48 180w

"Simple language and excellent drawings." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times p11 S 5 '48 140w

FENTON, EDWARD. Aleko's island; il. by Dimitris Davis. 246p $2.50 Doubleday 48-8879

Story of Aleko's discovery of a valuable relic of ancient Greece. The action hinges on the boy's struggle with himself and his neighbors over the problem of whether to keep the statue for its beauty or to sell it for money. The setting of the story is an island near Athens in postwar days. For ages 9-14. Glossary.

Booklist 45:123 D 1 '48

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p18 D 16 '48 270w

"A book of solid and sustained interest with fine line drawings of Greek people."
+ Commonweal 49:156 N 19 '48 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:459 N '48 90w

Kirkus 16:438 S 1 '48 170w

"Good story with plenty of action. Recommended for ages 11-15." M. M. Smith
+ Library J 73:1675 N 15 '48 90w

"Mr. Fenton has drawn an interesting picture of life today on a small Greek island. . . Children, unfortunately, will find difficulties in the frequent use of Greek words and names hard to pronounce." M. C. Ernst
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 21 '48 230w

"The setting of the story is interesting and real, but Aleko never seems much more than a medium for the author to tell what he wants the reader to know. The illustrations are completely successful, done with ease and humor." M. F.
+ — N Y Times p59 N 14 '48 150w

Reviewed by S. M. Boland
San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 28 '48 260w
Sat R of Lit 31:26 N 13 '48 270w
Wis Lib Bul 45:16 Ja '49

FENWICK, MILLICENT, ed. See Vogue (periodical). Book of etiquette.

FERGUSON, CHARLES WRIGHT. A little democracy is a dangerous thing. 126p $1.50 Assn. press

321.8 Democracy. International cooperation 48-8844

The author describes our present democratic principles and methods—in industry, in national and international politics—finds them wanting, and suggests definite ways to improve them.

"Being the honest person he is, Mr. Ferguson lets friends who have read the manuscript of his book point out that his 'solutions' don't solve, and may easily create tougher new problems than the ones which now baffle us. I don't know whether he realizes how regrettably the answers he writes to the best of these objections fail to answer." P. H.
+ — Christian Century 65:1145 O 27 '48 250w

"A provocative book with considerable reader appeal."
+ Kirkus 16:388 Ag 1 '48 160w

"Thought provoking. Recommended for all public and high school libraries." J. L. Ross
+ Library J 73:1187 S 1 '48 100w

Reviewed by George Soule
Nation 167:552 N 13 '48 330w

"As a reaffirmation of the true meaning and purposes and powers of democracy, few books approach this in value. A review is no place to issue a clarion call to action, but it is high time that those of us who want to see democracy work and have had real experience in organizing public discussion should get together and really put over some program such as Ferguson suggests." Sydney Greenbie
+ Sat R of Lit 31:23 N 6 '48 850w

FERGUSON, DONALD NIVISON. History of musical thought. 2d ed 647p $6.50 Appleton

780.9 Music—History and criticism 48-2180

"Revision includes more detailed treatment of music during the Middle ages and the Renaissance, and more attention to the twentieth century." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1935. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:355 Je 15 '48

"An outstanding work in the field of music history. . . The extensive and excellent bibliography which has been brought up-to-date covers all phases of musical history, biography, analysis and criticism. Highly recommended." H. E. Bush
+ Library J 73:947 Je 15 '48 110w

"The appearance of a new edition of Ferguson's History will be welcomed by music educators. . . Augmentation of the material concerned with the 20th century is particularly welcome. . . The bibliography is good, and somewhat fatter than before. The type is slightly larger and the format more attractive. The discography, however, has disappeared, and the index needs careful checking. . . Such minor drawbacks are naturally details when measured against the full bulk of the history, and the many teachers who, with ample justification, have considered 'Ferguson' as one of the best of the textbooks on music history for the collegiate level will not be disappointed by this new edition." P. G. Gelrud
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 5:366 Je '48 700w

"I think no English reader need feel abnormally chauvinistic if he reads Professor Ferguson's account of modern English music with some dismay. . . Strangest of all, in a book published in 1948, the name of Benjamin Britten does not appear at all. Instead, Eugene Goossens is given the same space as Vaughan Williams, while Edward MacDowell has almost a page and Professor Ferguson judges that Russia has been musically the most outstanding country in the years since 1920. If this fantastic perspective prevails in the section dealing with British music that we know well, we may question Professor Ferguson's competence to speak of the music of other countries which we, inevitably, know less." Martin Cooper
— Spec 181:568 O 29 '48 260w

FERGUSON, DONALD NIVISON. Piano music of six great composers. 370p $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

786.4 Piano music 47-12172

"From his experience as a piano teacher, the author selects pieces most favored—musically—by his students and makes those comments that he has most often found to be necessary to understanding and execution. Minus the demonstrations in sound, for which there is no substitute, nearly every facet is explored. . . Some of the subjects discussed are the instrument's possibilities from a mechanistic standpoint, piano technic, musical form, tone control, esthetic values of pieces, points on pedaling, fingering, errors in editions, traditions, and the most common mistakes in execution. . . Wholly or in part, forty-seven compositions of Beethoven, Schubert, Chopin, Schumann, Brahms, and Debussy are discussed." (Music Lib Assn Notes) Index.

"Special essays on the possibilities and limitations of the piano, and on the technique used to make music on such mechanisms, show not only practical experience but much artistry." George Hanson
+ Library J 73:338 F 15 '48 110w

"Discussions which are high in literary value as well as indicative of devoted scholarship. . . His volume most certainly encourages good musicianship and leads away from dilettantism. Musicians themselves will find the book interesting, if not always congenial, on such matters as pedaling, phrasing, tempi, etc.; they will be hard pressed to challenge its sincerity and high ideals." Emerson Meyers
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 5:246 Mr '48 280w

FERGUSSON, ERNA. Murder and mystery in New Mexico [drawings by Peter Hurd]. 192p $3.50 Merle Armitage eds, box 52, Old Albuquerque, N.Mex.

917.89 Frontier and pioneer life—New Mexico. Murder 48-10939

Nine true stories of murder mysteries of the state of New Mexico.

"Told with charm and simplicity. . . This is, moreover, a handsome little volume, a distinctive contribution to regional literature. . . Good entertainment, absorbing mystery, and sound history, this attractive book serves to bridge the gap between the wild old days of the vigilantes and modern times, when law and order are pretty much in the saddle in New Mexico." Stanley Walker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ja 2 '49 380w

"Miss Fergusson has provided her readers with all the variety anyone could ask. This collection belongs among the books of any connoisseur of true crime, and also on the shelves of all who collect in the byways of Americana—in both cases right alongside, say, Stewart Holbrook's 'Murder Out Yonder,' and Richard Dempe Wolff's 'Famous Old New England Murders.' " J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 9 '48 600w

"Handsomely printed (though trifle too doggone arty) volume is well packed with excitement, mystery, and sharp portraits of tough hombres. For aficionados."
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:32 Ja 22 '49 40w

FERM, VERGILIUS TURE ANSELM, ed. Religion in the twentieth century. 470p $5 Philosophical lib.

290 Religions 48-5611

"This guide to twentieth century religions is the result of collaboration of well-known authorities explaining some of the world's oldest religions as well as many of the new faiths." (Wis Lib Bul) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"The authorities whose collaboration produced this volume are for the most part actual representatives of the several faiths, the remainder are recommended for their sympathetic scholarship. To each statement is appended a bibliography which is all to the good since this work has a specialized appeal to the student and is chiefly of interest to those who like to wander down the highways and byways that crisscross man's attempt to solve the perplexing problem of life's meaning and human destiny. . . The chapter on 'Roman Catholicism' by the Rev. Charles A. Hart is a work of highest merit." J. T. Clune

+ Cath World 167:187 My '48 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '48

"The book should provide useful supplementary reading for courses in philosophy of religion or types of religion." Arthur Child

+ Ethics 58:319 Jl '48 170w

Reviewed by J. Wach

J Religion 28:288 O '48 550w

Kirkus 16:119 Mr 1 '48 230w

"Not since the publication in 1934 of E. E. Kellett's wholly admirable 'A Short History of Religions' has there appeared a volume devoted to a popular interpretation of the religions of the world so informative and stimulating, in my opinion, as this anthology edited by Mr. Ferm. . . While his volume lacks the coordination of a single mind, it has the virtue of authority and of personal conviction, and in individual cases, of that very desirable quality, readability. The volume has one other immensely desirable and valuable virtue. It brings the subject of the world's religions to date." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p20 Je 13 '48 550w

"The book is good reading and should be added to the shelf on comparative religions, but it does not do what its editor intended. It will take a religious genius, not a symposium, to find a principal by which the warring sects may be transcended and a faith established for the modern world." E. M. Tainton

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 14 '48 600w

"As a concise, readable work on comparative Religion in the Twentieth Century is recommended for college libraries and for those public libraries which need it. Many public libraries will find it useful for circulation."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 19:50 Jl '48 800w

"The book will have great value in the reference collection." O. M. T.

+ Wis Lib Bul 44:60 Mr '48

FERNALD, JAMES CHAMPLIN. Funk & Wagnalls standard handbook of synonyms, antonyms, and prepositions. See Funk & Wagnalls standard handbook of synonyms, antonyms, and prepositions

FERRE, NELS FREDERICK SOLOMON. Pillars of faith. 128p $1.50 Harper

230 Christianity 48-5147

"[The author], professor of theology in Andover Newton Theological School, has undertaken to give 'a statement of faith in simplest terms.' He has chosen five basic beliefs which furnish a rough outline of Christian history during which they have been successively points of major emphasis. The five pillars of faith are 'Christ and Our Problems.' 'The Holy Spirit and the New Age,' 'The Challenge of the Church,' 'Biblical Bedrock,' and 'The Christian Life.'" (J Religion) Index.

Christian Century 65:146 F 4 '48 150w

"Dr. Ferré's treatment of Christian faith in this small volume can be described neither as comprehensive nor exhaustive. It should rather be characterized as impressionistic and stimulative. The author skips across the mountain tops of Christian history, but does not descend for lingering reflection into the valleys. One might regard his little book as a springboard from which one can be catapulted into the deeper waters of Christian faith and experience. If the volume serves that purpose, then the author will be satisfied that he has reached the goal which he sought to attain, namely, 'a statement of faith in the simplest of terms.'" G. W. Davis

Crozer Q 25:259 Jl '48 500w

"The thoughtful reader will be troubled by certain inconsistencies. Some portions reveal a frank facing of contemporary theological problems; others adhere uncritically to conventional tradition. At some points the treatment is clear and profound, at others it peters out into mere verbiage. These limitations detract from but do not destroy the value of this earnest restatement of Christian belief." H. L. Bowman

+ — J Religion 28:229 Jl '48 430w

FERRO, MRS MATHILDE. Fear is the parent. 273p $3 Doubleday

48-5178

Psychological story of the effects of fear upon a marriage. Simon Dow's mistress had died by accident and Simon had successfully avoided being implicated. After his marriage to Avery his fear of discovery impels him to tell her the story. Gradually his fear spreads to Avery and she escapes in time to prevent a murder.

"The story, which ends with everything and everybody pretty much up in the air, is not an analytical study, not particularly enlightening, not dramatically exciting. It does, however, serve the purpose of reminding the reader first, that fear can completely disorganize the mind, and secondly, that it is in a sense a communicable disease."

Cath World 167:93 Ap '48 150w

Kirkus 15:630 N 15 '47 180w

"There are patches—where Mrs. Ferro has some wry comments about men, babies or girl-talk—that have a tempo of their own: here the author is on native ground. But when she gets into her Psychological Novel, as the publishers call it—and up rear the spirits of Proust and Dostoevsky—it's rather thin soup." Seymour Krim

N Y Times p18 F 1 '48 400w

FESSIER, MICHAEL. Clovis; il. by Carlotta Petrina. 189p $2 Dial Press

48-6143

The adventures of Clovis, a "college type" parrot.

"We don't say that this is the book you have been waiting for (since waiting for the incredible is inconceivable), but if you pass up this melange of mirth, it's just your own carelessness. For new slants on sex, heredity, inebriation, motion picture production or religious cults, Mr. Fessier is your mandate."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ap 11 '48 290w

"As a parrot Clovis is something special—as the hero of a novel he is hopelessly dull." Edith James

— San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ap 4 '48 50w

"For the past decade Mr. Fessier has been working on the literary treadmill of the movie studios. It is interesting to note how expertly he has plotted 'Clovis,' allowing not a wasted line, a single unnecessary scene. His mastery of film technique, applied in this story moves the narrative expertly. Never once does the sharpness of his humor become blunted by an excess of words. . . Therefore, Clovis should usher in a new, refreshing era to the screen, as well as the literary scene—an era in which, let us hope, a large number of just ordinary actors will be supplanted by a wise and wonderful parrot." Max Wilk

+ Sat R of Lit 31:40 Ap 17 '48 500w

FIELD, BEN. The last freshet. 280p $3 Doubleday
48-5766

Novel set in the logging country of the upper Delaware river. It describes the experiences of the various loggers and other small town characters, chief of them the strong man, Virge Doggity. Virge supports the two wives of his war-dead sons, hoping to have them make good marriages. In the end he marries one of them himself.

"Pedestrian, rather dull, but competent."
— + Kirkus 16:4 Ja 1 '48 120w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ag 8 '48 70w

"Ben Field, who did well by Connecticut tobacco, has stubbed his toe on upstate timber, but doubtless he'll try again. He should. He loves country life and writes about it in prose at once lyric and earthy." Richard Match
N Y Times p22 Ap 11 '48 500w

"This novel has so much that inevitably it causes a bit of thinking as to what it lacks. This reviewer got the notion that the author, like some latter-day Thoreau, went about Martin's Eddy with notebook and pencil, jotting down every detail of scenery and folksay. The result is what was once loosely defined as a regional novel." Benjamin Appel
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:15 Jl 3 '48 650w

FIELD AND STREAM (periodical). Game bag; ed, with foreword and notes by Robeson Bailey. 306p $3.45 Doubleday

799.2 Shooting. Hunting. Game and game birds Agr48-283

Accounts of small game hunting in various parts of America. Partial contents: The birthright and the pottage, by Archibald Rutledge; Geese! get down! by Gordon MacQuarrie; Opening day on Barnegat, by C. B. Miller; Louisiana buggy ride, by V. C. Heilner; Grouse—in spots, by W. J. Schaldach; Grouse of the western skyline, by H. M. Laing; How to hunt quail, by Havilah Babcock; The gun dog, by E. C. Vail; Forest foods, by Jan Thornton; Wild meat is good meat, by A. H. Carhart; Back-country driving, by Burtt Trueblood.

Booklist 45:84 N 1 '48

Kirkus 16:427 Ag 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 74:63 Ja 1 '49 20w

"The stories picture for the New Englander what it is like to hunt turkey in the South; for the Southerner, the thrill of the sound of ruffed grouse amongst the abandoned farmlands of New Hampshire. . . Mr. Bailey also has included articles on the cooking of game, dog handling, safety in the wilds, and an excellent chapter on how to handle your car on back-country roads." T. S. S.
+ N Y Times p34 N 7 '48 180w

FIELDING, TEMPLE HORNADAY. New travel guide to Europe. 427p $4 Sloane

914 Europe—Description and travel 48-7365

Brief information on such things as air travel, luggage, clothes, tipping, black market, laundry, food, etc., in traveling about present day Europe, with a few excursions in Africa and the Middle East. No index.

"Mr. Fielding is less convincing when he attempts to generalize about peoples and attitudes. Facile labelling, even in a guidebook, may strengthen mental boundaries instead of weakening them."
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 29 '48 360w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans
Commonweal 48:312 Jl 9 '48 40w

"A wholly new type of travel guide, and one specifically directed to men, this should be immediately popular in this first summer of European travel since the war. Not to be recommended as a handbook on what to see and do; but a practical, realistic collection of facts. . . But don't look on this as a substitute, for instance, for Clara Laughlin's handbooks."
+ — Kirkus 16:225 My 1 '48 170w

Reviewed by P. J. C. Friedlander
N Y Times p18 Ag 1 '48 130w

"It is forceful and as up to the minute as any book can be in these days of continuous revolution. Advice on protection of luggage, getting rooms in advance, counting your change and keeping your documents in order are obviously based on first-hand, personal experience and will save readers weeks of alarm and despondency. He makes it clear that travel regulations have become so baffling that most people simply must be advised by experts. Old travelers will find the book disturbing and possibly even shocking. But Fielding is so chivalrous in his appreciation of the gallant qualities of British womanhood, that I shall merely wish him better luck next time." Donald McCullough
Sat R of Lit 31:35 Je 19 '48 360w

Reviewed by John Culver
Springf'd Republican p14A Je 11 '48 190w

Wis Lib Bul 44:163 O '48

FINCH, JAMES KIP. Trends in engineering education; the Columbia experience. 140p $2 Columbia univ. press

620.7 Engineering—Study and teaching. Columbia university. School of engineering 48-7545

"Attempts to outline the main factors which the School of Engineering of Columbia University believes has influenced and continues to influence the evolution of American engineering education, to revise and analyze these influences and describe the various programs it has adopted to meet its problem of giving American students a greater interest in basic engineering theory and research." Library J

"Dean Finch has written a challenging and thought-provoking document that will be of interest to teachers, students, and industrialists —in short, to all who are concerned with engineering education, its product, and its application." H. C. Parmelee
+ Chem Eng 55:343 N '48 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '48

"Dean Finch writes lucidly, and . . . his appraisal of what has been accomplished at Columbia is well worth reading by anyone who is at all concerned with present trends."
+ Eng N 141:95 Ag 5 '48 280w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1517 O 15 '48 70w

FINCH, ROBERT. How to write a play. 172p $2.50 Greenberg

808.2 Drama—Technique 48-5429

An introduction to playwriting for the beginner, with emphasis on the one-act play. Includes "Old what's-his-name," a play by the author, and lists of Broadway producers, managers, and agents.

Booklist 44:296 My 1 '48

"Recommended for theatre collections and small public libraries." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:816 My 15 '48 80w

"Like most practitioners who speak from the workbench rather than the professor's chair, Mr. Finch wastes little time on generalizations. Instead, he takes his reader straight through his own routine of composition. . . Most of the book surrounds this play-script as a kind of extended program-note, and all of it is valuable. The present reader found Mr. Finch's remarks on 'Mechanical Matters' especially helpful." Wilbur Watson
+ N Y Times p20 My 16 '48 360w

FINCH, ROBERT—Continued
"A good textbook." L. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 4 '48 130w

FINE, REUBEN. Practical chess openings. 470p il $7.50 McKay
794.1 Chess 48-7909

"A compact guide to the chess openings which includes everything that is important for current play." (Cleveland Open Shelf) The author is an authority on chess. Index.

Booklist 45:140 D 15 '48

"Accomplished as both player and writer on the royal game, Fine's latest work is certain to be regarded as authoritative by players eager to improve their game in formal tournament and casual play. The book is admirably reproduced, with some 200 large diagrams, the print being modern and very legible—an important consideration in any book on the game."
+ Chicago Sun p8X Ag 1 '48 100w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '48

FINER, HERMAN. America's destiny. 407p $5 Macmillan
940.55 World politics. U.S.—Foreign policy 47-12363

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"America's Destiny is clearly, emphatically, and authoritatively defined in this timely and provocative book. But this is no narrow treatise on American foreign policy; it is rather an astute analysis of the present international crisis and its causes, with emphasis upon the rôles of Great Britain, Soviet Russia, and the United States. It may be said, in general, that the author defends Britain, blames Russia, and appeals to America—appeals to us as the great hope, in fact the only hope, for a peaceful world." J. B. Whitton
+ Am Pol Sci R 42:562 Je '48 800w

"Professor Finer's book is a somewhat more lengthy, subtle, and plaintive echo of the thesis of James Burnham's The Struggle for the World. . . If Professor Finer's volume is somewhat less blatant than Burnham's, it is perhaps even more repellent to thoughtful and patriotic Americans. At least it could be said that Burnham was an American, and that, however mistakenly, he argued for an aggressive American foreign policy on the basis of what he conceived to be the promotion of American interests and security. Finer, who is an Englishman resident for the time being in this country, appears to plead for aggressive American leadership in the world primarily for the benefits which this may confer upon the recipients of our protection and charity." H. E. Barnes
— Ann Am Acad 256:211 Mr '48 750w
Booklist 44:231 Mr 1 '48

Reviewed by E. McN. Burns
Christian Century 65:141 F 4 '48 750w

"The author sees the only hope for containing the Russian Government in 'a preponderant power, raised by conscience and poised in charity' and 'held available throughout the years till democracy replaces despotism in Russia.' This, in brief, is the thesis propounded. It is propounded with eloquence, logic, psychological insight, and masterly use of historic material. That the thesis will be violently rejected by Communists is obvious, and they will be joined by rather heterogeneous groups. . . Opposition of a more valid nature will be voiced to some of the author's views, especially his attempts to justify several of the more unfortunate adventures of British policy." Ernest Pisko
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 3 '48 600w

"Obviously Finer is making a good if not completely convincing case for 'preventive war' of the sort that might have stopped Hitler at Munich. Whether the American public will ever or should ever accept this view of its destiny is for the American people to decide. Whatever the reader may think, America's Destiny is well worth thoughtful discussion." Roy Hillbrook
+ Current Hist 14:103 F '48 750w
Foreign Affairs 26:741 Jl '48 30w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
New Repub 117:27 D 22 '47 750w

"Written in the main in advance of the formulation of the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan, this book anticipates some of their provisions. The time lag that has elapsed since the writing and the publication of this account undoubtedly has injured the appropriately urgent tone of some of the author's formulations. His arguments, so painstakingly marshaled, are in a number of cases already in the public political domain; his analytic approach and herculean documentation, however, are not. And it seems likely that the more lasting value will be attached to these." Julien Steinberg
Pol Sci Q 63:285 Je '48 750w
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:71 Mr '48 210w

Reviewed by R. C. Snyder
Yale R n s 37:533 spring '48 600w

FINKELSTEIN, LOUIS, ed. American spiritual autobiographies; fifteen self-portraits. 276p il $4 Harper 922 48-9493

Short autobiographies of fifteen Americans, four of whom were born outside the United States. Those included are: M. L. Wilson, G. N. Shuster, A. S. Johnson, Lyman Bryson, Raphael Isaacs, H. J. Carman, H. E. Fosdick, R. M. Jones, M. K. Simkhovitch, W. F. Albright, M. M. Bethune, C. S. Johnson, W. G. Constable, J. S. Potofsky, S. J. Finkelstein. Index.

"Not all the names are household words, though several of them are, but all are names of persons who have made valuable contributions to American life or thought. I raise the question whether, for the inspiration and guidance of modern men and women, such modest but self-revealing records are not more valuable than the kind of 'lives of the saints' that have been the subject of recent comment in these pages." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 66:21 Ja 5 '49 140w

"Should appeal to ministers and other speakers for illustrative material, as well as to the wider group of readers interested in biography."
+ Kirkus 16:594 N 15 '48 160w

Reviewed by G. P. Stephenson
N Y Times p25 Ja 30 '49 450w

"In an age of increasing power, these spiritual autobiographies offer the more pleasant and encouraging intelligence of the enduring ideal of service."
+ School & Society 68:358 N 20 '48 30w

FINKELSTEIN, SIDNEY. Art and society. 288p il $3.25 Int. pubs.
701 Art and society 47-11604

"This is a book about art. It takes up in non-technical terms such problems as the nature of beauty, the background of style, the interrelation of form and content, the reason for change, the function of art in society. It may therefore be called a layman's approach to aesthetic problems. . . A study of art in terms of the living bonds between professional and layman, artist and audience, culture and the people, becomes quite different in its theory from one which regards art as a mystery into which an unlettered audience has to be slowly initiated. Thus this is a book about the relation of the layman to the arts, rather than an explanation of art to the layman." (Pref) Index of names.

"In progressing from esthetic comment to social exhortation, Mr. Finkelstein avoids the more obvious pitfalls that lie along that particular path. Yet, in spite of his sensitivity, he is driven by his revolutionary passion to establish a correlation between political correctness and artistic merit. He is seldom crude about this, but he is not convincing." Granville Hicks

N Y Times p20 My 2 '48 500w

"Within the limits of its rigid Marxist ideology, this is a well-informed and perceptive study of the arts. . . Much good sense is displayed in the discussion of the position of the arts in America and the West. . . But the picture of the literary and cultural situation in Soviet Russia must be discounted as almost absurdly overdrawn. The book also suffers from uncertainty in direction to its audience."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 4:13 Mr '48 200w

FINLAND and World war II, 1939-1944; ed [and tr] by John H. Wuorinen. 228p maps $3.50 Ronald

940.53471 Finland—Foreign relations. Russo-Finnish war, 1939-1940. World war, 1939-1945—Finland 48-351

"Presents the Finnish side of the story of how Finland became involved in the war, and how they carried on the war." Social Studies

---

"This compact, well-documented, and restrained study is without question the most important work to come out of Finland since the close of the recent war. . . The editor is to be congratulated for having 'fathered' this volume. It contributes much to our knowledge of Finland and its position today. Its appearance could not have been more timely." E. C. Bellquist

+ Ann Am Acad 257:213 My '48 480w

"The author of 'Finland and World War II' had to compile his book from exclusively Finnish source material, which fact makes his story necessarily one-sided. He also seems to have been forced to finish his work in considerable haste, perhaps in order to avail himself of an opportunity for smuggling his manuscript out of Finland. Despite those handicaps, one can agree with Dr. John H. Wuorinen, Columbia Professor of History, who edited the book, that its manner of presentation is 'restrained to the point of austerity,' unemotional and clear of cheap propaganda. . . Yet there are many pertinent questions which the author fails to answer satisfactorily." Ernest Pisko

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 F 17 '48 750w

Current Hist 14:295 My '48 50w

Foreign Affairs 26:572 Ap '48 30w

Social Studies 39:144 Mr '48 30w

FINN, BRENDAN A. Twenty-four American cardinals; with a foreword by Francis Cardinal Spellman. 475p il $5 Humphries

922.273 Cardinals. Roman Catholic church in the U.S.—Biography 48-6031

"Biographical sketches of those princes of the Catholic church who either were born in America or served there at some time." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

Cath World 168:176 N '48 150w

"Compiling all the information in this book was obviously a labor of love for Mr. Finn. It is too bad he did not give us more than the very general sketches he has supplied. Many of the prelates described so briefly deserve longer and more detailed sketches which would place them in better perspective. . . In some of these essays the subject is the chief victim as he is smothered in his robes of state and his personality does not emerge clearly. This is due in part to a style that seems occasionally to be a clumsy copy of the extravagant adulation we associate with the Byzantine Patriarchate and which diminishes the appeal of a useful book." F. D. Cohalan

+ — Commonweal 48:218 Je 11 '48 330w

FINNEGAN, ROBERT, pseud. See Ryan, P. W.

FISCHER, ANTON OTTO. Focs'le days; a story of my youth; with paintings by the author. 82p $3.75 Scribner

910.4 Seafaring life 47-11706

This book was begun by the author in his role as painter and was intended as a pictorial record of life at sea in the days of the old sailing ships. In response to demand for a text, however, he has written autobiographically of his own experiences at sea and then adapted the pictures to the text. The pictures are reproduced in black and white only.

"An authentic account of a completely different world from the high speed mechanistic one reported on in the daily newspaper. Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 72:1696 D 1 '47 70w

"While Mr. Fischer is known literally to millions as an illustrator—there has hardly been a sea story published in any of the popular magazines for the last quarter of a century for which he has not furnished the drawings—this is, I think, his first essay into the literary field. He shows himself as no green hand, for his narrative is as solid, as factual, as authentic, as are the eighteen full-page paintings he has made for the book." Frank Merwin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 Mr 7 '48 450w

FISCHER, BERTHA (MARK) (MRS LOUIS FISCHER). The Nazarovs. 373p $3 Harper 48-6953

Story of fifty years in the lives of the Nazarovs, a Russian textile manufacturing family, from the end of the reign of Alexander III to the middle of World war II. Although some of the family became loyal Communists, their former bourgeois background prevented them from keeping high positions in the Soviet Union.

Booklist 44:352 Je 15 '48

"Mrs. Fischer has a real feeling for environment. She has not only brought Moscow to life; she has dramatized it. . . It is this rich sense of reality in her backgrounds that makes Mrs. Fischer's main characters seem all the more designed; suspiciously apt illustrations even for a thesis as pertinent as the present one. No matter how right (and important) a thesis may be, to insist on it in fiction turns the characters into premises and the plot into syllogisms—killing, ironically, precisely that emotional authenticity which might give impetus to the propaganda." Melvin Maddocks

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 1 '48 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '48

"This is an important book, and one that should be read for the authoritative picture it gives of life within the Soviet state, through the years of revolution."

+ Kirkus 16:152 Mr 15 '48 340w

"Mrs. Fischer shows a sympathetic understanding of the Russian people and their suffering. It would be hard to find a more interesting way of understanding Russia than through this fine novel. Highly recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 73:813 My 15 '48 100w

"Mrs. Fischer is Russian-born and has shared in much of the time and many of the events of which she writes. . . Her book, however, is a story of people rather than events or ideas, and somehow seems more valid in its first two-thirds than in its last. It is a spacious story of men and women very like those we ourselves see in Fords or limousines or jostle in subways. These are the people who have lived or are living behind iron curtains. Mrs. Fischer always preserves the hope that some day those people may rediscover the excitement of a freedom that their children have never known." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 6 '48 650w

"Whether received in anger or in praise, 'The Nazarovs' will be recognized as a book of powerful emotional content. Since the history of a betrayed idea is its real subject and since the fates of most of her characters are predictable long in advance, the aliveness of Mrs. Fischer's story is a real achievement. There is a good deal of pedestrian writing in 'The Nazarovs,' an over large cast, an occasionally too rapid acceleration of time, a clumsy interpolating of historical event—but none the less, the book moves and holds the attention. . . Mrs. Fischer grinds a heavy axe in this militantly anti-Stalinist story, but it is one that is deadly sharp." Charles Lee

FISCHER, B. M.—Continued

+ — N Y Times p5 My 30 '48 900w

"At the end of the story, those of the principals who are still alive have in common an ingrained hatred of the Nazis and an even more deeply embedded distaste for the Stalinists, whom they hold responsible for corrupting the Marxist dream. The author quite obviously shares both their aversions. Costumed dialectics."

— New Yorker 24:108 Je 5 '48 140w

"The author has been wise in presenting this story in a novel. In no other way could her knowledge of the Soviet system be told so vividly. She writes without hysteria or malice. But she knows that the fine principles of the early leaders have been aborted. . . She has great pity for the sad, despairing Russian people, caught relentlessly in the trap they all thought was the gate to honor, decency, and true happiness." Oriana Atkinson

+ Sat R of Lit 31:15 Je 12 '48 800w

"As a novelist, Mrs. Fischer set out to study human lives during a period when not merely was an old order overthrown but several more were manufactured and destroyed. If she could have created the outer atmospheres and inner climates through which her characters are supposed to have lived, The Nazarovs would be a novel of great tragic force. But the job calls for more than the style of a competent linguist and the memory of a good reporter. . . Mrs. Fischer has realized the human meaning of separation and terror. But to dramatize humanity against inhumanity, while it may be the best possible counter propaganda for the present age, is not necessarily art."

— + Time 51:90 My 31 '48 300w

Wis Lib Bul 44:149 S '48

FISCHER, BRUNO. Bleeding scissors. 237p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

48-6346

Detective story.

" 'The Bleeding Scissors' is rooted soundly in the scruples of small-town morality and (financial) respectability but these very factors would probably have dissuaded the murderer from his crimes. Still, Fischer's capacity to keep one reading has rarely been keener." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Ap 23 '48 60w

"Mediocre."

Kirkus 16:179 Ap 1 '48 80w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p32 My 2 '48 140w

"Nice, tidy, satisfying job." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 23 '48 70w

FISCHER, MARKOOSHA. See Fischer, B. M.

FISCHER, RUTH. Stalin and German communism; a study in the origins of the state party; with a pref. by Sidney B. Fay [maps by Robert Winslow]. 687p il $8 Harvard univ. press

335.4 Stalin, Iosif. Communism—Germany. Russia—Foreign relations—Germany

48-7950

"[This work] presents a history of world communism from 1917 to 1929, centered upon an analysis of the methods by which Stalin achieved control of the Russian and German Communist parties." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by J. N. Hazard

Am Pol Sci R 42:1226 D '48 600w

Booklist 45:44 O 1 '48

"It is difficult to say what particular aspect of this book is most interesting. . . The one criticism that might be made is that Mrs. Fischer's book is too rich, bringing in so many factors that it is difficult to follow the many threads." S. W. Cassidy

+ — Cath World 168:330 Ja '49 450w

"It is obvious that her background allows Mrs. Fischer to speak with authority. Both her firsthand and high-level experiences, and the thorough documentation of her account, make her disclosure of the methods by which Stalin subjugated the Russian, as well as the German, Communist parties a historic study of supreme importance—and one which has a profound bearing on the past as well as on the future." Ernest Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 S 10 '48 650w

Current Hist 15:226 O '48 120w

Kirkus 16:209 Ap 15 '48 150w

"Author's intimate knowledge, together with use of all available material makes book probably most thorough and complete work on topic. . . Unfortunately author is not quite without bias against Stalin Communism and Social Democrats. Because almost overloaded with detailed and long quotations, book is often tedious reading; the maze of various communist movements often difficult to follow. Will not be read by great masses, but is indispensable for special, and all except small public libraries." H. H. Bernt

+ — Library J 73:1022 Jl '48 210w

Reviewed by Franz Hoellering

Nation 167:407 O 9 '48 1200w

Reviewed by Samuel Grafton

New Repub 119:20 D 6 '48 1150w

"It is rare that a scholarly book of nearly seven hundred pages, published by a university press, promises and deserves to be read by a large public. The unsensational style of the present volume lacks brilliancy and emotional appeal, but for that very reason it carries conviction and firmly drives home an authoritative explanation of the most significant events of our time. . . The author has unusual qualifications for telling the story. . . Her story is thus partly autobiography and partly history, documented from an unusual combination of personal inside information and a conscientious study of the printed sources." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p1 S 5 '48 2150w

New Yorker 24:109 S 18 '48 280w

"This book, restrained and erudite, will contribute substantially to general knowledge of world Communist history. Mrs. Fischer plans to write and publish several sequels to this volume, and doubtless they will all be met with interest. But the reader, after going from page to page with continued attention, tends to skip and reread in the concluding summary, and finally comes up with the question: 'What does this woman believe in?' There is no answer here." Martin Ebon

Sat R of Lit 31:17 S 18 '48 800w

FISHBEIN, MORRIS, and BURGESS, ERNEST WATSON, eds. Successful marriage. 547p il $6 Doubleday

392 Marriage 47-12052

"An authoritative guide to problems related to marriage from the beginning of sexual attraction to matrimony and the successful rearing of a family." (Subtitle) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 44:243 Mr 15 '48

"While marriage is always bound to be something of a gamble, few persons can't improve their chances of making a success of the undertaking. This volume, far and away the best of its kind, will help almost anyone make his married life happier." Ralph Habas

+ Chicago Sun p7 N 30 '47 460w

"As a supplement to and substitute for the marriage counselor, this is an excellent, inclusive guide to problems in the field of marriage, sociological, psychological and sexual. The contributors are physicians and professors of considerable professional standing and progressive outlook."

+ Kirkus 15:592 O 15 '47 120w

"An extremely comprehensive, authoritative discussion. . . Readable; and material well organized." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:1537 N 1 '47 100w

"One of the healthiest aspects of the modern attack upon the problem of marriage and divorce is the frankness in which the sexual side of marriage is being approached by modern writers, the increasing frequency with which the problems are being studied from the psychological viewpoint. This volume is perhaps the most complete and frank in a long series of books in recent years on this important subject." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p16 F 8 '48 600w

Springf'd Republican p10B F 1 '48 180w

FISHER, CYRUS T., pseud. See Teilhet, D.

FISHER, JACOB. Art of detection. 248p $2.75 Rutgers univ. press

351.74 Detectives. Criminal investigation. Crime and criminals—Identification 48-5506

"Presents practical suggestions for any one interested in the techniques of private investigation." School & Society

Reviewed by James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Mr 5 '48 320w

School & Society 67:271 Ap 3 '48 20w

FISHER, VARDIS. Divine passion. (Testament of man ser) 373p $3.50 Vanguard 48-8542

This is the fifth volume in a series written with the purpose of showing mankind's development in religious and moral thinking from prehistoric times to the present. This story concerns, principally, a priest of the Sun-god; a wealthy, lustful leader of his tribe; the latter's wives; and the strange impotent Yescha who in time takes the priest's place.

"The series spins thin; this, while better organized than some of the others, seems to labor long over material one can find in The Golden Bough."

— + Kirkus 16:407 Ag 15 '48 190w

"This book may have some meaning for an anthropologist, but it surely will mystify and bore most readers. . . Not recommended." Donald Wasson

— Library J 73:1273 S 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by M. H. Ley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 O 31 '48 600w

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson

+ N Y Times p21 S 19 '48 750w

"Quite interesting, even if you don't believe, as Mr. Fisher obviously does, that his guess about the unrecorded human past is as good as anybody else's."

New Yorker 24:100 O 2 '48 180w

Reviewed by R. A. Lake

San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 12 '48 1000w

"Mr. Fisher's interpretations of man's development are naturally personal and conjectural. It is easy to see that there is more of modern psychology than anthropology in his approach, and it is possible to feel that his ancient men and women, only just out of the caves, have a strangely modern quality of subtlety in their thinking. Nevertheless, Mr. Fisher is creating his continuous fabric of man's mental history with considerable success and is bringing to bear upon it a powerful poetic imagination. It is a fascinating project, and the volumes I have seen make stimulating reading." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:30 O 2 '48 450w

FITCH, JAMES MARSTON. American building; the forces that shape it. 382p il $5 Houghton

720.973 Building. Architecture—U.S. 48-5133

Historical survey of American architecture from Colonial days to the present, stressing the point of view of the "user" rather than those of the architect, the supplier of materials, or the business man. Index.

Reviewed by C.-E. A. Winslow

Am J Pub Health 38:1164 Ag '48 460w

Booklist 44:230 Mr 1 '48

"Mr. Fitch's 'American Building' carries much information. It tells appreciatively and helpfully the work of many of the country's finest builders. It sets up vigorously a construction of many interlocking problems. But its propagandistic belaboring of an undefined scapegoat, 'capitalism,' along with its superstitious glorification of a neverland 'industrialism,' creates a sense of unreality, and finally, of disappointment. His energy, interest and knowledgeability should take a reader farther, and without so much impatient prodding. Perhaps they would do so if he struggled harder against being stylish, and if he looked at factories with the same critical skepticism with which he observes the place and houses of the factory owners." Philip Burnham

+ — Commonweal 48:658 Ap 23 '48 1350w

"A study of some significance and considerable ramifications, but not for too sharply defined a market, this is an interesting interpretation."

+ Kirkus 16:11 Ja 1 '48 100w

"The great service of 'American Building' is that it achieves a new clear basic formulation of what architecture is about, of what it does or can and should do, in operational terms rather than stylistic ones—and in a simple descriptive manner that any educated layman can completely understand. This is far more important and comprehensive than at first it sounds. The book, in fact, is indispensable today." Douglas Haskell

+ Nation 166:242 F 28 '48 1450w

"He is a lively mixture of the scientific investigator and the propagandist for what he conceives to be the betterment of mankind. What he has to say in both roles deserves the immediate consideration of every person who could do with better health and more convenient living or working arrangements for himself or his community. In these days of doubt, his book is a happy prophecy of the possibilities of the machine age." Harry Bull

+ N Y Times p31 S 12 '48 600w

Reviewed by Lewis Mumford

New Yorker 24:83 My 15 '48 240w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 16 '48 900w

Reviewed by Henry Dreyfuss

Sat R of Lit 31:15 Ap 3 '48 800w

"The first third of this book surveys the major trends in American architecture, especially the architecture of dwellings, from the Colonial to the Victorian period. Although eminently readable and well illustrated, this part is marred by occasional errors of fact and shows a tendency to oversimplify and to dramatize the forces which shaped earlier American building. . . The book will be useful to the architect and contractor; its greatest service, however, is to the layman who should know what he has a right to demand of buildings and who so seldom does."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 4:121 Je '48 250w

FITTS, DUDLEY, ed. Anthology of contemporary Latin-American poetry. rev & enl ed 678p $2.50 New directions

861.08 Spanish American poetry—Collections 48-9974

"Collection of verse, written by Latin-Americans since the death of Ruben Dario in 1916. . . Translations, that strive for literalness without awkwardness, confront the original texts, and the editor is justified in asserting that 'it should be possible for readers even distantly acquainted with the original languages to bring something of the color and tone of the Spanish, Portuguese, or French verses over to the translations.' " Sat R of Lit

FITTS, DUDLEY—Continued

"A book which no library or serious reader should be without." H. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 20 '48 150w

"New Directions has performed a valuable service by making Dudley Fitts's 'An Anthology of Contemporary Latin-American Poetry' available at the modest price of $2.50." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 31:24 Ap 24 '48 110w

Times [London] Lit Sup p291 My 22 '48 2800w

FITZELL, LINCOLN. County lines; stories and songs of the West. 176p $2.50 Morrow
818 California 47-11925

"The 1937 winner of the Shelley Memorial Award recreates here the turbulent years of a California mountain community, through the medium of short stories, lyrics, and a long pastoral poem, 'The Village on the Plain,' first published in the national weekly Extension." (Publisher's note) The short stories, six in number, describe this Sierra foothill town as a small boy sees it.

Booklist 44:233 Mr 1 '48

"There is an attractive and indefineable freshness about these prose sketches and poems about life in a very small western town."

+ Kirkus 15:594 O 15 '47 80w

"The stories, all told by a small boy who made the most of his eyes and ears, are sometimes humorous, sometimes pathetic, and because of their overall excellence, far too short. . . The author's verse is excellent too and does not break the pleasantly quiet mood set up by the short sketches." E. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 23 '47 190w

FITZGERALD, ED. Turning point. 236p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.
48-8997

"A baseball story about a natural, high-spirited boy at the White Plains High School who is asked to play minor-league ball with the Yankees. He finally decides to go through college first." Sat R of Lit

"Central core of good problems in this slangy, breezy baseball yarn. . . One could wish for better writing, and fewer corny jokes."

+ — Kirkus 16:556 O 15 '48 90w

"Wordiness slows up the story at the start. There is a speeding up of the action and a heightening of the suspense in the second half of the book, but the end result is an average sports story." Lillian Morrison

Library J 73:1602 N 1 '48 70w

Sat R of Lit 31:33 N 13 '48 40w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 14 '48 60w

FITZ GIBBON, CONSTANTINE. Arabian bird. 249p $2.75 Rinehart
48-1508

Novel of contemporary England. The central character is Charles Monroe, a sensitive, rather boring Oxford don. As the book opens he is coming home on leave in the fall of 1944. In his London home he discovers evidence that his beloved young second wife has been solaced by another man. The man proves to be Charles' own son by his first marriage. The rest of the story is told in a series of flashbacks.

"The author seems to have read about equal parts of Hemingway and Katharine Mansfield and to have fallen rather awkwardly between the two schools. His characters have strong and brutal emotions, but their conversation (and there is a great deal of it) is vapid and ultimately stupefying. . . I cannot recommend it." D. Mosdell

— Canadian Forum 28:70 Je '48 210w

"For worldlier tastes in feminine fiction, this is an entertaining story of private lives."

Kirkus 16:92 F 15 '48 180w

"A vivid picture of a section of society in wartime England and it is well done. For sophisticated readers and large collections." K. T. Willis

Library J 73:651 Ap 15 '48 110w

"Mr. Fitz Gibbon presents flashes of Monroe's past, allowing his mind to relate past events to the present. The author thus tells the whole story of Monroe's life, until all the out-of-sequence pieces are patched together. Similarly he tells the story of his other characters, and, in several instances, scenes are retold from various points of view. The device could become tedious; the fact that it does not is a tribute to the author's good taste, careful selectivity and great technical skill." J. D. Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 18 '48 450w

"The author's characterizations are all full dimensional, but the most painstakingly achieved is that of Charles Monroe. Here is a superb dissection of a man caught and held by fear." Anne Richards

+ N Y Times p14 Ap 25 '48 400w

"An unusually well-written first novel. . . The only thing that may put you off the book is the son's delight in his own melancholy, a reaction that the author seems to regard as the mark of a tragic personality."

New Yorker 24:113 Ap 17 '48 160w

"Constantine Fitz Gibbon proves without a doubt that wonders can be done with the most threadbare plots and stock situations in fiction, providing the writing is of high enough order. In the case of Mr. Fitz Gibbon, his first novel 'The Arabian Bird' not only makes the most of the triangular dilemma of the husband, wife, and interloper on the domestic scene, but introduces us to a writing talent of uncommon brilliance and perceptiveness." Richard McLaughlin

+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 Jl 3 '48 550w

FITZGIBBON, RUSSELL HUMKE, and others, eds. Constitutions of the Americas (as of January 1, 1948). 847p $10 Univ. of Chicago press
342.8 Constitutions 48-2612

A complete collection in English of the current constitutions of the twenty-two nations in the Americas. There is a brief introductory review of the history of each state. Bibliography. Index.

"It is a thoroughly scholarly production, accurate in technical details, and edited to provide maximum convenience in use. Although the volume is primarily a reference work, it includes a well-written and penetrating introduction by Professor Fitzgibbon." W. S. Stokes

+ Am Pol Sci R 42:1033 O '48 340w

Reviewed by C. G. Fenwick

Ann Am Acad 259:176 S '48 320w

Booklist 45:5 S 1 '48

Reviewed by Will Maslow

Columbia Law R 48:977 S '48 420w

"A formidable and invaluable reference work for students and those interested in international political affairs."

+ Current Hist 15:38 Jl '48 30w

Ethics 59:75 O '48 170w

Reviewed by George Jaffin

Harvard Law R 62:173 N '48 500w

"The volume is of excellent format. It will be most valuable to American scholars, particularly in making comparisons of the constitutional precepts in the different countries at the present time, and hence the editors and translators are to be congratulated on its publication." R. R. Hill

+ Pol Sci Q 63:633 D '48 550w

"This is a heavy volume, both in bulk and reading. It will, however, be of real interest to students of social problems and indispensable to specialists in government." S. G. Inman

Survey G 37:403 S '48 800w

FITZ-SIMONS, FOSTER. Bright leaf. 631p $3.50 Rinehart
48-4481

A story of the development of a huge cigarette industry in a North Carolina town where formerly an aristocratic leisurely class of tobacco growers had been dominant. The protagonist, Brant Royle, hating and envying his neighbors, grasps the opportunity afforded by the advent of a Yankee inventor, to build up a huge industry and acquire great wealth for himself, tho in doing so he fails to get what he most desires in life.

Booklist 45:66 O 15 '48
Kirkus 16:347 Jl 15 '48 160w

"Plot unwinds slowly with few surprises, but interest is held by excellent characterizations and scenes spread over the broad canvass. Highly recommended." H. G. Kelley
+ Library J 73:1089 Ag '48 80w

"Examined for the standard qualifications of plot, characters and readability, Mr. Fitz-Simons's novel proves weak in each category. . . Yet the author has brought into his novel a submerged but often fascinating picture of change coming to a small Southern town; of the growth and decay of opposing ways of life; in effect of the shift from feudalism to industrialism. This picture gives depth and interest to an otherwise routine historical novel."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 3 '48 500w

Reviewed by Lawrence Lee
N Y Times p25 O 3 '48 450w

FLATTER, RICHARD. Shakespeare's producing hand; a study of his marks of expression to be found in the first folio. 184p $3 Norton

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Technique. Shakespeare, William—Stage presentation 48-10432

A study of Shakespeare's use of irregular lines, pauses, etc. which the author considers are, in large part, stage directions, "wrought into the text itself," by Shakespeare, the actor and stage-director. The author's conclusions are based on his work of translating eighteen of the plays into German. Index.

"It is of value to stage directors as well as students and scholars. Recommended for all theatre and Shakespeare collections in the larger libraries." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:1667 N 15 '48 40w

"Mr. Flatter argues honestly, succinctly and plausibly." H. B. C.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 18 '48 160w

"Here is a book about Shakespeare, brief, lucid and to the point, which actually does offer a new angle of approach to that appallingly overstudied genius." Margaret Webster
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 21 '48 600w

"Both actor and academic can learn much from this lucid and subtle book. Our only regret is that the genius of Harley Granville Barker is no longer living to appreciate and to assess an investigation which follows so closely his principles and practice as a Shakespearian scholar and producer."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p570 O 9 '48 1400w

FLES, BARTHOLD (JAN VAN STRAATEN, pseud). Slavonic rhapsody; the life of Antonín Dvořák; il. by Marion Kohs. 231p $2.75 Allen, Towne & Heath

B or 92 Dvořák, Antonín—Juvenile literature
48-10002

A biography of the Bohemian composer, written for young people. The volume contains a complete bibliography of Dvorak's compositions, a list of recordings, and indexes.

+ Kirkus 16:483 S 15 '48 80w

"Although writing is not notable, the facts are there and Dvorak emerges as a likable personality. . . Recommended for ages 11-14." Clara Adams
+ Library J 73:1603 N 1 '48 80w

Music Lib Assn Notes 6:167 D '48 180w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 16 '49 280w

"Young readers need not be music lovers to enjoy this absorbing story." N. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p31 Ja 16 '49 100w
Sat R of Lit 31:34 N 13 '48 40w

FLESCH, RUDOLF FRANZ, and LASS, ABRAHAM HAROLD. Way to write. 342p $1.96 Harper

808 English language—Composition and exercises
48-441

"The author of the popular Art of Plain Talk [Book Review Digest 1946] presents the art of writing, planned for the amateur." (Cleveland Open Shelf) Partial contents: How to start; How to get ideas; How to put your ideas in order; How to write up your ideas; How to talk to a reader; How to say it on paper; How to save words; How to get the most out of words; How to find the right word; How to make it fun to read. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '48

"The combination of two authors—one of whom is experienced in writing material for general public interest, while the other has had actual experience in classroom work—appears to have been a happy one in this instance. Certainly, everything else being equal, better textbooks may be written by a union of persons experienced in expression with persons experienced in what is expressed." E. S. Lide
+ School R 56:369 Je '48 1050w

FLETCHER, D. W. Watch repairing as a hobby. 64p il $1.50 Pitman

681.114 Clocks and watches—Repairing
A48-81

"Written by an experienced amateur, this small book describes tools and how to use them. Tells how to clean a watch, how to diagnose and remedy minor repairs and how to keep a watch in running order." Library J

Booklist 44:377 Jl 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:202 F 1 '48 30w

"The text is written clearly and is well illustrated. A great deal of information is left out, but this is perhaps to the beginner's advantage."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:72 O '47

FLETCHER, GEORGE U., pseud. See Pratt, F.

FLETCHER, HARRY LUTF VERNE. Woman's house. 280p $2.75 Messner
48-6205

Novel of the events that take place in a Welsh village when a tramp is mistaken for Lizbeth Humphries' husband who had been lost at sea.

Booklist 44:282 Ap 15 '48
Kirkus 16:5 Ja 1 '48 180w

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle
Library J 73:336 F 15 '48 190w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 30 '48 70w

"The unusual situation is handled with dexterity and sensitive understanding." D. F. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p10B Ap 25 '48 60w

FLETCHER, MRS INGLIS (CLARK). Roanoke hundred. 492p $3.50 Bobbs

Grenville, Sir Richard—Fiction
48-8702

Historical novel based on the Grenville expedition to Roanoke, Virginia. It pictures the court life of the days of Queen Elizabeth, and the manners and customs of the people of Devon and Cornwall. The title is taken from the hundred and eight Englishmen who settled on Roanoke Island in 1585. The climax of the novel is the famous fight of the Revenge at The Azores, where Grenville lost his life.

FLETCHER, I. C.—Continued

Booklist 45:88 N 1 '48

Reviewed by Jex Martin
Chicago Sun N 23 '48 380w

" 'Roanoke Hundred' is at its best in the passages describing the new land in Virginia, the reaction of the Indians to the coming of the white men, the reaction of the white men to the grim challenge of the wilderness, and the struggle for supremacy between two men, Grenville and Lane. . . As always, Inglis Fletcher's characterizations are competent—if perhaps a trifle cursory." Irene Gulzeth
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 O 26 '48 420w

"Inglis Fletcher can weave a vast amount of historical detail into an entertaining narrative, for those who prefer history that way. But the story limps somewhat haltingly amidst the mass of detail, and the main characters have to contend for recognition with a host of others." R. W. Henderson
Library J 73:1384 O 1 '48 100w

"Miss Fletcher has written before of Virginia and Carolina history, mingling fact with fiction. 'Roanoke Hundred' is by far her best book." P. J. Searles
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 24 '48 370w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p35 O 24 '48 500w

"The author is at her best when telling factually—or almost factually—of the trials of the colonists and of their dealings with the Indians, which culminated in the Englishmen's return home after fifteen months; she is very ill at ease, however, in the Elizabethan world of gentle ladies, hot passions, and finicking conversation. The book has vitality, even if the characters move across its pages like chessmen, and Mrs. Fletcher has kindly documented it with some contemporary letters that make literate and informative reading."
+ — New Yorker 24:129 O 23 '48 120w

" 'Roanoke Hundred' communicates that same tonic effect that all Miss Fletcher's stories produce, that life is to be lived zestfully and abundantly." Anne Comfort
+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 28 '48 600w

Wis Lib Bul 44:214 D '48

FLETCHER, JOSEPH FRANCIS, ed. Christianity and property. 221p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.

261 Sociology, Christian. Property 47-3288

Eight essays on the problem of the relation of Christianity to the ownership of property. With one exception the authors are clergymen of the Episcopal church. Index.

"I would not know where to lay hand upon a volume which discusses the theme as thoroughly and with as comprehensive a grasp of the whole history of Christian thought and practice in this field as does this cooperatively written and intelligently edited volume. That even this book lacks complete inclusiveness is due to the evident agreement of the eight eminent contributors that socialism is the only economic system that is ultimately consistent with Christian principles." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 64:1397 N 19 '47 1100w

"It would be difficult to find a book more concerned with the basic issues of the day than this one. It is timely, scholarly, thorough, and covers a field that has long needed just this treatment." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 162:18 F 1 '48 250w

FLEXNER, HORTENSE (MRS WYNCIE KING). Puzzle pond; drawings by Wyncie King. 63p $1.75 Lippincott

48-7858

Wedge was a beaver, and Puzzle Pond was built by him on an island off the coast of Maine. Davy, was a small boy who saved Wedge from being caught in a steel trap. But eventually Davy caught Wedge in a box and took him back to Juniper, to live with his beaver family.

"Well written, with an important point made about using the humane animal trap." L. S. Bechtel
+ Commonweal 49:149 N 19 '48 50w

"Entertaining true story." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:45 Ja '49 40w

"The story is truly funny; the talk is good 'down Maine'; Davy is clever, brave and a real boy. The fact that it all happened on Rachel Field's Sutton Island is delightful. Far more important is the effect of this brief story and modest little book on boys themselves. Two I know, of eight and ten, one a 'slow reader,' one sophisticated, both said with shining eyes, 'It's tops.' " L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 30 '49 190w

"This entertaining story is founded on a true incident that happened on the island where Rachel Field wrote 'Hitty.' It is illustrated with amusing black and white drawings."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:40 N 13 '48 120w

FLEXNER, JAMES THOMAS. American painting: first flowers of our wilderness. 368p il col pl $10 Houghton

759.1 Painting, American 47-12171

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"Mr. Flexner demonstrates again the fact that the study of art is no 'science' that is sufficient unto itself and that can be abstracted from its historical setting or continuity. For the much needed understanding of American cultural history this is indeed a welcome contribution." Laurence Schmeckebier
+ Am Hist R 53:631 Ap '48 440w

"The book is readable, and the pictures in themselves are informing and delightful. The text compiles source material which is welcome. Mr. Flexner adds his personal exuberance over the emergence of a native art. Critics may not see eye to eye with some of his theories; but the book is more important for presenting so freshly information, not commonly known, and possibly sowing the seed of critical dissent which may encourage a good deal more investigation and possibly a diverging classification." Dorothy Adlow
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 13 '48 950w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '48

"It is, let us say at once, much the best general work on that subject that has yet appeared; but it is a book difficult for a reviewer, at least this reviewer, to regard objectively because of a plethora of broad, unsupported generalizations on history and art. . . If this review seems somewhat carping, the author has 'asked for it' by frequently asserting his omniscience and pouring scorn on earlier and less confident workers in the field. . . The book is liberally illustrated. The black and white reproductions have warmth and depth but lack sharpness and clarity. But the eight colored illustrations are very badly done; the colors are crude and bear only a superficial resemblance to those of the originals." S. E. Morison
— + New Eng Q 21:254 Je '48 1100w

"Its slighting of the southern painters, and even Gustavus Hesselius notwithstanding, the book combines careful research on what is known of the progenitors of American art with a pleasantly written analysis of their aims and achievements."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 4:2 Mr '48 280w

Reviewed by G. H. Hamilton
Yale R n s 37:539 spring '48 650w

FLEXNER, JAMES THOMAS. John Singleton Copley. 139p 33pl $7.50 Houghton

B or 92 Copley, John Singleton 48-10262

"This volume is a completely revised and greatly enlarged version of the biography of John Singleton Copley originally published by The Viking Press, Inc., in 1939 as part of James Thomas Flexner's book, America's Old Masters." (Note) Contains numerous black and white reproductions of Copley's works, and one color plate. Catalog of illustrations. Index.

Booklist 45:106 N 15 '48

"Thoughtful and comprehensive study." O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 7 '48 50w

"This story of a brilliant career and its gradual disintegration, with the thirty odd illustrations of his work, will find its place among art students and lovers."

+ Kirkus 16:387 Ag 1 '48 170w

"Recommended for popular use." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 74:62 Ja 1 '49 110w

Reviewed by Benjamin Rowland

Nation 167:697 D 18 '48 1350w

"To this reader it seems that the author himself follows the rise and fall of his idol somewhat uncritically. It is the novel-like quality of the events and the tragedy of the central character that remain with the reader at the end rather than a profound critical interpretation of Copley's art." Howard Devree

N Y Times p10 D 19 '48 130w

Reviewed by Alfred Frankenstein

San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 28 '48 200w

FLINK, SALOMON. The American economy; a functional analysis of economic principles and practices. 746p $4.75 Dryden

330 U.S.—Economic conditions. Economics 48-1403

A college textbook in economics. "In it Profesor Flink, to paraphrase his prefatory claim, has attempted by a running step-by-step integration of theory, on the one hand, and the description of pertinently significant features of the economy in actual operation on the other, in a unique way, to assist the student to avoid the distortions in viewpoint and the blurred perspective which are apt to result from an over-emphasis on either." (Am Econ R)

"From the point of view of composition, typography, and physical construction this volume is one of the most attractive texts in economics which the present reviewer has ever examined. . . The general coverage and clarity of the descriptive portions of the book is one of its better features. That these passages are geared into the theoretical parts in such a way as to supplement and most effectively illustrate them, however, is open to serious question. . . The use of case studies to illustrate market type situations is an inspired idea. But the reader is somewhat confused as to what case illustrates what type. . . In the chapter on wages, the diminishing marginal revenue productivity basis for demand is not developed and the essential and fertile topic, monopsony in the labor market, not discussed. The rent theory, largely confined to land, smacks of Ricardo. . . In spite of these theoretical short-comings and the author's failure at times properly to mesh abstract analysis and factual description, the student will find much to interest him in this volume." G. J. Cady

+ — Am Econ R 38:643 S '48 1250w

"The work is scholarly and well-written. While primarily intended as a textbook, the volume will find a place as a reference work in such courses as economics, sociology, and contemporary problems." J. F. Santee

+ Social Studies 39:376 D '48 750w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. Behind the silver shield. 195p il $2.75 Lippincott

351.74 Police—U.S. 48-8322

A description of police life and work, with stories of actual cases. Partial contents: Girded for battle; Emergency call; Duel at 70 miles an hour; Patrol in a prowl car; Genesis of a patrolman; Police through the ages; Detectives at work; Science steps in. No index.

Booklist 45:122 D 1 '48

"Recommended for grades 5-9." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 73:1600 N 1 '48 60w

"'Behind the Silver Shield' can be read with profit either as a career book or as a reassuring description of police efficiency." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 7 '48 190w

"A valuable section gives practical vocational guidance for aspiring policemen. Here is a complete discussion of the necessary requirements, methods of selection, and training program." W. G. T.

+ Sat R of Lit 31:45 N 13 '48 130w

School & Society 68:223 S 25 '48 10w

"Mr. Floherty provides a full-dimensioned picture of city police and makes the reader aware of the magnitude of the task of preserving law and order among 14,000,000 people."

+ Springf'd Republican p7B S 19 '48 210w

FLOHERTY, JOHN JOSEPH. White terror; adventures with the Ice patrol. 183p il $2.75 Lippincott

351.792 U.S. Coast guard 47-11707

Stories of tragedies at sea which occurred before the inauguration of the International ice patrol in 1914, and of the work of the ice patrol ships of the United States coast guard since that time.

Booklist 44:188 Ja 15 '48

"The stories are all true and thrilling, heroic tales of daring and sacrifice, of breathless escapes and often tragedy. Among them is a dramatic, but restrained account of the sinking of the Titanic, one of the greatest of sea disasters. Some splendid and impressive photographs, taken by the author himself, are included in the book."' A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:122 Mr '48 120w

Reviewed by Dorotha Dawson

Library J 73:205 F 1 '48 60w

Reviewed by Felix Riesenberg

N Y Times p19 Ja 4 '48 140w

Wis Lib Bul 44:25 Ja '48

FLOOD, RICHARD T. Pass that puck; il. by C. L. Hartman. 136p $2.50 Houghton

48-8323

A story of ice hockey in a New England school. It tells of the clash of two strong personalities: Whitey, the team manager, and Nat, the cocky center. For grades 6-8.

Booklist 45:90 N 1 '48

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 9 '48 180w

"Match games and a New England blizzard furnish excitement and sustain interest in this good sport story for young people." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:462 N '48 80w

"A good ice hockey story."

+ Kirkus 16:482 F 15 '48 170w

Sat R of Lit 31:33 N 13 '48 10w

FLORENCE, PHILIP SARGANT, and BALDAMUS, W. Investment, location, and size of plant; a realistic inquiry into the structure of British and American industries. (Nat. inst. of economic and social research. Economic and social studies) 211p $3.75 Macmillan (for the Cambridge univ. press)

658.2 Industry—Organization, control, etc. [48-3062]

"This book is one of a number of studies published by the National Institute of Economic and Social Research and printed by the University of Cambridge Press in England. It is a statistical study based upon English and American census data. The chapter headings

FLORENCE, P. S.—Continued
are as follows: (1) 'The Differentiation and Grouping of Industries'; (2) 'The Measurement of a Prevalent Size of Plant in an Industry'; (3) 'Determinants of Prevalent Sizes of Plant in Different Industries'; (4) 'Location and Size of Plant'; (5) 'Investment and Size of Plant'; (6) 'Public Policy and Size of Plant'; (7) 'General Summary.' In addition there are five appendices containing supplementary data and comparisons between British and American industries." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"The treatment is statistical in character and must therefore be read slowly and studied to derive any benefit." D. S. Kimball
Ann Am Acad 260:233 N '48 340w

"At fundamental points the work is so ambiguous that none of the findings can be deemed established, but one of the two main findings is interesting and deserves further study. This finding is that (1) the more concentrated geographically an industry is, up to a certain point, the larger is the typical plant, but (2) if the industry is highly concentrated, the typical plant is medium-sized or possibly even smaller. . . The second major finding is that horsepower (taken as a measure of investment) per worker increases with plant size separately in 'continuous' and 'assembly' industries, although there is no apparent relationship when the two types of industries are merged. This finding is significant only if the distinction between the two types of industries is clear and meaningful, and I must confess that it eludes me." G. J. Stigler
J Pol Econ 56:556 D '48 1100w

FLORES, ANGEL, and BENARDETE, MERCEDES JOSE, eds. Cervantes across the centuries. 371p $4.75 Dryden

863.32 Cervantes Saavedra, Miguel de
48-5819

"The present volume is an expansion of an earlier compilation by the same editors, 'The Anatomy of Don Quixote' (Ithaca, N.Y., 1932). In its new form the collection contains nineteen essays and a selected bibliography. All are in English, the translations of foreign studies being done by different hands. . . The essays cover a wide range of topic and of origin. Most of the leading critical scholars of the last thirty years are represented, though Paul Hazard and Salvador de Madariaga are absent. France, Italy, Russia, and Spain contribute to the picture; English criticism is omitted." (Yale R) Selected bibliography. No index.

"The essays of greatest direct interest to our own readers are probably Harry Levin's 'Don Quixote' and 'Moby Dick,' a provocative comparison between Cervantes and Melville, and Edwin B. Knowles' 'Cervantes and English Literature.' . . Another one of our own Cervantists whose contribution is original and controversial is Mack Singleton, who contends stoutly that the posthumous 'Persiles and Sigismunda,' which has always plagued the experts because of its obvious inferiority to the other later writings, such as the second part of 'Don Quixote' or the 'Exemplary Novels,' was written during the author's apprenticeship, not in his maturity. . . [It is] a collection that offers nothing useless, however much its pieces vary in merit and consequence." Herschel Brickell
+ N Y Times p24 Jl 11 '48 800w

"The English versions vary greatly in excellence. Some are thoroughly satisfying; others, unfortunately, are so bungling as to make it difficult at times to follow the meaning of the text, unless one retranslates them into the original idiom." Howard Keniston
+ — Yale R n s 38:160 autumn '48 550w

FLOWER, SIR NEWMAN. George Frideric Handel, his personality and his times. new rev ed 399p il $6 Scribner

B or 92 Händel, Georg Friedrich 48-6032

A revised edition of a biography of Handel which is now more complete, as the result of further research since the first edition (Book Review Digest 1923). Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:316 My 15 '48

"It is twenty-five years since the first publication of this book, and for most purposes it still is the best biography of the composer in English. . . This is, at last, a thorough reexamination of the book, really up to date, making use of the most recent Handel research. . . Highly recommended." Leonard Burkat
+ Library J 73:815 My 15 '48 110w

"Will interest anybody who knows Handel or likes music or has a feeling for the eighteenth century."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 21 '48 30w

"This is not a technical study of the vast outpouring of works that flowed from Handel's pen. It is a vivid, colorful and vastly interesting story of the man who created music which has survived and retained, undiminished, the keen interest and admiration of both casual and critical listeners for over 200 years." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 20 '48 320w

FLOWER, ROBIN. The Irish tradition. 182p $3 Oxford

891.6209 Irish literature—History and criticism [48-7763]

"Owing to failing health, the late Dr. Robin Flower was unable to write the history of Irish literature which he had long planned. . . But this collection of studies, which has been prepared for the press by Professor Myles Dillon and annotated by Mr. David Greene, may be regarded as preliminary material for the complete work. The collection is based largely on the Donnellan Lectures which Dr. Flower delivered at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1938, and on his Sir John Rhys Memorial Lecture for 1927, 'Ireland and Medieval Europe,' together with other matter. . . Each chapter displays certain aspects of Gaelic literature from the early Middle Ages to the Norman Conquest." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Frank O'Connor
New Statesman & Nation 35:280 Ap 3 '48 1000w

"It is odd, I know, to use the word charming for a work of scholarship, but Dr. Flower's 'The Irish Tradition,' because it is written with an eagerness that scholars seldom keep and with a delight in his subject, is a charming book." Padraic Colum
+ Sat R of Lit 31:14 Jl 24 '48 950w

"This is a valuable and scholarly book with excellent verse translations. But its effect upon one reader at least was to remind him that in religion, as well as elsewhere, the mean is still golden, and that even the ages of doubt can have advantages." Monk Gibbon
+ — Spec 180:504 Ap 23 '48 360w

"We can surmise what Dr. Flower's history would have been like had he lived to achieve his ambition, for he was a scholar of marked predilection and chose for his particular interest what pleased him best. But would he have paid as scant attention as he does in these studies to the main tradition of bardic verse? . . Owing to its clear and effective style, the present book will tell much to the reader who is not acquainted with Gaelic tradition, though others may feel that sheer speculation cannot be authenticated by picturesqueness of phrase."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p104 F 21 '48 1150w

FLYNN, JOHN THOMAS. Roosevelt myth. 438p $3.50 Devin-Adair

973.918 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 48-8255

A critical account of the New Deal and of Franklin D. Roosevelt in particular, by the author of Country Squire in the White House (Book Review Digest 1940). Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
— Atlantic 182:105 O '48 950w

"Mr. Flynn has grace and force of literary style, and the courage to attack a superstition that still holds in thrall millions among whom he still must live and upon whom his living may depend." J. M. Gillis
+ Cath World 168:85 O '48 950w

Christian Century 65:1011 S 29 '48 230w

Reviewed by John Beaufort
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 16 '48 1500w

"An objective and critical analysis of any national administration is welcomed by all scholars worthy of the name. It is unfortunate that a man of Mr. Flynn's talents has not given us that analysis. His deep-seated bitterness has prevented such an accomplishment, and we are all losers because of it." J. G. Kerwin
Commonweal 49:177 N 26 '48 450w

"Criticism, biased, but researched, that includes both public and family faces of the man, those he followed and/or betrayed. A man in the street approach, to questions still perhaps too close for fair appraisal."
Kirkus 16:383 Ag 1 '48 150w

"Mr. Flynn's book does perform a useful service, I suppose, in collecting for easy reference practically all the printable anti-Roosevelt stories. But his main charges against the Roosevelt administration are simply hysterical; and his vehemence in detail defeats his own purpose. After all, this is a century where the superlatives of criticism should be reserved for the Stalins and Hitlers. Mr. Flynn's abuse of Roosevelt sinks under its own weight." Arthur Schlesinger, jr.
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 N 7 '48 1550w

"No man could have been as lacking in morals, principles, aspirations, thoughts, understanding and human beliefs (as Flynn says Roosevelt was) and win the love and faith that he did from so many millions here and abroad for so many years. Flynn's Roosevelt of the New Deal and Beard's Roosevelt of the war years seem hardly likely to be the Roosevelt whom history will accept. This is the Roosevelt evolved by angry men who subscribe to the devil theory of history. . . Now he is being made diabolis ex machina, risen to ruin a nation and plunge it into war for the sake of personal power and glory. Thus to compare Roosevelt by implication with the madman of Berchtesgaden seems hardly to write with fairness or honor." Karl Schriftgiesser
— N Y Times p3 S 5 '48 1750w

New Yorker 24:103 S 11 '48 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 O 3 '48 400w

"This is another 'hate Roosevelt' book—the most hating of all. If a future volume should exceed it in venom, it would be pure mania. Actually, this is not a book on the late President. It is a case study of a writer's pathological hatred. The book is a complete waste of time for anyone seeking information about Roosevelt. It's possible the volume might be of some interest to a psychiatrist studying literary phobias." R. S. Allen
— Sat R of Lit 31:13 S 4 '48 400w

FOLDES, ANDOR. Keys to the keyboard; a book for pianists; with explanatory music. 117p $2 Dutton

786.3 Piano—Instruction and study 48-1001

A concert pianist presents here the problems of piano playing. Contents: Getting the right start; Reading and listening; Technique; The art of practicing; Memorizing; Getting ready to play in public; Thoughts about performing; Questions and answers about piano playing; A list of contemporary piano music suitable for teaching purposes. Index.

"Because the author makes no attempt to define the musical terms which he uses, this book will be intelligible only to those who have some musical education and will be most useful to beginning teachers who have had no teacher-training courses."
Booklist 44:245 Mr 15 '48

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '48

"A book for pianists by an established concert pianist presents an interesting and thoughtful approach for students of the piano."
+ Kirkus 16:142 Mr 1 '48 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 21 '48 170w

FOLEY, MARTHA, ed. Best American short stories, 1948; and the Yearbook of the American short story. 368p $3.75 Houghton

Short stories—Collections (16-11387)

Contents: Part of the act, by Sidney Alexander; A distant episode, by Paul Bowles; I see you never, by Ray Bradbury, The apprentice, by Dorothy Canfield; The enormous radio, by John Cheever; That's my Johnny-boy, by G. R. Clay; Visitor from Philadelphia, by J. B. Clayton; A letter to Mr. Priest, by Margaret Cousins; The hollow heart, by M. F. K. Fisher; 'Fly, fly, little dove,' by Philip Garrigan; Miami-New York, by Martha Gellhorn; Sparrow's last jump, by Elliott Grennard; The human fly, by Ralph Gustafson; Why were you sent out here? by John Hersey; The dawn swings in, by Lance Jeffers; Morning, a week before the crime, by Victoria Lincoln; The terror in the streets, by Robert Lowry; The burden, by J. A. Lynch; The search, by Vincent McHugh; The professor and the puli, by Robert Morse; The stupendous fortune, by Ruth Portugal; That's the man! by M. B. Post; Carmencita, by Waverly Root; The tragedy in Jancie Brierman's life, by Dolph Sharp; Beyond the glass mountain, by Wallace Stegner; The plan, by Sidney Sulkin; The whole world knows, by Eudora Welty; The second tree from the corner, by E. B. White.

Atlantic 182:121 D '48 100w

Booklist 45:66 O 15 '48

Kirkus 16:372 Ag 1 '48 180w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 119:26 N 29 '48 270w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 O 24 '48 600w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks
N Y Times p4 S 19 '48 430w

"The 28 stories here included are all of them excellent reading, whether they are the 'best' or not." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 23 '48 600w

Reviewed by Hollis Alpert
Sat R of Lit 31:15 O 23 '48 1000w

FOLEY, RAE, pseud. See Denniston, E.

FOLTZ, CHARLES. Masquerade in Spain. 375p $4 Houghton

946.082 Spain—Politics and government 48-2571

The author was an Associated Press correspondent in Spain during the Civil war and World war II. His book is a report on political and economic conditions there, emphasizing his contention that the real rulers of Spain are the members of an oligarchy—he calls them The Family—a small minority who hold all Spain in their power. Notes, sources, and bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Foltz has written in some ways, the most interesting and revealing book on Franco's Spain that has appeared in recent years." J. A. Brandt
+ Am Hist R 54:355 Ja '49 200w

Booklist 44:365 Jl 1 '48

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning
Cath World 167:473 Ag '48 470w

"There is no book today that gives a better or more complete picture of the Iberian peninsula—one of the world's vital areas." Irving Pflaum
+ Chicago Sun Je 1 '48 330w

FOLTZ, CHARLES—Continued
Reviewed by DeWitt John
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 16 '48 300w
Kirkus 16:187 Ap 1 '48 170w
Reviewed by J. H. Berthel
Library J 73:811 My 15 '48 180w

"Mr. Foltz's thesis is that the ruling classes in Spain are merely using Franco as a tool for their own ends—hence the 'masquerade.' . . Mr. Foltz brings forward a number of arguments in support of this theory. However, it is obviously an oversimplification of the problem." T. J. Hamilton
Nation 166:663 Je 12 '48 650w

"In this generally sound picture, Mr. Foltz, I think, makes two errors. First, he omits the power of ideology to capture allegiance. . . A corollary error is Mr. Foltz's underestimation of the shrewd personality and power of Francisco Franco. . . To sum up, Mr. Foltz's book is both a useful and a notable one: useful for its clear analysis and accurate closeup of Franco's regime and for its concrete program for the democratic world; notable because of its ability to view the present in the long range perspective of Spain's past. It is this combination which makes 'Masquerade in Spain' the best in a series of excellent recent reports, the best indeed since Gerald Brenan's 'The Spanish Labyrinth.'" B. D. Wolfe
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 20 '48 1300w

"Whether one agrees with the thesis or not, the argument is stimulating and backed by many facts and experiences. Certainly this is an essentially sound and thoroughly honest book, full of wholesome and righteous wrath. Its account of the rise of falangism is the best that this writer has yet found. . . The reader, however, must be uneasy that so many conjectures are given as facts and so many details are incorrect." H. L. Matthews
+ — N Y Times p12 Je 13 '48 1000w
Discussion by Charles Foltz, jr.
N Y Times p19 Ag 1 '48 650w
Reviewed by R. G. Colodny
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 27 '48 900w
Reviewed by Herschel Brickell
Sat R of Lit 31:10 Je 12 '48 800w
Wis Lib Bul 44:148 S '48

FONDA, GORTON ROSA, and SEITZ, FREDERICK, eds. Preparation and characteristics of solid luminescent materials; symposium held at Cornell university, October 24-26, 1946; sponsored by the Division of electron optics of the American physical society; pub. under the auspices of the National research council. 459p il $5 Wiley

535.3 Luminescence 48-2716

"The 29 papers and much of the discussion presented at the American Physical Society symposium of luminescent solids held at Cornell in 1946 form the contents of the book. The papers cover six general topics: general characteristics and methods of preparation, recent developments in theory and experiment, factors affecting fluorescent characteristics, storage of luminescent energy, miscellaneous aspects of fluorescence, and luminescence—experiment and theory." (Chem Eng) No index.

"The first section of four papers serves as an excellent introduction to the subject and may be read profitably by those wishing a simple presentation of preparatory methods and general properties. . . The book is equally recommended to those who wish to gain a survey knowledge or to those desiring more specialized information about a subject which is becoming increasingly important from both a theoretical and practical standpoint. The quality of printing, paper, and make-up is excellent." A. L. Smith
+ Chem Eng 55:344 N '48 220w
Library J 73:655 Ap 15 '48 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:41 My '48

FONER, PHILIP S., ed. Jack London, American rebel. See London, J.

FOOTE, JOHN TAINTOR. Anglers all [his] great fishing stories [il by Milton Weiler]. 212p $3 Appleton-Century 47-12238

Collection of short stories on fishing, many of them humorous. All but two have been previously printed.

Kirkus 15:515 S 15 '47 110w

"Ranks with the best in fishing stories. Charmingly illustrated." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 73:42 Ja 1 '48 30w
Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold
San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 14 '47 90w

FORBES, BERTIE CHARLES, ed. America's fifty foremost business leaders. 483p il $5 Forbes

923.373 Business men. U.S.—Biography 48-7972

Short biographies of the fifty American business leaders voted the most outstanding in a nation-wide poll made by the editors of Forbes magazine. Portraits. No index.

"Recommended where such material is needed." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 73:1187 S 1 '48 130w

"The many anecdotes supplementing the background data given here make highly interesting reading."
+ Management R 37:535 O '48 30w

FORBES, ESTHER. Running of the tide. 632p $4 Houghton 48-4573

Chronicles the life of Salem, Massachusetts, from 1795 until after the War of 1812. During those years Salem reached the peak of her golden age, with her ships sailing to all quarters of the globe and returning with rich cargoes. The novel describes principally the lives of the various Inmans, a family of Salem ship owners, tracing their rise to wealth, and their decline as ship owners. Two of the four Inman brothers made fortunes, but Captain Dash remained loyal to his two loves: the sea and Polly Mompesson, the spoiled beauty whom he was never allowed to marry.

"To her books Miss Forbes brings a deep and delving delight in the past, a feeling for the New England character by turns shrewd and romantic, and the pepper and salt of everyday living which she translates so accurately into another century. . . [In] The Running of the Tide the color and essential masculinity of the town when the fleet is making ready have the touch of authenticity, but the chapters at sea and the snatches of seafaring talk as they come back to us from the parlors do not carry an equal force. . . It is of men ashore and of women who wait that Miss Forbes writes—and that, after all, was essentially the Salem which was at last left high and dry." Edward Weeks
+ — Atlantic 182:98 O '48 1100w
Booklist 45:51 O 1 '48
Reviewed by F. N. Litten
Chicago Sun O 12 '48 450w

"For this reviewer, it is not easy to define the disappointment which this highly publicized and much praised novel produces. . . There is throughout, indeed, a curious lack of reasonableness: one feels no conviction that these people would have done the things which Miss Forbes induces them to do. . . However, for the thousands of readers who appear to be still unsatiated by lengthy and involved historical novels, 'The Running of the Tide' is a superior specimen of its kind, backed by sound scholarship and offering, in its negative way, an authentic picture of a brilliant period." Margaret Williamson
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 S 30 '48 850w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '48

Reviewed by M. E. Jones
Commonweal 49:17 O 15 '48 80w

"Good Americana."
+ Kirkus 16:292 Je 15 '48 170w

"Cleverly contrived, absorbing, Faustian flavor, romantic, sea, historical interest, relieved by occasional humorous episodes. Concern with numerous love affairs, women, makes appeal more feminine than general. Probable best seller." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 73:1026 Jl '48 100w

"'The Running of the Tide' is so clearly a pot-boiler—and this despite Miss Forbes's reputation as a historian—that it really should not be reviewed at all in a serious magazine. . . Actually Miss Forbes's story of the seafarers of Salem has but a single thing to recommend it—its presumable historical accuracy. For the rest it is a tedious romance aimed at the movies." Diana Trilling
— + Nation 167:500 O 30 '48 290w

"This is Salem, convincingly set forth, in a living panorama of fifty years: good history presented in good fiction. I know no chronicle of a New England town that is better than 'The Running of the Tide,' nor any Salem novel to be compared with it since Hawthorne." Carl Van Doren
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 O 3 '48 1300w

"Miss Forbes has brought a vanished epoch to life again, which is commendable. She has also given true life to the many characters who swarm through her novel, and that is even better. . . At times she is woefully sentimental, but the sentiment is acceptable, since it springs out of character that has the warmth and breadth and depth of life." Charles Poore
+ N Y Times p1 O 3 '48 1450w

"Miss Forbes reconstructs the old port with a care that is admirable, if at times overloving. The drawing rooms there occasionally get somewhat wearisome, but there's a minimum of swashbuckling, no hussy worth mentioning, and some good characterization. Put together with nice nautical precision."
+ New Yorker 24:132 O 16 '48 230w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p10 O 3 '48 800w

"This is Salem's book, from first to last. The fact remains that most of it is good reading, even if there is much too much of it at all points except the dramatic climaxes. Many of the minor characters are excellently conceived and drawn. The smell, the mood, the color of the town are always convincing. Such slips as I notice have little or nothing to do with Salem itself." Alexander Laing
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:15 O 9 '48 1100w
Time 52:113 O 11 '48 320w
Wis Lib Bul 44:185 N '48

FORD, EDWARD. Jeff Roberts, railroader; il. by Manning deV. Lee. 228p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.
48-6782

"Young Jeff Roberts, born and raised in a family of railroaders, starts in the lowliest of jobs—a callboy who tells the train crews when to report for work. He earns the right to move one step farther toward his ultimate goal when he becomes a fireman. . . Jeff eventually achieves his desire and becomes a full-fledged engineer." (N Y Times) For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 44:358 Je 15 '48

"Next to sitting in the cab of a giant Q4 freight locomotive with your hand on the throttle, reading this exciting book on railroading is heartily recommended as an excellent way to learn what it feels like to be an engineer." H. B. Lent
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 4 '48 180w
Wis Lib Bul 44:135 Je '48

FORD, LESLIE, pseud. See Brown, Z.

FORESTER, CECIL SCOTT. The sky and the forest. 313p $2.75 Little 48-5977

Story of the life of an African native, Loa, god and king of a small village in the jungle. For centuries Loa's village had been unknown to the outside world but then it is suddenly invaded by Arab slavers. Loa is carried off with his people but after a year is rescued and returns home. There for a quarter of a century he rules again until once more invaders, Europeans this time, come, and Loa is killed.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 182:100 S '48 500w
Booklist 45:13 S 1 '48

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun Ag 12 '48 650w

"More treatise than novel, more allegory than either, 'The Sky and the Forest' is a strange, exotic picture of people too foreign to be sympathetic, too vivid to be dismissed. Men in the raw—whether of today or yesterday—Mr. Forester finds a sorrowful sight. A moral underlies this grim and savage tale." Margaret Hubbard
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 12 '48 330w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel
Christian Science Monitor p15 S 23 '48 450w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '48
Kirkus 16:287 Je 15 '48 250w

"A superior adventure story, told with the skill expected from the author of the Captain Hornblower novels. It has the added interest of giving a credible account of the growth in capacity and character of Forester's primitive hero, and of being set in that part of the world where—according to Toynbee—the rebuilding of civilization would most likely begin after the atomic wars." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 73:944 Je 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p3 S 10 '48 90w

"For all its lack of something that Melville or Conrad might have supplied, 'The Sky and the Forest' remains a sincere and thoughtful experiment, even suggestively a parable for our own times." James Hilton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ag 15 '48 950w

"When it comes to the tactics of surprise, Capt. Horatio Hornblower has nothing on his agile-minded creator, C. S. Forester. His new book is a dazzling exhibition of his storytelling virtuosity, and will appeal to those who respond to the implied idea as well as those seeking the enchantment of narrative. It is Forester at the top of his talent." M. E. Greene
+ N Y Times p5 Ag 15 '48 1050w
New Yorker 34:69 Ag 28 '48 120w

"I've had a few advance readers of 'The Sky and the Forest' tell me that they thought it was chiefly a man's book. I don't think so. Is there any hard-and-fast rule that women can't enjoy straight-out adventure and action? I know of none. Moreover, Forester has some rather good things to say about women in his story—things that only apply to skin of any color and women of any century. No, I don't see any reason why women won't get out of this tale quite as much as men will. Both, I should say, will find the Forester spell powerful and the book rewarding." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 15 '48 1150w

"There is a fine, solemn mood to the telling of all this. And it becomes hard to understand how research and travel alone could provide the knowledge which convinces the reader so thoroughly of the reality of what is being told. It has required imaginative understanding of a high degree to write so literate and engrossing a book." Hollis Alpert
+ Sat R of Lit 31:18 Ag 14 '48 850w

Reviewed by Olivia Manning
Spec 181:410 S 24 '48 270w
Springf'd Republican p9B O 17 '48 120w

"Anthropologically speaking, The Sky and the Forest does not carry conviction. As a novel it lacks the stark, sardonic energy of Merimée's Tamango, which deals with a similar subject, while a certain pretentiousness of manner prevents the reader from accepting it as a Rider Haggard romance. Loa, we feel, is a Hollywood conception, and Mr. Forester seems to take a perverse pleasure in describing the matrimonial habits of primitive tribes as if he were retailing suburban gossip."

FORESTER, C. S.—Continued

— Times [London] Lit Sup p509 S 11 '48 420w

Wis Lib Bul 44:165 O '48

FORMAN, HARRISON. Changing China; with 250 photographs by the author. 337p $4 Crown

915.1 China 48-9426

"The author, an old New York Times China correspondent, reviews Chinese history from 3000 B.C. to our own day, pausing en route to comment on such matters as the ethnic ingredients of the Chinese population, the religious assumptions of Chinese society, the country's economic and agricultural potentials, and the Kuomintang. . . Numerous photographs." (New Yorker) Chronology. Index.

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt
Chicago Sun p7X D 5 '48 50w

"While Washington strives to find a policy that will stem communism in the Orient, the fresh, factual approach to the problem afforded by 'Changing China' is a welcome contribution to citizen and statesman alike." H. S. Hayward

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 24 '48 360w

"In the manner of a travelogue Forman gives no indication of sources for his myriad statements, some of which are inevitably quite wrong, particularly in the sections of history. . . No doubt this is partly a question of which history book you read. But an author should read more than one. Nevertheless, taken as a collection of bits and pieces on people and things in China, this book makes some vivid reading." J. K. Fairbank

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 2 '49 750w

"Considering the magnitude of the job, he has succeeded remarkably well. A seasoned journalist specializing in the Far East, he has managed to include more separate facts than I remember reading anywhere else except, perhaps, in the 'China Handbook'; many of them are new to me, many are engrossing. . . He covers a very large field indeed, much of it with surprising thoroughness. Many of the book's defects arise out of its very conception. No one subject can be covered completely. Each separate division must retell all the old familiar stories for new readers, and then plunge quickly into the abstruse for those more familiar with the subject. Local color and amusing anecdotes must be stirred together with figures, lists, tables, percentages." Annalee Jacoby

+ — N Y Times p32 N 14 '48 700w

"An excellent handbook on China."

+ New Yorker 24:146 N 27 '48 100w

FORREST, FELIX C. pseud. See Linebarger. P. M. A.

FORSYTHE, WILLIAM ELMER, and ADAMS, ELLIOT QUINCY. Fluorescent and other gaseous discharge lamps. 292p il $5 Rinehart

621.327 Electric lighting, Fluorescent. Electric discharge lighting 48-7265

"Treatment from manufacturing point of view, including basic theory, characteristics of the lamps, and constituent parts, a discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of the lamps, delayed phosphorescence and television, and discharge of short duration." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1033 Jl '48 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:52 Jl '48

FOSTER, EDGAR EUGENE. Rainfall and runoff. 487p $9 Macmillan

551.57 Rain and rainfall. Water 48-4364

"This text on precipitation and runoff covers hydrological research done in the last two decades, with studies of the new methods and data of hydrologic analyses, such as unit graphs, snow surveys, studies in air masses, evaporation and frequencies. Uses of statistical methods underlying precipitation and flood control are demonstrated. Author believes that hydrology is the basic science in the utilization of water resources and shows specific illustrations from all parts of the United States in illustrating the application of hydrologic principles. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:99 N 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1517 O 15 '48 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:78 S '48

FOSTER, MRS GENEVIEVE (STUMP). Augustus Caesar's world; a story of ideas and events from B.C. 44 to 14 A.D; il. by the author. 330p $3.50 Scribner

937 Rome—History—Juvenile literature. Augustus, emperor of Rome—Juvenile literature. Civilization, Greco-Roman—Juvenile literature 47-12075

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"Genevieve Foster's verbal and pictorial method of presenting the glories and infamies of the past is such a dramatic and effective one that this reader wishes that future historians would follow her pattern. Her book can be enthusiastically recommended for classroom and home use." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 29 '48 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '48

"As successful a presentation of world civilization during the lifetime of the first Roman emperor as the author's George Washington's World and Abraham Lincoln's World." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 73:205 F 1 '48 80w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Sat R of Lit 31:32 F 14 '48 270w

"The author has a flair for synthesis. The political and social forces of the time are extremely well handled, and the book's presentation of comparative religions is admirable. The text is enlivened and informed by many clear drawings and designs."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:24 Mr '48 120w

Wis Lib Bul 44:43 F '48

FOSTER, JAN. Echo my tears. 256p $2.50 Dial press

48-7949

Mystery story.

Chicago Sun D 3 '48 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 O 24 '48 90w

"The tale is handled well enough and without leaning too heavily on Freud." H. B. P.

N Y Times p20 S 12 '48 80w

"Good story." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 19 '48 100w

"Good psychological patter, many interesting characters, cleverly placed red-herrings, and solution which, though reminiscent, carries ample conviction. Commendable—in its class."

Sat R of Lit 31:30 S 4 '48 40w

FOTITCH, CONSTANTIN. War we lost; Yugoslavia's tragedy and the failure of the West. 344p $3.50 Viking

949.7 Yugoslavia—History. World war, 1939-1945—Yugoslavia 48-9300

Recital of Yugoslavia's recent history, written by the exiled ex-ambassador to the United States. Pictures the rapid changes in policy of the Allies in 1942; gives some facts of inside diplomatic history; and gives accounts of the terrible conditions in Yugoslavia. Index.

Booklist 45:134 D 15 '48

Reviewed by Irving Pflaum
Chicago Sun D 8 '48 150w

"The book is incomplete in its treatment of Yugoslav complications and Balkan difficulties, and wrong in supposing that American-British troops could have penetrated into the Balkans in 1944. Also, the title is inadequate: We didn't lose the war—we merely failed completely to win it. Nevertheless, this stands as one of the solidest, fairest, best documented reports on Yugoslav events that has yet appeared." R. H. Markham
+ Christian Science Monitor p24 D 16 '48 650w

"Fotitch's story of Yugoslavian history during World War II is not as fullblooded as Mikolajczyk's fascinating book. It is a sober report on how the Western Allies made one of their most disastrous mistakes by shifting their support from Mihailovich to Tito." Max Fischer
Commonweal 49:260 D 17 '48 210w

"Students of the period will need this book—but the method of reporting the give and take of conferences, interchange of messages, etc. manages to dull the drama of one of the most absorbing phases of the Balkan conflict. Even passionate partisanship on the part of the author fails to enliven his text. I confess to conviction, but not enthusiasm."
+ — Kirkus 16:562 O 15 '48 190w

"An important book. Recommended for all libraries." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 73:1592 N 1 '48 140w

"Mr. Fotitch is not a historian, nor is he a chronicler of events. He has not written a diary. His book is an ardent plea which does its very best to serve what Mr. Fotitch considers to be his cause and mission: to defend those whom he loves and to indict those whom he hates. Having been both a front-row spectator and a participant in that part of Yugoslavia's tragedy which was played in wartime Washington, he presents to the American people an extremely personal, extremely passionate and very readable account." Andre Visson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 D 12 '48 1450w

"It is essential reading—after allowance is made for its bias." C. L. Sulzberger
+ — N Y Times p7 N 14 '48 950w

"Competently written review of the inconstant British-American attitude toward Yugoslavia during the war."
+ New Yorker 24:146 N 13 '48 150w

"Former Ambassador Fotitch has written an interesting and coherent account of the Yugoslav tragedy." R. L. Wolff
+ Sat R of Lit 31:12 N 27 '48 950w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 9 '49 390w

FOUTS, EVERETT LINCOLN, and FREEMAN, THEODORE RUSSELL. Dairy manufacturing processes; a handbook for dairy plant workers and short course students. 237p $3.50 Wiley
637 Dairy products Agr48-508

"A manual of practical information written for the guidance of dairy workers engaged in the manufacture and processing of milk, ice cream, butter and soft cheese. It is intended to be used as a handy reference tool which will provide answers to questions regarding the composition of milk and its products, keeping qualities, types of equipment needed and methods of operation, pasteurization and homogenization, accepted standards, etc. Almost half of the volume deals with the making of ice cream mixes (for which formulas are included), use of flavors, and mixing and freezing methods. In an effort to make the material readily accessible, the main topics within each chapter are arranged alphabetically." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1033 Jl '48 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:70 S '48

FOWLER, GEORGE BINGHAM. Intellectual interests of Engelbert of Admont. (Columbia univ. Studies in hist, economics and public law) 251p $3 Columbia univ. press
B or 92 Engelbert von Admont 47-31481

"All of Engelbert's writings have not yet been collected and published in proper form, but we do know definitely that he left more than faint traces of his passing and we have now this competent exposition of his life and work. Engelbert's life and associates are discussed in a first chapter, one marking the known steps of his varied career from his birth in 1250 to his death in 1331. . . We get a glimpse, rather than a full picture, of the Austrian monastic environment of Engelbert's day. Eight chapters, however, are given for a systematic presentation of this Austrian Benedictine's many and varied interests. . . A brief appraisal of his ideas on government and society, which many have previously analyzed, properly rounds out this survey of his contributions. A concluding chapter summarizes in a convenient and cogent manner the author's estimate of Engelbert and his work." (Am Hist R) A list of the works of Engelbert of Admont. Bibliographies. Index.

"There is an index that proved satisfactory where tested. The thorough documentation of the narrative is excellent and reflects at once the industry and competence of the writer. This first work presented by Mr. Fowler shows far greater attention to organization, greater richness in exposition, wider understanding of the general setting, and better balance than is customarily found, or even expected, from a doctoral thesis. What typographical errors intrude are obviously mechanical deficiencies and easily corrected at a glance." G. C. Boyce
+ Am Hist R 53:592 Ap '48 550w
School & Society 66:480 D 20 '47 30w

FOX, JAMES M., pseud. See Knipscheer, J. M. W.

FOX, M. R. Vat dyestuffs and vat dyeing. 323p il $5.50 Wiley
667.2 Dyes and dyeing A48-83

"British book concerned with vat dyes. For those already familiar with dyeing practice, but will interest a practical chemist or a student. Fastness properties and application of vat dyes to textile fibers are discussed as well as identification and classification of vat dyes and indigosols and descriptions and illustrations of machinery for use in dyeing and printing with vat dyes. List of analogous dyestuffs includes products of American, British, German, Swiss, French and Canadian manufacturers. Index to dyes, current literature and formula index." Library J

"Altogether, it gives the impression of being the work of a collector of articles from previously printed literature, rather than the work of one well versed from an international standpoint on the application of vat colors to textiles. Only the highlights of practically all subjects, with the exception of dyeing of indigo on wool, the presentation of which is very good, have been used in the publication." J. R. Bonnar
Chem & Eng N 26:954 Mr 29 '48 350w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:44 Ja 1 '48 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:48 Jl '47

FOX, RUTH, and FAHRENKOPF, ANNE (ALEXANDER IRVING, pseud). Symphony in two time. 238p $2.50 Dodd 48-8399

Detective story.

Booklist 45:194 F 1 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun O 29 '48 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk Rev p17 O 3 '48 110w

FOX, RUTH—Continued
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p41 N 28 '48 150w

"Well constructed, and done with the pleasing assumption that the reader enjoys a bit of erudition."
+ New Yorker 24:112 S 18 '48 70w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 3 '48 60w

"Very good grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:39 S 18 '48 50w

FRANCIS, DEVON EARL. Flak bait; the story of the men who flew the Martin Marauders; ed. by Gordon Carroll, assisted by Betty John. 331p il maps $5 Duell

940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 48-3469

"The story of the B-26, the medium bomber otherwise known as the Martin Marauder, and the part it played in the winning of the war. Through the stories of experimentation, training of the first pilots, and experiences of the men who flew the planes, the B-26 takes on a definite personality. Most of the material has been previously published in newspapers, periodicals, and army publications." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:49 O 1 '48

"Rather specialized, although non-technical."
Kirkus 16:207 Ap 15 '48 150w

"From every available source the author has collected material to form as stirring and well written a book on air exploits as has yet appeared. The men who flew the Marauders have at last received deserved recognition." P. J. Searles
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S 19 '48 450w

FRANCIS, ROBERT. We fly away. (Swallow press bk) 156p $2.50 Morrow 48-8497

A quiet novel describing a poet's experiences as handyman in the household of an elderly Massachusetts widow.

Booklist 45:158 Ja 1 '49

"Although rather inadequate in its ending, the book—as an essay in New England living—is quite delightful." W. K. Rugg
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 N 11 '48 130w

Kirkus 16:346 Jl 15 '48 120w

"Sensitive story told with great simplicity and charm. . . Characterization is excellent. This book is for the discriminating reader; it is unfortunate that it does not have wide popular appeal." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 73:1273 S 15 '48 70w

"The book leaves one curiously unsatisfied, but with a pleasant sense of atmosphere which lingers even after the last page is turned."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 D 19 '48 250w

"The book is clearly autobiographical, if not in things, in ideas, and equally clearly the autobiography of a sensitive, observant person. Even the casual reader might well guess it was written by a poet by the sharpness of figures of speech and the evident pleasure of a refined life of the senses. To sum it up in a phrase, this first novel is, though a little sentimentally perhaps, as New England as the smell of making Concord grape jelly." H. L. Varley
+ Springf'd Republican p9B O 17 '48 360w

FRANK, LAWRENCE KELSO. Society as the patient; essays on culture and personality. 395p $5 Rutgers univ. press

301 Social sciences 48-7297

"A selection, consisting of thirty essays, by Dr. Frank, all devoted to a discussion of man, his evolution and his present and future problems. The essays have previously appeared during the past twenty-five years in scientific publications." Current Hist

Reviewed by W. H. Brown
Am J Pub Health 39:81 Ja '49 550w

Booklist 44:350 Je 15 '48

"It is an urbane exposition of cultural theories, scholarly and yet practical in its arguments."
+ Current Hist 15:40 Jl '48 50w

"For more than twenty-five years Dr. Frank has been an indefatigable contributor to learned journals and a recurrent appearer at meetings of learned societies. . . This book is introduced by an educator, praised by an anthropologist, and welcomed by a philosopher. Here thirty of his theses or papers are assembled in a single publication, and the plain reader is invited to the feast. The plain reader will find it hard going. The portions are too small, and too numerous; and every time another article is served a new cloth is laid on the table." Asher Brynes
Sat R of Lit 31:28 Ag 28 '48 1200w

School & Society 68:15 Jl 3 '48 10w

Reviewed by J. E. Bentley
Survey G 37:478 N '48 550w

FRANK, LEONHARD. Mathilde; tr. by Willard R. Trask. 310p $3 Simon & Schuster 48-5634

Character study of Mathilde, a dreamy, gentle Swiss girl of thirteen when the story begins. Her life is traced thru her adolescence, her early marriage to a practical, unimaginative man, and her later romance and marriage with a more understanding man. Her second husband is English and at the beginning of the war goes to join the R.A.F. leaving his wife and daughter in Switzerland. With the return of her husband after years at war Mathilde makes another readjustment, and a happy one.

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 17 '48 300w

Kirkus 15:683 D 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by P. H. Newby
New Statesman & Nation 36:57 Jl 17 '48 190w

"While there is a certain charm in Frank's portrayal of Mathilde, something akin to the quality of a fairy or a folk tale, it is not enough to give stature to the book as a whole. Better than the stereotyped, rambling and sentimental story he tells are the glimpses he gives of rural life in Switzerland." Rose Feld
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Mr 7 '48 360w

"The detailed account of the leisurely idyl of the newlyweds . . . has great charm, and some occasional hints of coyness do not mar that effect. . . Being, basically, a latter-day Romanticist, Mr. Frank has, from the beginning, a hard time fitting his tale into contemporary settings. . . While the scenes depicting Mathilde's agonies of waiting and hoping, together with her child's story, are very moving, the account of Weston's own war experiences and exploits falls regrettably flat. The most solid part of that chronicle is the report on his trek, in the company of some German refugees, through the collapsing France of spring 1940; and that story, I'm sorry to say, has been better written any number of times before." Robert Pick
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:36 Ap 24 '48 550w

"'Mathilde' gives primacy to heart and has characters who are not afraid to scrutinise what they feel. . . Mathilde is remarkable for the range of its understanding, for the poetic accuracy of the writing (it has been beautifully translated, so well that one can hardly believe it was not composed in English) and for its indomitable truth of feeling. If the early Mathilde is an anima figure, there is no doubt about the maturity of the grown woman." L. A. G. Strong
+ Spec 181:58 Jl 9 '48 140w

"Herr Frank's method of telling Mathilde's story is episodic and, here and there, rather jerky. His attitude to his characters is slightly obscure, giving the impression that he regards them as symbolic figures in some nebulous cosmic drama, but he writes with his usual genuine human warmth; there is a certain type of mystical, obscurantist reader-temperament which will be delighted with Mathilde."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p357 Je 26 '48 170w

FRANK, PAT. Affair of state. 256p $2.75 Lippincott
48-8236

Jeff Baker, an ex-army man who hated war, joined the Foreign Service and was sent to Budapest in 1949. His friendship with a Russian officer, among other things, was misunderstood and he was sent home to Washington in disgrace. Then international events took a new turn and Jeff was completely vindicated.

Booklist 45:159 Ja 1 '49

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun S 16 '48 500w

"Very unflattering to our State Department this is a rather exciting but unimportant and meager book." Donald Wasson
— + Library J 73:1193 S 1 '48 80w

"If the plot machinery meshes just a little too smoothly, it doesn't matter much, because in the end Mr. Frank has made his point." Richard Match
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 O 17 '48 550w

"Neither so omniscient as Lanny Budd nor so indestructible as Tommy Hambleton, Jeff Baker nevertheless has his own allure. In telling his story, Mr. Frank again employs the documentary technique he used so happily in 'Mr. Adam,' thereby cloaking with authenticity what could be a cloak-and-dagger charade. 'An Affair of State' is not as potent a whimsy as the first, but it is good business if your business is reading for pleasure." Florence Crowther
+ N Y Times p4 S 19 '48 550w

" 'An Affair of State' is first-rate storytelling, high entertainment with a hard core of honest conviction. This was what its author wanted to make it and he has done his job excellently." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 14 '48 650w

"Mr. Frank, who has been a foreign correspondent and a government employee, obviously knows his scene and his people; more significant, he is thoroughly aware of the precarious position of the 'peace,' and he is anxious to make his readers aware of it. If he had worked more slowly, perhaps more thoughtfully, and had allowed his keen wit to play on individuals, he might have come up with a far better novel." R. B. Gehman
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:27 S 18 '48 500w

FRANK, WALDO DAVID. Invaders. 239p $2.75 Duell
48-6812

A famous city planner, a lover and student of mankind, retires to a New England cottage to try to think out a solution for the world's evils. A dire disaster falls upon New York city and as a result a number of refugees invade Mark Ferry's happy seclusion. In his attempt to solve the problem they bring with them in his own way, in opposition to the methods his wife would use, Mark in the end fails tragically.

"The Invaders has serious blemishes. Its whole mise en scène is awkwardly contrived. . . The characters, with the exception of Locke, the young man frozen in bitterness, are not quite credible, not quite life-size. The writing is flecked with sententiousness; and talk such as Bianca's belongs better on the lips of Helen Trent. For all this, The Invaders is a book which I found worth reading." C. J. Rolo
+ — Atlantic 181:114 Je '48 550w

Chicago Sun My 16 '48 50w

Reviewed by George Miles
Commonweal 48:289 Jl 2 '48 390w

"Overdrawn, over-written, lacking in the humor. . . A protest of the intelligensia—but inadequate, inconclusive."
Kirkus 16:127 Mr 1 '48 150w

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle
Library J 73:707 My 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by Iris Barry
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Je 20 '48 320w

Reviewed by Lawrence Lee
N Y Times p5 My 23 '48 850w

New Yorker 24:113 My 22 '48 200w

"It is fortunate that the publishers have told us, in the jacket blurb of this book, what its thesis is supposed to be, for it is almost impossible to find any intelligible clue to it in the text. . . This thesis is a fine—even a noble—thesis; a challenge to any novelist. But what on earth this hodge-podge has to do with it is hard to guess." Edmund Fuller
— Sat R of Lit 31:27 Je 12 '48 550w

FRANKAU, GILBERT. Michael's wife. 544p $3.50 Dutton
48-4045

Novel of the marriage of two neurotic people. The wife is cured by psychoanalysis; but the husband's case proves more difficult. The scene is London during the past war.

"A not particularly significant addition to Mr. Frankau's long list of novels, and one that in its very Britishness, will fail to qualify for the present vogue of novels dealing with mental disorders."
Kirkus 16:408 Ag 15 '48 160w

"Characterizations are fascinating and the conversation is intelligent and thought-provoking. Altogether a worthwhile picture of a marriage and its problems. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 73:1273 S 15 '48 80w

"Gilbert Frankau has evolved a novel of frustrations, overcompensations and emotional blocks quite as complex and probably as continuously interesting, as anything he may have heard from a couch. . . 'Michael's Wife' is an exercise of many talents, but not of selectivity. It is long and scattered and perhaps should be read in a reclining position. . . The characters would have more reality if they had been allowed to express their feelings with less of the 'Tophole binge, old thing' vernacular."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 O 3 '48 230w

"At best, 'Michael's Wife' is entertainment, and at worst it is both trite and unreal. This, in spite of the fact that Frankau—who worked hard during the war to try to get better psychological help for veterans—is obviously sincere in his presentation of the story." M. S.
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 9 '49 270w

"The description of mental illness is careful and well-informed. Some of the incidental discussions—how newspapers are run, the attitude of Harley Street pundits toward psychiatry, the views of the War Office on pensions for men discharged on psychological grounds—might well have been omitted: not because they are unpromising, but because they have not been developed and, like some of the many characters, they tend to obscure the main theme. Excessive dialogue and introspective passages slow down the pace of the narrative."
Times [London] Lit Sup p301 My 29 '48 230w

FRANKEL, CHARLES. Faith of reason. 165p $3 King's crown press
190 Reason. Progress 48-6716

"A study concerned with the sources and foundation of the idea of progress in the French Enlightenment." (School & Society) Selected bibliography. Index.

FRANKEL, CHARLES—Continued
Reviewed by G. H. Sabine
Am Hist R 54:126 O '48 400w
Reviewed by P. A. Bertocci
Crozer Q 26:70 Ja '49 800w
Current Hist 15:228 O '48 50w

"The Columbia University Press announces that its King's Crown Press is a division 'organized for the purpose of making certain scholarly material available at minimum cost.' Mr. Frankel's book is an admirable justification of that policy; it has something to say which it says well and succinctly, and which deserved a better fate than piecemeal publication in learned journals, too often all that scholarly work can hope for in these days." Crane Brinton
+ Nation 166:724 Je 26 '48 400w
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 1 '48 200w
School & Society 67:326 Ap 24 '48 20w

FRANKEL, MRS ELIZABETH (GREEN) (NANCY PEPPER, pseud). Teen-age blues; pictures by Abbi Damerow. 72p $2 Messner 811 48-5477

Collection of verses and brief prose paragraphs setting forth the trials and tribulations, the joys and triumphs of teen-age girls. Author is fashion editor of Calling All Girls.

Kirkus 16:53 F 1 '48 90w

"Not a first purchase nor a necessary one if money is short, but it will amuse some of the high school crowd." Eleanor Kidder
Library J 73:563 Ap 1 '48 70w

"The author has written this collection of verses and commentaries to make teen-agers laugh at themselves, but they will only be bored instead and some may even resent the empty-headed and decidedly pre-teen mentality which the author, who works with young people's fashions and should know better, has ascribed to them." V. H. Mathews
— N Y Times p34 F 29 '48 140w

FRANKEN, ROSE D. (LEWIN) (MRS WILLIAM BROWN MELONEY). Marriage of Claudia. 250p $2.50 Rinehart 48-1420

In this sixth novel about Claudia and David, their Connecticut farm is sold and they move to New York where David contracts tuberculosis and Claudia learns that "it is more blessed to be rich with pain than poor with emptiness."

Booklist 44:299 My 1 '48

"We like it, we recommend it, we await more Claudias."
+ Cath World 167:285 Je '48 100w
Kirkus 16:95 F 15 '48 170w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Je 13 '48 130w

"Miss Franken attempts a eulogy of the joys of middle-class marriage. Unfortunately, her effort . . . emphasizes not the joys but the unavoidable tedium of such a state."
— New Yorker 24:106 My 1 '48 70w

FRANKFORT, HENRI. Ancient Egyptian religion; an interpretation. (Am. council of learned societies devoted to humanistic studies. Lectures on the history of religions, new ser, no2) 172p il $3 Columbia univ. press
299.31 Egypt—Religion 48-2928

"Dr. Frankfort shows that the religion of Ancient Egypt, commonly regarded by Egyptologists as diffuse and without basic conviction, in fact possessed a unity that informed all phases of Egyptian life. Disregarding local, temporal differences in cults and dogmas, the author focuses attention on the trends and qualities which appear and reappear in five important aspects of Egyptian life. By this method, he concludes that there is one conviction underlying all Egyptian belief. This conviction, he finds, is that the universe is static and that only the changeless is ultimately significant." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Some will hold that Frankfort himself overworks a hypothesis now and then. Despite these reservations, however, he has taken an approach that holds real possibilities for the improvement of our understanding of the literature on the subject. . . As is well known, there is a fairly large body of ethical teachings and maxims in Egyptian literature. Frankfort gives, in my opinion, one of the finest elucidations of these materials that we have anywhere." T. A. Brady
+ — Am Hist R 53:339 Ja '49 470w

"I am reliably informed by a highly respected Egyptologist that there is no better book on this subject. The author has the obvious advantage of a comprehensive acquaintance with many ancient religions: but my consulting expert hints that he may labor under the correlative disadvantage of being tempted to read into the religion of the Egyptians some ideas that they never had, in order to make it fit into the larger framework. I cannot personally confirm or confute this caveat." W. E. Garrison
+ — Christian Century 65:781 Ag 4 '48 210w

"This is a fascinating, informative, and authoritative book." J. B. Pritchard
+ Crozer Q 25:278 Jl '48 700w
Manchester Guardian p3 O 1 '48 240w
Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 D 19 '48 650w

FRANKFORT, HENRI. Kingship and the gods; a study of ancient Near Eastern religion as the integration of society and nature. (Oriental inst. essay) 444p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press
299.31 East (Near East)—Religion. Kings and rulers. Religion, Primitive. Civilization, Ancient 48-5158

"The theory of the necessity of kingship in civilization, traced through Egyptian and Mesopotamian history, with its relationship to divinity, related by the Research Professor of Oriental Archaeology at Chicago. While developing his arguments, the author reviews considerable history of the period." (Current Hist) Index.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 65:781 Ag 4 '48 430w

"Although some of Dr. Frankfort's theoretical assumptions may be challenged, there is little doubt but that 'Kingship and the Gods' is a fine contribution to our historical-sociological literature. Yet the average reader, who has no special interest in the ancient Near East, will probably find himself lost in a bewildering mass of details. It is not an easy book." T. M. Avery
+ — Commonweal 48:290 Jl 2 '48 330w
Current Hist 14:175 Mr '48 50w
Reviewed by Rushton Coulborn
Ethics 58:306 Jl '48 2450w

"This book offers a mass of valuable materials, presented and analyzed with great skill and often with remarkable insight and penetration. Yet even the details are often affected, harmfully so, by the underlying theory. Even so able an exponent of phenomenology as Frankfort cannot divorce a 'disregard' for history from 'violation' of historical truth." M. I. Finley
+ — Pol Sci Q 63:275 Je '48 3150w

"Many details in this challenging account are certain to be subjected to critical onslaught—in some instances not without valid reason. The over-all pattern, however, has been securely established. Perhaps the most striking of Frankfort's results is the clear demonstration that, for all their intimate contacts which go back to remote pre-historic times, the Egyptian and the Mesopotamian ways of life were not closely related. . . A brief epilogue attempts to draw in the Hebrews. In the reviewer's opinion, this attempt is a mistake because by doing too little it oversimplifies the issue and fails to place it in proper perspective. The book provides rich and ample fare as it is." E. A. Speiser

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:26 My 8 '48 900w
School & Society 67:286 Ap 10 '48 20w

Reviewed by Seton Lloyd
Spec 181:306 S 3 '48 900w

"This is a scholarly, a lively, perhaps even a revolutionary book in its own important field. But The Golden Bough has not been undermined."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p717 D 18 '48 1450w

"By far the most important part of the volume is devoted to the analysis of the religion and society of Egypt, in which Dr. Frankfort is most at home. While many of his hypotheses will meet with strong opposition from philologically trained Egyptologists, there can be no doubt about the great value of his study, in which Egyptian archaeological monuments and African cultural anthropology are drawn upon with excellent results. The book is exceedingly well documented, and the author seems to have missed very little of significance for his theme—aside from the cavalier treatment of Israel, which is not documented at all."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:144 Je '48 280w

FRANKL, LEE. Basic tools for woodworking [produced through the efforts of Training-thru-sight associates, directed by the author]. 119p il pa $2.25; to schools $1.80 Prentice-Hall

694 Tools. Carpentry. Woodwork 48-6363

"Three sections form the framework for the discussion. The first two deal with those tools specifically needed for woodworking and with types of operations in such work. The third lists those basic tools used by various members of the building industry. All of the tools mentioned are illustrated. There is an accompanying text showing the correct use of each tool, varying types of a particular tool and their uses also, the basic parts of each type, special cares to be observed and safety rules that must be followed." N Y Times

"Attractive book, simply written." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 73:1669 N 15 '48 20w

"This is an unusually attractive, well-thought-out book. The experiences of experts in the fields of education, engineering, etc., have been integrated with the work of the research, editorial and art departments. It is the simplest and probably the best volume yet produced for teaching the proper handling and care of tools." R. S. Robbins
+ N Y Times p29 O 10 '48 220w

FRANKLIN, GEORGE CORY. Monte; il. by Loretta and Prentice Phillips. 110p $2 Houghton

Bears—Legends and stories 48-6717

Monte was a grizzly bear, rescued as a cub and kept as a pet by two Colorado miners. When Monte's cleverness attracted the attention of a movie scout the miners let him go, trusting to the bear's intelligence to keep him out of traps. The story is of Monte's successful struggle to outwit the men who would capture him. For grades four to six.

Booklist 44:339 Je 1 '48

"Appealing animal lore. Wonderful woodland feeling and charming choice of detail in this intimate life of a grizzly."
+ Kirkus 16:87 F 15 '48 120w

"Text vocabularized according to the Thorndike Fifth Grade Word List to bring the story within reading range of those with reading difficulties. Unenthusiastically recommended for ages 9-13." Claire Nolte
Library J 73:880 Je 1 '48 90w

"This is a thrilling and lovable story. All children will like it." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times p19 Jl 11 '48 110w
Wis Lib Bul 44:134 Je '48

FRANKS, ARTHUR HENRY. Approach to the ballet. 300p il $5 Pitman

792.8 Ballet 48-8947

"Introduction to an understanding of ballet, its technique and development in western Europe and Russia, and in England since 1920. There is one chapter on Diaghilev and the artists associated with him, one on ballet literature, and one of notes on some of the important ballets." (Booklist) The author is assistant editor of London's Dancing Times. Index.

Booklist 45:84 N 1 '48

"Not all the material [Franks] deals with will be of equal interest in this country. Some of the companies and the repertoires he discusses are unfamiliar to America, and though what he says about them is informative, it may not have much appeal here for the rather elementary level of ballet-goer to whom he addresses himself. But his general remarks, his brief technical exposition, his historical sketch are all clear, sound and useful. It is to be regretted that he did not undertake a similarly elementary esthetic analysis to tie them all together. It is possible to disagree with some of his judgments. For example, when he recommends 'Boutique Fantasque' to all levels of spectators, he can scarcely fail to horrify those of us who find it particularly stale and vulgar. . . Sometimes he has his facts curiously awry, as when he mentions Martha Graham as a pupil of Rudolf von Laban." John Martin
+ — N Y Times p42 N 14 '48 450w

FRASER, CHARLES G. Half hours with great scientists; the story of physics. 527p il $6 Reinhold

530.9 Physics—History 48-11928

"Dr. Fraser, noted for his popular lectures on history of science at the University of Toronto gives stories of mechanics, acoustics, optics, thermics, electricity, and magnetism. He quotes from the scientists' own words about epoch-making experiments with backgrounds and contemporary reactions. Book is replete with diagrams, sketches and half-tone illustrations. Author employs a historical and biographical approach to the study of physics and the parts played by great scientists in advancement of science." Library J

"Thanks to his broad scholarship the author is able to present extracts from the original works of bygone physicists in order to vivify his story. . . Dr. Fraser has addressed himself to a large audience. The student will find enough mathematical shorthand to document the critical points while most of us will enjoy his clear story, which is touched with warm human sympathy and humor. Finally, the few who understand neither English nor cosines may look at the many illustrations." John Oughton
+ Canadian Forum 28:189 N '48 250w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
+ Library J 73:1669 N 15 '48 110w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:75 S '48

FREAR, DONALD ELISHA HARDING. Chemistry of insecticides, fungicides and herbicides. 2d ed 417p il $6 Van Nostrand

632.951 Insecticides. Fungicides. Herbicides 48-8596

"The development of new insecticides and the increased interest in their use, which have occurred during the past few years, provide ample reason for the revision of this text on insecticides, first published in 1942 [Book Review Digest 1943]. This volume has retained the general purpose of the earlier edition, namely, to provide an outline of the origin, chemistry, methods of preparation, uses and analysis of insecticides and fungicides. Its scope has been broadened to include a brief chapter on herbicides, and the emphasis is now placed on the chemical rather than biological aspects of the subject. New chapters on DDT

FREAR, D. E. H.—Continued
and organic fungicides have been added, and other sections have been expanded to cover such compounds as methallyl chloride, the nitroparaffins, ammonium polysulfide and phenoxathiin. The extensive bibliographies given at the end of each chapter have been brought up to date." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"Frear's book is well written, is remarkably free from errors, and shows evidence of extensive and careful reading of the literature. It is the most complete treatise on the subject, and no worker in the field of pest control can afford to be without it." R. C. Roark
+ Chem & Eng N 26:3583 N 29 '48 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1517 O 15 '48 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:71 S '48

FREAR, WALTER FRANCIS. Mark Twain and Hawaii. autog ed 519p il $10 for sale by Duschnes

B or 92 Clemens, Samuel Langhorne (Mark Twain, pseud) 47-7098

"An account of Mark Twain's visit to the Sandwich Islands, in 1866, as correspondent for the Sacramento Union, including all twenty-five letters he wrote for the paper. (Only about half of them turned up in 'Roughing It.') Nearly every day of his four-month stay is reviewed in careful detail by the author, a judge and former governor of the islands." New Yorker

---

"Of some interest, naturally, to students of Twain, but harder going for less dedicated readers."
New Yorker 23:83 Ja 17 '48 120w

"In every way, the volume is a solid and valuable addition to the literature on Mark Twain. My guess would be that what with library buying and wide collector interest, this edition won't stay on booksellers shelves any too long." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ja 18 '48 1400w

"Judge Frear's book has the few minor handicaps and the outstanding solid virtues of exhaustiveness. It is subject to antiquarian digressions, occasional citations that are needlessly detailed and cumbersome, and considerable back-tracking which interrupts the chronology of his story. But its standard of accuracy is scrupulous. It corrects a host of errors in Paine and some in Merle Johnson's bibliography, sets right several mistakes in the folklore of Mark Twain, and makes most research in the field seem lax and uncritical by comparison." Dixon Wecter
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:18 F 28 '48 1100w
Time 51:102 Ja 26 '48 750w

FREDERICKSEN, HAZEL. The child and his welfare. 318p $3.75 W. H. Freeman & co, 549 Market st, San Francisco 5

362.7 Children—Charities, protection, etc. 48-1054

Written primarily for the use of college and university students, the book suggests approaches for child guidance. "The author does not attempt to deal with each facet of child welfare exhaustively or to go deeply into treatment techniques and skills. Rather, she gives a broad, general picture, outlines basic principles, and then refers the reader to additional material on the subject." (Survey)

Am Soc R 13:649 O '48 120w
Social Studies 39:192 Ap '48 20w

"The wealth of information and help contained in Mrs. Fredericksen's splendid book is much needed and will be gratefully welcomed by all persons interested in helping children achieve satisfying and useful lives." Moss Tyler
+ Survey 84:221 Je '48 400w

FREE, MONTAGUE. Gardening; a complete guide to garden making; incl. flowers and lawns, trees and shrubs, fruits and vegetables, plants in the home and greenhouse. rev ed 550p il $4 Harcourt

635 Gardening Agr47-402

Revised edition of this gardening guide, which has new information on insects and diseases and new garden varieties. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1937.

Booklist 44:219 F 15 '48

"To a literally lifelong experience with all kinds of plants and how to grow them he adds a facility in sharing his knowledge with others that is as unusual as it is welcome. 'Gardening' is a helpful, practical and enjoyable book. It tells the things that gardeners want to know and does so with clarity, accuracy and engaging charm. 'Gardening' is one of those rare volumes that will be as highly valued ten years hence as it is today." R. S. Lemmon
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 F 15 '48 160w

FREEDGOOD, MORTON (JOHN GODEY, pseud). Blue hour. 187p $2 Doubleday 48-6142

Mystery story.

"Plays fast and loose by most standards, but entertaining."
Kirkus 16:65 F 1 '48 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 9 '48 30w

"Good thriller."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:52 Ap 17 '48 50w

FREEDMAN, JULIAN. Teaching piano to your child; il. by Andre Dugo. 48p $2 Lothrop

786.3 Piano—Instruction and study 48-6578

Presentation of the author's method of teaching children to read music by means of a scale of notes based on a scale of colors and a junior staff in place of the grand staff. The book has a picture book format.

Kirkus 16:197 Ap 15 '48 150w

"An original and surprisingly practicable method for teaching very young children to play the piano. . . Recommended for parents' collections and for large music departments." E. M. Gordon
+ Library J 73:824 My 15 '48 80w

"Intended to interest the very small child, Mr. Freedman's colorful manual is musically sound as well as delightful to behold. . . The transition from color to note may, it is true, cause a bit of unnecessary confusion and discouragement. . . The material presented, however, is excellent." Louise Finney
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 5:381 Je '48 320w

"The youngsters are faced with concepts not necessarily musical, and rather complex. . . However, the bright hues and pleasing sketches by Andre Dugo, and attractive presentation should make a nice psychological toy for the kids. They can really learn their colors!" S. M.
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 13 '48 210w

FREEDMAN, RALPH. Divided. 447p $3.50 Dutton 48-7529

This story of the American occupation forces centers in the tale of the experiences of one small counter-intelligence group engaged in de-Nazifying an Austrian village. The story is told chiefly as it appears to Helmut Horn, a German anti-Nazi who escaped from a concentration camp and joined the Americans as an interpreter.

Booklist 44:382 Jl 15 '48

Reviewed by Leslie Waller
Chicago Sun p8X Jl 25 '48 270w

"If Mr. Freedman had been more concerned with motives, if he had been more subtle and subjective, if he had allowed the story to generate from within the minds of his characters, 'Divided' would have been a more successful book. Although this is a long list of debits, Mr. Freedman must be given credit for conveying the feelings of doubt, futility and disillusionment—man's legacy from two wars—that is deep in the hearts and minds of both the victors and the vanquished." Louis Collins
+ — Commonweal 48:554 S 17 '48 450w

Kirkus 16:242 My 15 '48 180w

"Author's analyses of inhabitants' minds and motives sounds genuine to this reader who hopes for more and better novels on this theme. Meanwhile, Divided will do well for small libraries." F. A. Boyle
+ — Library J 73:944 Je 15 '48 100w

"There are good individual scenes and much good writing in this book. Obviously the author is tackling his premise from first-hand experience." J. D. Ross
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Jl 25 '48 850w

"Ralph Freedman is obviously an extremely talented writer. Perhaps his only real mistake in 'Divided' is in trying to tell a story at all, instead of simply limiting himself to his brilliant word pictures and impressions." Marc Brandel
+ — N Y Times p15 Ag 8 '48 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 5 '48 800w

"Mr. Freedman, in 'Divided,' must be credited with good intentions, but it is to be feared that he has read too many American novels or seen too many American movies. It is his muse which is divided, between truth and Hollywood. His novel is reminiscent of certain of the slicker American films; it all seems so plausible and even serious while we are in the theatre, but afterwards, when we stop to think about it, it all seems to add up to so very little." Edwin Seaver
Sat R of Lit 31:13 Jl 24 '48 550w

Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 29 '48 180w

FREEDOM and experience; essays presented to Horace M. Kallen; ed. by Sidney Hook and Milton R. Konvitz. (New school for social research publication) 345p $3.50 Cornell univ. press
041 A47-11434

A volume of essays in honor of Horace M. Kallen, German-born educator, professor of philosophy at the New School for Social Research, author of "William James and Henri Bergson," and other works. The essays were presented to him by his friends and colleagues on his sixty-fifth birthday.

"The volume is a stirring summons to the intelligent layman to think out a philosophy, 'a way of life in a perplexing world' (p.vii), and to the professional philosopher (most of the contributors are in this class) to seek a kind of truth that will guide mankind to a fuller living." W. H. Sheldon
+ Ann Am Acad 257:207 My '48 320w

Reviewed by Arthur Child
Ethics 58:226 Ap '48 500w

"The essays range from an informative discussion of the legal status of the Negro (by Milton Konvitz) to a sober and promising analysis of the nature of psychoanalytic propositions (by Ernst Kris). . . Some of the essays, such as those by Professors Edmund Brunner and Flaud Wooton, are either expositions of Professor Kallen's philosophy or have been written with that philosophy in mind. But others have been written for other occasions, and have appeared elsewhere. And at least two of the papers, those by Professors Brand Blanshard and Robert Ogden, are explicitly or implicitly critical of points of view with which Professor Kallen has associated himself. Nevertheless, there is apparent, even in the papers which are critical of Professor Kallen, a common background of philosophic experience which he has had an important rôle in shaping." Charles Frankel
+ J Philos 45:356 Je 17 '48 3100w

"Collections of essays are rarely as stimulating and various as this one. Each contributor was apparently asked to honor Professor Kallen . . . as best he saw fit. And so the usual danger of such a commemorative volume—lack of general interest—has been circumvented. All of the essays bear on important issues, either factually or controversially, and almost all have something fresh to say." R. W. Flint
+ N Y Times p27 Ja 25 '48 700w

School & Society 66:384 N 15 '47 20w

"Somewhat better than the usual commemorative miscellany; it contains a good deal of interesting material on Kallen's own career, has several single papers that would make any volume distinguished, and includes one important philosophical debate." Lyman Bryson
+ Survey G 37:82 F '48 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:29 Mr '48 280w

FREEMAN, DOUGLAS SOUTHALL. George Washington, a biography; 6v v 1-2 Young Washington. 549;464p il maps $15 Scribner
B or 92 Washington, George (48-8880)

The first two volumes of a projected six, by the author of a monumental life of Robert E. Lee. These volumes, subtitled, The Young Washington, beginning with Washington's ancestry and the setting of his story in the midst of the Virginia aristocracy, carry the story of his life and early career to the age of twenty-seven (1758). Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Danielson
Atlantic 183:76 Ja '49 2600w

Booklist 45:87 N 1 '48

Reviewed by R. B. Nye
Chicago Sun p40 N 9 '48 650w

"The characteristics of Dr. Freeman's Washington are identical with those of his Lee. Here is the same almost incredibly detailed research. Here is the same remorseless analysis of the reliability of testimony. And here is the same steady holding of the balances of judgment." Paul Hutchinson
+ Christian Century 65:1173 N 3 '48 1350w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
Christian Science Monitor p18 O 22 '48 600w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews
Commonweal 49:198 D 3 '48 700w

Kirkus 16:417 Ag 15 '48 250w

"A work of impressive proportions, its mass of detail carefully handled, this promises to be the definitive biography of Washington. Highly recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 73:1187 S 1 '48 130w

Reviewed by D. J. Boorstin
Nation 168:47 Ja 8 '49 1350w

"The appearance of the first section of this spacious biography is an important event, because of the greatness of the subject and the distinction of the author." Dumas Malone
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 O 17 '48 2000w

"Dr. Freeman, whose position as our most eminent biographer and ablest military historian no one will dispute, has undertaken the writing in six volumes of our fullest life of Washington. But if the promise of these first thousand pages is sustained, he will give us something more important even than a great biography. He will reveal to us, precisely and vividly, a figure whom Americans have never really known. He will not merely recreate Washington; in great degree, he will discover him." Allan Nevins
+ N Y Times p1 O 17 '48 1850w

"Excellently written."
+ New Yorker 24:131 N 6 '48 180w

Reviewed by Luther Nichols
San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 24 '48 1200w

FREEMAN, D. S.—Continued

"'Young Washington' will remain for a long time to come the historian's history of the important events it covers. It will be most interesting to see whether the public at large will read it as enthusiastically as it has read 'Lee' and 'Lee's Lieutenants.' The events in this book are farther away, and there are necessarily arid stretches in the chapters on Washington's monotonous frontier command. The story therefore often plods, but from it emerges a great figure, for the first time thoroughly, clearly and faithfully delineated." L. H. Butterfield

+ Sat R of Lit 31:10 O 16 '48 1600w

Time 52:108 O 18 '48 4500w

"Dr. Douglas Freeman's latest work brings further distinction to one of the greatest biographers and military historians of our time. . . With a detachment that nowhere fails to perceive the man in his entirety, he coolly analyzes all the evidence and presents a clear and accurate picture of Washington as he undoubtedly was." L. B. Wright

+ Yale R n s 38:342 winter '49 1150w

FREEMAN, IRA HENRY, ed. White sails shaking. 202p $4 Macmillan

797.14 Yachts and yachting. Voyages and travels 48-8646

"An anthology of excerpts from accounts of cruises made in sailing yachts." (Subtitle) Excerpts include selections from Jack London, Rockwell Kent, Alain Gerbault, Richard Maury, E. Keble Chatterton, and others.

Booklist 45:189 F 1 '49

Kirkus 16:386 Ag 1 '48 60w

"Recommended for the man interested in the sea and sailing." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 73:1189 S 1 '48 80w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 73:1514 O 15 '48 30w

"By clever—and painstaking—editing, Ira Henry Freeman has succeeded with this anthology of excerpts from sailing stories in doing what so many fiction writers strive for: to paint a state of mind with words." Theodore Sweedy

+ N Y Times p39 N 21 '48 320w

FREIDEL, FRANK. Francis Lieber, nineteenth-century liberal. 445p il $4.50 La. state univ. press

B or 92 Lieber, Francis 48-2781

"Story of the Prussian intellectual from the time of the Napoleonic conquest and particularly Lieber's later emigration to the United States and his life here." (Current Hist) Index.

"As an informative book dealing with the daily life of a dynamic personality, Freidel's treatise is of great value. The relation between Lieber's political philosophy and his political experience is far more difficult to expound, and the author may well be pardoned for not presenting a complete and unassailable 'elucidation.' No one has done any better, or as well. For those interested in the development of American political thought, this volume is of very great value." C. E. Merriam

+ Am Pol Sci R 42:781 Ag '48 450w

Reviewed by R. M. MacIver

Ann Am Acad 259:196 S '48 600w

Booklist 44:366 Jl 1 '48

Current Hist 14:348 Je '48 60w

"A biography has long been needed that would do justice to Francis Lieber. . . Now, thanks to Professor Freidel's work in crystallizing a vast amount of research into a readable volume, we can estimate Lieber's varied services to his adopted country. . . Though a present-day critic might, of course, point out that Lieber failed to see beyond the limitations of his nineteenth-century liberalism, there is no doubt that he labored successfully to give Americans for nearly two generations a clearer understanding of their political institutions, and that it was America's gain to have provided a refuge for the ardent and fruitful mind so skillfully depicted in Professor Freidel's book." Spencer Brodney

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 11 '48 600w

"The book is written with due regard to the colorful, arduous and poignant aspects of Lieber's life. Here is a readable story of a scholar whose international circle included such figures as Niebuhr, Jahn, Schleiermacher, Bentham, Bluntschli, Story, Kent, Tocqueville, Longfellow, Sumner, Calhoun, Lincoln and Fish. Few American academicians and publicists have been so fortunate in having a biographer able at once to write with both sympathy and detachment and to appraise so justly." Merle Curti

+ Pol Sci Q 63:442 S '48 850w

Reviewed by Asher Brynes

Sat R of Lit 31:25 Ag 7 '48 800w

School & Society 68:15 Jl 3 '48 10w

Reviewed by L. L. Bernard

Social Forces 27:163 D '48 700w

"Mr. Freidel's biography is comprehensive; he acquaints us with what Lieber did and said, but the personality of the man eludes him." Harry Hansen

Survey G 37:264 My '48 140w

FREMANTLE, MRS ANNE (JACKSON). James and Joan. 279p $3 Holt

James I, king of Scotland—Fiction 48-5472

The story of the first James of Scotland, who spent most of his youth and young manhood as royal prisoner to the English kings Henry IV and Henry V. James fell in love with and married an English girl, Joan Beaufort, for whom he wrote the famous poem The Kingis Quair.

Reviewed by Arthur Meeker

Chicago Sun F 24 '48 380w

Christian Science Monitor p13 Mr 20 '48 650w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

Commonweal 48:636 Ap 16 '48 1100w

Kirkus 15:658 D 1 '47 140w

"The historical data is presented in so much the manner of the textbook that the author's romantic approach fails of accomplishment. Even so, this is a rather pleasant introduction to early Scottish history." J. W. Rogers

+ — Library J 73:122 Ja 15 '48 90w

"The deliberately nonchalant, narrative style which is used here to retell the old story makes the events seem curiously remote and desiccated. Delectable if gruesome bits of information abound but, in the main, the innumerable characters, the wicked uncles, antique ceremonies, numerous changes of scene create a tortuous pattern. . . This is no doubt also a tribute to the accurate scholarship of the book, and certainly the sweetness of the affection which bound James to his Queen Joan persists across the gulf of time." Iris Barry

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 F 22 '48 350w

"Because of its lack of artificial suspense 'James and Joan' is not likely to appeal to the reader of the 'popular' historical novel. It should lure the reader who is both literate and adult. Mrs. Fremantle's book may not have the breath of life throughout, but it has the look of life, and that is miracle enough five hundred years after the event." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p5 F 29 '48 800w

"In the course of her story Mrs. Fremantle maneuvers James into meeting with practically every contemporary figure of consequence, but except for that, her novel appears to be historically sound. It is certainly informative, if not very exciting."

+ New Yorker 24:85 F 28 '48 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 14 '48 320w

"The Fifteenth Century is as alive and vivid in this story as though it were Fifth Avenue. No need to have a knowledge of Scottish history to find its pages enthralling, for here are men and women ready to step into technicolor at a moment's notice. And this is no derogatory allusion, but rather an appreciation of the learning and the affection Mrs. Fremantle has brought to their universally tragic stories." Kenneth Horan

+ Sat R of Lit 31:28 Mr 6 '48 500w

FRENCH, MARION OGILVIE. America and war; the military, political and economic record. 544p $5 Military service

973 U.S.—History. U.S.—History, Military 47-6808

"A history of our country and its part in world affairs from its discovery to the present, divided into conventional periods, the Colonial, Revolutionary, etc. While military affairs are recorded briefly, the author includes comment on economic and political conditions of each era." Current Hist

Current Hist 14:173 Mr '48 60w

Foreign Affairs 26:742 Jl '48 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel
Library J 72:1537 N 1 '47 70w

FRENCH, RICHARD FREDERIC, ed. Music and criticism; a symposium by [Archibald T. Davison, and others]. 181p $3 Harvard univ. press

780.072 Musical criticism 48-2782

"This volume contains the eight papers read in 1947 at the Harvard Symposium on Musical Criticism. Four of the essays—those by Olga Samaroff, Paul Henry Lang, Roger Sessions, and Virgil Thomson—deal with the theory and practice of musical criticism as seen from the vantage-points of the newspaper critic, composer, performer, popular educator, and musicologist. Two others—by E. M. Forster and Edgar Wind—are concerned with criticism in general as it appears to a novelist and an art historian. The remaining two papers—one by Otto Kinkeldey on the significance of disc recording, and one by Huntington Cairns on musical patronage—are somewhat peripheral to the issues for which the conference was called; they are of interest in this context because they deal with musical questions, but they do not touch on questions of musical criticism." Sat R of Lit

"A scholarly, significant book in the realm of music criticism."
+ Kirkus 16:165 Mr 15 '48 130w

"Reading over these addresses a year after I heard them delivered, I have confirmed my initial impression that the majority are wholly irrevelant to the central tasks of music criticism. This is due, as I now see, not merely to the fact that some of the symposiasts have no clear idea of the distinction between criticism and historical or technical learning, but also to an essential failure of direction on the part of the Harvard Music Department in its choice of topics and contributors." H. D. Aiken
Nation 167:580 N 20 '48 1250w

"We can learn much from these papers both from their explicit content which concerns criticism, and from the apprehension of the dozens of assumptions they take for granted about music which many listeners will find wonderfully revealing." Vance Bourjaily
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 1 '48 900w

Reviewed by Alfred Frankenstein
Sat R of Lit 31:28 Ag 7 '48 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p566 O 9 '48 600w

FREUD, SIGMUND. Freud; on war, sex and neurosis. [ed. by Sander Katz; with pref. and definitive glossary by Paul Goodman]. 288p $3 Arts & science press, 61 Dey st, N.Y.7

131.3462 Psychoanalysis 47-11557

"This volume represents a translation of seven of Freud's essays on sex; one on the resistances of the laity as well as professionals to psychoanalysis; and one on his reactions to World War I, wherein he expressed his interpretation of some unconscious as well as cultural factors underlying war mongering." Survey

"Nine scattered essays that will neither add to nor detract from Freud's reputation. Their publication in one volume will no doubt be welcomed with prayerful thanks by all true believers. Others can pass up the event without regrets. In a chaotic preface Paul Goodman seems to say that Freud was above all else a man of letters." R. F. La Piere
Am Soc R 13:346 Je '48 350w

"A brilliant selection from the whole range of his thought. Most of these essays are not otherwise available in English." Maurice English
+ Nation 166:160 F 7 '48 90w

"A judicious choice of significant essays, making use of the best available translations. These writings bring out the excellence of Freud's style, probably the best didactic style of our time." Frederic Wertham
+ New Repub 118:24 Mr 29 '48 190w

"Whether or not one agrees with all of his interpretations and techniques, one cannot but admire the consistency of his approach, especially as it includes efforts to gain evidence directly from the patient's own associations and reactions. Here are the seeds of later developments in psychotherapy. . . This is a book well worth having in one's library. It is gratifying that at least three essays are again readily available at a reasonble rate." Leon Lucas
+ Survey 84:218 Je '48 550w

FRICKEY, EDWIN. Production in the United States, 1860-1914. 265p $4 Harvard univ. press

338.4 U.S.—Economic conditions 47-11923

"Sequel to the author's earlier study, Economic Fluctuations in the United States, 1866-1914 [Book Review Digest 1943]. The present work provides detailed description of the basic data and statistical procedures employed in developing the annual production indexes for the period 1860-1914, which served as the focus of analysis in the previous study. In form as well as content, the work may be regarded as an extended technical appendix to the earlier analysis, in which primary attention is devoted to the mechanics of index number construction." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:202 F 1 '48 60w

"The exposition of working methods is notably painstaking and lucid. Certain methodological weaknesses appear to be exhibited in the 'sampling' operations underlying the construction of the Steam-Railroad Series in Chapter IV, and in the weighting of the indexes for iron and steel end products in Appendix A. The volume constitutes, nevertheless, a valuable source book of economic historians and students of the trade cycle."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 4:44 Mr '48 290w

FRIEDE, DONALD. Mechanical angel; his adventures and enterprises in the glittering 1920's. 246p $3 Knopf

B or 92 48-6577

Reminiscences of life in literary and theatre circles in America in the 1920's, by one of the publishing firm of Covici, Friede. Index.

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun My 6 '48 470w

"There is fun in this for those who parallel his memories, who recognize the idiosyncrasies, the loud noises of the avant-garde, the contemporary exhibitionism. Worthwhile publishing history balances what might have been a rewrite of other reminiscences, that gives this a trade-news value."
+ — Kirkus 16:136 Mr 1 '48 170w

"This volume probably doesn't possess permanent worth and so has no special interest to library collections but certainly all institutions having a paid circulation department will want several copies." George Freedley
Library J 73:648 Ap 15 '48 140w

FRIEDE, DONALD—Continued
Reviewed by Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p4 Ap 25 '48 600w
New Yorker 24:106 My 1 '48 180w

"Anyone who lived any part of his adult life through those odd twenties will find much here that will recall that happily vanished past, and the reading of Mr. Friede's book will be a constant ringing of bells in his memory. As for those to whom the twenties are no more than a legend—perhaps they'll find it worth their while to follow Mr. Friede's adventures in order to discover at first hand how much of the legend is actually true." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 23 '48 750w

FRIEDRICH, CARL JOACHIM. Inevitable peace. 294p $4.75 Harvard univ. press
172.4 Peace. Kant, Immanuel 48-5946

"Author, German-trained political scientist of high repute, professor of government at Harvard for many years, contradicts those historians of philosophy who tried to minimize significance of Immanuel Kant's treatise on Eternal Peace. Friedrich believes that Kant was basically a political philosopher moved by intense hope for and clear vision of one world. Shows that Kant's ideas are indispensable for universal order of peace under the United Nations. Friedrich adds to his enlightening discourse new rendering of text of Eternal Peace into English which is much more precise than earlier translations." Library J

"Professor Friedrich's brilliant and scholarly analysis of the principles underlying Immanuel Kant's Essay on Eternal Peace should be compulsory reading for every scholar and statesman who presumes to speak of peace or war." P. H. Odegard
+ Ann Am Acad 260:192 N '48 950w
Reviewed by Charles Gratke
Christian Science Monitor p22 Mr 18 '48 450w
Foreign Affairs 26:737 Jl '48 20w

"Book, meant for mature readers only, will be indispensable in academic and large public libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 73:331 F 15 '48 140w
Reviewed by Golo Mann
Nation 167:77 Jl 17 '48 1600w

"I can well imagine that the task of seeing Kant's essay in its proper historical perspective and of drawing conclusions applicable to our time has tempted Carl Friedrich for years. His book is not just another dexterous stab in the historical dark. While it manifests a few rather obvious bibliographical limitations, it is in a genuine sense learned. Yet it is also personal and vivid, indeed upon occasion challenging and even, when necessary, truculent." G. N. Shuster
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 My 16 '48 1000w

"This book is a comprehensive, well-dominated survey of its subject, preeminently a study in the special academic field known as the history of ideas, with the faults as well as the virtues of its academic intention." R. W. F.
+ N Y Times p13 Je 27 '48 800w
Reviewed by Herbert Maza
Pol Sci Q 63:605 D '48 900w
School & Society 67:206 Mr 13 '48 20w
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:187 Je '48 210w

FRIEDWALD, EUGENE MARIE. Man's last choice; a survey of political creeds and scientific realities. 128p $2 Viking
320.1 Political science. International relations 48-105

"The author, a French scientist and political writer who has been living in England since 1940, contends that the Western world has arrived at that climactic moment in the life of a civilization when it either rushes on to further glories or suffers a fatal thrombosis. The longevity of Western civilization depends, Mr. Friedwald believes, on our ability to establish a world government. Instead of dreaming about a perfect world state, however, he suggests that the United Nations representatives warm up to the idea of limited national sovereignty by going ahead with the Lilienthal-Baruch formula for international control of the atomic bomb, even if it means parting company with the Soviet Union for a time." New Yorker

Booklist 44:195 F 1 '48

"This book is recommended reading for all chemists who are interested in, or are troubled by, the relations of chemistry to the morals and institutions of the times." T. L. Davis
+ Chem & Eng N 26:1314 My 3 '48 350w
Reviewed by K. M. Chworowsky
Churchman 162:17 F 15 '48 240w
Kirkus 15:616 N 1 '47 170w

"Recommended for general adult reading." H. A. Lancour
+ Library J 72:1683 D 1 '47 130w

"The author's analysis of the Baruch plan, and particularly his comments on the effect of the atomic bomb on previous theories of military strategy and geopolitics, are more valuable than his specific proposal. This reviewer, at least, is not yet convinced that to go ahead without the Russians is the lesser of the dangers confronting us. But Mr. Friedwald has stated the dilemma with admirable clarity." T. J. Hamilton
+ — N Y Times p3 Ja 11 '48 750w
New Yorker 23:63 Ja 3 '48 120w
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 18 '48 220w

"It is a book of great lucidity and wise simplicity. . . Mr. Friedwald, before going to England to join the 'Free France' movement in 1940, was a French journalist. He has something to say, and he knows how to say it." R. M. MacIver
+ Sat R of Lit 31:7 Ja 3 '48 1300w
Springf'd Republican p8B F 8 '48 370w

FRISBIE, FLORENCE. Miss Ulysses from Puka-Puka; the autobiography of a South Sea trader's daughter; ed. and tr. by her father, Robert Dean Frisbie. 241p $3 Macmillan
B or 92 48-1141

Johnny Frisbie is the daughter of Robert Dean Frisbie, American trader and author, and his Polynesian wife, Ngatokorua. Johnny, now fifteen, wrote her autobiography in three languages and her father translated and edited it to some extent. It is a narrative of South Sea island life, seen thru the eyes of an intelligent child, who has traveled considerably in the South Seas, and missed very little of importance that was going on around her.

Booklist 45:12 S 1 '48
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 1 '48 200w
Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:212 My '48 70w

"Faintly entertaining, at times mature, at times juvenile. Limited market."
Kirkus 16:40 Ja 15 '48 130w

"Recommended for all public and senior high school libraries. Librarians of junior high schools may want to read it before buying because of some frankness concerning social customs." E. S. Brown
+ Library J 73:393 Mr 1 '48 130w

"The greater part of [the book] is thoroughly casual and informal, told with sympathetic humor and reflecting an attractive combination of unassuming naturalness and seeming sophistication. Johnny Frisbie does much to reburnish in our imagination the romantic glitter of the South Pacific after its tarnishing during the war." J. J. Espey
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 4 '48 470w

"If it seems incredible that Miss Frisbie has written a book at an age when most girls are collecting autographs, the feat is even more remarkable in that it was begun when she was 12, and carried on in three languages—English, Puka-Puka, and Rarontongan. How much of the book is really her own, however, is open to question. Even so, Johnny's keenness of observation, and command of character appear to be genuinely native gifts." David Dempsey

N Y Times p10 Ap 18 '48 450w

"It is a fresh and observant chronicle that describes a crowded life of hurricanes, cannibals, native customs, and travel between islands in canoes and small sailing craft. A couple of chapters are concerned with the war, which Miss Frisbie experienced only remotely, and with the havoc and corruption brought to some of the islands by the American armed forces. Often, the young lady is quite funny. It is too bad there are no pictures.'"
+ New Yorker 24:123 Ap 10 '48 160w

"It is uneven, as you'd expect, and now and then there are the clear signs of editing by an older and more experienced hand. Nevertheless, the freshness of viewpoint and approach come through. Miss Johnny, now 15, and looking forward to the day when she will see the U. S., has the imagination of her American father and the simplicity of the Polynesian mother, and the two combine to make a very pleasant book indeed." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 19 '48 600w

Reviewed by A. F. Wolfe
Sat R of Lit 31:28 Ap 3 '48 450w
Wis Lib Bul 44:149 S '48

FROMM, ERICH. Man for himself; an inquiry into the psychology of ethics. 254p $3 Rinehart

171 Ethics. Psychology 47-12365

"A continuation of Escape From Freedom [Book Review Digest, 1941], this is an enquiry into and an interrelation of psychology and ethics 'leading to the realization of man's self and his potentialities.' . . The philosophy, or ethics here, is that man is 'for himself', that he must determine his own standards (humanistic) rather than follow the authoritarian." (Kirkus) Index.

Atlantic 181:119 Je '48 120w
Booklist 44:243 Mr 15 '48

"This book reveals a quality of philosophical culture which makes it a rare and important work in its field." G. Edison
+ Canadian Forum 28:21 Ap '48 420w

"His book is courageous and thoughtful, and, even where it recalls older writers on ethics like Aristotle and Spinoza, it gives them an interpretation that is both fair and fruitful of new extensions made possible by recent psychological knowledge. Mr. Fromm's book has a great deal to offer both to the philosopher and to the psychologist and can be read with profit by the layman." Milton Singer
+ Ethics 58:220 Ap '48 1800w

"A popular market is conjectural. Suggest for college library use."
Kirkus 15:571 O 1 '47 160w

"A provocative book leaving the reader in a state of personal renascence. Author is not too technical, nor does he write down to the layman . . . a style both lucid and explicit." C. W. Roth
+ Library J 72:1608 N 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by Fredric Wertham
New Repub 118:26 My 3 '48 950w

Reviewed by Ruth Benedict
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 30 '48 1200w

"A fascinating volume, everywhere of the highest interest for what it says and finally, despite certain shortcomings, magnificent in implications." Asher Brynes
+ Sat R of Lit 31:25 F 7 '48 1050w

"A conspicuously uneven work. Indeed, it is essentially two books: the one, a theoretically rigorous, perceptive book of psychological science; the other a book of ethical assertion, setting forth the author's values but lacking the clarity and critical judgment of the first."
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:194 Je '48 290w

FROST, FRANCES MARY. Christmas is shaped like stars; il. by Garry MacKenzie. 86p $3.50 Crowell

811 Christmas poetry 48-10145

Narrative poem describing an old-fashioned Christmas reunion. "Children and grandchildren return to the farm in a joyous bustle of excitement. New love is welcomed; heartaches are soothed. Through it all move Grandpa and Grandma, affirming the permanence of love and the healing power of the day." (N Y Times)

Kirkus 16:388 Ag 1 '48 90w

"Only a curmudgeon will mind that a good many lines limp, for the details of country living are captured in glowing words and sensitive phrases." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p5 D 5 '48 90w

"The author has used fine imagery and nature seems to speak to her in symbols. Adults and teen-agers will enjoy these beauties of nature but younger children would profit better by adult interpretation. The pen and ink sketches harmonize delightfully with the text to make a satisfying book." E. M. Bradway
+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 14 '48 120w
Sat R of Lit 31:36 D 11 '48 450w

"A book so interesting and attractive in construction that it will answer the Christmas needs for many ages of readers. Oldsters will have a pleasant time 'remembering' just such holidays, and history for youthful readers becomes richer with this book." S. M. Neal
+ Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '48 120w

FROST, FRANCES MARY. Sleigh bells for Windy Foot; il. by Lee Townsend. (Whittlesey house publication) 184p $2 McGraw 48-4522

Sequel to Windy Foot at the County Fair (Book Review Digest, 1947). This time it is the story of Christmas on a Vermont farm, with snow, a sleigh cut down to Windy Foot's size, presents, natural jolly children, and welcome visitors.

Booklist 45:53 O 1 '48

"Here is a group of fine children, natural, resourceful, entertaining, and not lacking in courage, as is shown by Toby's encounter with a bear and Tish's skiing accident." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 18 '48 180w
Churchman 162:17 N 15 '48 10w

"The kind of Christmas story with a never out of date charm."
+ Commonweal 49:151 N 19 '48 30w

"Delightfully spontaneous story." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:39 Ja '49 80w

"A delightful Christmas story. . . There's less story focus than in the earlier book—and the children are almost too cooperative and good, but its a thoroughly wholesome, pleasant, likable crowd."
+ Kirkus 16:480 S 15 '48 100w

"Every bit as good as the first book. Excellent for reading aloud, with larger print and appeal for the same age group. Style, plot, and characterization make this more than a good horse story." M. J. Meade
+ Library J 73:1388 O 1 '48 80w

"Frances Frost not only writes well, but has a gift for creating people in surroundings as convincing as her characters. This is a warm-hearted story of American family life with kindly people, who have a zest for living, for sharing to both boys and girls. Lee Townsend, who knows horses and country life, has illustrated it with pen-and-ink drawings." H. A. M.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 N 14 '48 230w

"Beneath all the excitement there lies a deeply satisfying sense of the country in one of its most beautiful moods, conveyed in a

FROST, F. M.—Continued
prose which is a delight to read. This is a book which the whole family can share with 8 to 12 year olds." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p3 N 14 '48 110w
New Yorker 24:134 D 11 '48 80w
Wis Lib Bul 44:215 D '48

FULLER, HARVEY K. Manuel goes to sea; il. by [the author]. (Whittlesey house publication) 95p $2 McGraw 48-5843

Story of Manuel's search for his uncle, lost at sea in a Gloucester fishing boat.

Booklist 44:253 Mr 15 '48
Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 26 '48 180w
Churchman 162:17 N 15 '48 20w

"Mr. Fuller has made excellent pictures for his truthful story, which derives from first-hand knowledge." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:193 My '48 80w
Kirkus 16:50 F 1 '48 120w
Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr
Library J 73:560 Ap 1 '48 80w
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 21 '48 270w
Reviewed by Marjorie Fischer
N Y Times p29 Ap 4 '48 160w
Reviewed by R. H. Viguers
Sat R of Lit 31:29 Jl 10 '48 140w

"The author-artist has sailed with the men who make the Grand Banks their fishing grounds and he writes excitingly and with an intimate understanding of the hardy life aboard a dragger." D. F. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p12B Mr 21 '48 120w
Wis Lib Bul 44:84 Ap '48

FULLER, MARGARET WITTER. This awakening. 246p $2.75 Presbyterian bd.
48-6162

A novel, based on fact, telling the love story of the author's aunt. The time is the 1850's, the scenes are the London home of a well-to-do ship builder, with excursions into the provinces, to India, and to America.

"It is hard to pick out the one element that gives this novel its greatest charm. It may be the beguiling, bronze-haired Letty herself, so gay, loyal, and unbreakable. Or it could be the unostentatiously complete stage setting. . .Or it may be the fastidious, slightly indirect and bookish style, faintly touched with whimsey, but owning an undercurrent of shrewd humor. Probably it is the union of all three elements." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 15 '48 550w

"An unusually moving love story told with delicacy, charm and real beauty; it does not sidestep sorrow but deepens the reader's appreciation of character." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 24:291 Jl '48 120w
Kirkus 16:91 F 15 '48 130w

FULLER, RAYMOND TIFFT. Nature quests and quizzes; a nature-seeker's handbook. 64p $1.50 Day
574 Nature
48-5794

"This book for young nature students is arranged in the form of quests—special animals and plants to hunt for, special things to do, with each successful job entitling the seeker to a specified number of points." Kirkus

"A fascinating little book." Martha King
+ Chicago Sun Je 26 '48 170w

"The scout age, where we are placing this, may be annoyed by a certain coyness of style."
Kirkus 16:23 Ja 15 '48 100w

"A fine book to be used by leaders in the nature field as stimulation in nature programs, especially for young people who have a limited background in the subject. Bibliography adds to the value of the book. Recommended for leaders and participants in nature studies, e.g., Scouts, camps, schools, museums, etc." J. F. Kennedy
+ Library J 73:562 Ap 1 '48 50w

FULTON, REED. Stevedore; a story of the water front. 216p $2 Doubleday
48-7454

Young Ben Saunders inherits from his father first an interest in stevedoreing—then two thousand shares of stock in a Seattle dock. The dock has a bad reputation and Ben goes to work to clear up the mystery and clean up working conditions.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun S 4 '48 90w

"A good deal to recommend it for youth looking at all sides of life."
Kirkus 16:216 My 1 '48 180w

"Vital, significant story treating a social and economic situation, and the author does not pull his punches. Style is vigorous, the details accurate." E. A. Groves
+ Library J 74:133 Ja 15 '49 70w

"A good story. There are tough characters, plenty of action, danger and stevedore talk. Ben himself is a strong young man, who likes his work, has a sense of responsibility and a capacity for friendship, and fights through danger to do what he thinks necessary. He is only a little older than the high-school age young people for whom the story is intended." Irmengarde Eberle
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Jl 4 '48 140w

"Mr. Fulton is a high school principal who has done his research with a cargo hook in the 'tween decks and holds of freighters during the wartime summer vacations. Older boys will sense that he knows the waterfront, for his characters talk and joke and act like stevedores in seaports the world over." Felix Riesenberg, jr.
+ N Y Times p22 Jl 18 '48 180w
Wis Lib Bul 44:151 S '48

FUNG, YU-LAN. See Feng, Y.

FUNK, CHARLES EARLE. Hog on ice, and other curious expressions; with il. by Tom Funk. 214p $3 Harper
428.3 English language—Terms and phrases
48-5950

"Phrase sleuthing in the origins and developments of common folk sayings, that investigate the figurative meanings today, gives the dates of first usage, and the connection with the way in which first used. An individual collection of phrases, fancied by the author because of their place in our language, this sometimes goes back 2,000 years for the original practice, and gives a lively account of the altering of meanings, and the clues by which he traced the story of the sayings. Old familiars,—blue funk, spick and span, cold feet, small fry, white feather, scot free, humble pie, ghost writer, big shot, curry favor, lion's share, crocodile tears, to teach one's grandmother to suck eggs, and so on—these are combined with newcomers." Kirkus

Christian Science Monitor p18 My 6 '48 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '48

"Incidentally, although this is primarily an adult's book, its general readability and the amusing black-and-white drawings by Tom Funk scattered through it tend to make it one which might have considerable appeal to less mature readers as well." T. A. Kirby
+ Commonweal 48:116 My 14 '48 260w

"The whole makes a pleasant companion volume to other word usage books."
+ Kirkus 15:688 D 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by Stanley Walker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 2 '48 650w

"[The book] simultaneously tickles and informs its reader. Writing as the vaudevillain used to play the fiddle, for his own amazement, Dr. Funk has set down with humor and scholarship the best and most plausible explanations he could pry out of past records and living persons." S. C. Gross
+ N Y Times p19 Ap 11 '48 230w

"A pleasantly popular study. . . The nice thing about Mr. Funk's book is his willingness to turn his selections around slowly and have a look at them from all sides. . . The reader will be amused almost always, surprised a good part of the time, and informed throughout." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 5 '48 550w

"Future lexicographers will look up from their work to call Mr. Funk blessed, both for the research he has done on old phrases and because he has set down in good time the origin of such modern phrases as fifth columnist, Bronx cheer, and behind the eight ball." Horace Reynolds
+ Sat R of Lit 31:14 My 22 '48 500w

Wis Lib Bul 44:79 Ap '48

FUNK & Wagnalls new Standard dictionary of the English language; prepared by more than three hundred and eighty specialists and other scholars; under the supervision of Isaac K. Funk, ed-in-chief, Calvin Thomas, consulting ed, Frank H. Vizetelly, managing ed; this ed. supervised by Charles Earle Funk. 2814p il pl thumb indexed $25; lea $30; also in 2v thumb indexed $39.50 Funk

423 English language—Dictionaries 47-291

"The last full review of the Funk & Wagnalls Standard Dictionary to appear in Subscription Books Bulletin was published in the issue of October 1934; a supplementary article came out in April 1937. These earlier reviews cover details not here considered and they should therefore be consulted by the reader who is unfamiliar with the general character of the work. . . To discover the extent of revision, a list of several hundred new terms which appeared during the last decade in the new words sections of the New International Yearbook, Britannica Book of the Year and the Britannica's publication entitled 10 Eventful Years was used for checking the Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary. Though it is conceded that certain terms on this list might not be considered suitable for use in a standard dictionary, the number of those which had been added was surprisingly small. . . Another check was made by comparing the 'New Words' section in Webster's New International Dictionary with the alphabet of the Funk & Wagnalls New Standard. The checking of a sample of over 1000 of the 'more than 1700 new words and new meanings of old words' claimed to be in the former dictionary, showed that not a sixth of them are to be found in Funk & Wagnalls." Subscription Bks Bul

"The library school students and instructors who participated in the examination of the 1947 edition believe that the Funk & Wagnalls New Standard is still a useful work and one very easily consulted. They are convinced, however, that its system of gradual revision of the old plates has not kept it abreast of the times and that after thirty-five years of excellent service it is now badly in need of thorough and complete overhauling. The Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary is therefore recommended for the sterling qualities which it has always possessed, but the buyer is warned not to be misled by the slogan 'Always-up-to-date' which is used in its advertising material."
+ — Subscription Bks Bul 19:46 Jl '48 1300w

FUNK & Wagnalls standard handbook of synonyms, antonyms, and prepositions, by James C. Fernald; completely rev. ed. by Funk & Wagnalls editorial staff. 515p $3 Funk

424 English language—Synonyms. English language—Antonyms. English language—Prepositions 47-11924

"Funk & Wagnalls Standard Handbook of Synonyms, Antonyms, and Prepositions is a newly revised edition of Dr. James C. Fernald's English Synonyms and Antonyms . . . published first in 1896 and revised in 1914. Dr. Fernald, who died in 1918, was one of the early editors of the Standard Dictionary. Most of the material in his Handbook also appears in fine print under the individual words in current printings of the Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary. However, in this review the Handbook will be considered on its own merits as an independent work. The body of the book consists of over 700 articles comparing groups of words, averaging rather more than a dozen in each group. The articles are arranged alphabetically by a leading word, and the synonyms are then listed in bold-face type." Subscription Bks Bul

Booklist 44:186 Ja 15 '48

"The 1947 edition is extensively revised. There are some new articles, and nearly every article shows changes when compared with the 1914 edition, though much of Dr. Fernald's original wording still remains. A few instances might be cited where obsolete meanings have been allowed to stand: for instance, it is surely no longer true that 'scholar' is the popular American term for pupil. . . Because of duplication with the Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary, the Funk & Wagnalls Standard Handbook of Synonyms, Antonyms, and Prepositions must be regarded as a convenience rather than a necessity for most libraries. It is recommended for circulation, for libraries which have found the earlier editions useful, and as an additional work for reference where there is a demand for a variety of books of synonyms and usage."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 19:59 O '48 650w

FURBER, HOLDEN. John Company at work; a study of European expansion in India in the late eighteenth century. 407p $6 Harvard univ. press

382 East India company (English). India—Commerce. India—Politics and government 48-6530

"British expansion in India toward the end of the eighteenth century is a field which Professor Furber has made peculiarly his own. This latest addition to his studies is primarily an exhaustive analysis of the commercial operation of Europeans in India during the decade of peace following 1783. It is based largely on manuscript sources, British, French, Dutch, and Danish." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliographic aids. Index.

"While leaving little to be desired as a careful analytical survey, based upon much factual evidence, John Company at Work is something more than a study of the economic development of the early European East India Companies. In selecting a number of individuals, Dr. Furber has depicted most vividly the lives of those men and women who sought in India, nearly three centuries ago, economic opportunities largely denied to them at home." Stephen Lee
+ Pacific Affairs 21:437 D '48 440w

"Mr. Furber has done valuable work by inquiring into the relationship of the East India Company with its foreign competitors. . . All this is written with a commendable lack of bias and with a fine mastery of an immense mass of material."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p544 S 25 '48 500w

"While a study of this kind has inevitably the tediousness of great detail, it enables important conclusions to be drawn."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:175 Je '48 280w

FURNAS, CLIFFORD COOK, ed. Research in industry; its organization and management; prepared by and published for Industrial research institute incorporated. 574p il $6.50 Van Nostrand

607 Industrial research. Employment management 48-5949

"Dr. Furnas, Director, Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory of Cornell Research Foundation, Inc., discusses 'The Philosophy and Objectives of Research in Industry.' The other 28 chapters, by 31 leading research executives, deal with major factors in management pertaining to industrial research. Among the chapters are development, the research director's job, organization charts, personnel problems, location, design, and construction of a modern research laboratory, tools of research, by-products of research, patent policies and evaluation of research." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Furnas has made no effort to put his authors in an editorial straitjacket. He realized how much might be lost in any rewriting to get uniform style and presentation. He even permits certain mild differences of opinion among his authors and a little over-lapping in spots—just for emphasis. But the end result is a most readable and entertaining book—one that will be read and reread many times from cover to cover." S. D. Kirkpatrick
+ Chem Eng 55:294 Ap '48 500w

"A glance through the various chapters will quickly bring out the wide variety of technical, management, and personnel problems which the research director is apparently expected to handle. His training and experience need indeed be broad. The Industrial Research Institute, the Editor, and the contributors are to be congratulated on their presentation of a book which is well organized and well thought out." E. L. Piret
+ J Phys & Colloid Chem 52:1267 O '48 500w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:202 F 1 '48 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:24 Ja '48

FURNAS, JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN. Anatomy of paradise; Hawaii and the islands of the South seas; issued in coop. with the Am. inst. of Pacific relations. 542p il $5 Sloane

990 Islands of the Pacific. Hawaiian Islands 48-8518

Facts as opposed to legend (and moving pictures) of the ways of life in the South Seas, as they probably were in pre-white days, and as they developed after white men invaded the islands, as traders, missionaries, or soldiers. Sources consulted. Index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 182:111 N '48 1300w
Booklist 45:64 O 15 '48

"As may be guessed, this adds up to a tremendous amount of odd and assorted information. Fortunately, Mr Furnas is well qualified to present it in a continually interesting, and often quite amusing, manner. For either intermittent or continuous reading, it is a wonderful source of a great variety of facts. The addition of an excellent bibliography and index give promise of its being an equally valuable reference book." J. O. Frederick
+ Commonweal 49:310 D 31 '48 220w

"A healthy approach, aware in its findings, with wide appeal for an alert audience, good reading for all."
+ Kirkus 16:273 Je 1 '48 230w

"Apparently based on considerable research and observation, the book is interesting and informative, even though somewhat repetitious and lengthy." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 73:938 Je 15 '48 110w

"The best book on the area that has come this reviewer's way." P. J. Searles
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 O 17 '48 900w

"Although Mr. Furnas has written two novels, he is better known as a non-fiction writer, his article, 'And Sudden Death,' having been widely reprinted. The present volume is said to be his most important work so far, and, although it is written with vigor and humor, it cannot be taken up as entertainment, despite its intriguing title." R. D. Dinsmore
N Y Times p29 O 3 '48 360w
San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 31 '48 200w

"It's a large and complicated story, but Mr. Furnas handles it with a gusto which is refreshing and with a wide acquaintance both in reading and first-hand experience which makes him worth listening to." Bradford Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 31:16 D 25 '48 800w

"The book has all the trappings of scholarship—footnotes, extensive quotations, bibliography, good index—but paradoxically the language is a distilled journalese. This is both good and bad, for while many a page is lively and capricious others are sad imitations of Winchell's worst. Tighter editing by the publisher would have eliminated this weakness and made the book more readable. However, 'Anatomy of Paradise' gets at least one vote as the best popular book on the subject." Frederick Reinstein
+ — Springf'd Republican p5C O 31 '48 700w
Wis Lib Bul 44:212 D '48

FURNIVALL, JOHN SYDENHAM. Colonial policy and practice; a comparative study of Burma and Netherlands India; issued in cooperation with the International secretariat, Institute of Pacific relations. 568p $7.50 Macmillan (for the Cambridge univ. press)

325.3 Great Britain—Colonies, dominions, etc. Netherlands—Colonies. Netherlands Indies [48-10399]

"Mr. Furnivall, author of Netherlands India here makes a comparative study of British rule in Burma and Dutch rule in Netherlands India, as a contribution to the general science of colonial practice. This involves a parallel examination of their origins, their indigenous forms of government, their geographical structure and situation, and the history of their colonization by Western Powers." (Publisher's note) List of references. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Mills
Am Pol Sci R 42:1019 O '48 700w

"This study represents a major contribution to the field of colonial policy and administration. It ranks with the very best that has been written on the subject." Amry Vandenbosch
+ Ann Am Acad 259:178 S '48 370w

Reviewed by Dorothy Woodman
New Statesman & Nation 35:419 My 22 '48 1050w

"This book greatly increases the debt which all practitioners and students of colonial affairs owe to J. S. Furnivall. It is the most explicit and elaborate statement of his basic positions that he has yet attempted, and it presents a rounded view of the colonial problem which fundamentally challenges many accepted dogmas. In it are opened up large vistas of speculation that are revolutionary in their implications. In the opinion of this reviewer it is an exciting and highly rewarding contribution which, despite its bulk and occasional repetitiousness, no one interested in the affairs of dependent peoples can afford to miss." Rupert Emerson
+ Pacific Affairs 21:428 D '48 1200w

Reviewed by Richard Winstedt
Spec 180:320 Mr 12 '48 750w
Times [London] Lit Sup p186 Ap 3 '48 800w

FURPHY, JOSEPH (TOM COLLINS, pseud). Such is life; being certain extracts from the diary of Tom Collins; with a biographical sketch of the author by C. Hartley Grattan. 394p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

48-4404

"First published in 1903, in Australia, this novel, written by a man named Joseph Furphy (Tom Collins is a mythical character to whom Australians attribute their tall tales), is a government official's account of his travels among the unkempt and violent but apparently lovable men and women who had rural Australia pretty well to themselves during the late nineteenth century." (New Yorker) Selected bibliography.

Booklist 45:140 D 15 '48

Reviewed by Eleanor McNaught
Canadian Forum 28:189 N '48 280w

Reviewed by Feike Feikema
Chicago Sun S 28 '48 380w

"It is not the details of the stories that matter, it is their accumulated impact. If ever an artist achieved his ambition to put down a slice of life, Furphy did it. This is the life of the road and the sheep stations in the Australia of the '80s. There is no need for historical confirmation. The historians must go to 'Such Is Life' to catch the flavor of the time and details of the men and the country. Among pioneer tales it must be rare. The men who do the work of the frontier are not the men who write about it, with a few exceptions. If you relish 'Life on the Mississippi,' 'Such Is Life' is your book." Margaret Hubbard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 S 19 '48 700w

New Yorker 24:115 S 25 '48 110w

G

GABRIEL, GILBERT WOLF. I thee wed. 340p $3 Macmillan
48-1782

Historical novel based on the building of one of the refuges planned in America for Marie Antoinette. This is the town of Azylum in the forests on the north branch of the Susquehanna in Pennsylvania. The hero is a young Scotch-American surveyor, Alan Ruff, who laid out the town, because he had lived in France, and knew French and engineering. The heroine is Gay Leguay, a little French sewing-girl with a startling likeness to the queen, who came to America to act as the queen's double if needed. The romance between Alan and Gay, begun in France, ended happily in America.

"Mr. Gabriel has created, in Alan and Gay, characters of considerable warmth and interest and has brought to life some figures from history but his greatest achievement is the amount of action that he is able to pack into every page, and a really convincing portrayal of the romantic devotion that Marie Antoinette, or possibly the idea of her, could inspire in many French aristocrats. . . 'I Thee Wed' can be recommended as a novel of action and of historical interest." W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 27 '48 390w

"Gilbert W. Gabriel has not exactly blazed a trail, but he is definitely out of the rut, both in his material and in the use he has made of it. His story is refreshing and swift in pace, not too heavily saddled with history, and set forth in a jaunty, loose-jointed fashion." George Conrad
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 11 '48 270w

"Without noticeably deviating from the pattern, Gilbert Gabriel has written a colorful and wholly convincing novel that now and then gives an interesting hint of departure from the Dumas line. For, while Mr. Gabriel is not looking more closely, he is looking with a new and unexpected pair of eyes—the eyes of a down-to-earth American frontiersman." Hilda Lake
+ N Y Times p12 Ap 25 '48 500w

"Perhaps there is a little bit too much perfumed court life corruption and 'gay Paree' on the one hand and too much plain-spoken republicanism on the other to make the book a really well-balanced novel, and the role allotted to the famous Count Fersen seems more than a trifle overdone. Yet compared to some of the historical formula romances high up on our bestseller list, 'I Thee Wed' is a fairly serious book." Robert Pick
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:27 My 22 '48 360w

GADE, JOHN ALLYNE. Life and times of Tycho Brahe. 209p il $3.50 Am-Scandinavian foundation; Princeton univ. press
B or 92 Brahe, Tyge 48-5013

"A biography of the Danish astronomer, written to commemorate the four-hundredth anniversary of his birth. The author is concerned more with Brahe's irritable temperament and unorthodox household habits than with his importance as an astronomer; for an estimate of that, he is willing to accept the opinion held by Brahe himself, who felt that his observations on equinoxes and the digressions of the stars were at least as significant as the planetary theories of his associate Kepler." New Yorker

Reviewed by S. A. Mitchell
+ Am Hist R 53:804 Jl '48 750w

Booklist 44:232 Mr 1 '48

Christian Century 65:208 F 18 '48 280w

Current Hist 14:175 Mr '48 50w

"Gade's volume is singularly successful as a popular biography. Its substance is informative and its treatment deft and readable—a few lapses into colloquial phrasing do not seriously mar the tone. The promise of the title is well fulfilled, for this is an account of the astronomer's life and times." O. J. Falles
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 F 8 '48 600w

New Yorker 23:64 Ja 3 '48 110w

Reviewed by R. G. Colodny
San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 2 '48 100w

GAER, JOSEPH, ed. Our lives; American labor stories. 318p $3 Boni & Gaer
Short stories—Collections 48-8581

"Thirty-two stories from Sherwood Anderson to Thomas Wolfe, selected to demonstrate that important American writers, frequently concern themselves with the lives of American workers. The stories present a variety of situations and cover different occupations. For the more prolific authors, each selected story is intended to be representative of their entire work." Library J

"These are pungent and purposeful stories that Mr. Gaer has assembled, not by any means all one-sided, not merely crusading, or protesting against the system and the boss. . . It is a satisfying experience to read this collection, and on two scores—for one can realize how much of the misery and the degradation the stories present are happily now some distance behind us. American literature like this, one feels, has helped to speed our painful passage." Harlan Trott
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 18 '48 430w

"May have some use as vocational material. Undoubtedly will interest union groups. Generally recommended." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 73:1510 O 15 '48 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 O 24 '48 90w

Springf'd Republican p7B N 7 '48 120w

GAFENCU, GRIGORE. Last days of Europe; a diplomatic journey in 1939; tr. by E. Fletcher-Allen. 239p $3.50 Yale univ. press
940.5 Europe—Politics. Diplomatic memoirs 48-1755

An account of the author's trip around Europe in 1939, when as Foreign Minister of Rumania, he visited the capitals of Poland, Germany, Belgium, Great Britain, France, Italy and the Balkan states, in an effort to discover what were the possibilities of war and peace. Index.

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel
Ann Am Acad 258:133 Jl '48 450w

Current Hist 14:294 My '48 50w

Kirkus 16:38 Ja 15 '48 180w

"In a rather flat style we receive a conventional account that throws no new light on events or people, but nonetheless fills in

GAFENCU, GRIGORE—Continued
some details. Because of this the book will be of interest to specialists in European history. Otherwise interest will be limited. Recommended for historical and large public libraries." H. H. Bernt
+ — Library J 73:195 F 1 '48 110w

"Mr. Gafencu has given a balanced, civilized view of the advent of catastrophe and of the men who tried, ineffectually, to govern Europe's destiny. His characterizations of individuals, nations and events are brilliant and plausible, and give every internal evidence of authority. More extensive critical interpretation of the materials with which the author assisted his memory, would have helped. But his account of a critical year, both in contact and approach, is invaluable for an understanding of the past and of the troubled present." H. W. Baehr
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 18 '48 950w

"Gafencu writes with polished style and a reserved wisdom. One might observe that his comments have been tempered and edited after the passage of time. But wisdom after the fact and cogitation in terms of the past are an advantage historically speaking when a diplomat or student wishes to use historic events in order to predicate future possibilities." C. L. Sulzberger
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 25 '48 950w
Times [London] Lit Sup p299 My 29 '48 1200w

GAIGE, CROSBY. Footlights and highlights. 320p $4 Dutton
B or 92 Theater 48-10662

Chapters in an autobiography. The author writes of his newspaper career; his years as theatrical agent and producer; and his hobbies of printing, herb culture, and good food. Index.

"Written with quiet geniality and taste." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 183:88 Ja '49 360w

"Not a thesis or think book, but a companionable account of a happily spent life."
+ Kirkus 16:469 S 1 '48 130w

"A completely fascinating and nostalgic autobiography." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:1820 D 15 '48 40w

"In his appraisal of dramatists and stage personalities, he is acute and forthright. In telling of plays that flopped and projects that fizzled, he writes with wit and seasoned wisdom. 'Footlights and Highlights' is a civilized and savory book. It is for any one who enjoys good food and sound wines, sound literature and good fellowship." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 7 '48 550w

"Into his autobiography, Mr. Gaige carelessly tosses a number of tasty-sounding recipes, the following of which could be a life's work, and no doubt well worth it; and he devotes much enthusiasm to herbs. 'Footlights and Highlights' must be the only autobiography ever written which can swing casually from actresses to onions." Lewis Robbins
+ N Y Times p51 N 14 '48 550w

"Memoirs of a career full of varied activities, written with an engaging sort of artlessness and brightened with anecdotes and gossip."
+ New Yorker 24:179 D 4 '48 170w

Reviewed by Bernard Sobel
Theatre Arts 33:78 Ja '49 250w

GAL, HANS. Golden age of Vienna; with 7 plates in colour and 32 black and white illustrations. (World of music ser) 71p $2 Chanticleer
780.9436 Music—Vienna

The second in a projected series called The World of music. Its subject is the principal cultural and musical trends in eighteenth and early nineteenth century Vienna. Short sections are devoted to Gluck, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, and Schubert. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '48

"The numerous illustrations are well reproduced. . . These together with a rather personal style and elegant format combine to make a 'gift book' in almost impeccable taste, appropriate for an intelligent amateur or a young student, if not a contribution to musicological literature. The reviewer must admit disappointment that Mr. Gal, a perceptive musician and a provocative writer, did not stick to his title and write a much-needed history of musical Vienna." F. C. Campbell
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 5:573 S '48 390w

GAMBRELL, HERBERT PICKENS. Anson Jones, the last president of Texas. 462p $5 Doubleday
B or 92 Jones, Anson. Texas—History 48-5519

A biography of the Massachusetts doctor who, more or less by accident, drifted into Texas in 1833 and soon became one of the leading figures in Texas' early history. The author, professor of history at Southern Methodist University, has based this work on unpublished papers, diaries and account books as well as on official and other published materials. Bibliography. Index.

"From a literary standpoint, a minor criticism one could make is that the author too often trusts the words of the sources to tell the story. He often seems to feel he cannot improve upon their narrative. At times these too frequent, overly long quotations needlessly interrupt the otherwise smooth flow of the story. This modesty on the part of the author is not necessary. Those chapters in which extracts are well subordinated to the author's own words reveal a literary style and a power for accurate, analytical storytelling that should make him more independent of the paragraphs of others. The book as it stands is a major contribution to western history." J. D. Hill
+ — Am Hist R 53:905 Jl '48 360w
Booklist 44:281 Ap 15 '48
Current Hist 14:233 Ap '48 50w
Kirkus 15:666 D 1 '47 170w

"A useful addition to any collection of Texas history or Southwestern Americana. No Sam Houston, Jones himself was a rather colorless person." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 73:195 F 1 '48 120w

"Written with rare appreciation of his subject and of the political milieu in which he worked, Professor Gambrell's biography makes an important contribution to the early history of Texas." C. M. Destler
+ New Eng Q 21:413 S '48 650w

"Even when Mr. Gambrell is dealing with the pompous exchanges of diplomats and politicians he writes with wisdom, a shrewd grasp of motives and a quiet but pervasive humor. The process of condensing his minute knowledge of men and events into deceptively easy paragraphs often gives to his style a quality that can be described only by the old-fashioned term elegance. His prose is an achievement at least equal to his scholarship." H. N. Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 F 29 '48 1550w

"The biographer makes no attempt to present the physician-diplomat-President as an exciting or lovable character. But, fortunately, Professor Gambrell has something that Doctor Jones lacked. He has an unusually sprightly sense of humor. First-rate Texas history cannot be written without a leaven of humor and a sense of the ridiculous." W. R. Hogan
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 7 '48 600w

Reviewed by Allan Bosworth
San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 29 '48 1000w

Reviewed by J. F. Dobie
Sat R of Lit 31:12 O 16 '48 850w
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:153 Je '48 250w

GANDHI, MOHANDAS KARAMCHAND. Autobiography; the story of my experiments with truth; tr. from the original in Gujarati by Mahadev Desai. 640p $5 Public affairs press

B or 92 48-8187

This "autobiography" was written by Gandhi while he was in prison in the early '20s, and appeared first as weekly articles in the Gujarati magazine Navajivan.

"The book's chief value lies in the fact that it is Gandhi's own story of himself during the formative period of his early maturity."
+ Am Soc R 13:793 D '48 100w

Reviewed by K. K. Singh
Canadian Forum 28:165 O '48 320w

Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Chicago Sun S 23 '48 400w

Reviewed by H. E. Fey
Christian Century 65:1080 O 13 '48 950w

Reviewed by Robert Peel
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 14 '48 650w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 48:525 S 10 '48 850w

"Here is a book which I make bold to guess has little of worth, and much of ill, to offer to Western civilization. It would prostitute the sportsmanship of our precious political way of life." T. V. Smith
— Ethics 59:58 O '48 2250w

Kirkus 16:418 Ag 15 '48 140w

"It will never be possible to deify Mohandas Gandhi behind a fine mist of ignorance so long as there are copies of his autobiography available. For in this remarkable book of self-revelation, Gandhi writes with a candor about things which no men can permit to a deity. . . In this story of his 'experiment with truth,' written about a quarter of a century ago, partly in prison, partly from a sickbed, Gandhi exposes with characteristic frankness all the frailties he knew he had and some of which he may have been less well aware." H. R. Isaacs
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 7 '48 900w

Reviewed by Vincent Sheean
N Y Times p1 S 12 '48 1500w

"To suggest that 'Gandhi's Autobiography' is not a balanced presentation is not to carp at it. It is rather to hail it and to point the need for the publication in this country of other of his writings which, taken together with the autobiography, form a balanced presentation. It is only by reading the whole long and detailed day-by-day record that readers can sense the magic of Gandhi's being and discover him fully." Herrymon Maurer
+ Sat R of Lit 31:16 S 11 '48 950w

Wis Lib Bul 45:13 Ja '49

GANN, ERNEST KELLOGG. Benjamin Lawless. 336p $3.50 Sloane

48-8793

Story of an adventurous young American who tried hard to settle down and lead a humdrum, conventional life. But the yearning to fly, to seek adventure in far lands led him into one tight place after another until finally the crash came in Arctic waters.

Booklist 45:178 Ja 15 '49

Kirkus 16:346 Jl 15 '48 150w

"A rather appealing character, Lawless nevertheless gets tiresome after a while, as do his intimate conversations with God." Donald Wasson
+ — Library J 73:1273 S 15 '48 90w

"Mr. Gann has written a book which, while readable because of its simplicity, is without feeling, intensity, plan or purpose. He exhausts himself over nonsense, shoves his bloodless hero in and out of remote and uninteresting situations, and smothers him in stupid and monotonous talk." Bennell Braunstein
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p10 N 7 '48 250w

Reviewed by David Dempsey
N Y Times p42 O 24 '48 110w

"A man's book? Yes, by all means. A woman's book? That too, I think, because Mr. Gann has understood that there are two sides to Ben's restlessness, and that a woman who loves him has this second side to cope with. And above everything else, Mr. Gann has also realized that the man afflicted with this conflict of urges has his own problem as well; he doesn't act as he does just out of sheer carelessness or lack of responsibility." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 18 '48 650w

Reviewed by W. R. Manchester
Springf'd Republican p10B N 21 '48 210w

GANNETT, HENRY. American names, a guide to the origin of place names in the United States. 334p $3.75 Public affairs press

929.4 Names, Geographical 47-12236

"A reissue of The Origin of Certain Place Names in the United States published in 1905 as a government document. The book carries no acknowledgment of the original publication." Booklist

Booklist 44:250 Mr 15 '48

"It is good to have the book back in print but Public Affairs Press may seem a little less than candid in its failure to identify it as a reprint." G. D. McDonald
+ — Library J 73:200 F 1 '48 130w

GANNETT, RUTH STILES (MRS PETER KAHN). My father's dragon; il. by Ruth Chrisman Gannett. 87p $2 Random house

48-6527

A combination of fantasy, sense, and nonsense, for children of six to ten. It describes the adventures of a small boy, Elmer Elevator, who befriended an old alley cat and in return heard the story of the captive baby dragon on Wild Island. Right away Elmer decided to free the dragon. The tale of Elmer's voyage to Tangerina and his arrival on Wild Island, his encounters with various wild animals, and his subsequent rescue of the dragon follows.

Booklist 44:320 My 15 '48

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun My 15 '48 220w

"Original in plot, delightful in all its humorous details, perfectly matched in fancy by the altogether enchanting illustrations of Ruth Chrisman Gannett, here is a book which both adults and children will enjoy." F. C. Darling
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 11 '48 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '48

"The first text of a young writer and the sixth contribution to American Graphic Arts by the illustrator, everything about the book is treasure, and promise of more to come. A sort of collector's item!" E. E.
+ Commonweal 49:149 N 19 '48 80w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:190 My '48 140w

"My Father's Dragon seems to me an ideal book for translation into other languages. It is written in clear robust English . . . its small-boy psychology is perfect and its hero—Elmer Elevator—a real personality." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 24:266 Jl '48 320w

"Nonsense tale with convincing realism that should entice small listeners."
+ Kirkus 16:194 Ap 15 '48 130w

"Recommended for ages 6-8." E. F. Clift
+ Library J 73:824 My 15 '48 70w

"This imaginative story, with the solemn, exaggerated language in the dialogues and the mild little spoonerisms of a nervous mouse, is first-class nonsense and adventure. The indirect story-telling method is a pleasant novelty."
+ New Repub 119:34 D 6 '48 140w

"Wild Island is like nothing you have met in children's literature and any suspicion that the author may be making it up is removed by the evidence of the pictures. These are perfect for the purpose. . .The book as a whole, from cover to cover, has the unity of a true work of art." M. L. Becker

GANNETT, R. S.—Continued
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 My 9 '48 400w

Reviewed by Marjorie Fischer
+ N Y Times p18 My 2 '48 160w

New Yorker 24:129 D 11 '48 100w

"This is, without question, the funniest book that we have seen for a month of Sundays. It is also an exciting adventure story that will please small boys and girls, and their elders, from Maine to Florida and from Canada to Mexico. As a book to share with children it is a treasure, and story-tellers will read it with a solemn joy, hearing in imagination the delighted chuckles of their listeners. . . This reviewer has always been a great admirer of the fanciful tales of Frank R. Stockton. Here we find the same practical, business-like style in narration, the same way of making an absurdity sound like a fact, the same sharpness of characterization." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 31:31 My 8 '48 450w

Wis Lib Bul 44:134 Je '48

GARCIA-GRANADOS, JORGE. Birth of Israel; the drama as I saw it. 291p $3 Knopf

956.9 Israel. Palestine—Politics and government 48-8794

The author is Guatemalan delegate to the United Nations. In his Preface he says: "This book tells the story of a personal experience—a memorable and tremendously rewarding experience—which began with my appointment to the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine on May 13, 1947, and ended, exactly a year and a day later, with the proclamation of Israel's independence on May 14, 1948. What transpired during that time in our investigations abroad, and behind the scenes at the United Nations, is told here as seen through my eyes." Index.

Atlantic 182:120 D '48 240w

Booklist 45:101 N 15 '48

Kirkus 16:466 S 1 '48 240w

"Strongly pro-Jewish and highly critical of British policy, the story is an exciting one, full of details about behind-the-scenes maneuvering." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 73:1507 O 15 '48 120w

Reviewed by P. S. Bernstein
Nation 168:132 Ja 29 '49 800w

Reviewed by F. W. Buxton
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 O 24 '48 1350w

"This is an outstanding book in a field where angels might well fear to tread. It is important—yet far from ponderous; and although much of the ground which these pages cover is fairly familiar (some of it all too familiar) the reader is apt to find himself yielding to a mounting sense of excitement," E. A. Speiser
+ N Y Times p3 O 24 '48 1600w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 14 '48 400w

"By and large, the contents of 'The Birth of Israel' are well known to those who have followed the press reports on United Nations handling of the Palestine issue. But certain details regarding UNSCOP's private hearings, as well as the lobbying by interested parties at the United Nations, are released for the first time. The volume will be greeted with enthusiasm by Zionists and their well-wishers. By the same token it is bound to incur the displeasure of the Arabs and their champions. In any case, the author's refreshing style and honest simplicity make it a welcome addition to the swelling literature on Palestine." J. C. Hurewitz
+ Sat R of Lit 31:13 N 6 '48 800w

GARCIA LORCA, FEDERICO. Selected poems; tr. by Stephen Spender and J. L. Gili. 56p $1.25 Transatlantic 861

"Several new poems have been added to this collection, published some years ago in England, and the older ones have been given more poetic and less literal renderings." New Yorker

---

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun p36 F 16 '48 90w

"The two translators have contributed a valuable foreword on Lorca and the calibre of his work."
+ New Yorker 23:100 D 20 '47 70w

"Like its predecessor, this book will afford a representative but frugal introduction to the poet's work. It is a pity that the helpful introduction to the former volume, by R. M. Nadal, could not have been retained in this. Readers with a little Spanish will also regret the dropping of the Spanish text which in the earlier volume accompanied the translations, though there can be no doubt that the decision to do so has made possible the bargain price of the present edition. . . By and large, the changes are tactful and successful, though occasionally an epithet or a cadence seems to have been unduly softened or sentimentalized." F. B. McCarthy
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:23 Mr 27 '48 320w

"A number of translators have tried to reproduce his quality in English, and though Poet Spender and his collaborator have scarcely succeeded, they have at least picked some good poems to make the effort on. Among these lyrics are several as frighteningly alive as the jet from an artery. Lorca's Lament for Ignacio Sánchez Mejías, translated in this volume, has no equal among modern elegies for directness in the vision of death and for symphonic magnificence of form."
Time 50:86 D 22 '47 550w

GARCIA VILLA, JOSE. See Villa, J. G.

GARD, ROBERT EDWARD. Wisconsin is my doorstep; a dramatist's yarn book of Wisconsin lore; decorations by Frank Utpatel. 194p $3.50 Longmans

398.21 Folklore—Wisconsin 48-6163

Collection of tales about Wisconsin by the dramatist and folklorist who wrote Johnny Chinook (Book Review Digest 1946). They are a combination of folklore and history, with some poetry added.

"It would be unfair to suggest that Mr. Gard's book is going to find favor with all readers. If you happen to be a person who 'just can't read plays' or one who finds poetry difficult, then by all means skip this volume because Mr. Gard relies heavily on both. If, on the other hand, you enjoy an artful blending of both there is a treat in store for you here. Some of Mr. Gard's yarns are superlative." V. P. Hass
+ — N Y Times p22 My 9 '48 450w

"'Wisconsin Is My Doorstep' is a collection of Wisconsin folk tales, old and new. They are cast in a remarkably readable dramatic form that is closer to radio script than any other recognizable type of composition. In them, the author has retained the spirit and aim of folklore, which is to divert and often to amuse the audience—in this case the reader." R. T.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 30 '48 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p27 Ja 8 '49 600w

Wis Lib Bul 44:78 Ap '48

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the lonely heiress. 272p $2.50 Morrow 48-5786

Detective story.

Booklist 44:383 Jl 15 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun F 27 '48 550w

Kirkus 16:7 Ja 1 '48 80w

"Fans who love every blessed move that Perry Mason makes should like this story, too, though it seems rather thin in spots and is hardly up to Mr. Gardner's best." Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 F 29 '48 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 F 29 '48 140w

New Yorker 24:88 F 28 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 7 '48 110w

"Lively, clever, and shrewdly plotted variation on familiar Mason theme, with much villainy, both crude and polished, and some spectacular sleuthing."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 Mr 6 '48 50w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. Case of the vagabond virgin. 276p $2.50 Morrow 48-7709

Detective story.

Booklist 45:52 O 1 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Jl 30 '48 70w

Kirkus 16:245 My 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 1 '48 110w

"The mystery laureate of the United States is as faithful as ever to his public." H. B. P.
+ N Y Times p13 Ag 1 '48 140w

New Yorker 34:72 Ag 7 '48 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 8 '48 100w

"Standard brand."
Sat R of Lit 31:24 Ag 14 '48 40w

"A rattling good yarn it is. It has everything one has come to expect of these legal brain-twisters." D. F. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p15A Ag 1 '48 90w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. D.A. takes a chance. 276p $2.50 Morrow
48-9072

Detective story.

Booklist 45:138 D 15 '48

Chicago Sun D 3 '48 50w

Kirkus 16:416 Ag 15 '48 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 O 31 '48 190w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p52 D 5 '48 160w

New Yorker 24:112 O 30 '48 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 21 '48 150w

"Alluring ladies carry burden of plot in tale which is better characterized than earlier Selby sagas and has action to spare. Stencil—but expert."
Sat R of Lit 31:36 N 20 '48 40w

GARDNER, ERLE STANLEY. The land of shorter shadows. 228p il $5 Morrow
917.22 California, Lower—Description and travel 48-1076

Factual, day-by-day account of a trip made by the author and several companions down the length of Lower California. The interests of the party included lizards and snakes and other wild animals, photography,—and people whom they found gently courteous and dignified in manner.

Booklist 44:280 Ap 15 '48

Commonweal 48:84 My 7 '48 50w

Kirkus 16:99 F 15 '48 160w

"A book which will be appreciated by the arm-chair traveler and the adventurous soul who hopes one day to make the trip. Profusely illustrated with photographs by the author." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 73:554 Ap 1 '48 100w

"'The Land of Shorter Shadows' . . . is graphically written, filled with lively incident, agreeably lacking in travelogue stuffiness. The author rambles off the map at will—from lizards to lawyers, from geese to gambling, from coyotes to cooking—and he made a camera record of the trip to illustrate a beguiling volume."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 1 '48 200w

Sat R of Lit 31:29 S 4 '48 140w

GARDNER, HELEN. Art through the ages. 3d ed 851p il maps $6; text ed $4.50 Harcourt
709 Art—History 48-9053

"Some new material and some reorganization in a well-presented chronological history of art." (Booklist) General bibliography. Glossary of technical terms. Index. For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1926, 1937.

Booklist 45:106 N 15 '48

Reviewed by Dorothy Adlow
Christian Science Monitor p15 D 2 '48 90w

Commonweal 49:358 Ja 14 '49 50w

"An incredible amount of ground is competently covered."
+ Kirkus 16:567 O 15 '48 130w

"Obviously essential to all art collections." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 73:1744 D 1 '48 70w

"The organization seems to me excellent, and of course the exposition continues to be of the high and direct quality which characterized this work from the first edition."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 N 7 '48 400w

New Yorker 24:147 N 27 '48 70w

"This is a volume for the general reader as well as for the serious student of art." E. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 7 '48 90w

GARNER, FREDERIC HORACE. English delftware. 44p 96pl 4 col pl $7.50 Van Nostrand
738.37 Delft ware 48-9608

Traces the history of English delftware from the time it reached England in the sixteenth century, introduced by Flemish potters, thru the eighteenth century. Illustrated with many photographs of rare examples of the ware in the Victoria and Albert museum and other collections. Index.

Reviewed by Carolyn Stull
San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 19 '48 50w

Springf'd Republican p12C D 12 '48 40w

GARREAU, GARTH. Bat boy of the Giants. 184p $2 Presbyterian bd.
796.357 Baseball 48-6529

Story of the author's experiences as a bat boy for the New York Giants. It contains many baseball stories, anecdotes about the various members of the Giants team, and some views of the game as seen from the players' bench.

Booklist 44:357 Je 15 '48

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun My 8 '48 160w

Kirkus 16:112 Mr 1 '48 70w

"Everyone will like Garth and will wish him well in his ambition to be a player. Giant fans will call this book a must, and all baseball fans will want to read it. Recommended highly for children, young people, adults, and all libraries." M. D. Read
+ Library J 73:717 My 1 '48 70w

GARREAU, GARTH—Continued
Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 My 9 '48 360w
Wis Lib Bul 44:135 Je '48

GARRETT, HELEN. Mr Flip Flop; il. by Garry MacKenzie. 41p $2 Viking 48-10104

Story of a retired circus clown who lived in a large barn-gymnasium. He was the happiest man in the world until ten bears and a tax collector paid him visits; then he took to the woods. Fortunately he soon discovered that the bears merely wanted to play with his rings and the tax collector was the father of one of his acrobat pupils. The story ends with the bears at play and Mr Flop's taxes paid by the grateful tax collector.

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun N 13 '48 70w

"A jolly story for the picture-book age." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:453 N '48 80w
Kirkus 16:396 Ag 15 '48 90w

"Recommended for ages 4-8." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 74:65 Ja 1 '49 70w

Reviewed by H. K. Lippmann
N Y Times p11 D 26 '48 150w

"The drawings, printed in pink and green, are as lively and funny as the story."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:25 N 13 '48 50w

GARRETT, MITCHELL BENNETT, and GODFREY, JAMES LOGAN. Europe since 1815. 763p il maps $5 Crofts
940.28 Europe—History 47-12235

A textbook for college students, covering the history of Europe from the Industrial revolution (beginning in the 1770s, well under way in 1815) to the Second World war and its immediate aftermath. Reading reference. Index.

School & Society 67:47 Ja 17 '48 20w

"Bearing in mind that the book is a text and not an exhaustive work of scholarship for professional historians, this latest 'Europe Since 1815' is successful to a satisfactory degree." Forbes Parkyn
+ Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 210w

GARST, MRS DORIS (SHANNON). Buffalo Bill; il. by Elton C. Fax. 214p $2.75 Messner
B or 92 Cody, William Frederick—Juvenile literature 48-9529

A life of the famous scout for grades 5-8. Bibliography. Index.

"While it has no particular literary merit, this is a fast-paced and extremely readable life story."
+ — Booklist 45:124 D 1 '48
Kirkus 16:442 S 1 '48 100w

"A thoroughly enjoyable and stimulating book, especially suitable for the young adolescent. Recommended for ages 12-16." S. J. Robinson
+ Library J 74:133 Ja 15 '49 80w

"No boy or girl who likes adventure will want to miss a book that is also stirring American history." P. A. W.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 14 '48 240w

"Present-day youngsters acquainted with Buffalo Bill's modern counterparts on screen and air will enjoy this lively, entertaining tale of a colorful figure from America's past." W. G. Tyrrell
+ N Y Times p28 Ja 30 '49 180w
Wis Lib Bul 45:15 Ja '49

GARST, MRS DORIS (SHANNON). Wish on an apple; il. by Jon Nielsen. 192p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury
48-8299

Story of a family of migrant fruit pickers who finally gain their heart's desire—a place of their own.

Booklist 45:91 N 1 '48

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:459 N '48 80w

"The people are vivid, the story sustained, the subject interesting in its details of apple orchards—all in all, one of Garst's better books. There isn't the power of Lois Lenski's Journey for Judy, but has some of that appeal."
+ Kirkus 16:478 S 15 '48 110w

"Good characterization, a touch of mystery, and some of the appeal of Lois Lenski's Judy's Journey. Recommended for fifth and sixth grades." M. M. Smith
+ Library J 73:1519 O 15 '48 60w

"This is a story full of human interest, pleasant personal relations centering around an appealing family group." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times p24 D 12 '48 160w
Sat R of Lit 31:30 N 13 '48 30w
Springf'd Republican p7B N 7 '48 100w
Wis Lib Bul 44:187 N '48

GARTH, DAVID. Tortured angel. 246p $2.50 Putnam
48-2475

A tale of an American ex-officer, delegated by the State Department to track down some missing documents highly necessary for the cause of peace. The trail leads Denis Furlong to Vermont and New York, across the sea to France and back again before his mission is accomplished.

Booklist 44:368 Jl 1 '48

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Jl 30 '48 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '48

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:448 N '48 80w

"Bolstered by actual events of the Normandy invasion and a retracing of the terrain and movements, this is a grade above the usual 'confidential mission' yarn."
+ Kirkus 16:199 Ap 15 '48 130w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Je 13 '48 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 27 '48 50w

"Hunt for sinister papers (gratefully non-atomic) handled with finesse, literary skill, some romance, vivid flashbacks, and gallons of excitement. High-grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:32 Je 12 '48 40w
Springf'd Republican p14A Je 11 '48 110w

GARWOOD, DARRELL. Crossroads of America; the story of Kansas City. 331p il $4 Norton
977.8411 Kansas City—History 48-7999

A history of Kansas City during the last one hundred years set down largely in terms of the personalities that have made it famous—Kit Carson, Senator Benton, John Brown, Jesse James, Colonel Swope, Tom Pendergast, etc. Index.

Booklist 45:63 O 15 '48

"Attractive end maps are used, upon which Cairo is mistakenly located in Kentucky. This hardly lessens the value of this excellent contribution by Mr. Garwood." Paul Kiniery
+ — Commonweal 49:17 O 15 '48 160w
+ Kirkus 16:358 Jl 15 '48 130w

"Highly entertaining, with historical and biographical significance." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 73:1387 O 1 '48 170w

"Mr. Garwood's book is journalistic in both the good and the bad senses. It has a story to tell, tells it, and stops, which is good journalism and also excellent literary practice; but the style is slipshod in spots and it tends to subordinate the important to the picturesque, which are faults much more conspicuous in a book than in a newspaper." G. W. Johnson
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 26 '48 900w

"Darrell Garwood has written here a biography of Kansas City in terms of the men who shaped it. A better approach to the city's history it would be difficult to imagine. . . It is probable that he will make some enemies with his book, but he will make some friends with it, too. In any event, he has put down the record for all to see. With some exceptions, it is a glorious one." V. P. Hass
N Y Times p22 N 14 '48 650w

"It's not a book for the tourist traveling to or from the West Coast who is looking for sights to see or hotels at which to stay, but it's good historical background material which will help him understand the area through which he is passing." Beach Conger
+ Sat R of Lit 31:39 O 2 '48 180w

GASQUE, JIM. Hunting and fishing in the Great Smokies. 210p il $3.75 Knopf

799 Hunting—Great Smoky mountains. Fishing—Great Smoky mountains Agr48-246

A sportsman's handbook relating to fishing and hunting in the region along the North Carolina-Tennessee border. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 45:28 S 15 '48

Kirkus 16:296 Je 15 '48 130w

"Packed with practical information by one who has spent his life in the area. Excellent format, well illustrated. Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 73:1196 S 1 '48 50w

Reviewed by Baynard Kendrick
N Y Times p18 Ag 1 '48 170w

New Yorker 24:83 S 4 '48 40w

"If there is a hunter or fisherman in your family, this is the answer to what to give him for his birthday or for Christmas. Or just to keep him from retelling his own fish stories. For Jim Gasque's stories are better, and bigger, than the ordinary fisherman can stock, and he throws in bear hunting and boar hunting as well."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 S 4 '48 80w

GATES, DORIS. My brother Mike [il. by Wesley Dennis]. 191p $2.50 Viking

48-10103

Billy Evans was a "county boy" living unhappily with Thad Fuller and his wife Pansy, near Fresno, California. Billy had dreams of owning a dog, and of some day finding his father, and after a series of adventures Billy's dreams do finally come true.

"An exceptionally appealing story of a lonely ten-year-old boy. . . The boy's quest for love and security is told with real understanding; characters have vitality, and the happy ending is realistic. Grades 4-7."
+ Booklist 45:91 N 1 '48

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 168:219 D '48 90w

"This is a California story filled with affection for its valleys and mountains and suited for the middle age group." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:459 N '48 90w

Kirkus 16:399 Ag 15 '48 120w

"Highly recommended by this reviewer." Claire Nolte
+ Library J 73:1825 D 15 '48 100w

"A fine story and a most lovable character."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 N 13 '48 50w

Wis Lib Bul 45:16 Ja '49

GATES, REGINALD RUGGLES. Human ancestry from a genetical point of view. 422p il $7.50 Harvard univ. press

572 Man—Origin. Heredity 48-5219

"A geneticist reviews man's anthropological history in the light of paleontological discoveries of the last 25 years. An extremely technical discussion by a leading exponent of the theory of parallel evolution. Chapter bibliographies." Booklist

---

Booklist 44:229 Mr 1 '48

"Much of the author's writing is of a rather technical nature; but it is well illustrated with photographs and drawings, and any one who really wants to get at the facts in the matter will find the book a unique compendium of information quite apart from controversial questions." H. M. Parshley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30 O 17 '48 320w

Reviewed by R. C. Cook
N Y Times p20 Je 6 '48 700w

"It is a melancholy performance. At this time when, in the name of a 'return to reason' the heritarians and inegalitarians are mustering their forces for the attack on what they choose to call the 'political doctrine' of the equality of man, it behooves us to be particularly vigilant. Therefore let us call Dr. Gates's book by its proper name. It is not a scientific treatise but a political tract. A shot that has misfired." M. F. Ashley-Montagu
— Sat R of Lit 31:23 F 28 '48 900w

School & Society 67:431 Je 5 '48 20w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:158 Je '48 320w

GATTI, ATTILIO. Here is the veld; il. with photos; maps by Fortunato A. Fanali. 154p $2.75 Scribner

916.8 South Africa—Description and travel 48-4243

An authoritative book on South Africa for ages eleven or older. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 45:91 N 1 '48

+ Kirkus 16:283 Je 15 '48 120w

"In this fascinating account of South Africa, this authority gives an intimate feeling of this land he so admires. . . Highly recommended." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 73:1524 O 15 '48 100w

"The photographs throughout are well chosen and excellent, but Mr. Morton with his 'In Search of South Africa' has drawn the true, well rounded portrait of the country and the veld." Margaret Hubbard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 N 7 '48 320w

Sat R of Lit 31:52 N 13 '48 50w

GAYDON, ALFRED GORDON. Dissociation energies and spectra of diatomic molecules. 239p il $5 Wiley.

541.39 Dissociation. Force and energy. Molecules. A48-8151

"Dr. Gaydon of the Imperial college of London has compiled [this] text on dissociation energies. Leading off from an introductory discussion of spectra, he deals with potential energy curves, correlation between atomic and molecular spectra, continua, and predissociation. While the present text is primarily devoted to spectroscopical evidence, some chapters are also provided for a brief treatment of electron impact, thermal, and thermochemical methods for the determination of dissociation energies. The final chapter gives the recommended values for 250 molecules in electron volts and kilocalories, as well as literature references." (Chem Eng) Indexes and definitions of symbols and values of physical constants.

"Most of our knowledge on precise spectroscopic methods is of relatively recent origin, and thus it is not surprising that some of the work is still in a controversial state. It is to Dr. Gaydon's credit that he shows both sides of the picture and then introduces an element of personal opinion rather than just compiling information uncritically. The research physicist and chemist will welcome this treatise in his bookshelf." F. C. Nachod

GAYDON, A. G.—Continued
+ Chem Eng 55:290 Jl '48 220w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:950 Je 15 '48 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:79 S '48

GAYN, MARK J. Japan diary. 517p $4 Sloane

952 Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945-. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Reconstruction (1939-)—Japan 48-9246

"Extracts from the diary of the Chicago Sun's foreign correspondent give a very unflattering picture of the American occupation in Japan and Korea. As this author sees it, the American army, acting as an instrument for carrying out our foreign policy, has disregarded the welfare of the native peoples and made only a pretense of democratic reform in Japan, in its effort to make Japan a military and economic bulwark against communism. In Korea our record, Gayn says, is the 'blackest, most depressing story' he has ever reported." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:101 N 15 '48

Reviewed by Gordon Walker
Christian Science Monitor p16 N 27 '48 600w

"There is very little Oriental atmosphere in Mr. Gayn's diary; I know both Japan and Korea and I find almost nothing of their specific atmospheres, and nothing of the beauty of these countries nor of the rhythm of their daily life in the more than 500 pages of this book. . . There are only a few stories of human interest in the whole book; and the author deals with political problems mostly without touching on the human background. Diaries on merely political matters often become repetitious and boring." Max Fischer
— Commonweal 49:353 Ja 14 '49 700w

"This is a profoundly disturbing book, a book that will be unpopular with those who would like to sit comfortably back and accept the military-cum-state department position that democratization of Japan goes on apace. . . Gayn does not hesitate to name names, from MacArthur and Hodge on down. Not an easy book to read; the diary form imposes a challenge on the reader to sort and assess the facts. But the overall carries tremendous conviction."
+ — Kirkus 16:549 O 1 '48 240w

"Engrossingly interesting, indignation-arousing, vitally important. Highly recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 73:1507 O 15 '48 150w

Reviewed by Nathaniel Peffer
Nation 167:701 D 18 '48 700w

"A thoughtful, carefully documented and depressing book that deserves the serious attention of any possible new policy-makers in Washington. Its chief value is its detailed reporting; its conclusions are exactly the ones that have been reached by every experienced liberal observer of our policy of dogged support of collapsing Chinese reaction." Richard Watts
+ New Repub 119:25 N 29 '48 1200w

"Since most of the material is two years old, Gayn's book would appear to be regrettably dated. The remarkable thing is that much of the book's information is actually news and the balance of it absolutely essential for understanding what is now happening in Japan and Korea. . . Readers may not be convinced by Gayn's views. But it is a good and hopeful omen that there are pugnacious and unintimidated American observers like Mark Gayn—reporters who believe in honest searching after hidden truths and who freely set them down according to their sincere convictions." Richard Lauterbach
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 N 28 '48 1050w

Reviewed by Foster Hailey
N Y Times p40 D 5 '48 450w

"The diary form of the book makes for repetitiousness and hard reading, but it does point up the author's progressive disillusionment as he observed the political trend of the occupation. . . There is a lot of good collateral material on the American military authorities and their increasingly Byzantine way of living, some of it fairly funny."
+ — New Yorker 24:165 N 20 '48 140w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens
San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 19 '48 1000w

"In writing 'Japan Diary,' Gayn adopted a technique that is frequently discussed but seldom carried out. He wrote detailed letters home to Mrs. Gayn, then later edited and expanded them to produce a book. There is, however, at least one fault inherent in the letter-home method which Mr. Gayn has not fully overcome. Unless it is edited beyond all recognition, the material tends to be episodic and even misleading. . . Despite this defect and a strong leftist bias, 'Japan Diary' contains an undeniable wealth of material on men and events in Japan and Korea." Stuart Lillico
+ — Sat R of Lit 31:14 N 27 '48 700w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein
Springf'd Republican p12C D 5 '48 800w
Wis Lib Bul 45:12 Ja '49

GEBHARD, MRS ANNA LAURA (MUNRO). Rural parish! il. by Janet Smalley. 121p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

253 Clergy. Rural churches 47-12450

Sums up the author's experiences as the wife of a clergyman in a rural Minnesota community. Besides describing her first year there she gives enough of incident and characterization to make the book as interesting as fiction.

Booklist 44:144 D 15 '47
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '48

"The book is well written and the author's sense of humor as well as her interests and those of her minister husband make it a very human and very appealing record of a useful life."
+ Kirkus 15:670 D 1 '47 130w

"A little book of beautifully written excerpts from the author's diary. These display her ability to create living and vital characters in short sketches and to reproduce dialogue." R. D. Dinsmore
+ N Y Times p20 F 8 '48 180w
Wis Lib Bul 44:80 Ap '48

GEE, HUGH, and GEE, SALLY. Belinda and the magic journey; represented by dolls and photographed in natural colors. 29p $1 Chanticleer

Belinda was a wooden doll. She wanted someone to play so set off on a journey which took her to the forest, to the moon, and to the lake, before she finally found a little wooden companion. Illustrated with colored photographs.

Kirkus 16:621 D 1 '48 130w

"This book is not unattractive, though too flimsy for library use. (Prebinding, however, would remedy that). . . Not for first purchase, but might be an addition to a fairly complete picture book collection." S. J. Johnson
Library J 74:65 Ja 1 '49 80w

"So attractive are the color photographs with which this book is illustrated that it is disappointing to find the story following an old and well worn trail. . . Several of the pictures are very effective, but the fantasy of the story is unimaginative." P. A. Whitney
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 D 26 '48 130w

GEEN, M. S. The making of the Union of South Africa. 227p il maps $3 Longmans

968 South Africa—History [48-6188]

Popular history of the Union of South Africa, from the date of the Portuguese discovery to 1939. Bibliography and chronology. Index.

"This convenient summary of South Africa's checkered history is presented in a commendably impartial fashion with no extravagant praise or blame for such controversial figures as Kruger, Rhodes, Herzog, and Smuts. The account is so obviously objective that the author's judgments are sparse." Howard Robinson
+ — Am Hist R 53:873 Jl '48 240w
Foreign Affairs 26:579 Ap '48 10w

GEER, ANDREW CLARE. Sea chase. 274p $3 Harper
48-8517

In September, 1939, a German freighter escapes from an Australian port. Captain Ehrlich, driven out of the German navy twenty years before, determines to take his ship home and become a hero. A British cruiser pursues the freighter thru the Pacific, into the Arctic, until she reaches her doom. The story tells also of the matching of wits of the captains of the two vessels.

Booklist 45:88 N 1 '48

"A grim, realistically melodramatic, good yarn."
+ Kirkus 16:347 Jl 15 '48 130w

"It is unusual for an American writer to choose such a theme, the exploits of an enemy ship, but Andrew Geer has written a bang-up novel with action from cover to cover."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 O 3 '48 240w

"It is unfortunate that with so much competence in his hands, and with such a hard, clean story to tell, Mr. Geer had to drape upon a simple framework such clichés as the femme fatale, who in this case is both a Mata Hari and a Florence Nightingale, and a young British naval officer who makes a personal vendetta of the whole thing. They are good Hollywood, but they detract seriously from what might have been a minor classic of modern sea literature." C. B. P.
+ — N Y Times p30 N 28 '48 360w

"His readers, or anyone else who likes a sea yarn of topnotch quality, will have an opportunity for two or three hours of suspense, action, and (because the author is more than just a yarn-spinner) study in character. The most exigent reader could hardly ask for more in this type of story." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 5 '48 650w

"There is nothing in the least commonplace about the way Mr. Geer handles his materials or the results he attains. He has learned that action grows out of character and character is described by action. At the center of his picture is as finely-drawn and complex an individual as ever sailed the fictive seas—Ehrlich, formerly of the German Navy." Fletcher Pratt
+ Sat R of Lit 31:39 O 9 '48 650w

"Though a professional storyteller who gave up the sea to write for a living, this is his first novel. His mature talent is obvious, and his awareness of the ocean's majesty and his knowledge of seamanship, both technical and primitive, profound. Now the narrative is his own, now told from the viewpoint of the 'kapitan' or some member of the crew, but despite quick changes it never seems disjointed, nor even becalmed. It's rough fare, but genuine, and above melodrama." D. B. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p8B O 10 '48 480w

GEIGER, GEORGE RAYMOND. Philosophy and the social order; an introductory approach. 407p $3.25 Houghton
100 Philosophy 47-2951

For descriptive note see Annual for 1947.

"There are some oversimplifications of some of the sociologists' positions and near-caricatures of others, notably the positivists. . . Nevertheless the book is an unusually good one for the purpose for which it is intended, namely, an introductory treatise on social philosophy. It is lucid, vigorous in style, in short, a book students will like as well as profit from." J. F. Cuber
+ — Am Soc R 13:110 F '48 300w

Reviewed by Arthur Child
Ethics 58:153 Ja '48 220w

"This book is a highly readable introductory text in philosophy. Each of its unconventional features should make it of more than usual interest to students of the social sciences." M. H. Williams
+ Social Forces 26:360 Mr '48 650w

GEIRINGER, KARL. Brahms: his life and work; 2d ed, rev. & enl [tr. by H. B. Weiner and Bernard Miall]. 383p il $5 Oxford
B or 92 Brahms, Johannes 47-11223

"This is a revised edition of a biography published in German in 1934 and in English in 1936 [Book Review Digest 1936]. It has long been greatly valued for its use of letters in the life section and for the remarks on individual compositions under works. This edition has been augmented chiefly by the insertion of even more letters in the text, the addition of a 25-page epistolary appendix, and the discussion of compositions which have come to light since its original publication." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:219 F 15 '48
Kirkus 15:622 N 1 '47 80w

"The many librarians who sought long and hard for copies of the book during its out-of-print years will be happy to have it back. Highly recommended." Leonard Burkat
+ Library J 72:1611 N 15 '47 100w

"The second and enlarged edition of Dr. Geiringer's admirable work confirms and strengthens the impression already created by its predecessor: that here is an addition to the profusion of current literature about Brahms whose peculiar value lies in its intimate detail and its meticulous relating of small incidents in the life of the composer." L. E. Cuyler
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 5:109 D '47 280w

"For readers who are seriously interested in music in general and Brahms in particular. Its style is not sprightly, nor are its virtues of the popular kind; but they are solid, for I am assured by authorities that this biography is the best in the field." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 31:33 Ja 24 '48 150w

GEISEL, THEODOR SEUSS (DR SEUSS, pseud). Thidwick, the big-hearted moose; written and il. by Dr Seuss. [40p] $2 Random house 48-8129

Story, told in verse, about a kind-hearted moose who gave too many creatures a home on his antlers.

Booklist 45:37 S 15 '48

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun p21 O 2 '48 70w
Commonweal 49:147 N 19 '48 40w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 24:435 N '48 50w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:454 N '48 70w

"Not, on the child level, 'the funniest book of the year.' "
Kirkus 16:436 S 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins
Library J 73:1390 O 1 '48 70w

"The author's rollicking verse is perfectly suited to this comical tale. His pictures in red, blue, and black are expressive and funny, and though they appear slightly confusing at first glance, they are well adapted to the spirit of the story. For little children it is splendid read-aloud nonsense." V. H. M.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 14 '48 250w

GEISEL, T. S.—Continued

"How Thidwick asserted himself is told in verses which march in double-quick time. The pictures are scenes of happy confusion, a little difficult to see at first, but as madly absurd as anything Dr. Seuss has done. This is pure entertainment for almost anyone over 5." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p25 O 10 '48 140w

New Yorker 24:126 D 11 '48 50w

"This popular author-artist has written another imaginative and hilarious tale which will be received with enthusiasm and delight by both adults and children. The pictures, which are in black, red and blue, are as comical as the text." Grace Stevens

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 14 '48 240w

"The verses that tell this sad tale are very funny indeed, and the drawings of Thidwick are a delight, from the first page to the last." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 O 16 '48 180w

Wis Lib Bul 44:214 D '48

GEISER, SAMUEL WOOD. Naturalists of the frontier. 2d ed rev & enl 296p maps $5 Univ. press in Dallas

925.9 Naturalists. Frontier and pioneer life—Texas 48-7357

"First published in 1937 [Book Review Digest 1938]. . . The author has revised the text and has added a chapter of 'Notes on Scientists of the First Frontier,' that is, the Old South before 1850. . . The eleven men he has selected for discussion range from John James Audubon and Ferdinand Roemer to the obscure Jean Louis Berlandier, a youth sent out to Texas with a Mexican boundary commission by the great Auguste-Pyrame DeCandolle of Geneva." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Bibliographies. Index.

"In his vivid and authoritative accounts of the backgrounds from which these men came, as well as of the conditions they encountered in Texas, Professor Geiser has provided a fascinating insight into the process by which the society of a newly settled area was fertilized by cultural importations from the East and from Europe. Entirely apart from its contribution to the history of science, his book is significant for the light it throws on an aspect of frontier history that has received far too little attention." H. N. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 8 '48 470w

"The volume will be of interest chiefly to naturalists, but also to young men who feel the inclination to follow after the great ones in this branch of science." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 25 '48 120w

Springf'd Republican p10A Jl 4 '48 90w

GELLHORN, MARTHA ELLIS. Wine of astonishment. 325p $3 Scribner

48-8575

Pictures the thoughts and reactions of a group of American soldiers during the period of World war II when everything was at lowest ebb. The interest is centered on an infantry private first class, and his commanding officer, both of whom find solace for boredom in love affairs.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 182:108 D '48 500w

Booklist 45:66 O 15 '48

Reviewed by Samuel Roddan

Canadian Forum 28:187 N '48 500w

Reviewed by Leslie Waller

Chicago Sun N 25 '48 290w

Kirkus 16:414 Ag 15 '48 200w

